Agency: Securities and Exchange Commission.

Action: Interpretive Release Concerning the Scope of Section 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and Related Matters.

Summary: The Commission today announced the issuance of an interpretive release under Section 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Act") which provides a safe harbor for persons who exercise investment discretion over beneficiaries' or clients' accounts to pay for research and brokerage services with commission dollars generated by account transactions. In the release, the Commission has clarified its interpretation of the phrase "brokerage and research services" in Section 28(e)(3) and has reiterated the disclosure obligations of money managers under the federal securities laws concerning brokerage allocation practices and the use of commission dollars. The Commission has also expressed its views regarding best execution obligations of fiduciaries for their clients' transactions and its views and those of the United States Department of Labor regarding directed brokerage practices by sponsors of employee benefit plans. The Commission believes that the release will provide useful guidance to money managers and other persons in the securities industry.

Supplementary Information:

I. Background

Section 28(e) provides a safe harbor to money managers who use the commission dollars of the advised accounts to obtain investment research and brokerage services, provided that all of the conditions in the section are met. The section states that a person who exercises investment discretion with respect to an account shall not be deemed to have acted unlawfully or to have breached a fiduciary duty under state or federal law solely by reason of his having caused an account to pay more than the lowest available commission if that person determines in good faith that the amount of the commission is reasonable in relation to the value of the brokerage and research services provided. Conduct outside of the safe harbor of Section 28(e) may constitute a breach of fiduciary duty as well as a violation of specific provisions of the federal securities laws, particularly under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 ("Advisers Act") and the Investment Company Act of 1940 ("Company Act") and of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA"). In addition, the section only excuses paying more than the lowest available commission and does not shield a person who exercises investment discretion from charges of violations of the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws or from allegations, for example, that he churned an account, failed to seek the best price, or failed to make required disclosures.

In connection with the abolition of fixed commission rates on May 1, 1975, money managers and broker-dealers expressed concern that, if money managers were to pay more than the lowest commission rate available to a broker-dealer in return for services other than execution, such as research, they would be exposed to charges that they had breached a fiduciary duty. This concern was based on the traditional fiduciary principle that a fiduciary cannot use trust assets to benefit himself. The purchase of research with the commission dollars of a beneficiary or a client, even if used for the benefit of the beneficiary or the client, could be viewed as also benefiting the money manager in that he was being relieved of the obligation to produce the research himself or to purchase it with his own money. This concern stemmed in part from litigation during the 1960's and 1970's over whether advisers of investment companies had a duty to recapture commission dollars for the benefit of the investment company. The Congress added Section 28(e) of the Act to make clear that money managers could consider the provision of research, as well as execution services, in evaluating the cost of brokerage services without violating their fiduciary responsibility. In adopting Section 28(e), the Congress acknowledged the important service broker-dealers provide by producing and distributing investment research to money managers and created a safe harbor to permit money managers, in certain circumstances, to continue to use commission dollars paid by managed accounts to acquire research as well as execution services. These arrangements have come to be referred to as "soft dollar" arrangements.

In 1976, the Commission issued an interpretive release concerning the scope of Section 28(e). The Commission stated in the release that the safe harbor did not protect "products and services which are readily and customarily available and offered to the general public on a commercial basis." The Commission issued the release as a result of a number of practices which it did not believe were within the safe harbor. Since that time, the commission has issued a report pursuant to Section 21(a) of the Act reiterating this standard. The staff has generally declined, as a matter of policy, to express definitive views as to whether a money manager's receipt of any particular product or service would be protected by Section 28(e), although it has provided general comments on research services through the no-action letter process.

Prompted by an increased industry focus on soft dollar practices, over the past eighteen months the staff of the Commission's Divisions of Market Regulation and Investment Management, and the staff of the Commission's regional offices, have been engaged in an examination of such practices generally and in particular in a re-evaluation of the 1976 standard as to the meaning of the phrase "brokerage and research services" in the context of Section 28(e). Based on the staff's analyses and recommendations, the Commission has concluded that the 1976 standard is difficult to apply and unduly restrictive in some circumstances, and that uncertainty about the standard may have impeded money managers from obtaining, for commission dollars, goods and services they believe are important to the making of investment decisions. Accordingly, the Commission is withdrawing the 1976 standard and adopting revised standard, as discussed below. At the same time, however, the Commission emphasizes that money managers, particularly investment advisers registered under the Advisers Act, have important fiduciary and disclosure obligations concerning soft dollar practices, as well as a duty to obtain best execution of their clients' transactions. Finally, the Commission expresses its views on the practice of many employee benefit plan sponsors of directing their money managers to execute transactions through specified broker-dealers who have agreed to rebate to the plan a portion of the commissions paid in the form of cash, goods or services.

II. Definition of Brokerage and Research Services

A. In General

Subparagraph (3) of Section 28(e) defines the brokerage and research services that are protected. The statute states that a person provides brokerage and research services insofar as he --

(A) furnishes advice, either direct or through publications or writings, as to the value of securities, the advisability of investing in, purchasing, or selling securities, and the availability of securities or purchasers or sellers of securities;

(B) furnishes analyses and reports concerning issuers, industries, securities, economic factors and trends, portfolio strategy, and the performance of accounts; or

(C) effects securities transactions and performs functions incidental thereto (such as clearance, settlement, and custody) or required in connection therewith by rules of the Commission or a self-regulatory organization of which such person is a member or person associated with a member or in which such person is a participant.

The legislative history of Section 28(e) indicates that: the definition of brokerage and research services is intended to comprehend the subject matter in the broadest terms, subject always to the good faith standard in subsection (e)(1). Thus, for example, the reference to economic factors and trends would subsume political factors which may have economic implications which may in turn have implications in terms of the securities markets as a whole or in terms of the past, present, or future values of individual securities or groups of securities. Similarly, computer analyses of securities portfolios would also be covered. Thus, the touchstone for determining when a service is within or without the definition in Section 28(e)(3) is whether it provides lawful and appropriate assistance to the money manager in the carrying out of his responsibilities.

The Commission relied on this legislative history in adopting the 1976 guidelines, but expressed its view that in order to rely on the Section 28(e) safe harbor, the product or service must not be readily and customarily available and offered to the general public on a commercial basis. While application of this standard has in some cases been clear, in other cases it has caused substantial uncertainty and confusion on the part of money managers and others, particularly as the types of research products and their methods of delivery have proliferated and become more complex. For example, participants in the securities industry have repeatedly requested clarification as to whether the application of this standard would disqualify a product that is available for hard dollars, what is meant by "the general public," the extent to which economic, financial and statistical information conveyed through computer facilities to a money manager may be considered to be research, and whether the computer facilities themselves can constitute research. The Commission is concerned that this lack of clarity has impeded the use by fiduciaries of appropriate research material and has acted as a disincentive to competition among broker-dealers.

B. Revised Standard

The Commission believes that, subject to the process discussed below of allocating payment for products or services that serve both a research and a non-research function, the controlling principle to be used to determine whether something is research is whether it provides lawful and appropriate assistance to the money manager in the performance of his investment decision-making responsibilities. In making this determination, the fact that a product or service is readily and customarily available and offered to the general public on a commercial basis does not dictate the conclusion that the product or service is not research, as was the case under the 1976 standard. Rather, the focus should be on whether the product or service provides lawful and appropriate assistance to the money manager's investment decision-making process. What constitutes lawful and appropriate assistance in any particular case will depend on the nature of the relationships between the various parties involved and is not susceptible to hard and fast rules. Of course, Section 28(e) continues to require the money manager to make a good faith determination that the value of research and brokerage services is reasonable in relation to the amount of commissions paid. The legislative history of Section 28(e) makes clear that the burden of proof in demonstrating this determination rests on the money manager.

In many cases, a product or service termed "research" may serve other functions that are not related to the making of investment decisions. For example, management information systems may integrate such diverse functions as trading, execution, accounting, recordkeeping and other administrative matters, such as measuring the performance of accounts. Where a product obtained with soft dollars has a mixed use, a money manager faces a conflict of interest in obtaining that product by causing his clients to pay more than competitive brokerage commission rates. Therefore, the Commission believes that where a product has a mixed use, a money manager should make a reasonable allocation of the cost of the product according to its use. The percentage of the service or specific component that provides assistance to a money manager in the investment decision-making process may be paid for in commission dollars, while those services that provide administrative or other non-research assistance to the money manager are outside the Section 28(e) safe harbor and must be paid for by the money manager using his own funds. The money manager must keep adequate books and records concerning allocations so as to be able to make the required good faith showing. [Emphasis added]

Computer hardware is another example of a product which may have a mixed use. If the hardware is dedicated exclusively to software that is used for research for a client's benefit, it may be paid for in commission dollars. On the other hand, if the computer will be used in assisting the money manager in a non-research capacity (e.g., bookkeeping or other administrative functions), that portion of the cost of the computer would not be within the safe harbor. The acquisition of quotation equipment should be analyzed similarly. Such equipment generally serves a legitimate research function of pricing securities for investment and keeping a manager informed of market developments. The equipment may also be used for a non-research purpose (e.g., client reporting). Finally, where a money manager is invited to attend a research seminar or similar program, the cost of that seminar may be paid for with commission dollars. Non-research aspects of the trip, however, such as travel costs, hotel, meal and entertainment expenses, are not within the safe harbor.

The Commission recognizes that the task of properly allocating the research and non-research properties of certain goods and services provided to fiduciaries may be complex. The Commission believes the standard will be satisfied where a fiduciary can demonstrate a good faith attempt, under all the circumstances, to allocate the anticipated uses of a product.

III. Third Party Research

Another issue raised under Section 28(e) is whether research may be produced or provided by someone other than the executing broker-dealer, or so-called "third party" research. Prior to the elimination of fixed commission rates, a variety of techniques were employed that permitted money managers to purchase third party research with brokerage commissions. Although the legislative history of Section 28(e) includes a strong statement that commission dollars may be paid only to the broker-dealer that "provides" both the execution and research services and that the section does not authorize the resumption of "give-ups," it seems unlikely that Congress intended to forbid certain common practices that were then considered permissible and whose elimination would be anti-competitive.

In the 1976 release, the Commission indicated that Section 28(e) might, under appropriate circumstances, apply to situations in which research produced by third parties is provided to a money manager by a broker. The Commission suggested that payment of a part of the commission to another broker who is a "normal and legitimate correspondent" of the executing or clearing broker would not necessarily be a give-up outside the protection of Section 28(e).

In Release 16679, a report pursuant to Section 21(a) of the Act, the Commission found that the brokers involved in the arrangement did not provide the money managers with any significant research services. They merely executed the transactions and paid 50% of the commissions to Investors Information, Inc. ("III"), who represented various research originators. All arrangements for acquiring the services were made by the money managers and the vendors of the services. III simply held the money for the money managers and paid the bills as requested. The money managers were obligated to pay the vendors for the services and the brokers generally were not aware of the specific services which the managers acquired.

The Commission acknowledged that it is not necessary that a broker produce the research services "in-house" in order for the money manager to obtain the protection of Section 28(e). The Commission emphasized, however, that the research services must be "provided by" the broker. The Commission stated that while a broker may under appropriate circumstances arrange to have research materials or services produced by a third party, it is not "providing" such research services when it pays obligations incurred by the money manager to the third party.

In approving the "Papilsky" rules, the Commission clarified that research provided in third-party arrangements falls within Section 28(e) even if the money manager participates in selecting the research services or products to be provided to it by the broker-dealer. The Commission also stated that third-party research does not have to be shipped through the broker, but may instead be delivered directly by the third party to the manager in circumstances that otherwise qualified for the safe harbor. The Commission stated:

a broker-dealer may be deemed to have provided third party research when it has incurred a direct legal obligation to a third party producer to pay for the research (regardless of whether the research is then sent directly to the broker's fiduciary customer by the third party or instead is sent to the broker who then sends it to his customer). The Commission does not believe, however, that Section 28(e) would apply where the broker was merely used as an alternative means of paying obligations incurred by the fiduciary in its direct dealings with the third party . . . [citation omitted]. In that regard, a broker-dealer may be deemed to have provided third party research that it is legally obligated to pay for even if its fiduciary customer participates in the selection of the research services or products to be provided to it by the broker-dealer.

The staff also has expressed the opinion that Section 28(e) was not intended to exclude from its coverage the payment of commissions made in good faith to an introducing broker for execution and clearing services performed in whole or in part by the introducing broker's normal and legitimate correspondent. The staff added that the protection of Section 28(e) would not be lost merely because the fiduciary by-passed the order desk of the introducing broker and called its orders directly into the clearing broker. More recently, the staff has stated that its views concerning correspondent relationships contemplate that the "introducing broker would be engaged in securities activities of a more extensive nature than merely the receipt of commissions paid to it by other broker-dealers for 'research services' provided to money managers."

IV. Disclosure and Order Obligations Under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 and the Investment Company Act of 1940 Applicable to Money Managers Engaging in Soft Dollar Arrangements

Money managers engaging in soft dollar arrangements must comply with all applicable disclosure requirements under the federal securities laws, and registered investment advisers and others should pay particular attention to the disclosure and books and records requirements under the Advisers Act and the Company Act. Disclosure is required even if an arrangement is within the safe harbor provided by Section 28(e). In addition, money managers must comply with any other laws imposing fiduciary or other obligations with respect to their participation in such arrangements. Set forth below is a discussion of the principal provisions of the Advisers Act and Company Act and rules and forms thereunder which, depending on the facts and circumstances involved, impose disclosure and other obligations on money managers and related persons.

A. Advisers Act

1. Form ADV

Fundamental to the Advisers Act is the concept that an investment adviser has a fiduciary obligation to act in the best interests of clients. As a fiduciary, an adviser has a duty to disclose to clients all material information which is intended "to eliminate, or at least expose," all potential or actual conflicts of interest "which might incline an investment adviser consciously or unconsciously -- to render advice which was not disinterested." Due to the potential conflict of interest when an adviser receives research as a result of allocating brokerage on behalf of clients' accounts, the Commission has long maintained that an adviser must disclose soft dollar arrangements to clients. The Commission had adopted mandatory disclosure standards for advisers involved in such arrangements, as discussed below.

Pursuant to its authority in Section 28(e)(2) to adopt rules governing a money manager's disclosure of brokerage policies and practices, the Commission proposed disclosure rules in 1976, but later determined to "incorporate more comprehensive brokerage placement practice disclosure requirements" within the registration process for investment advisers under the Advisers Act. One of these provisions is the so-called "brochure rule," which was adopted in 1979 and is set forth in Rule 204-3 under the Advisers Act. This rule requires generally that an adviser furnish each advisory client and each prospective advisory client with a written disclosure statement containing certain information regarding the adviser's business background and practices. The disclosure statement may be either a copy of Part II of the adviser's Form ADV, the registration form for investment advisers, or a written document containing at least the information required by Part II of the Form ADV.

Item 12 of Part II of Form ADV requires disclosure to clients regarding investment or brokerage discretion. The purpose of this disclosure is to provide clients with material information about the adviser's brokerage allocation policies and practices which may be important to them in deciding to hire an adviser or continue a contract with an adviser and which will permit them to evaluate any conflicts of interest inherent in the adviser's arrangements for allocating brokerage. Because brokerage policies and practices vary greatly, the disclosure made in response to Item 12 should provide sufficient information to enable a client or potential client to understand such policies and practices. This item requires disclosure regarding (1) whether the adviser or a related person has authority to determine, without specific client consent, the broker-dealer to be used in any securities transaction or the commission rate to be paid, or (2) whether the adviser or a related person suggests broker-dealers to clients. If the adviser engages in either of these practices, whether or not pursuant to a written agreement, it must describe the factors considered in selecting broker-dealers and in determining the reasonableness of commissions charged. If the value of products, research, and services given to the adviser or a related person is a factor in those decisions, the adviser must describe the following:

- The products, research, and services;
- Whether clients may pay commissions higher than those obtainable from other brokers in return for those products and services;
- Whether research is used to service all of the adviser's accounts or just those accounts paying for it; and

- Any procedures the adviser used during the last fiscal year to direct client transactions to a particular broker in return for products and research services received.

In its release discussing the concurrent adoption of Form ADV disclosure requirements and the brochure rule, the Commission pointed out that:

the amended rule and forms represent mandatory disclosure standards. More detailed or additional information and explanatory material could and should be provided where necessary, because of circumstances in particular cases, to ensure that all material information regarding brokerage placement practices and policies will be disclosed to investors.

An investment adviser should be particularly aware of the fact that the Advisers Act disclosure requirements apply to all soft dollar arrangements, whether or not they are within the safe harbor of Section 28(e). Moreover, compliance with Advisers Act disclosure requirements does not relieve an adviser from other disclosure obligations under federal or state law.

2. Section 204

Section 204 of the Advisers Act authorizes the Commission to adopt rules prescribing the book and records a registered adviser must maintain. Pursuant to this authority, the Commission has adopted Rule 204-2, which requires an adviser to keep true, accurate, and current books and records relating to its advisory business. In the case of securities transactions, particularly those which may involve soft dollars, the adviser's books and records should contain sufficient details relating to each participant in a particular transaction.

3. Best Execution

The Commission's staff has stated that an adviser, as a fiduciary, owes its clients a duty of obtaining the best execution on securities transactions. For further discussion of best execution, see Section V of this release.

B. Company Act

The Company Act and rules and forms thereunder impose various disclosure and other obligations on registered investment companies, investment advisers of registered investment companies, and related persons in connection with soft dollar arrangements.

1. Form N-1A

Form N-1A is the integrated registration form used by most open-end management investment companies to register under the Company Act and to register their securities under the Securities Act of 1933. Its disclosure requirements form the basis of the two-part prospectus used by these investment companies. Part B of the form, termed the "Statement of Additional Information," requires disclosure about the company's brokerage allocation practices. Specifically, Item 17 requires a description of how transactions in portfolio securities are effected, including a general statement about brokerage commissions. Investment companies also must describe how broker-dealers will be selected to effect securities transactions and how the overall reasonableness of commissions paid will be evaluated, including the factors considered in connection with these determinations. The instructions to this item further require that:

- If the receipt of products or services other than brokerage or research is a factor in selecting brokers, the products and services should be described;
- if the receipt of research services is a factor in selecting brokers, the nature of such research services should be described;
- The registrant must state if persons acting on its behalf are authorized to pay a commission in excess of that which another broker might have charged for the same transaction in recognition of brokerage or research services provided by the broker;
- If applicable, the registrant should explain that research services provided by brokers may be used by the adviser in servicing all of its accounts or described other practices applicable to the registrant regarding allocation of research services provided by brokers; and
- The registrant must state the amount of transactions and related commissions paid as a result of directing the registrant's brokerage transactions to a broker because of research services provided pursuant to an agreement or understanding with a broker or otherwise through an internal allocation procedure.

2. Section 20(a)

Section 20(a) of the Company Act makes it unlawful for any person to solicit proxies regarding the securities of any registered investment company in contravention of Commission rules. Pursuant to this provision, the commission has adopted two rules that may be relevant to soft dollar arrangements. First, where a proxy solicitation is made on behalf of the management of the investment company, Rule 20a-1(b) requires the adviser of the investment company to furnish promptly to management, upon request, all information necessary for management to comply with the proxy rules, including information about soft dollar arrangements.

In addition to this general obligation, Rule 20a-2 requires disclosure of specific information about the adviser and its investment advisory contract in certain proxy solicitations, including information about brokerage placement practices. specifically, paragraph (b)(7) of the rule requires disclosure of, among other things, the following:

- A description of how brokers are selected to effect securities transactions for the company and how the reasonableness of overall brokerage commissions paid will be evaluated, including the factors considered in these determinations;

- If the receipt of products or services other than research or brokerage is a factor in selecting brokers, a description of these products or services;
- If the receipt of research services is a factor in selecting brokers, the nature of such services;
- Whether persons acting on behalf of the company are authorized to pay a broker a commission in excess of that which another broker might have charged for the same transaction in recognition of brokerage or research services provided by the broker;
- If applicable, an explanation that research services furnished by the company's brokers may be used by the adviser in servicing all of its accounts and that not all such services may be used by the adviser in connection with the company, or an explanation of other policies or practices applicable to the company regarding the allocation of research services provided by brokers; and
- The amount of transactions and related commissions directed to a broker or brokers pursuant to an agreement or understanding or otherwise through an internal allocation procedure.

3. Section 15(c)

Section 15(c) makes it unlawful for any investment company to enter into or renew any investment advisory contract unless it is approved by a majority of the company's disinterested directors. In approving such a contract, this provision imposes on directors a duty to request and evaluate such information as may reasonably be necessary for the directors to evaluate the terms of the contract. This provision also imposes on the company's adviser a duty to furnish such information to the directors.

The Supreme Court has defined the Congressional purpose in enacting Section 15(c) and related provisions of the Company Act as placing "the unaffiliated directors in the role of 'independent watchdogs' "entrusted with" the primary responsibility for looking after the interest of the funds' shareholders. "Disinterested directors are required to "exercise informed discretion, and the responsibility for keeping the independent directors informed lies with management, i.e., the investment adviser and interested directors. "Depending on the facts involved, the responsibility of the disinterested directors may include monitoring of the adviser's soft dollar arrangements.

4. Section 31

Section 31 of the Company Act authorizes the Commission to adopt rules prescribing the books and records to be maintained by a registered investment company or by others, on its behalf, including investment advisers. Pursuant to this authority, the Commission adopted Rule 31a-1. Paragraph (b)(9) of that rule requires an investment company to maintain a record for each fiscal quarter describing in detail the basis or bases upon which it allocated orders for the purchase or sale of portfolio securities and divided brokerage commissions or other compensation on such orders. The record also must indicate the consideration given to services or benefits supplied by broker-dealers to the investment company or adviser and show the nature of such services or benefits made available.

5. Section 36(b)

Under Section 36(b) of the Company Act, an investment adviser to a registered investment company has a fiduciary duty with respect to the receipt of compensation for services, or of payments of a material nature, from the investment company or its shareholders. However, with respect to any such amount received by an adviser, no violation of Section 36(b) could occur for a soft dollar arrangement falling within the safe harbor of Section 28(e). Where an adviser received amounts outside of the safe harbor of Section 28(e) such amounts would have to be analyzed under Section 36(b) to determine if they were consistent with that provision.

6. Section 17(e)(1)

As relevant here, Section 17(e)(1) of the Company Act makes it unlawful for an affiliated person of a registered investment company to receive any compensation for the purchase or sale of any property to or for the investment company when that person is acting as an agent for the company other than in the course of that person's business as a broker-dealer. The Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit has held that the objective of Section 17(e)(1) is to prevent affiliated persons [of investment companies] from having their judgment and fidelity impaired by conflicts of interest "in situations where the benefit of a reciprocal relationship between the affiliated person and another person is diverted to the affiliated person while the burden of that relationship is borne by the investment company.

It is important to emphasize that receipt by an investment adviser of any compensation pursuant to a soft dollar arrangement in connection with the purchase or sale of any property, including securities, to or for the investment company arguably would violate Section 17(e)(1). To the extent that compensation is received by an affiliated person of a fund pursuant to a soft dollar arrangement within the safe harbor of Section 28(e), however, the prohibition of Section 17(e)(1) would not apply.

Finally, it is not necessary to show that the person receiving compensation prohibited by Section 17(e)(1) influenced the action of the investment company, nor must economic injury to the investment company be shown. Rather, the essence of a violation of Section 17(e)(1) is the mere receipt of compensation in connection with the purchase or sale of property to or from the investment company.

V. Best Execution Obligations

As a fiduciary, a money manager has an obligation to obtain "best execution" of clients' transactions under the circumstances of the particular transaction. The money manager must:

execute securities transactions for clients in such a manner that the client's total cost or proceeds in each transaction is the most favorable under the circumstances.

A money manager should consider the full range and quality of a broker's services in placing brokerage including, among other things, the value of research provided as well as execution capability, commission rate, financial responsibility, and responsiveness to the money manager. The Commission wishes to remind money managers that the determinative factor is not the lowest possible commission cost but whether the transaction represents the best qualitative execution for the managed account. In this connection, money managers should periodically and systematically evaluate the execution performance of broker-dealers executing their transactions.

VI. Employee Benefit Plans and Plan Sponsor Directed Brokerage

During the past year the practice of plan sponsor directed brokerage has drawn considerable attention. This phrase refers to an arrangement whereby an employee benefit plan sponsor requests its money manager, subject to the manager's satisfaction that it is receiving best execution, to direct commission business to a particular broker-dealer who has agreed to provide services, pay obligations or make cash rebates to the plan.

At the outset, the Commission wishes to emphasize that directed brokerage transactions clearly do not fall within the safe harbor of Section 28(e). The safe harbor is available only to persons who are exercising investment discretion, as that term is defined in Section 3(a)(35) of the Act. A pension plan sponsor that has retained a money manager to make investment decisions, as is the case in directed brokerage arrangements, is not exercising investment discretion. Accordingly, neither the plan sponsor, the money manager, nor the broker-dealer participating in the transactions can rely on Section 28(e).

Section 28(e), however, cannot by its terms be violated. Thus, the fact that sponsor directed brokerage transactions are outside its protections does not necessarily mean that such transactions are illegal. Nevertheless, each participant in the transaction may be exposed to liability unless certain aspects of the transaction are carefully handled. The Commission does not administer ERISA, but sponsor directed brokerage in connection with plans covered by ERISA may involve violations of that Act and may violate the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws.

The Department of Labor has indicated that if the cash rebate, goods or services provided by the broker to the plan is not for a purpose that exclusively benefits the plan, the transaction would constitute a per se violation of ERISA. The Commission understands that many money managers and brokers who are engaging in directed brokerage transactions have required the pension plan to represent in writing at the initiation of such transactions that the rebate will be used for the exclusive benefit of the plan and its beneficiaries.

A second concern arises regarding the broker's obligation to accurately confirm transactions with customers pursuant to Rule 10b-10 under the Securities Exchange Act and to maintain books and records pursuant to Rule 17a-3. Rule 10b-10(a)(7)(ii) requires a broker to disclose the amount of remuneration received or to be received by him from a customer in connection with an agency transaction. In sponsor directed brokerage arrangements the broker-dealer has agreed to charge specified commissions but at the same time has agreed to rebate a portion of the commissions. At least in the case of a cash rebate, the confirmation is false if it does not at a minimum provide disclosure that a portion of the commission was returned to the plan. The Commission has emphasized in the past improper nature of this rebating practice without disclosure. Rule 17a-3(a)(8) requires the broker to keep copies of confirmation of all purchases and sales of securities and copies of notices of all other debits and credits for securities, cash and other items for the account of customers. This provision would require that the broker document any rebating arrangements that it had entered into with plan sponsors.

Third, Section 28(e) allows a money manager in making his good faith determination as to the reasonableness of commissions paid to consider not only the benefit to be derived by the account paying the commissions, but also the benefits derived by other accounts. Since sponsor directed brokerage transactions are outside of the safe harbor, this additional element of protection is unavailable. Stated differently, the Commission believes this is illegal, from a securities law fraud perspective, for a money manager or a broker-dealer to use one client's commissions to fund an undisclosed rebate to another client. This problem is particularly acute where a money manager aggregates orders for managed accounts. In this connection, the Commission believes that serious concerns are raised under the antifraud provisions of the securities laws where a money manager or broker-dealer aggregates directed and non-directed orders unless the money manager or broker-dealer can demonstrate that it has not disadvantaged one client's account in order to fund a rebate to another client. This means that the money manager and the broker-dealer must have a system of controls and a system of records to assure that this commingling does not occur.

VII. Conclusion

The Commission believes that this release will provide useful guidance to money managers and other persons in the securities industry. It believes that the new standard comports fully with congressional intent in the enactment of the section, while at the same time is responsive to concerns raised in response to a changing array of research products and the impact of new technology on brokerage practices. The Commission believes that the issue is ultimately one of good faith on the part of the money manager and that the disclosure obligations will allow clients to satisfy themselves that their money manager is in fact acting in their best interest.

Part 241 -- (Amended)

Part 241 of Title 17 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended by adding this Interpretive Release Concerning the Scope of Section 28(e) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (Release No. 34-23170) to the list of Interpretive Releases.

By the Commission.

1. Section 28(e) of the Act states in pertinent part:

No person using the mails, or any means or instrumentality of interstate commerce, in the exercise of investment discretion with respect to an account shall be deemed to have acted unlawfully or to have breached a fiduciary duty under State or Federal law unless expressly provided to the contrary by a law enacted by the Congress or any State subsequent to June 4, 1975, solely by reason of his having caused the account to pay a member of an exchange, broker, or dealer an amount of commission for effecting a securities transaction in excess of the amount of commission another member of an exchange, broker, or dealer would have charged for effecting that transaction, if such person determined in good faith that such amount of commission was reasonable in relation to the value of the brokerage and research services provided by such member, broker, or dealer, viewed in terms of either that particular transaction or his overall responsibilities with respect to the accounts as to which he exercises investment discretion. . . .

2. The term "investment discretion" is defined in Section 3(a)(35) of the Act.

3. This practice is commonly known as "paying up" for research.

4. See Tannenbaum v. Zeller, 552 F.2d 402 (2d Cir. 1977); Arthur Lipper Corp. v. Securities & Exchange Commission, 547 F.2d 171 (2d Cir.

  10. Nevertheless, obvious overhead expenses such as office space, typewriters, furniture and clerical assistance would not constitute research.
  11. The fact that a product is available for hard dollars or is otherwise available and used by the general public is relevant to the determination of the value of the research.
  12. See House Comm. on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, H.R. Rep. No. 123, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. 95 (1975). The Report states that: "It is, of course, expected that money managers paying brokers an amount (of commissions) which is based upon the quality and reliability of the broker's services including the availability and value of research, would stand ready and be required to demonstrate that such expenditures were bona fide."
  13. The allocation determination itself poses a conflict of interest for the money manager that should be disclosed to the client.

  20. As the Commission stated in a 1979 release adopting rule and form amendments designed to require registered investment companies to provide investors with disclosure about brokerage placement practices and policies, "[t]hese disclosure requirements reflect a longstanding policy of the Commission that brokerage placement practices of investment managers may take into consideration research and brokerage services, provided, however, that such practices are disclosed to investors."   25. The specific delivery requirements applicable to the brochure are set forth in paragraphs (b) and (c) of Rule 204-3.
  26. Recently the Commission adopted a new, uniform Form ADV, the uniform Application form for advisers registered with the Commission and the forty states that require advisers to register. Investment Advisers Act Rel. No. 981 (Oct. 15, 1965). The form was developed jointly by the Commission and the North American Securities Administrators Association.

New Form ADV retains the two part format for the earlier form. Part I requires disclosure primarily for use by regulatory agencies. Part II of the form, which serves as the basis for the brochure rule, requires disclosure primarily for use by clients.
  27. See Rule 204-3(a).
  28. A general discussion of the background, purpose, and effect of the disclosure required in what is now Item 12 of Form ADV may be found in Release 6019, supra note 20.
  29. An adviser need not list individually each product, item of research, or service received, but rather can state the types of products, research, or services obtained with enough specificity so that clients can understand what is being obtained. Disclosure to the effect that various research reports and products are obtained would not provide the specificity required.
  30. The adviser should disclose any practices, including informal ones and whether or not they involve "paying up," to allocate brokerage to particular brokers in recognition of research products and services received. In this connection, the Commission notes that a money manager that obligated itself formally to generate a specified amount of commissions would be faced with a heavy burden of demonstrating that he was consistently obtaining best execution.
  31. Item 12 of the new uniform Form ADV mirrors Item 11 of the superseded form and has remained substantively the same since its adoption in 1979.

32. Release 6019, supra note 20, 14 SEC Docket 839. In addition to the disclosure required by Item 12 of Part II of Form ADV, Item 13 of Part II requires disclosure that may be relevant to soft dollar arrangements. That item requires an adviser to describe any oral or written arrangements where it or any related person receives some economic benefit from a non-client, including a benefit in the form of non-research services, in connection with giving advice to clients.
33. See, e.g., Release 18679, supra note 7; Release 6019, supra note 20.
34. E.g., Rule 204-2(a)(1), (a)(2), and (a)(3).
35. E.g., Interfinancial Corp. (pub. avail, 1985). See also Release 5250, supra note 20 (in selecting a broker-dealer, a money manager "is not required to seek the service which carries the lowest cost so long as the difference in cost is reasonably justified by the quality of the service offered"); Securities Exchange Act Rel. No. 12251 (Mar. 24, 1976).
36. Registered investment companies must make the Statement of Additional Information available free of charge to shareholders and potential investors upon request.
37. Where an investment manager, in return for research services, pays an affiliated broker-dealer more than normal charges for execution of brokerage transactions, the manager "would be under a heavy burden to show that such payments were appropriate." Release 6019, supra note 20, 16 SEC Docket 844.
38. Disclosure about brokerage allocation practices also is required by other registration and reporting forms used by investment companies. E.g., Form N-2 (Item 9); Form N-3 (Item 22); and Form N-SAR (Item 26).
39. The requirements of Rule 20a-2 are applicable to any solicitation made by or on behalf of management or the adviser involving action with respect to the election of directors of the investment company. See Rule 20a-2(a).
40. In addition to paragraph (c) of Section 15, paragraph (a)(1) of that provision may be applicable to a soft dollar arrangement. This provision makes it unlawful for any person to serve as an investment adviser of a registered investment company except pursuant to a written contract which has been approved by a majority vote of shareholders and which "precisely describes all compensation" to be paid under that contract. As to what constitutes "compensation," see infra note 46.

43. Tannenbaum, supra note 4, at 417-18.
44. See Rule 31a-3.
45. Rule 31a-1(b)(g) requires this record to be completed within ten days after the end of the quarter.
46. The term "compensation" under Section 36(b) and other provisions of the Company Act has been broadly construed to include any economic benefit paid directly or indirectly to an adviser. E.g., Steadman Securities Corporation. Securities Exchange Act Rel. No. 13695 at 12 SEC Docket 1042, 1052 (June 29, 1977) revid on other grounds sub. nom. Steadman v. No. 770 (Aug. 13, 1981) (the element of "compensation" in the definition of an investment adviser in Section 202(a)(11) of the Advisers Act "is satisfied by the receipt of any economic benefit."
47. Securities Acts Amendments of 1975, Conference Report to Accompany S. 249, Joint Explanatory Statement of the Comm. of Conference, H.R. Rep. No. 229, 94th Cong., 1st Sess. 108 (1975). Although both the Senate and House versions of the Section 28(e) legislation contained provisions protecting money managers against breach of fiduciary duty claims, the Conference Report makes clear that the Senate version was selected for the final legislation because it "more clearly preempted both statutory and common law." Id.
48. The phrase "affiliated person" of an investment company to defined in Section 2(a)(3)(E) of the Company Act and includes, among others, an investment adviser to an investment company. The proscription of Section 17(e)(1) also applies to any affiliated person of an affiliated person of the investment company.
49. See supra note 46.
50. As the Second Circuit stated in United States v. Deutsch, 451 F.2d 98, 111 (2d Cir. 1971), cert. denied, 404 U.S. 1019 (1972), an affiliated person of an investment company is acting as an "agent" in connection with the purchase or sale of property for purposes of Section 17(e)(1) "in all cases when he is not acting as broker for the investment company." See Provident Management Corp., 44 SEC 442, 448 (1970) [hereinafter cited as Provident].
51. Where an adviser is acting as "broker" in connection with the purchase or sale of securities to or for an investment company, its activities would be governed by Section 17(e)(2) of the Company Act.

53. See Investors Research, supra note 45, at 173.
54. See supra note 46, and accompanying text.
55. The fact that a soft dollar arrangement outside of Section 28(e) is disclosed would not cure a violation of Section 17(e)(1) because that provision reflects the Congressional determination that disclosure alone is not adequate protection in the investment company field. Investors Research, supra note 46.

59. Section 3(a)(35) provides that a person exercises "investment discretion" with respect to an account if, directly or indirectly, such person -
- A. is authorized to determine what securities or other property shall be purchased or sold to or for the account,
  - B. makes decisions as to what securities or other property shall be purchased or sold by or for the account even though some other person may have responsibility for such investment decisions, or
  - C. otherwise exercises such influence with respect to the purchase and sale of securities or other property by or for the account as the Commission, by rule, determines, in the public interest or for the protection of investors, should be subject to the operation of the provisions of this title and the rules and regulations thereunder.

SEC No-Action Letter Regarding Waiver of 12b-1 Fees for ERISA Plans

Southeastern Growth Fund, Inc.
 Ref. No. 86-37-CC File No. 811-4228

Response of the Office of Chief Counsel
 April 22, 1986

In your letter of January 29, 1986, you request our assurance that we would not recommend any enforcement action to the Commission under the Investment Company Act of 1940 ("Act") if, as described in your letter, Southeastern Growth Fund, Inc. (the "Fund") amends its Distribution Plan, adopted pursuant to rule 12b-1 under the Act, to exempt an employee benefit plan from payment of its pro rata portion of the Fund's expenses incurred under that plan.

Given that rule 12b-1(e) permits a 12b-1 plan to be adopted or continued only if the directors conclude, in the exercise of reasonable business judgment and in light of their fiduciary duties, that there is a reasonable likelihood that the plan will benefit the company and its shareholders, the staff will not provide interpretive responses to requests regarding the merits of a particular 12b-1 plan. See American Pension Investors Trust (pub. avail. Nov. 27, 1985). As a general matter, however, we believe that any waiver or rebate of an investor's pro rata portion of the expenses incurred under a 12b-1 plan would raise serious concerns under both Section 36 of the Act and general fiduciary principles. We also question strongly whether a board of directors could conclude, as required by paragraph (e) of rule 12b-1, that there is a reasonable likelihood that a 12b-1 plan which provides for such disparate treatment of shareholders will benefit the company and its shareholders.

See, e.g., Section 1(b)(3) of the Act, which declares, in part, that the public interest and the interest of investors are adversely affected "when investment companies issue securities containing inequitable or discriminatory provisions ... ."

Re: Southeastern Growth Fund, Inc.
 Investment Company Act of 1940, Regulation @ 270.12b-1
 Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, Section 406

Dear Sirs:

We are writing to request the advice of the Division that it would not recommend to the Commission that it take action if Southeastern Growth Fund, Inc. (the "Fund") amends its 12b-1 distribution plan to provide that a distribution fee will not be paid with regard to that portion of the Fund's assets attributable to an investment in the Fund by any employee benefit plan whose investment in the Fund would otherwise violate Section 406 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA).

The Fund is a diversified, open-end investment company which was incorporated under the laws of Virginia on January 7, 1985. It is registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, as amended (the "1940 Act"). The Fund seeks long-term capital growth by investing in a diversified portfolio of securities, primarily common stocks of companies that are domiciled or whose principal business is located in the Southeastern United States.

Wheat First Securities, Inc. ("Wheat") acts as distributor of the Fund's shares. Wheat Investment Advisors, Inc. ("WIA") serves as investment adviser and administrator of the Fund. Both Wheat and WIA are wholly-owned subsidiaries of WFS Financial Corporation ("WFS").

The Fund does not charge sales commissions (i.e., the Fund is a "no-load" fund). However, Wheat receives a fee for its services under the Fund's "Plan of Distribution Pursuant to Rule 12b-1" (the "Distribution Plan"). Wheat receives a distribution fee which is accrued daily and paid monthly at a rate of 1% per year of the Fund's average daily net assets.

WFS maintains for its employees an Employee Benefit Plan (the "Plan") under ERISA and would like to have the flexibility to invest a portion of the Plan's assets in the Fund. However, an investment by the Plan in the Fund may violate Section 406 of ERISA unless Wheat complies with Prohibited Transaction Exemption 77-3, 42 F.R. 18734 (PTE 77-3) by waiving the distribution fee for the portion of the Fund's assets attributable to the Plan.

Section 406 of ERISA provides in pertinent part:

(a)(1) A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not cause the plan to engage in a transaction, if he knows or should know that such transaction constitutes a direct or indirect ... (D) transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a party in interest, of any assets of the plan ...

Wheat is a "party in interest", as defined by ERISA Section 3\(14\), with respect to the Plan. Since the Plan's investment in the Fund arguably would benefit Wheat through the Distribution Plan, ERISA counsel to the Plan advised that the transaction may be found to violate the prohibited transaction rule of ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\) unless Wheat complies with PTE 77-3.

PTE 77-3 allows a mutual fund "in-house" plan to invest the assets of its employee benefit plan in its own mutual fund provided it complies with the following four conditions:

(a) The plan does not pay any investment management, investment advisory or similar fee to such investment adviser, principal underwriter or affiliated person. This condition does not preclude the payment of investment advisory fees by the investment company under the terms of its investment advisory agreement adopted in accordance with Section 15 of the Investment Company Act of 1940.

(b) The plan does not pay a redemption fee in connection with the sale by the plan to the investment company of such shares unless (1) such redemption fee is paid only to the investment company, and (2) the existence of such redemption fee is disclosed in the investment company prospectus in effect both at the time of the acquisition of such shares and at the time of such sale.

(c) In the case of transactions occurring more than 60 days after the granting of this exemption, the plan does not pay a sales commission in connection with such acquisition or sale.

(d) All other dealings between the plan and the investment company, the investment adviser or principal underwriter, are on a basis no less favorable to the plan than such dealings are with other shareholders of the investment company.

While the other conditions are met, condition (c) that the Plan does not pay a sales commission in connection with its investment in the Fund may not be met since the distribution fee paid to Wheat is utilized in part to compensate sales brokers for their efforts in selling shares of the Fund. Indeed, Rule 12b-1 of the 1940 Act explicitly contemplates use of the distribution fee to pay brokers' sales commissions. Rule 12b-1 provides that a company is a distributor "if it engages directly or indirectly in financing any activity which is primarily intended to result in the sale of shares issued by such company including ... compensation of underwriters, dealers and sales personnel." Thus, this sales aspect of the distribution fee seems to preclude the Fund's compliance with PTE 77-3, even though payment of the fee to Wheat is not directly related to sales and the fee would not be a sales commission or sales load within the meaning of the 1940 Act.

If there is no available exemption from ERISA Section 406, the Plan cannot invest in the Fund, even though the Distribution Plan complies in all respects with Rule 12b-1 of the 1940 Act. Counsel to the Plan has advised that the relief provided by PTE 77-3 would be available with respect to an investment by the Plan in the Fund if the distribution fee is waived with respect to the Plan's interest in the Fund. The Fund will eliminate any suggestion under PTE 77-3 that there may be a sales aspect inherent in the distribution fee by negotiating an agreement with Wheat to waive the fee as to that portion of the assets of the Fund attributable to an investment by the Plan. This is a simple calculation and will create no administrative burden. The Fund proposes the following procedure. Wheat will pay to the Plan the portion of the distribution fee that Wheat receives on account of the Plan's investment. The Fund will then credit that amount to the Plan's account. Alternatively, the distribution fee will be reduced ex ante by an amount representing the Plan's investment in the Fund.

The Fund's proposal is consistent with other rules under the 1940 Act which allow scheduled variation in the sales terms among classes of investors when certain conditions are met. The Fund represents that the following will be undertaken:

(a) The Fund will apply the variation in payment of the Distribution Fee uniformly to all purchases which are employee benefit plans for which a payment under the Distribution Plan would otherwise violate ERISA Section 406;

(b) The Fund will furnish to existing shareholders and prospective investors adequate information concerning the variation in payment of the Distribution Fee where its payment would violate ERISA Section 406; and

(c) Before making the variation in payment of the Distribution Fee available to purchasers of the Plan's shares, the Plan will revise its prospectus and statement of additional information to describe that new variation.

The Fund will comply with the requirements of Section 12b-1 of the 1940 Act to amend the Distribution Plan. The amendment will be submitted for approval by a vote of the board of directors of the Fund, as well as a vote of the directors who are not interested persons of the fund and who have no direct or indirect financial interest in the operation of the Distribution Plan or in any agreements related to the Distribution Plan. The votes on the amendment will be cast in person at a meeting of the board of directors called for the purpose of voting on the amendment to the Distribution Plan. Reg. @ 270 12b-1(b)(4).

In addition to amending its prospectus and registration statement as discussed above and submitting the proposed change to the board of directors as required by Rule 12b-1, the Fund will submit the amended Distribution Plan to the shareholders for approval even though this is not required under the regulations. From the shareholders viewpoint, the Fund would receive the same net investment from an investment by the Plan as from any other investor, with the portion of the distribution fee attributable to the Plan being refunded to the Plan rather than being paid to Wheat. Thus, Wheat would receive a lesser Distribution Fee than it would if the investment were made by someone else, but the same fee it would receive if the Plan were not to invest. Shareholder approval is anticipated because an investment by the Plan will allow the Fund to make more investments and achieve greater diversity of investment with no adverse effect on the shareholders.

The Fund requests that the staff confirm that it will not recommend enforcement action to the Commission if, under these circumstances, the Fund amends its Distribution Plan to provide that a distribution fee will not be paid with regard to that portion of the Fund's assets attributable to an investment in the Fund by any employee benefit plan whose investment in the Fund would otherwise violate Section 406 of ERISA.

Please date-stamp the enclosed copy of this letter to indicate receipt of this filing and return the stamped copy to the messenger making the filing.

Thank you.

Very truly yours,

William L. Taylor

Status of Investment Advisory Programs

March 31, 1997

Agency: Securities and Exchange Commission.

Action: Final rule.

Summary: The Commission is adopting rule 3a-4 under the Investment Company Act of 1940 to provide a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for certain programs under which investment advisory services are provided on a discretionary basis to a large number of advisory clients having relatively small amounts to invest. An investment advisory program that is organized and operated in accordance with the rule's provisions is not required to register as an investment company under the Investment Company Act of 1940, or to comply with the Act's requirements. In addition, such a program is not subject to the registration requirement under Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933.

Effective Date: March 31, 1997.

Supplementary Information: The Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") is adopting rule 3a-4 under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 USC 80a-1, et seq.] ("Investment Company Act"). Rule 3a-4 provides a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for certain programs under which investment advisory services are provided to advisory clients ("investment advisory programs").

Executive Summary

The Commission is adopting rule 3a-4 under the Investment Company Act to provide a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for certain investment advisory programs. These programs typically are designed by investment advisers or other money managers seeking to provide the same or similar professional portfolio management services on a discretionary basis to a large number of advisory clients having relatively small amounts to invest. Under rule 3a-4, any investment advisory program organized and operated in accordance with the rule's provisions is deemed not to be an investment company within the meaning of the Investment Company Act. In addition, a preliminary note to rule 3a-4 states that there is no registration requirement under Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933 ("Securities Act") with respect to investment advisory programs that are organized and operated in compliance with the provisions of the rule.

The rule provides that: (i) each client's account must be managed on the basis of the client's financial situation and investment objectives, and in accordance with any reasonable restrictions imposed by the client on the management of the account; (ii) the sponsor of the program must obtain sufficient information from each client to be able to provide individualized investment advice to the client; (iii) the sponsor and portfolio manager must be reasonably available to consult with each client; (iv) each client must have the ability to impose reasonable restrictions on the management of the client's account; (v) each client must be provided with a quarterly account statement containing a description of all activity in the client's account; and (vi) each client must retain certain indicia of ownership of all securities and funds in the account. The rule is intended to be a nonexclusive safe harbor; a program that is not organized and operated in a manner consistent with the rule does not necessarily meet the Investment Company Act's definition of investment company. The rule, as adopted, does not include provisions regarding written policies and procedures, the maintenance of records, or the filing of a form with the Commission that were proposed for comment in 1995. [Emphasis added]

I. Background

In recent years, the number of investment advisory programs that are designed to provide professional portfolio management services on a discretionary basis to a large number of clients has increased greatly. These programs historically have been offered typically to clients who are investing amounts of money less than the minimum investments for individual accounts otherwise required by participating investment advisers, but significantly more than the minimum account sizes of most mutual funds.

These investment advisory programs typically are organized and administered by a sponsor, which provides, or arranges for the provision of, asset allocation advice and administrative services. In some programs, the sponsor or its employees also provide portfolio management services, including the selection of particular securities, to the program's clients. In other programs, the sponsor selects, or provides advice to clients regarding the selection of, another investment adviser (which may or may not be affiliated with the sponsor) to act as the client's portfolio manager. In these programs, the sponsor generally is responsible for the ongoing monitoring of the management of the account by the manager or managers selected. The sponsor, rather than the portfolio manager, often serves as the primary contact for the client in connection with the program. Sponsors and portfolio managers usually meet the definition of "investment adviser" under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 ("Advisers Act"), and may be required to register under that Act. Included among investment advisory programs developed in the recent past are those commonly referred to as "wrap fee programs." In a wrap fee program, the client typically is provided with portfolio management, execution of transactions, asset allocation, and administrative services for a single fee based on the size of the account. At year-end 1995, assets in wrap fee programs totaled approximately $101.6 billion, an increase of over 30 percent in one year.

Under wrap fee and other investment advisory programs, a client's account typically is managed on a discretionary basis in accordance with pre-selected investment objectives. Clients with similar investment objectives often receive the same investment advice and may hold the same or substantially the same securities in their accounts. In light of this similarity of management, some of these investment advisory programs may meet the definition of investment company under the Investment Company Act, and may be issuing securities for purposes of the Securities Act.

In 1980, the Commission sought to address certain issues presented by investment advisory programs by proposing rule 3a-4 under the Investment Company Act, which would have provided a safe harbor from the definition of investment company for investment advisory programs operating in the manner described in the rule. Commenters generally opposed the proposed rule, and it was never adopted. After this proposal, however, the Commission's Division of Investment Management ("Division") received numerous requests for assurance that it would not recommend enforcement action with respect to investment advisory programs if they operated without registering under the Investment Company Act. In response to these requests, the staff issued a series of no-action letters describing investment advisory programs that would not be deemed investment companies for purposes of the Investment Company Act. Many, if not most, of the programs described in the no-action letters met the terms specified in the proposed rule.

On July 27, 1995, the Commission proposed for comment a revised version of rule 3a-4 ("revised proposed rule 3a-4" or "revised proposed rule," proposed for comment in the "July Release"). The objective of the revised proposed rule was to clarify the Commission's views regarding the status of investment advisory programs under the federal securities laws by describing certain basic attributes of an investment advisory program that differ from those of an investment company that is required to register under the Investment Company Act. The revised proposed rule was based largely on the provisions of the rule as originally proposed, as modified and explained in the subsequent no-action letters, but also required the creation and maintenance of certain documents and records. Like the original proposal, revised proposed rule 3a-4 would have provided a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for investment advisory programs that are organized and operated in the manner described in the rule.

The Commission received comments on the revised proposed rule from 28 commenters, including three law firms, eight professional and trade associations, and 17 financial firms (i.e., brokers, banks, investment advisers and others). Commenters generally expressed support for the Commission's goal of providing a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for certain investment advisory programs. A number of commenters, however, raised concerns about particular aspects of the rule. Many of these comments are discussed in more detail below. [comments have been excluded]

II. Discussion

The Commission is adopting rule 3a-4 under the Investment Company Act. Like the proposed and revised proposed rules, rule 3a-4 provides a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for investment advisory programs that are organized and operated in the manner described in the rule. The rule's provisions have the effect of ensuring that clients in a program relying on the rule receive individualized treatment, including the opportunity to place investment restrictions on the management of their accounts and the right to receive disclosure documents in connection with securities held in their accounts. Moreover, if an advisory program were operated by an investment adviser registered under the Advisers Act, clients of the program would receive the protections of that Act. The safe harbor thus is designed to provide an exemption for certain investment advisory programs without undermining the protection of investors who participate in those programs.

A. Preliminary Matters

The Commission noted in the July Release that the adoption of rule 3a-4 would not affect the status of no-action letters previously issued by the Division with respect to investment advisory programs. Therefore, investment advisory programs operated in a manner consistent with those letters would continue not to be required to register under the Investment Company Act, and interests in the programs would not be required to be registered as securities under the Securities Act. The Commission also stated in the July Release that the Division, as a general matter, would not consider requests for no-action or exemptive relief with respect to programs that do not rely on the rule. In making this statement, the Commission sought to indicate that in the future, the staff ordinarily will not respond to no-action requests or support applications for exemptive relief regarding investment advisory programs that are similar to those programs that have been the subject of the no-action letters issued by the Division, but that are not operated in accordance with all the provisions of rule 3a-4. The staff, however, will in the future consider requests raising interpretive issues under rule 3a-4, and will continue to entertain no-action requests with respect to programs that raise unique or novel issues.

B. Definitions

1. The Sponsor

A number of the terms of the revised proposed rule provided that the "sponsor" of a program or another person designated by the sponsor must perform the duties and responsibilities set forth in the rule. Under paragraph (b) of revised proposed rule 3a-4, "sponsor" would have been defined as any person who receives compensation for sponsoring, organizing or administering the program, or for selecting, or providing advice to clients regarding the selection of, persons responsible for managing the client's account in the program. Revised proposed rule 3a-4 would have provided that, if a program had more than one sponsor, one person would need to be designated as the principal sponsor, and that person would be responsible for carrying out the sponsor's duties and responsibilities under the rule. The July Release noted that this definition and approach was the same as that used in paragraph (f) of rule 204-3 under the Advisers Act, which sets forth a separate brochure requirement for sponsors of wrap fee programs.

The Commission notes that the structure of programs may vary widely, and that the broad definition of the term sponsor is intended to anticipate such variations and to provide persons involved in a program with the flexibility to designate the person in the best position to fulfill the rule's provisions. The Commission thus has determined to adopt the definition as proposed in order to preserve this flexibility.

2. Investment Advisory Program

The safe harbor described in revised proposed rule 3a-4 would have been available to a "program under which investment advisory services are provided to clients." The revised proposed rule, however, did not specifically define the term "program." The Commission notes that the use of the term "program" in the rule is intended to describe the types of advisory services that potentially could be subject to the Investment Company Act and the Securities Act. The Commission does not believe that it is necessary or advisable to include a definition of program in the rule, because such a definition could result inadvertently in the exclusion from the scope of the rule of an entity that otherwise would be entitled to rely on it.

C. Provisions Designed To Ensure That Each Client Receives Individualized Treatment

Revised proposed rule 3a-4 contained four provisions relating to the individualized treatment received by clients in investment advisory programs covered by the rule. The July Release stated that these provisions were based on the terms of rule 3a-4 as originally proposed, as those provisions were applied in the no-action letters. The rule as adopted includes these four provisions, with certain modifications discussed below.

1. Individualized Management of Client Accounts

Paragraph \(a\)\(1\) of the revised proposed rule provided that a client's account must be managed on the basis of the client's financial situation, investment objectives and instructions. The July Release noted that this provision was designed to delineate a key difference between clients of investment advisers and investors in investment companies. A client of an investment adviser typically is provided with individualized advice that is based on the client's financial situation and investment objectives. In contrast, the investment adviser of an investment company need not consider the individual needs of the company's shareholders when making investment decisions, and thus has no obligation to ensure that each security purchased for the company's portfolio is an appropriate investment for each shareholder. The Commission is adopting paragraph (a)(1) without substantive modification.

In the July Release, the Commission noted that clients of an investment advisory program with similar investment objectives may hold substantially the same securities in their accounts in accordance with a portfolio manager's model, and that this does not necessarily indicate that clients in the program have not received individualized treatment for purposes of the rule. The Commission is reaffirming this position in connection with the adopted rule.

The Commission also stated in the July Release that it would not be necessary under the rule for a portfolio manager to make separate determinations regarding the appropriateness of each transaction for each client prior to effecting the transaction.

Investment advisers under the Advisers Act owe their clients the duty to provide only suitable investment advice, whether or not the advice is provided to clients through an investment advisory program. To fulfill this suitability obligation, an investment adviser must make a reasonable determination that the investment advice provided is suitable for the client based on the client's financial situation and investment objectives. The adviser's use of a model to manage client accounts would not alter this obligation in any way.

2. Initial and Ongoing Client Contact

Paragraph \(a\)\(2\) of revised proposed rule 3a-4 reflects the view that providing individualized investment advice contemplates an adviser having sufficient contact with a client to elicit the information necessary to provide the advice. In particular, under paragraph \(a\)\(2\), a program relying on the rule must provide that the sponsor or a person designated by the sponsor ("designated person") contact and solicit information from the client. Such a program also must provide for the sponsor and the portfolio manager to be reasonably available to consult with the client concerning the management of the client's account.

Under paragraph \(a\)\(2\) of the revised proposed rule, an advisory program intended to qualify for the safe harbor set out in the rule would have needed to require that the sponsor or a designated person: (1) obtain information from the client concerning the client's financial situation and investment objectives (including any restrictions that the client may wish to impose regarding the management of the account) at the time the client opens the account; (2) contact the client at least annually to determine whether there have been any changes in the client's financial situation or investment objectives, or whether the client wishes to impose any reasonable restrictions on the management of the account or modify an existing restriction in a reasonable manner; and (3) notify the client in writing at least quarterly that the sponsor or designated person should be contacted if there have been any changes in the client's financial situation or investment objectives, or if the client wishes to impose or modify any restrictions on the management of the account. The Commission is adopting these three provisions as proposed, with minor modifications to clarify their meaning.

In the July Release, the Commission noted that the provision regarding annual client contact was designed to ensure that sponsors have current information about clients in the program, which, in the Commission's view, is critical to the provision of individually tailored advice. Like the revised proposed rule, the rule as adopted does not dictate the manner in which a sponsor contacts its clients annually. Contact can be made, for example, in person, by telephone, or by letter or electronic mail that includes a questionnaire requesting the client to provide or update relevant information.

The rule, as adopted, provides that the sponsor or a designated person seeking to rely on the rule must notify the client in writing at least quarterly that the sponsor or designated person should be contacted if there have been any changes in the client's financial situation or investment objectives, or if the client wishes to impose or modify restrictions concerning the management of the account. This provision contemplates only that notice will be given to an investor, while the annual contact provision described above contemplates that the sponsor (or the designated person) will actively attempt to contact the client to obtain information in order to be covered by the rule.

In the July Release, the Commission noted that, if the sponsor did not provide the portfolio manager with information obtained from the client, the manager might be unable to manage the client's account on the basis of the client's financial situation and investment objectives and in accordance with any reasonable restrictions imposed by the client. The Commission requested comment whether the rule should state explicitly that the sponsor or designated person must convey to the portfolio manager the information obtained from the client. Some commenters stated that the rule should contain an explicit provision to that effect, while others suggested that such a provision was unnecessary. It would appear unlikely that the provision of paragraph \(a\)\(1\) providing that the account be managed based on the client's financial situation and investment objectives and in accordance with reasonable restrictions imposed by the client could be satisfied if the sponsor failed to transmit the client's financial information to the portfolio manager. The Commission therefore has determined not to include in rule 3a-4 an explicit requirement that the information must be provided to the portfolio manager.

Paragraph \(a\)\(2\) of the revised proposed rule would have provided that the sponsor and persons authorized to make investment decisions for the client's account be reasonably available to consult with the client concerning the management of the account. In the July Release, the Commission indicated that this provision contemplated a client's having reasonable access to the sponsor and the portfolio manager to ask questions or to seek additional information about the investment advisory program or the client's account. The Commission recognizes that a program's sponsor may serve as the primary contact for clients in the program, and that direct contact with the portfolio manager may not occur until after the sponsor and others have attempted to address the client's questions or concerns. Nonetheless, in the Commission's view, a program seeking to rely on the rule must provide a procedure by which each client has reasonable access to personnel of the manager who are knowledgeable about the management of the client's account, as necessary to respond to the client's inquiry. Therefore, the Commission is adopting this provision of the revised proposed rule with the modification discussed below.

Several commenters suggested that the rule should permit delegation of the client consultation responsibilities to an employee of the advisory firm managing the client's account who is knowledgeable about investment and other matters relevant to the account. The rule has been revised to state that "the sponsor and personnel of the manager of the client's account who are knowledgeable about the account and its management" must be reasonably available to the client for consultation. In accordance with this provision, the contact person need not be the individual primarily responsible for managing the account, but must be sufficiently knowledgeable to discuss and explain investment decisions that were made.

3. Reasonable Management Restrictions

The Commission stated in the July Release that the ability of a client in an investment advisory program to place reasonable restrictions on the management of his or her account is a critical factor in determining whether individualized treatment is provided under the program. Paragraph \(a\)\(3\) of the revised proposed rule, therefore, would have provided that a program relying on the rule must include a requirement that each client have the ability to impose reasonable restrictions on the management of his or her account. Such restrictions were described to include, for example, prohibitions with respect to the purchase of particular securities or types of securities. This provision of the rule is being adopted as repropoed, except that language has been added to the provision to clarify that a program relying on rule 3a-4 need not provide clients with the right to direct the manager to purchase specific securities or types of securities.

Some of the commenters addressing this aspect of the proposal asked the Commission to provide additional guidance as to what constitutes a reasonable management restriction. As noted in the July Release, whether a particular restriction would be reasonable depends on an analysis of the relevant facts and circumstances. In general, a restriction would be unreasonable if it is clearly inconsistent with the portfolio manager's stated investment strategy or philosophy or the client's stated investment objective, or is fundamentally inconsistent with the nature or operation of the program. Other factors that bear on whether a particular restriction is reasonable are the difficulty in complying with the restriction, the specificity of the restriction and the number of other restrictions imposed by the client. A restriction would not be unreasonable, however, simply because it placed administrative burdens on the manager, or could affect the performance of the account.

The Commission stated in the July Release that if the sponsor or portfolio manager of a program concluded that a particular restriction sought to be imposed by a client was unreasonable, the client should be notified and given an opportunity to restate the restriction more reasonably. The Commission also noted that if a client was unable or unwilling to modify an unreasonable restriction, then the client could be removed from the program without jeopardizing reliance on the safe harbor. The Commission is also of the view that if a sponsor or portfolio manager is informed in advance that a client wants to impose a restriction the sponsor or portfolio manager deems unreasonable, and the client refuses to modify the restriction, then the sponsor or portfolio manager may refuse to accept the client. The Commission, however, does not agree with the suggestion of some commenters that a sponsor or portfolio manager should be permitted to refuse to accept a client without giving the client an opportunity to modify or withdraw the restriction.

4. Quarterly Account Statements

Paragraph \(a\)\(4\) of the revised proposed rule stated that each client in a program covered by the rule must be provided quarterly with a statement describing all activity in the client's account during the preceding quarter, including all transactions made on behalf of the account, all contributions and withdrawals made by the client, and all fees and expenses charged to the account. The statement also would have included the value of the account at both the beginning and end of the quarter. Some commenters asserted that the rule should not specify the contents of quarterly statements. The Commission is not persuaded by this argument. This provision, which is consistent with several no-action letters that had specified the contents of the quarterly reports, reflects the view that a key element of individualized advisory services is an individualized report about a client's account. The Commission therefore is adopting this provision substantially as proposed, with one modification clarifying that statements may be sent more often than quarterly.

5. Minimum Account Size

The revised proposed rule would not have specified a minimum size for client accounts in a program. While the Commission acknowledged in the July Release that providing individualized advice to a large number of relatively small accounts may be so costly and time-consuming as to render individualized treatment impracticable, it noted that the provisions of the revised proposed rule should be sufficient to ensure individualized treatment, and that innovations in computer technology may allow portfolio managers to render individualized treatment to relatively small accounts on a cost-effective basis. Nonetheless, the Commission requested comment whether the rule should include a provision specifying a minimum account size.

All but one of the commenters responding to the request for comment opposed the inclusion of a minimum account size provision in rule 3a-4. These commenters asserted that the sponsor and the portfolio manager are in the best position to determine the appropriate minimum account size for a program based upon the nature of the program. The Commission has concluded that a particular account size is not a necessary element to ensure that clients are provided with individualized investment management services. The Commission recognizes, however, that the smaller the minimum account size of an investment advisory program, the more likely that clients would not have the ability to demand and receive individualized treatment in the program. In assessing the status under the Investment Company Act of a program that does not qualify for the safe harbor under rule 3a-4, therefore, the Commission will consider a relatively large minimum account size as evidence that individualized treatment is being provided to clients of the program.

D. Client Retention of Ownership of Securities

Under paragraph \(a\)\(5\) of the revised proposed rule, a program covered by the rule would have been characterized by each client retaining certain specified indicia of ownership of all securities and funds in that client's account. The Commission stated in the July Release that the indicia of ownership specified in revised proposed rule 3a-4 are those that provide clients with the ability to act as owners of the securities in their accounts.

Paragraph (a)(5) of rule 3a-4 contemplates only that the program does not impose additional restrictions or limitations on client ownership of securities held in program accounts, and that a client's participation in the program will not alter his or her ability to exercise the ownership rights enumerated in the rule. The language of the rule has been modified to clarify this standard.

1. Ability to Withdraw and Pledge Securities

The revised proposed rule would have provided that clients be able to withdraw securities or cash from their accounts. In addition, revised proposed rule 3a-4 also would have specified that clients be able to pledge the securities in their accounts. The July Release stated that investment advisory programs relying on the safe harbor could require a client to withdraw securities from his or her account before using them as collateral.

A number of commenters maintained that the retention by clients of the right to pledge securities should be eliminated from the final rule. One of these commenters asserted that, because clients may be forced to withdraw their securities before pledging them, the provision of the revised proposed rule regarding the right to pledge securities is unnecessary if the client has the right to withdraw them. The Commission agrees, and has modified the rule text to remove this provision.

2. Right to Vote Securities and Receive Certain Documents as Securityholders

The revised proposed rule would have provided that the client have the right to vote the securities in his or her account. This provision would have permitted clients to delegate the authority to vote securities to another person, such as the portfolio manager or other fiduciary, so long as the client retained the right to revoke the delegation at any time. The Commission indicated that the right to vote proxies implied that the client would receive proxy materials in sufficient time to permit the client to consider how to vote and to submit the proxies. The Commission is clarifying that, if a client delegates voting rights to another person, the proxies, proxy materials, and, if applicable, annual reports, need be furnished only to the party exercising the delegated voting authority.

Revised proposed rule 3a-4 contemplated that the client (or the client's agent) would be provided with documents that the client (or agent) would have received had the same securities been owned by the client outside the program. These documents may include prospectuses, periodic shareholder reports, proxy materials, and any other information and disclosure required by applicable laws or regulations.

Some commenters suggested that clients be permitted to waive receipt of the documents generally required to be provided to securityholders, as they could have waived receipt of immediate confirmations under the revised proposed rule. Rule 3a-4 does not limit a client's right to waive receipt of these documents. Nor does rule 3a-4 prohibit a client from making an informed designation of another person, including a financial planner or registered broker-dealer, to receive such documents on the client's behalf. Whether a client in an investment advisory program may waive receipt of documents or designate another person to receive documents depends upon whether the client would have been able to do so under applicable federal or state law if the securities were owned directly.

3. Right to Receive Trade Confirmations

The revised proposed rule contained a provision under which a client would have the right to receive in a timely manner confirmations of securities transactions of the type required by rule 10b-10 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Two commenters objected to the provision of the rule that the confirmations be "of the type required by rule 10b-10." These commenters asserted that this provision was burdensome, particularly with respect to banks and trust companies that are not subject to rule 10b-10. The Commission has decided that the confirmation provision, like the other indicia of ownership specified in the rule, should apply only to the extent that the client would have a right to receive confirmations from the person executing the transaction if he or she traded the securities through that person outside the program. Therefore, the Commission has revised the provision of the rule addressing confirmations to delete the reference to rule 10b-10. As revised, this provision would state that a client in an investment advisory program must receive confirmations that the person executing the transaction is required to send under the laws regulating that person's activities. This provision of the rule also provides that the confirmations must include the information specified by the applicable law governing such content.

As discussed in the July Release, rule 10b-10 permits customers of registered broker-dealers to waive receipt of individual confirmations in certain circumstances. A client in an investment advisory program whose transactions are executed by a registered broker-dealer effectively has the option to receive either individual confirmations for each transaction or periodic statements, delivered no less frequently than quarterly, that include the information required by rule 10b-10 with respect to all transactions that occurred within the period covered by the statement. As discussed above, the confirmation provision in rule 3a-4 applies only to the extent that the client would have a right to receive confirmations if he or she traded the securities outside the program. A client's ability to waive receipt of confirmations will not be altered because securities are held in a program account. Whether a client whose transactions are not executed by a registered broker-dealer may waive receipt of confirmations or other transaction notifications must be determined by reference to the laws that govern the relationship.

4. Legal Rights as Securityholders

Revised proposed rule 3a-4 would have provided that the client retain the right to proceed directly against an issuer of securities in a client's account without joining any other person involved in the program. The July Release indicated that underlying this provision (which was based on representations made in several no-action letters) was the view that a key element of providing individualized advisory services is that a client have the same rights as a person holding the securities outside an investment advisory program.

Certain commenters suggested that this provision of the revised proposed rule may be problematic with respect to client securities that are held in nominee or street name, or by a trustee. These commenters stated that the nominee or trustee might be considered an indispensable party in any action against the issuer, and that nominal joinder of the nominee or trustee might be required. These comments have been addressed by the revision discussed above regarding restrictions on the exercise of ownership rights that are external to the program. Otherwise, the Commission is adopting this provision as proposed.

E. Policies and Procedures and Form N-3a4

Paragraph (a)(6) of revised proposed rule 3a-4 contemplated the establishment by a program's sponsor of written procedures and agreements governing the operation of the program, and the maintenance of records relating to the program. Paragraph (a)(6) would have provided that the sponsor must: (1) Establish and effect written policies and procedures that are reasonably designed to ensure that each of the provisions of the rule are implemented; (2) maintain and preserve all written policies, procedures and certain other documents relating to the program for specified periods of time; (3) enter into written agreements with other persons that the sponsor designates to retain records pertaining to the program; and (4) furnish to the Commission upon demand copies of the policies, procedures and other documents created pursuant to these policies and procedures. Paragraph (a)(7) of the revised proposed rule would have provided that the sponsor of an investment advisory program intending to rely on the safe harbor file Form N-3a4 with the Commission.

In the July Release, the Commission specifically requested comment whether any of the provisions under paragraph (a)(6) of the rule could be "eliminated, consolidated, or otherwise made less burdensome without compromising investor protection." The Commission has reevaluated these provisions and determined not to adopt them for a number of reasons. First, the Commission agrees that compliance with these types of formal procedural provisions generally should not be determinative of an entity's status under the Investment Company Act. As one commenter noted, none of the other rules under the Investment Company Act exempting certain entities from investment company regulation contain similar procedural provisions.

Second, with respect to programs sponsored by registered investment advisers, the recordkeeping requirements under the Advisers Act and the Commission's authority to examine registered investment advisers should be sufficient to enable the Commission to detect violations of the Investment Company Act. Most, if not all, of the records that would have been covered by the revised proposed rule currently are required to be maintained under rule 204-2 under the Advisers Act.

With respect to those investment advisory programs sponsored by banks that are not subject to the Advisers Act, the Commission staff intends to consult and work closely with the relevant banking agencies so that these programs will be subject to oversight designed to determine whether the programs are being operated as unregistered investment companies. Further, to the extent these programs include registered investment companies as investment vehicles for their clients, or that registered investment advisers serve as subadvisers in a program sponsored by a bank, the Commission will have access to certain records relating to the programs through its authority to examine such registered entities.

Despite its determination not to include in rule 3a-4 a provision pertaining to written policies and procedures, the Commission continues to believe that it is important for the sponsor of an investment advisory program to monitor the program's compliance with the rule. Each person relying on rule 3a-4 is responsible for demonstrating its compliance with the rule's provisions. A sponsor that establishes and implements written policies and procedures designed to ensure adherence to the provisions of rule 3a-4 would greatly reduce the chance that the program will fail to operate in the manner specified in the rule. Moreover, the implementation of such procedures by an investment adviser may serve to protect the adviser in certain instances from liability for violating, or aiding and abetting violations of, the Investment Company Act and/or the Securities Act, or failing to supervise a person under the adviser's supervision who violates those Acts. The Commission, therefore, strongly recommends that a sponsor of an advisory program seeking to rely on rule 3a-4 establish and implement written policies and procedures, and a system for applying such procedures, that are reasonably designed to ensure that the program operates in the manner contemplated by the rule.

The Commission also believes that it would be advisable for a person seeking to rely on rule 3a-4 to maintain the records necessary to evidence compliance with the rule, even if the person is not subject to rule 204-2 under the Advisers Act or certain of the records are not required by that rule. As noted above, a person seeking to rely on rule 3a-4 must be able to establish compliance with each of the rule's provisions. Compliance with many of these provisions, including those relating to client contact, the delivery of documents to clients, and the opportunity of clients to place reasonable restrictions on the management of their accounts, would be difficult, if not impossible, to demonstrate without contemporaneous recordkeeping.

F. Investment Advisers Act Issues Raised by Investment Advisory Programs

The Commission noted in the July Release that wrap fee and other investment advisory programs raise, in addition to the Investment Company Act issues addressed in the release, a number of issues under the Advisers Act. The Commission requested comment on certain of these issues and indicated the possible publication of an interpretive release that would address them. The Commission received few comments in response to this request, and the comments that were received suggested that investment advisory programs did not raise unique issues under the Advisers Act, but simply presented issues under the Act in a specific factual context. The Commission, therefore, has decided not to publish an interpretive release at this time. The staff of the Division will entertain requests for no-action or interpretive guidance with respect to the application of the Advisers Act in the context of investment advisory programs.

III. Cost/Benefit Analysis

Rule 3a-4 under the Investment Company Act provides a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for investment advisory programs. Programs that are organized and operated in the manner described in the rule are not required to register under the Investment Company Act or to comply with the Act's substantive provisions. The rule is intended to provide guidance to persons operating investment advisory programs regarding the status of these programs under the Investment Company Act, and help to ensure that such programs do not operate as investment companies without clients of the programs benefiting from the Act's protections.

The Commission anticipates that the cost of compliance with rule 3a-4 will be small. In addition, the Commission does not believe that compliance with any of the provisions will be unduly burdensome. Furthermore, because the rule is based principally on long-standing staff positions, the Commission believes that it will not substantially alter current industry practice or the costs associated therewith.

Section 2(c) of the Investment Company Act provides that whenever the Commission is engaged in rulemaking under the Investment Company Act and is required to consider or determine whether an action is consistent with the public interest, the Commission also must consider, in addition to the protection of investors, whether the action will promote efficiency, competition, and capital formation. The Commission has considered rule 3a-4 in light of these standards and believes that, by removing uncertainty with respect to the status of certain investment advisory programs under the Investment Company Act, the rule is consistent with the public interest, and will promote efficiency and the competition among sponsors of such programs. In addition, the rule will have no adverse effect on capital formation, nor be unduly burdensome to those sponsors wishing to comply with the rule.

IV. Paperwork Reduction Act

Information omitted.

V. Final Regulatory Flexibility Analysis

Information omitted.

VI. Effective Date

Rule 3a-4 is effective upon publication in the Federal Register. Pursuant to 5 USC 553(d)(1), immediate effectiveness is appropriate because rule 3a-4 is purely exemptive in nature. It provides a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for certain programs under which investment advisory services are provided to advisory clients. Under the rule, programs that are organized and operated in the manner described in the rule are not required to register under the Investment Company Act or to comply with the Act's requirements. The benefits of the rule should be available at the earliest possible time.

VII. Statutory Authority

The Commission is adopting rule 3a-4 pursuant to the authority set forth in Sections 6(c) and 38(a) of the Investment Company Act [15 USC 80a-6(c), - 37(a)].

Text of Rule

List of Subjects in 17 CFR Parts 270 and 274

Investment companies, Reporting and recordkeeping requirements, Securities.

For the reasons set out in the preamble, title 17, chapter II of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended as follows:

Part 270--Rules and Regulations, Investment Company Act of 1940

1. The authority citation for Part 270 continues to read, in part, as follows:

Authority: 15 USC 80a-1 et seq., 80a-37, 80a-39 unless otherwise noted;

270.3a-4 Status of investment advisory programs.

Note: This section is a nonexclusive safe harbor from the definition of investment company for programs that provide discretionary investment advisory services to clients. There is no registration requirement under Section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933 [15 USC 77e] with respect to programs that are organized and operated in the manner described in Section 270.3a-4. The section is not intended, however, to create any presumption about a program that is not organized and operated in the manner contemplated by the section.

(a) Any program under which discretionary investment advisory services are provided to clients that has the following characteristics will not be deemed to be an investment company within the meaning of the Act [15 USC 80a, et seq.]:

1. Each client's account in the program is managed on the basis of the client's financial situation and investment objectives and in accordance with any reasonable restrictions imposed by the client on the management of the account.

- i. At the opening of the account, the sponsor or another person designated by the sponsor obtains information from the client regarding the client's financial situation and investment objectives, and gives the client the opportunity to impose reasonable restrictions on the management of the account;
  - ii. At least annually, the sponsor or another person designated by the sponsor contacts the client to determine whether there have been any changes in the client's financial situation or investment objectives, and whether the client wishes to impose any reasonable restrictions on the management of the account or reasonably modify existing restrictions;
  - iii. At least quarterly, the sponsor or another person designated by the sponsor notifies the client in writing to contact the sponsor or such other person if there have been any changes in the client's financial situation or investment objectives, or if the client wishes to impose any reasonable restrictions on the management of the client's account or reasonably modify existing restrictions, and provides the client with a means through which such contact may be made; and
  - iv. The sponsor and personnel of the manager of the client's account who are knowledgeable about the account and its management are reasonably available to the client for consultation.
3. Each client has the ability to impose reasonable restrictions on the management of the client's account, including the designation of particular securities or types of securities that should not be purchased for the account, or that should be sold if held in the account; Provided, however, that nothing in this section requires that a client have the ability to require that particular securities or types of securities be purchased for the account.
  4. The sponsor or person designated by the sponsor provides each client with a statement, at least quarterly, containing a description of all activity in the client's account during the preceding period, including all transactions made on behalf of the account, all contributions and withdrawals made by the client, all fees and expenses charged to the account, and the value of the account at the beginning and end of the period.
  5. Each client retains, with respect to all securities and funds in the account, to the same extent as if the client held the securities and funds outside the program, the right to:
    - i. Withdraw securities or cash;
    - ii. Vote securities, or delegate the authority to vote securities to another person;
    - iii. Be provided in a timely manner with a written confirmation or other notification of each securities transaction, and all other documents required by law to be provided to security holders; and
    - iv. Proceed directly as a security holder against the issuer of any security in the client's account and not be obligated to join any person involved in the operation of the program, or any other client of the program, as a condition precedent to initiating such proceeding.

(b) As used in this section, the term sponsor refers to any person who receives compensation for sponsoring, organizing or administering the program, or for selecting, or providing advice to clients regarding the selection of, persons responsible for managing the client's account in the program. If a program has more than one sponsor, one person shall be designated the principal sponsor, and such person shall be considered the sponsor of the program under this section.

By the Commission.

Dated: March 24, 1997.

Margaret H. McFarland, Deputy Secretary.

Footnotes

1. 15 USC 77a, et seq.
2. The sponsor often is a money management firm, a broker-dealer, a mutual fund adviser or, in some instances, a bank. See, e.g., Wall Street Preferred Money Managers, Inc. (pub. avail. Apr. 10, 1992) (broker-dealer); United Missouri Bank of Kansas City, n.a. (pub. avail. May 11, 1990, as modified Jan. 23, 1995) (bank); Strategic Advisers Inc. (pub. avail. Dec. 13, 1988) (mutual fund adviser). The sponsor or one of its affiliates also may execute some or all of the transactions for client accounts.
3. More than one portfolio manager may manage the client's assets, depending on the program, the client's investment objectives, and the size of the client's account. See, e.g., Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc. (pub. avail. Apr. 10, 1992); Wall Street Preferred Money Managers, Inc., supra note 2; Westfield Consultants Group (pub. avail. Dec. 13, 1991).
4. Some investment advisory programs, however, are marketed by the sponsor through unaffiliated investment advisers, such as financial planners. In some of these programs, the unaffiliated investment adviser, rather than the sponsor, may serve as the primary contact for its clients that participate in the program. See, e.g., Westfield Consultants Group, supra note 3.
5. 15 USC 80b-1, et seq. Section 202(a)(11) of the Advisers Act (15 USC 80b-2(a)(11)) defines "investment adviser" as "any person who, for compensation, engages in the business of advising others, either directly or through publications or writings, as to the value of securities or as to the advisability of investing in, purchasing, or selling securities, or who, for compensation and as part of a regular business, issues or promulgates analyses or reports concerning securities * * *." A bank generally is excepted from the definition of investment adviser under Section 202(a)(11)(A) of the Advisers Act. A broker-dealer that sponsors an investment advisory program generally cannot rely on the broker-dealer exception from the definition of investment adviser in Section 202(a)(11)(C) of the Advisers Act. See, e.g., Status of Investment Advisory Programs under the Investment Company Act, Investment Company Act Release No. 21260 (July 27, 1995), 60 FR 39574 (Aug. 2, 1995) ("July Release"); National Regulatory Services, Inc. (pub. avail. Dec. 2, 1992).
6. The National Securities Markets Improvement Act of 1996 (Pub. L. No. 104- 290) amended the Advisers Act to provide that certain investment advisers will be subject primarily to the supervision of the Commission, while other advisers will be subject primarily to state regulation. Effective April 9, 1997, if an investment adviser is regulated or required to be regulated as an investment adviser in the state in which it maintains its principal office and place of business, it may not register with the Commission unless (1) it has assets under management of $25 million or more, or (2) it advises a registered investment company. Proposed rules published for comment by the Commission would reallocate regulatory responsibilities for investment advisers between the Commission and the states. These figures include assets in mutual fund wrap programs, also called mutual fund asset allocation programs. Assets in mutual fund wrap programs represented 19% of total assets in wrap fee programs at year-end 1995. Id. at 7.

15. The Note to the revised proposed rule stated that interests in investment advisory programs organized and operated in compliance with the rule would not be required to be registered under the Securities Act. See July Release, supra note 5, at n.26 and accompanying text; Note to revised proposed rule 3a-4.
16. The comment letters and a summary of the comments prepared by the Commission staff are included in File No. S7-24-95.
17. See infra Section II.E.
18. Whether a program is nondiscretionary is inherently a factual determination. A program designated as "nondiscretionary" in which the client follows each and every recommendation of the adviser may raise a question whether the program in fact is nondiscretionary.
19. In the July Release, the Commission noted that an investment advisory program could be considered to be an issuer because the client accounts in the program, taken together, could be considered to be an organized group of persons. See July Release, supra note 5, at nn.11-15 and accompanying text; see also Advisory Committee on Investment Management Services for Individual Investors: Small Account Investment Management Services at 23 (Jan. 1973). ("An investment service which is operated on a discretionary basis and does not afford investors individual attention would appear to be offering an investment contract or security, if substantially the same investment advice is given to all clients or to discernible groups of clients. * * *")
20. In letters issued by the Division of Investment Management granting no-action assurances to investment advisory programs, the Division of Corporation Finance also gave assurances that it would not recommend enforcement action to the Commission if the requestor relied on an opinion of counsel stating that interests in the investment advisory program were not "securities" within the meaning of the Securities Act. See, e.g., Morgan Keegan & Company, Inc., supra note 12; Westfield Consultants Group, supra note 3; Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc., supra note 3.
21. The Note to rule 3a-4 states, in part, that there is no registration requirement under Section 5 of the Securities Act with respect to programs that are organized and operated in the manner described in the rule.
22. July Release, supra note 5, at n.27.
23. The staff previously has indicated that it will no longer entertain requests for no-action relief regarding investment advisory programs unless they present novel or unusual issues. See, e.g., Wall Street Preferred Money Managers, Inc., supra note 2.
24. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.1.
25. The sponsor of an investment advisory program usually is an investment adviser under Section 202(a)(11) of the Advisers Act, and may be required to register under the Act. See July Release, supra note 5, at nn.5-8 and accompanying text and note 6 of this Release. Nonetheless, the rule is available to any investment advisory program, regardless of whether the sponsor is excepted from the definition of investment adviser (e.g., a bank), or is required to be registered under the Act.
26. Paragraph (b) of rule 3a-4, as adopted.
27. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.
28. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.i.
29. As noted above, paragraph (a)(1) of the revised proposed rule provided that a client's account must be managed on the basis of the client's financial situation, investment objectives and instructions (emphasis added). The Commission has determined that individualized treatment does not require that the client be entitled to give instructions to the adviser with respect to the management of the account other than those reasonable restrictions referenced in paragraph (a)(3). Therefore, the Commission has clarified the rule text by replacing the word "instructions" with the word "restrictions." Nonetheless, the rule contemplates that a client's investment objective will be formulated with appropriate input from the client regarding the client's financial goals and risk tolerance.
30. July Release, supra note 5, at n.34 and accompanying text.
31. As indicated in the July Release, this position is consistent with no-action letters issued concerning programs that allocate client assets in accordance with computerized investment models. July Release, supra note 5, at n.34 and accompanying text; see, e.g., Qualivest Capital Management Inc., supra note 12 (sponsor proposed to use computerized investment allocation model to allocate client assets among money managers).

32. See Suitability of Investment Advice Provided by Investment Advisers: Custodial Account Statements for Certain Advisory Clients, Investment Advisers Act Release No. 1406 (Mar. 16, 1994), 59 FR 13464 (Mar. 22, 1994) at nn.2-5 and accompanying text ("Investment advisers are fiduciaries who owe their clients a series of duties, one of which is the duty to provide only suitable investment advice. This duty is enforceable under the antifraud provisions of the Advisers Act, Section 206, and the Commission has sanctioned advisers for violating this duty.").
33. A sponsor or designated person seeking to rely on the rule as adopted could obtain this information through interviews (either in person or by telephone) and/or through questionnaires that clients must complete and return prior to the opening of the account. This position is consistent with no-action letters previously issued by the staff. See, e.g., Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc., supra note 3 (prospective client will be interviewed over the telephone); Manning & Napier Advisors, Inc., supra note 12 (prospective client initially submits written questionnaire and later is interviewed by telephone).
34. Paragraphs (a)(2)(i), (a)(2)(ii) and (a)(2)(iii) of rule 3a-4, as adopted.
35. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.ii.
36. Paragraph (a)(2)(ii) of rule 3a-4, as adopted. One commenter asked whether the rule permits a sponsor or designated person to contact a client by electronic mail. Under appropriate circumstances, an electronic mail message requesting information from clients in the program would constitute annual client contact within the meaning of rule 3a-4. See Use of Electronic Media by Broker-Dealers, Transfer Agents, and Investment Advisers for Delivery of Information; Additional Examples under the Securities Act of 1933, Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and Investment Company Act of 1940, Securities Exchange Act Release No. 37182 (May 9, 1996), 61 FR 24644 (May 15, 1996) (interpretive release in which the Commission, among other things, provided general guidance to investment advisers that contemplate using electronic media to fulfill their disclosure obligations under the Advisers Act).
37. This provision of the rule contemplates a reasonable attempt by the sponsor or designated person to reach and obtain information from the client. A sponsor or designated person that is unable to obtain information from a client after pursuing all reasonable means to contact the client would not be precluded from relying on the safe harbor.
38. Paragraph (a)(2)(iii) of rule 3a-4, as adopted. This notice could be included as part of or with another mailing sent to the client. For example, the notification could be included as part of the quarterly account statement described in paragraph (a)(4) of the rule. For a discussion of the provisions of rule 3a-4 stating that quarterly account statements must be sent to investment advisory clients, see infra Section II.C.4.
39. For this reason, the Commission disagrees with those commenters who asserted that the annual contact and quarterly notification provisions are duplicative.
40. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.ii.
41. Id.
42. This view is reflected in staff no-action letters. See, e.g., Rauscher Pierce Refsnes, Inc., supra note 3 (the portfolio manager, when necessary, will be available to discuss more complex questions regarding the client's account); Westfield Consultants Group, supra note 3 (client will be furnished the name and direct telephone number of manager, who will be reasonably available during business hours). In one no-action request, a representation was made that the client would be able to contact his or her financial planner or the portfolio manager to obtain information or assistance during normal business hours, but the client might be charged hourly fees whenever the client requested that certain investment officers of the portfolio manager answer specific questions regarding investment strategies with respect to the client's account. Manning & Napier Advisors, Inc., supra note 12. Rule 3a-4 does not preclude a sponsor from charging reasonable fees for this or other services. However, such fees must be adequately disclosed to the client. See Item 7(f) of Schedule H of Form ADV (requiring disclosure of any fees in addition to the wrap fee that a client in a wrap fee program may pay).
43. Paragraph (a)(2)(iv) of rule 3a-4, as adopted.
44. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.iii.
45. Paragraph (a)(3) of rule 3a-4, as adopted.
46. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.iii.
47. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.iii. The exclusion of individual stocks or stocks from a particular country, for example, would appear to be a reasonable restriction under ordinary facts and circumstances. A general restriction on the purchase of the securities of foreign issuers may be unreasonable, however, if the manager's investment strategy is to invest exclusively or primarily in foreign securities. Under those circumstances, it may be necessary for the client and the sponsor to reassess the choice of manager or the client's investment objective or strategy.
48. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.iii. While rule 3a-4 generally contemplates that clients in mutual fund asset allocation programs should have the ability to exclude specific funds from their accounts, under some circumstances a restriction on the purchase of a fund included in the program may be inconsistent with the operation of the program. This could be the case, for example, when there is only a single fund with a specified investment objective available in the program, and that fund plays a necessary role in the overall investment strategy determined to be appropriate for the client. See Benson White & Company, supra note 12 (program under which client assets are allocated among four mutual funds based upon the client's age need not give clients the opportunity to place restrictions on the purchase of any of the funds).
49. In the context of a mutual fund asset allocation program, for example, compliance with restrictions based on the securities held by a fund in which program assets are invested (i.e., a restriction that would require a manager to monitor the fund's portfolio securities) may be so burdensome as to be unreasonable.
50. The restrictions that a client seeks to impose on his or her account could be unreasonable when considered in the aggregate, even though each restriction may be reasonable when considered separately, or if the client alters them or imposes new restrictions with excessive frequency. Paragraph (a)(2)(iii) of the rule, which contemplates that a sponsor notify each client at least quarterly to contact the sponsor if the client wishes to modify restrictions concerning the management of the account, is not intended to imply that it necessarily would be reasonable for a client to change his or her investment restrictions on a quarterly basis.
51. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.iii.
52. See Westfield Consultants Group, supra note 3 (quarterly statements will contain a review and analysis of client account); Strategic Advisers, Inc., supra note 2 (quarterly statements will contain a description of investments).

53. Paragraph (a)(4) of rule 3a-4, as adopted.
54. The Division has granted no-action relief to investment advisory programs with varying minimum account sizes. See, e.g., Qualivest Capital Management, Inc., supra note 12 ($5 million); Wall Street Preferred Money Managers, Inc., supra note 2 ($100,000); Strategic Advisers, Inc., supra note 2 ($50,000).
55. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.2.v.
56. Rule 3a-4, as originally proposed, would have provided that clients maintain to the extent reasonably practicable all indicia of ownership of the funds in their accounts, and specified certain requisite attributes of ownership. 1980 Release, supra note 10; paragraph (c) of rule 3a-4 as originally proposed.
57. Like the revised proposed rule, rule 3a-4 as adopted does not provide that the client be the record owner of the securities held in its account. The Division has taken the position that an investment advisory program would not be deemed to be an investment company solely because securities of clients participating in the program are held in nominee or street name. United Missouri Bank of Kansas City, n.a., supra note 2 (investment company securities held in nominee name). See, e.g., Manning & Napier Advisors, Inc., supra note 12 (non-investment company securities held in nominee name).
58. This commenter suggested that providing the right to pledge securities in the account of a retirement plan could cause the plan to lose its status as a qualified plan under the Internal Revenue Code. In general, a qualified plan must provide that benefits under the plan may not be anticipated, assigned, alienated, or subject to attachment, garnishment, levy, execution, or other legal process. See Internal Revenue Code ("IRC") Section 401(a)(13) [26 USC 401(a)(13)]; Treas. Reg. Section 1.401(a)-13 (as amended by T.D. 8219, 53 FR 31837 (Aug. 22, 1988)). In addition, the IRC imposes an additional tax of 10% on early distributions from a qualified retirement plan. See IRC Section 72(t)(1) [26 USC 72(t)(1)].
59. Similarly, paragraph (a)(5) would not prohibit a client from being charged reasonable fees for services in connection with the ownership of securities held in the program, provided such fees could be charged if the client held the securities outside the program. Of course, all fees must be permissible under applicable state and federal law and must be adequately disclosed. See Item 7 of Schedule H of Form ADV.
60. Paragraph (a)(5) of rule 3a-4, as adopted. The rule's text also has been changed to clarify that the rule provides for the retention of only the rights of ownership specified in the rule. Of course, nothing in the rule is intended to prevent clients from retaining other rights of ownership, if permitted by the program.
61. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.3.i.
62. The Commission regards a client's ability to pledge securities in his or her account directly without first withdrawing them as an additional attribute of the client's ownership of the securities. While the absence of a right to pledge would not cause a program to fall outside of rule 3a-4, a client's right to pledge securities may be relevant to determining whether a program that is not relying on the safe harbor would be considered to be an investment company.
63. July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.3.ii.
64. See infra Section II.D.3. Rule 3a-4, as adopted, is in no way intended to indicate the instances under which a client's right to vote proxies may be delegated to another person. Whether the right can be delegated depends on applicable state and federal law. An employee benefit plan subject to the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 ("ERISA"), for example, may provide that the plan's named fiduciary may delegate asset management, including the authority to vote proxies, to an "investment manager" for the plan, as that term is defined in Section 3(38) of ERISA. See, e.g., Sections 402-405 of ERISA [29 USC 1102-1105]; Letter from Alan D. Lebowitz, Deputy Assistant Secretary for Program Operations, U.S. Department of Labor, to Robert A.G. Monks, Institutional Shareholder Services, Inc. (Jan. 23, 1990), 1990 ERISA LEXIS 66. Certain provisions of the federal securities laws also contemplate that clients can delegate their right to vote proxies. Under the Commission's proxy rules, the term "beneficial owner," the person who must receive proxy materials, includes an investment adviser that has the power to vote, or to direct the voting of, a security pursuant to an agreement with the client. See Securities Exchange Act Rule 14b-2(a)(2) [17 CFR 240.14b-2]. Rules adopted by the New York Stock Exchange ("NYSE"), the National Association of Securities Dealers, Inc. ("NASD") and the American Stock Exchange, Inc. ("AMEX") permit a securityholder to designate a registered [investment adviser who has discretion over the management of the client's account to receive and vote proxies on his or her behalf. See NYSE Guide, Rules of Board, Rules 450, 451, 452 and 465; NASD Conduct Rules, Rule 2260; AMEX Rules 575, 576, 577 and 585.
65. See infra Section II.D.3.
66. In the revised proposed rule, the paragraph regarding receipt of documents specifically referred to receipt by the client's agent. Paragraph \(a\)\(5\)\(iv\) of revised proposed rule 3a-4; July Release, supra note 5, at Section II.A.3.iii. In connection with modifying the rule text to effect the changes discussed above, supra Section II.D, the reference to the client's agent has been deleted as a conforming change. These changes in the rule text are not intended to indicate that a client in an investment advisory program may not designate another person to receive documents that must be provided to securityholders by law.
67. 17 CFR 240.10b-10.
68. Paragraph (a)(6) of rule 3a-4, as adopted. Banks that execute securities transactions for customers generally are subject to confirmation requirements under the banking laws. See, e.g., 12 CFR 12.4-12.5 (Office of the Comptroller of the Currency ("OCC") confirmation requirements for national banks). The OCC recently proposed amendments to these rules that would make their confirmation requirements more closely reflect the requirements of rule 10b-10. OCC, Recordkeeping and Confirmation Requirements for Securities Transactions (Dec. 7, 1995), 60 FR 66517 (Dec. 22, 1995). In addition, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") recently considered when and how to amend its regulations governing recordkeeping and confirmation requirements for securities transactions by state nonmember banks (12 CFR part 344). FDIC, Recordkeeping and Confirmation Requirements for Securities Transactions (May 14, 1996), 61 FR 26135 (May 24, 1996).

FDIC Informal Guidance

SEC Rule 3a-4. Safe Harbor for Wrap Accounts Informal Message to Trust Specialists and Examiners

Effective: March 31, 1997

Published in Federal Register on March 31, 1997 (62 FR 15098)

Problem Being Addressed:

This rule provides a "non-exclusive" safe harbor against inadvertently operating a nonregistered investment company (mutual fund). If the provisions in the safe harbor rule are complied with, "wrap" accounts offered by banks will not be deemed to be either a "security" under the 1933 Act or an "investment company" under the 1940 Act.

In such accounts, a customer's funds are invested according to pre-established general investment guidelines, often based (at least in part) on the customer's age and current financial/investment situation. This often takes the form of an asset-allocation product. The "wrap" means that the customer pays only one fee for everything.

The bank (or the third-party provider) has discretion to change the individual investments in the pool, and maybe also the percentages of stock-income-MM allocations. Since each account in such a program may be invested identically, the bank is, in effect, operating a mutual fund.

The safe harbor is "non-exclusive", meaning it is not absolute. Compliance with Rule 3a-4 means that the SEC would not consider the program to be an unregistered investment company.

It is possible for other types of wrap programs (or wrap programs which meet some, but not all, of the safe harbor provisions, to not be considered investment companies. Sponsors of nonconforming wrap programs would have to write the SEC for "no action" relief in order to be assured that their particular program is not an "unregistered investment company" under the Investment Company Act of 1940.

Accounts/Services Covered:

Most likely, asset-allocation programs (including those offered by a third-party provider) and similar investment "models".

Bank Areas Affected: Trust departments and/or retail investment areas.

Definitions:

Sponsor - Any person who receives compensation for

- sponsoring, organizing, or administering the program
- selecting, or providing advice to clients regarding the selection of, persons the persons responsible for managing the client's account in the program.

If a program has more than one sponsor, one person shall be designated the principal sponsor, and such person shall be considered the sponsor of the program (for purposes of Rule 3a-4).

SEC notes that this is a broad definition, intended to cover programs whose structure varies widely, and will provide both the industry and the SEC with flexibility.

Investment Advisory Program - This is the term used in the Rule to describe covered wrap programs. The term is not defined in the Rule, giving the SEC flexibility in applying it.

A wrap program is generally one in which individual clients' assets are invested on a pooled basis according to an asset allocation model. The customer pays a single fee, which includes both a management fee and transactions costs (commissions and loads). The sponsor has discretion over how the funds are invested, which may be in mutual funds and/or individual securities.

General Requirements:

1. Applicable only to discretionary accounts (as explained above). Non-discretionary accounts are not at risk of being considered unregistered investment companies.
2. Account Requirements
  - a. You should expect to see a written account agreement, although that is not specifically required. A standardized agreement is acceptable; it does not need to be custom-drawn.
  - b. Account acceptance/management must reflect that it is based on the each individual client's financial situation, investment objectives, and risk tolerance. This must be documented. [\[270.3a-4\(a\)\(2\)\(i\)\]](#)
  - c. Each client must be able to impose reasonable restrictions on what his/her account can be invested in. This is a "negative" investment privilege (no tobacco, nuclear, defense, or chemical investments, or no International Paper stock). Therefore, reasonable investment prohibitions must be permitted. [\[270.3a-4\(a\)\(3\)\]](#)
The client may not impose any positive investment requirements requiring the purchase of certain specific investments.
3. Bank Administration Requirements
  - a. Account Opening: The bank must obtain information about each individual client's financial situation, investment objectives, and risk tolerance. This must be documented. [\[270.3a-4\(a\)\(2\)\(i\)\]](#)
  - b. Quarterly Statements: Customers must be provided a statement at least quarterly. The statement must show all transactions, contributions, withdrawals, fees and expenses, and the value of the account at the beginning and end of the period. A statement is required even if the account is inactive. The bank should keep a copy of such statements. [\[270.3a-4\(a\)\(4\)\]](#)
  - c. Quarterly Status Change Requests: Not less than quarterly, the bank must request that the client notify the bank of any substantive changes in the customer's status that would affect how his/her account is invested (or the model selected). The type of changes envisioned are marriage, birth of children, retirement, health problems, etc. [\[270.3a-4\(a\)\(2\)\(iii\)\]](#)
This quarterly request may be an insert to the quarterly statement, or a message printed on the quarterly statement. Recurring standardized/boilerplate language is permissible.
  - d. Annual Contacts: The bank must contact each customer not less than annually in order to determine whether there has been any change in the customer's status. Refer to the Quarterly Status Change Requests for the types of changes envisioned. [\[270.3a-4\(a\)\(2\)\(ii\)\]](#)
Per the commentary by the "SEC commission", any number of methods may be used to make contact. Examples include in person, by telephone, or by letter or electronic mail. The contact should include a questionnaire requesting the client to provide or update relevant information. The provision contemplates that a reasonable attempt will be made. If current information is not available after pursuing all reasonable means the safe harbor exclusion remains intact.
4. Client Rights The client must have the [\[270.3a-4\(a\)\(5\)\]](#):
  - a. power to vote securities (or to delegate such power) in which his account is invested.
  - b. ability to withdraw funds from his/her account either in the form of securities or in cash. Investments may, however, be held in nominee name. Problems might arise if, for instance, pooled clients' funds were large enough to invest in a mutual fund with a minimum investment of $100,000 -- but no client's individual investment was larger than $25,000. How could the individual client withdraw the actual shares of the mutual fund?
  - c. right to require a confirmation (that complies with FDIC Part 344 requirements) for every (or any individual) transaction affecting the customer's account.
  - d. right to consult with the "sponsor" and/or the portfolio manager.
  - e. ability to sue the issuer of any securities in which his/her account is invested.

NOTE:

- There is no registration requirement imposed by this Rule.
- No annual reports are required under this Rule.
- No general or specific written policies are required by the Rule. The "SEC commission" does believe that it is important for the sponsor of these programs to monitor compliance with the safe harbor provisions and feels that each person relying on the rule is responsible for demonstrating compliance with the rule. The existence of formal policies and procedures would reduce the probability of failing to comply with the provisions of the safe harbor. Therefore, the "SEC commission" strongly recommends that written policies and procedures be developed to guide and monitor this type of activity.

Optional Examination Guidance

1. Work with management to achieve compliance. Examiners should bring this safe harbor to management's attention and ascertain the bank's intentions as to compliance.

If corrections are promised and the examiner has no reason to doubt management's intentions, merely a mention in the pink (for the next exam) may be sufficient.

This is a safe harbor. The attorneys make a point that safe harbors cannot be violated. It would be considered noncompliance with the safe harbor provisions, but not a violation of law. Use the correct terminology in any criticisms, but you can show them on the Violations exam report page.

If there is a large degree of noncompliance, or blatant noncompliance, or an unwillingness to effect correction, it would seem reasonable to cite the noncompliance in the examination report, with a recommendation that the bank either correct them or seek qualified legal advice. The FDIC should be kept advised as to the bank's actions.

2. The SEC has indicated that it evaluates compliance on an individual facts-and-circumstances basis. In some cases, failure to comply with a specific requirement may be outweighed by compliance with another factor.
3. Contact Tony DiMilo at FDIC with questions. DO NOT call the SEC directly.
4. Your questions and/or citations of apparent violations may be referred to the SEC for answer or for further resolution.

Agency: Securities and Exchange Commission

Action: Final rule; request for comments on Paperwork Reduction Act burden estimate

Summary: The Securities and Exchange Commission is adopting rule and form amendments under the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and the Investment Company Act of 1940 to require registered management investment companies to provide disclosure about how they vote proxies relating to portfolio securities they hold. These amendments require registered management investment companies to disclose the policies and procedures that they use to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities. The amendments also require registered management investment companies to file with the Commission and to make available to shareholders the specific proxy votes that they cast in shareholder meetings of issuers of portfolio securities.

Dates: Effective Date: April 14, 2003.

Compliance Dates: See Section III of this release for information on compliance dates.

Comment Date: Comments regarding the "collection of information" requirements, within the meaning of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995, of Form N-PX should be received by March 14, 2003.

Addresses: To help us process and review your comments more efficiently, comments should be sent by hard copy or electronic mail, but not by both methods.

Comments sent by hard copy should be submitted in triplicate to Jonathan G. Katz, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, 450 5th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549-0609. Comments also may be submitted electronically at the following E-mail address: rule-comments@sec.gov. All comment letters should refer to File No. S7-36-02; this file number should be included on the subject line if E-mail is used. All comments received will be available for public inspection and copying in the Commission's Public Reference Room, 450 5th Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20549-0102. Electronically submitted comment letters will also be posted on the Commission's Internet site (<http://www.sec.gov>).

Supplementary Information: The Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") is adopting new rule 30b1-4 [17 CFR 270.30b1-4] and new Form N-PX [17 CFR 274.130] under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 U.S.C. 80a-1 et seq.] ("Investment Company Act"); amendments to Forms N-1A [17 CFR 239.15A; 274.11A], N-2 [17 CFR 239.14; 274.11a-1], and N-3 [17 CFR 239.17a; 17 CFR 274.11b], the registration forms used by management investment companies to register under the Investment Company Act and to offer their securities under the Securities Act of 1933 [15 U.S.C. 77a et seq.] ("Securities Act"); and amendments to Form N-CSR [17 CFR 249.331; 17 CFR 274.128], the form to be used by registered management investment companies to file certified shareholder reports with the Commission under the Sarbanes-Oxley Act of 2002.

Executive Summary

We are adopting rule and form amendments that:

- Require a management investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 ("fund") to disclose in its registration statement (and, in the case of a closed-end fund, Form N-CSR) the policies and procedures that it uses to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities; and
- Require a fund to file with the Commission and to make available to its shareholders, either on its website or upon request, its record of how it voted proxies relating to portfolio securities. A fund will be required to disclose in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders and in its registration statement the methods by which shareholders may obtain information about proxy voting.

In a companion release, we are also adopting a new rule and rule amendments under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 that will require a registered investment adviser that exercises voting authority over client proxies to adopt policies and procedures reasonably designed to ensure that the adviser votes proxies in the best interests of clients, to disclose to clients information about those policies and procedures, to disclose to clients how they may obtain information on how the adviser voted their proxies, and to maintain certain records relating to proxy voting.

I. Introduction and Background

As of September 2002, mutual funds held $2.0 trillion in publicly traded U.S. corporate equity, representing approximately 18% of all publicly traded U.S. corporate equity. This represents a dramatic increase from only 7.4% at the end of 1992. Millions of individual American investors, in turn, hold shares of equity mutual funds, relying on these funds -- and the value of the corporate securities in which they invest -- to fund their retirements, their childrens' educations, and their other basic financial needs. Yet, despite the enormous influence of mutual funds in the capital markets and their huge impact on the financial fortunes of American investors, funds have been reluctant to disclose how they exercise their proxy voting power with respect to portfolio securities. We believe that the time has come to increase the transparency of proxy voting by mutual funds. This increased transparency will enable fund shareholders to monitor their funds' involvement in the governance activities of portfolio companies, which may have a dramatic impact on shareholder value.

Mutual funds are formed as corporations or business trusts under state law and, as in the case of other corporations and trusts, must be operated for the benefit of their shareholders. Because a mutual fund is the beneficial owner of its portfolio securities, the fund's board of directors, acting on the fund's behalf, has the right and the obligation to vote proxies relating to the fund's portfolio securities. As a practical matter, however, the board typically delegates this function to the fund's investment adviser as part of the adviser's general management of fund assets, subject to the board's continuing oversight. The investment adviser to a mutual fund is a fiduciary that owes the fund a duty of "utmost good faith, and full and fair disclosure." This fiduciary duty extends to all functions undertaken on the fund's behalf, including the voting of proxies relating to the fund's portfolio securities. An investment adviser voting proxies on behalf of a fund, therefore, must do so in a manner consistent with the best interests of the fund and its shareholders.

Traditionally, mutual funds have been viewed as largely passive investors, reluctant to challenge corporate management on issues such as corporate governance. Funds have often followed the so-called "Wall Street rule," according to which an investor should either vote as management recommends or, if dissatisfied with management, sell the stock. In recent years, however, some funds, along with other institutional investors, have become more assertive in exercising their proxy voting responsibilities. The increased assertiveness by mutual funds in the voting of proxies may have a number of causes. In some instances, funds have come to hold such large positions in a particular portfolio company that they cannot easily sell the company's stock if the company's management is performing poorly. The investment policies of index funds typically do not permit them to sell poorly performing investments, and thus these funds may become active in corporate governance in order to maximize value for their shareholders.

Recent corporate scandals have created renewed investor interest in issues of corporate governance and have underscored the need for mutual funds and other institutional investors to focus on corporate governance. The increased equity holdings and accompanying voting power of mutual funds place them in a position to have enormous influence on corporate accountability. As major shareholders, mutual funds may play a vital role in monitoring the stewardship of the companies in which they invest.

Moreover, in some situations the interests of a mutual fund's shareholders may conflict with those of its investment adviser with respect to proxy voting. This may occur, for example, when a fund's adviser also manages or seeks to manage the retirement plan assets of a company whose securities are held by the fund. In these situations, a fund's adviser may have an incentive to support management recommendations to further its business interests.

Yet, in spite of the substantial institutional voting power held by mutual funds, the increasing importance of the exercise of that power to fund shareholders, and the potential for conflicts of interest with respect to the exercise of fund proxy voting power, limited information is available regarding how funds vote their proxies. At present, the Commission's rules do not require mutual funds to disclose either their proxy voting policies and procedures or their proxy voting records. Several mutual fund complexes voluntarily provide information to investors, often on their websites, about the policies and procedures that they use to determine how to vote proxies and, in some cases, their actual proxy voting decisions. The Internet provides a medium for these funds to make information about their proxy voting available to shareholders quickly and in a cost-effective manner. We applaud these voluntary efforts of mutual funds to disclose proxy voting information to shareholders.

We believe, however, that the time has now arrived for the Commission to require mutual funds to disclose their proxy voting policies and procedures, and their actual voting records. Investors in mutual funds have a fundamental right to know how the fund casts proxy votes on shareholders' behalf. Last September, we proposed amendments that would require mutual funds and other registered management investment companies to provide disclosure about how they vote proxies relating to portfolio securities that they hold ("Proposing Release"). Our proposals resulted in an extraordinary level of public interest and vigorous debate and over 8,000 comment letters. Today we adopt these proposals, with modifications to address commenters' concerns.

Proxy voting decisions by funds can play an important role in maximizing the value of the funds' investments, thereby having an enormous impact on the financial livelihood of millions of Americans. Further, shedding light on mutual fund proxy voting could illuminate potential conflicts of interest and discourage voting that is inconsistent with fund shareholders' best interests. Finally, requiring greater transparency of proxy voting by funds may encourage funds to become more engaged in corporate governance of issuers held in their portfolios, which may benefit all investors and not just fund shareholders.

II. Discussion

The Proposing Release generated significant comment and public interest. Of the approximately 8,000 comment letters, the overwhelming majority supported the proposals and urged us to adopt the proposed amendments. Many commenters, including individual investors, fund groups that currently provide proxy voting information to their shareholders, labor unions, and pension and retirement plan trustees, supported the proposals, and in some cases commented that the proposals did not go far enough in requiring funds to provide proxy voting disclosure. Many fund industry members supported the proposed amendments regarding the disclosure of policies and procedures. However, most fund industry members opposed the proposed amendments that would require disclosure of a fund's complete proxy voting record and disclosure of votes that are inconsistent with fund policies and procedures.

The Commission is adopting the proposed amendments with the modifications described below that address some of the concerns expressed by commenters.

A. Disclosure of Policies and Procedures With Respect To Voting Proxies Relating to Portfolio Securities

The Commission is adopting, with one modification to address commenters' concerns, the requirement that mutual funds that invest in voting securities disclose in their statements of additional information ("SAIs") the policies and procedures that they use to determine how to vote proxies relating to securities held in their portfolios. We are also adopting the requirement that closed-end funds disclose their proxy voting policies and procedures annually on Form N-CSR. This disclosure would include the procedures that a fund uses when a vote presents a conflict between the interests of fund shareholders, on the one hand, and those of the fund's investment adviser, principal underwriter, or an affiliated person of the fund, its investment adviser, or principal underwriter, on the other. It also includes any policies and procedures of a fund's investment adviser, or any other third party, that the fund uses, or that are used on the fund's behalf, to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities. For example, if a fund delegates proxy voting decisions to its investment adviser and the adviser uses its own policies and procedures to vote the fund's proxies, disclosure of the adviser's policies and procedures is required. Or a fund's board may wish to adopt its adviser's policies and procedures, rather than designing its own.

We also are adopting, as proposed, the requirement that a fund disclose in its shareholder reports that a description of the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; (ii) on the fund's website, if applicable; and (iii) on the Commission's website at <http://www.sec.gov>. A fund will be required to send this description of the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures within three business days of receipt of the request, by first-class mail or other means designed to ensure equally prompt delivery.

Commenters generally supported the proposed disclosure requirements regarding proxy voting policies and procedures. A number of commenters, however, objected to certain aspects of the disclosure requirements. Some commenters recommended that we provide additional, more specific guidelines regarding the categories of disclosure that should be included in proxy voting policies and procedures. These commenters, which included many "socially responsible" fund groups, argued that the absence of specific guidelines could create an incentive for funds to adopt as few policies and procedures as possible, thereby minimizing reporting and disclosure obligations.

We have determined not to prescribe more specific guidelines or requirements for the proxy voting policies and procedures that a fund must disclose in its SAI or Form N-CSR for closed-end funds. The intent of our proposal is to promote transparency with respect to proxy voting information, and not to mandate the content of a fund's policies or procedures. Therefore, we believe that funds should be allowed the flexibility to determine the content that would be appropriate for this disclosure.

We do expect, however, that funds' disclosure of their policies and procedures will include general policies and procedures, as well as policies with respect to voting on specific types of issues. The following are examples of general policies and procedures that some funds include in their proxy voting policies and procedures and with respect to which disclosure would be appropriate:

- The extent to which the fund delegates its proxy voting decisions to its investment adviser or another third party, or relies on the recommendations of a third party;
- Policies and procedures relating to matters that may affect substantially the rights or privileges of the holders of securities to be voted; and
- Policies regarding the extent to which the fund will support or give weight to the views of management of a portfolio company.

The following are examples of specific types of issues that are covered by some funds' proxy voting policies and procedures and with respect to which disclosure would be appropriate:

- Corporate governance matters, including changes in the state of incorporation, mergers and other corporate restructurings, and anti-takeover provisions such as staggered boards, poison pills, and supermajority provisions;
- Changes to capital structure, including increases and decreases of capital and preferred stock issuance;
- Stock option plans and other management compensation issues; and
- Social and corporate responsibility issues.

We are modifying our proposal in one respect, however, to clarify that a fund may satisfy the requirements for a description of its policies and procedures by including a copy of the policies and procedures themselves. A number of commenters recommended that we streamline the disclosure of policies and procedures that would be required in the SAI. Several of these commenters were fund groups that noted that they have funds with multiple sub-advisers, each of which uses its own proxy voting policies and procedures to vote the fund's proxies. Because the proposed rules would require the fund to include a description of each such sub-adviser's policies and procedures in the fund's SAI, commenters argued, the requirements would add lengthy disclosure to the SAI. Further, because different sub-advisers for a single fund could have policies that vary with respect to a particular issue, this disclosure could confuse investors. These commenters argued that disclosure of policies and procedures was not necessary or appropriate given the lack of genuine shareholder interest in the information.

We have determined that it would not be appropriate to modify the proposal to allow a fund to reduce or eliminate the disclosure regarding its proxy voting policies and procedures. Shareholders have a right to know the policies and procedures that are being used by a fund to vote proxies on their behalf. To the extent that multiple policies are being used by a single fund, shareholders should have access to information about all the policies that are in effect. In order to mitigate the burden of preparing descriptions of policies and procedures, however, we have modified our disclosure requirements to permit a fund to include the actual policies and procedures used to vote proxies in the SAI or N-CSR, rather than a description of the policies.

Some commenters argued that the SAI was not the appropriate location for disclosure of proxy voting policies and procedures because the SAI is not likely to reach a wide base of investors. These commenters argued that the policies and procedures should be required to be distributed to all investors, as part of the fund's prospectus, annual report, or in a separate mailing. We continue to believe, however, that the SAI is the most appropriate and cost-effective location for this disclosure. The disclosure will be readily accessible to shareholders because funds are required to provide an SAI promptly to any investor who requests one. On the other hand, funds and their shareholders will not be forced to bear the costs for printing and mailing this information to every shareholder, without regard to their level of interest in this information.

B. Disclosure of Proxy Voting Record

The Commission is adopting, with modifications, amendments that will require each fund to file with the Commission its proxy voting record and make this record available to its shareholders. The Commission is not, however, adopting its proposal to require a fund to disclose in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders information regarding any proxy votes that are inconsistent with its proxy voting policies and procedures.

The proposal to require funds to disclose their proxy voting records generated strong and divergent views among commenters. A number of commenters, including an overwhelming number of individual investors, strongly supported the Commission's proposal to require a fund to disclose its complete proxy voting record. Many of these commenters stated that this disclosure would improve shareholders' ability to monitor funds' voting decisions on their behalf and that it would allow investors to make more informed decisions when choosing among funds.

On the other hand, many commenters, including a large number of fund industry participants, strongly opposed any requirement for a fund to provide disclosure of its actual proxy votes cast. First, they argued that shareholders are not interested in this disclosure, with many fund groups claiming that they have received virtually no requests from their shareholders for proxy voting information. Second, they argued that the proposals would deny funds the ability to vote confidentially and subject funds to pressure from corporate management to influence proxy voting decisions, as well as to retaliatory actions by management, such as restricting access by portfolio managers to corporate personnel. Third, on a related point, commenters argued that mandatory disclosure of proxy votes would undermine their ability to change corporate governance practices of portfolio companies through "behind the scenes" private communications. Fourth, they argued that requiring funds to disclose their proxy votes publicly will subject them to orchestrated campaigns in the media and elsewhere by special interest groups with social or political agendas different from those of fund shareholders, which will detract from a fund's ability to concentrate on the management of its portfolio. Fifth, fund industry commenters argued that the required disclosure of proxy votes would undermine the role of fund boards of directors, including independent directors, in overseeing proxy voting and protecting fund shareholders against conflicts of interest. Some of these commenters suggested that rather than requiring disclosure of proxy votes, the Commission should mandate that fund directors approve proxy voting policies and procedures, including policies and procedures for addressing potential conflicts of interest, and should require reports to be provided to fund directors concerning actual proxy votes cast. Sixth, the commenters argued that the costs of collecting and disclosing the information in semi-annual reports on Form N-CSR would be substantial and would exceed any benefit to shareholders from the disclosure.

After careful consideration of these comments, we continue to believe that requiring funds to disclose their complete proxy voting records will benefit investors by improving transparency and enabling fund shareholders to monitor their funds' involvement in the governance activities of portfolio companies. With respect to the specific arguments raised by commenters who opposed disclosure of proxy votes, we note first that the argument that investors are not interested in proxy voting disclosure is to some extent belied by the large number of favorable comments from individual investors that the proposal attracted. In addition, we note that a recent shareholder proposal seeking to require a major fund to disclose its proxy votes on social and environmental issues generated significant support from fund shareholders. Further, regardless of whether all, or a majority of, investors are interested in proxy vote disclosure, we believe that fund shareholders who are interested in this information have a fundamental right to know how the fund has exercised its proxy votes on their behalf.

Second, while we are cognizant of concerns that disclosure will undermine funds' ability to vote confidentially and thereby lead to pressure on or retaliation against funds, we believe that this risk is not sufficient to outweigh shareholders' interests in knowing how their funds have voted their portfolio securities. In addition, as some proponents of the disclosure requirements argued, the principle of confidential voting is intended to protect shareholders from having their votes disclosed prior to a shareholder meeting, while the amendments that we are adopting would only require disclosure of votes two months or more after a shareholder meeting. We are also persuaded by other commenters who noted that a large majority of portfolio companies currently do not have confidential voting policies and that companies are often able to identify when and how a particularly large shareholder, such as a fund, has cast its votes.

Third, with respect to the argument that the disclosure of a fund's proxy voting record will undermine the use of "behind the scenes" communications to change corporate governance practices, we note that disclosure by funds of their proxy votes is not inconsistent with these communications and will not force funds to disclose these communications. Further, we believe that requiring a fund to disclose its proxy voting record may actually encourage it to become more engaged in corporate governance matters involving issuers held in its portfolio, through "behind the scenes" communications as well as other means.

Fourth, with respect to the argument that proxy vote disclosure will "politicize" the process of proxy voting by funds to the detriment of fund shareholders, we believe that to the extent that greater disclosure may encourage and enable shareholders to express their views on their funds' proxy decisions, that is an appropriate development. We agree, however, that fund shareholders could be adversely affected if, in fact, disclosure of fund proxy votes results in significant politicization of the proxy voting process by non-shareholder interest groups and interference with funds' ability to change corporate governance practices through "behind the scenes" communications. Therefore, the Commission has asked the staff to monitor the effects of the disclosure and report back to the Commission on the operation of the rules, and whether there have been any unintended consequences as a result of the disclosure, no later than December 31, 2005.

Fifth, we disagree with the argument that proxy voting disclosure will undermine the authority of funds' boards of directors, and that we instead should adopt amendments to require that boards be more involved in the proxy voting process. Disclosure of proxy votes is not inconsistent with, and, in fact, will promote recognition by fund boards of their obligation to exercise their proxy voting responsibilities in a manner that is consistent with shareholders' interests. Further, we believe that the additional requirements with respect to fund boards that some commenters suggested that we adopt in lieu of proxy voting disclosure are unnecessary. A fund's board of directors, acting on the fund's behalf, already has the obligation to vote proxies relating to the fund's portfolio securities. Although the board typically delegates this function to the fund's investment adviser, the adviser remains subject to the board's continuing oversight. By increasing transparency of proxy voting, the amendments will work in tandem with the existing obligation of fund boards.

Finally, with respect to arguments that the disclosure may impose excessive costs, we note that several fund groups that currently provide disclosure of their complete proxy voting records to their shareholders commented that although there are start-up costs for compliance systems, this cost decreases over time, and that the overall costs of the disclosure are minimal. We find these arguments made by funds that are providing this disclosure to be particularly persuasive and continue to believe that the costs of disclosure are reasonable. We also note that by requiring disclosure of the proxy voting record in filings with the Commission, with additional disclosure in the fund's SAI and annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders about how investors may obtain this voting record, we have tailored the disclosure requirement to allow those investors who are interested in this disclosure to access the information without imposing undue cost burdens. In addition, as discussed below, we have modified our proposals in order to further reduce the costs associated with this disclosure.

Disclosure of Complete Proxy Voting Record

The Commission is adopting new rule 30b1-4 under the Investment Company Act to require that a fund file its complete proxy voting record on an annual basis. This rule will require a fund to file new Form N-PX, containing its complete proxy voting record for the twelve-month period ended June 30, by no later than August 31 of each year. Form N-PX will be a reporting form required under the Investment Company Act, and will be required to be signed by the fund, and on behalf of the fund by its principal executive officer or officers.

We had proposed to require a fund to file its complete proxy voting record as part of its semi-annual reports on Form N-CSR, which will be used by registered management investment companies to file certified shareholder reports with the Commission under the Sarbanes-

Oxley Act of 2002. One commenter argued that this means of disclosure would impose unnecessary costs and substantial administrative complexity. The commenter noted that, under our proposed rules, fund complexes that have funds with staggered fiscal year ends would be required to file reports on Form N-CSR containing their proxy voting records as many as twelve times per year. We are persuaded that annual disclosure of a fund's proxy voting record is sufficient and that the filing does not need to be based on a fund's fiscal year end. Therefore, to reduce the burden of proxy vote disclosure, we are modifying our proposal to require that all funds file their voting records annually not later than August 31, for the twelve-month period ended June 30. This approach will have the advantages of making each fund's proxy voting record available within a relatively short period of time after the proxy voting season, and of providing disclosure of all funds' proxy voting records over a uniform period of time.

Funds will be required to disclose the following information on Form N-PX for each matter relating to a portfolio security considered at any shareholder meeting held during the period covered by the report and with respect to which the fund was entitled to vote:

- The name of the issuer of the portfolio security;
- The exchange ticker symbol of the portfolio security;
- The Council on Uniform Securities Identification Procedures ("CUSIP") number for the portfolio security;
- The shareholder meeting date;
- A brief identification of the matter voted on;
- Whether the matter was proposed by the issuer or by a security holder;
- Whether the fund cast its vote on the matter;
- How the fund cast its vote (e.g., for or against proposal, or abstain; for or withhold regarding election of directors); and
- Whether the fund cast its vote for or against management.

In response to commenters who noted that the exchange ticker symbol and CUSIP number may be difficult to obtain for certain portfolio securities, particularly foreign securities, we have added an instruction permitting a fund to omit this information if it is not available through reasonably practicable means.

A fund also will be required to make its proxy voting record available to shareholders. However, we are modifying our proposal, in response to a comment, to allow a fund the flexibility to choose to make its proxy voting record available to shareholders either upon request or by making available an electronic version on or through the fund's website. The proposed amendments would have required a fund to send the proxy voting record upon request. This modification addresses concerns that the proposals would require funds with large numbers of holdings to produce lengthy proxy voting spreadsheets and to send them to investors who request them.

As adopted, our amendments will require a fund to include in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders as well as its SAI a statement that information regarding how the fund voted proxies relating to portfolio securities during the most recent twelve-month period ended June 30 is available (1) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; or on or through the fund's website at a specified Internet address; or both; and (2) on the Commission's website. If a fund discloses that its proxy voting record is available by calling a toll-free (or collect) telephone number, it must send the information disclosed in the fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX within three business days of receipt of a request for this information, by first-class mail or other means designed to ensure equally prompt delivery.

If a fund discloses that its proxy voting record is available on or through its website, it must make available free of charge the information disclosed in the fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX on or through its website as soon as reasonably practicable after filing the report with the Commission. We interpret the "as soon as reasonably practicable" standard to mean that the information would be available, barring unforeseen circumstances, on the same day as filing. We could revisit this requirement if posting on the same day does not generally occur. A fund would not be required to continue to make available on or through its website any information from reports on Form N-PX that precede the most recently filed report on Form N-PX.

These rules require that a fund's proxy voting record be publicly available through filings with us. They also require that this information be readily available to fund shareholders from the fund itself and that shareholders be apprised of how this information may be obtained. We believe that these rules strike an appropriate balance - ensuring that a fund's proxy voting record is readily available to interested fund shareholders, while allowing funds the flexibility to choose how to make this information available in the most effective and cost-efficient manner.

Some commenters recommended other specific modifications to our proposed disclosure requirements, which we are not adopting. Several of these commenters suggested that we require funds to provide additional disclosure with respect to situations where the fund's investment adviser has a conflict of interest, including, for example, disclosure of any business and financial relationship with the issuer and all fees received by the adviser or its affiliates from the issuer during a designated period of time.

We have determined not to require additional disclosure regarding conflict of interest situations at the present time. We believe that disclosure of a fund's complete voting record will enable shareholders to monitor how the fund voted in specific instances and whether the vote is in the shareholders' best interests. Further, requiring additional public disclosure with respect to conflicts of interest would significantly increase the complexity and cost of the proxy vote disclosure.

Several commenters argued that we should require a fund to provide its proxy vote disclosure in a uniform, web-accessible, downloadable format. Other commenters indicated that we should require a fund to disclose its proxy voting record on its website, if it has one. Commenters also suggested that we require funds to provide an executive summary of their votes, that might include, for example, the percentage of votes cast for and against management, sorted by the type of issue.

We have determined not to modify our proposals in order to add these requirements, in order to minimize the cost to funds and their shareholders of providing disclosure of fund proxy voting records. As adopted, our requirements will allow funds the flexibility to determine the best manner in which to make their proxy voting records available to shareholders. We continue to believe that our disclosure requirements strike an appropriate balance by ensuring that a fund's proxy voting record, as well as its policies and procedures, is readily available to interested fund shareholders without imposing undue costs. We would, however, encourage funds to use their websites and other available means to make their proxy voting records readily accessible to shareholders in a user-friendly format.

Other commenters, by contrast, requested that we limit the proposed disclosure regarding a fund's proxy voting record. For example, some commenters recommended that we require a fund to disclose information regarding only those proxy votes cast against management of the portfolio companies in which it invests, or where a conflict of interest exists. In addition, one commenter suggested that we require only a summary of all proxy votes in the aggregate arranged according to issue. We believe, however, that limiting disclosure of the proxy voting record to specific votes, or to a general summary of all votes, would significantly undercut the intent of our proposals, which is to enable fund shareholders to determine how a fund voted with respect to any particular proxy vote.

Disclosure of Proxy Votes that are Inconsistent with Fund's Policies and Procedures

The Commission has determined not to adopt the proposed requirement that a fund disclose in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders proxy votes (or failures to vote) that are inconsistent with the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures. Many commenters, including both those who generally supported the disclosure of funds' proxy voting records and those who generally opposed this disclosure, expressed concerns regarding the proposed requirements for disclosure of inconsistent votes. Proponents of proxy voting record disclosure argued that a requirement to disclose inconsistent votes might lead funds to draft overly broad policies and procedures to avoid triggering the required disclosure. Opponents of proxy voting record disclosure argued that the disclosure of inconsistent votes would be burdensome because it would require funds to analyze a large volume of proxy votes to determine whether any vote triggered the disclosure and then to provide a lengthy explanation to shareholders regarding each inconsistent vote, which would be expensive to prepare and not meaningful to investors. We find these arguments persuasive and have therefore determined not to adopt the requirement that funds disclose information regarding votes that are inconsistent with the fund's policies and procedures.

III. Effective Date and Compliance Date

The effective date of these amendments is April 14, 2003. Registered management investment companies must file their first report on Form N-PX not later than August 31, 2004, for the twelve-month period beginning July 1, 2003, and ending June 30, 2004. Based on the comments, we believe that this will provide funds with sufficient time to make any necessary changes to existing software and internal systems in order to compile proxy voting information in the manner that will be required by new Form N-PX.

All initial registration statements on Form N-1A, N-2, or N-3, and all post-effective amendments that are annual updates to effective registration statements on these forms, filed on or after July 1, 2003, must include the disclosure required by Item 13(f) of Form N-1A, Item 18.16 of Form N-2, or Item 20(o) of Form N-3, as applicable, regarding the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures. Every annual report by a closed-end fund on Form N-CSR filed on or after July 1, 2003, must include the disclosure required by Item 7 of Form N-CSR regarding the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures.

All initial registration statements on Form N-1A, N-2, or N-3, and all post-effective amendments that are annual updates to effective registration statements on these forms, filed on or after August 31, 2004, must include the disclosure required by Item 13(f) of Form N-1A, Item 18.16 of Form N-2, or Item 20(o) of Form N-3, as applicable, regarding the availability of the fund's proxy voting record. Every report to shareholders of a fund registered on Form N-1A, N-2, or N-3 that is transmitted to shareholders on or after August 31, 2004, must include the disclosure required by Item 22(b)(8) and 22(c)(6) of Form N-1A, Instructions 4.h. and 5.f. to Item 23 of Form N-2, or Instructions 4(viii) and 5(vi) to Item 27(a) of Form N-3, as applicable, regarding the availability of a fund's proxy voting record. Every report to shareholders of a fund registered on Form N-1A, N-2, or N-3 that is transmitted to shareholders on or after the effective date of an initial registration statement or post-effective amendment that is required to include a description of the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures (or, in the case of a closed-end fund, the filing date of its first annual report on Form N-CSR filed on or after July 1, 2003) must include the disclosure required by Item 22(b)(7) and 22(c)(5) of Form N-1A, Instructions 4.g. and 5.e. to Item 23 of Form N-2, or Instructions 4(vii) and 5(v) to Item 27(a) of Form N-3 regarding the availability of the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures.

IV. Paperwork Reduction Act

As explained in the Proposing Release, certain provisions of the amendments contain "collection of information" requirements within the meaning of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 ("PRA") [44 U.S.C. 3501 et seq.], and the Commission has submitted the proposed collections of information to the Office of Management and Budget ("OMB") for review in accordance with 44 U.S.C. 3507(d) and 5 CFR 1320.11. The titles for the collections of information that we have submitted are: (1) "Form N-1A under the Investment Company Act of 1940 and Securities Act of 1933, Registration Statement of Open-End Management Investment Companies"; (2) "Form N-2 - Registration Statement of Closed-End Management Investment Companies"; (3) "Form N-3 - Registration Statement of Separate Accounts Organized as Management Investment Companies"; (4) "Form N-CSR - Certified Shareholder Report of Registered Management Investment Companies"; and (5) "Rule 30e-1 under the Investment Company Act of 1940, Reports to Stockholders of Management Companies." OMB approved the collections of information for the amendments to Forms N-1A, N-2, and N-3, and rule 30e-1. Because we have modified our proposals as described above, we are revising the burden estimate for Form N-CSR and rule 30e-1. We have submitted a revised collection of information for Form N-CSR to OMB, and have submitted the following additional collection of information to OMB: "Form N-PX - Annual Report of Proxy Voting Record of Registered Management Investment Companies." An agency may not conduct or sponsor, and a person is not required to respond to, a collection of information unless it displays a currently valid OMB control number.

Form N-1A (OMB Control No. 3235-0307), Form N-2 (OMB Control No. 3235-0026), and Form N-3 (OMB Control No. 3235-0316) were adopted pursuant to Section 8(a) of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a-8] and Section 5 of the Securities Act [15 U.S.C. 77e]. Form N-CSR (OMB Control No. 3235-0570) was adopted pursuant to Section 30 of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a-29] and Sections 13(a) and 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") [15 U.S.C. 78m and 78o(d)]. Form N-PX is being adopted pursuant to Section 30 of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a-29]. Rule 30e-1 under the Investment Company Act (OMB Control No. 3235-0025) was adopted pursuant to Section 30(e) of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a-29(e)].

As discussed above, the amendments will require that funds holding equity securities disclose the policies and procedures that they use to determine how to vote the proxies of their portfolio securities. The amendments also require funds to file with the Commission and to make available to their shareholders the specific proxy votes that they cast in shareholder meetings of issuers of portfolio securities. These changes are intended to enhance the transparency of fund proxy voting and will allow shareholders to monitor whether funds are voting portfolio securities in the best interests of shareholders.

Summary of Comment Letters and Revisions to Proposals

We requested comment on the PRA analysis contained in the Proposing Release, and we received numerous comment letters concerning the proposed collection of information requirements, particularly with respect to the proposed requirement to disclose funds' actual proxy voting records. Many commenters, including in particular funds that currently provide disclosure of their proxy votes, indicated that the Commission's estimates of the burden of the proposed disclosure were reasonable, and that available technology and other resources would render record-keeping and reporting requirements relatively routine. Other commenters, including many other members of the fund industry, argued that the Commission's estimates substantially underestimated the burden of providing the proposed disclosure. Some of these commenters argued that the Commission's estimates omitted start-up and one-time transition costs for collecting proxy voting information and preparing it in the format that would be required by Form N-CSR.

Several commenters provided specific estimates of the costs of providing the disclosure of their proxy vote records. However, these commenters generally did not provide any breakdown of the components of these estimates (e.g., number of tasks required, persons required to perform each task, wage rates for each person). One fund group which opposed the requirement to disclose its proxy voting record prepared a sample disclosure in the format prescribed by the proposed amendment to Form N-CSR for one of its funds which cast proxy votes on 1,607 agenda items at 500 shareholder meetings during a six-month period. The fund group estimated that the collection of votes from its information systems would take four hours, reformatting the data to the format of Form N-CSR would take eight hours, and reconfirming that each vote was cast in accordance with the fund's proxy voting policies would take at least another two hours. Another fund group which recently began to post its proxy voting guidelines and proxy voting records for two of its funds on its website estimated that this task took approximately two days. These estimates are generally consistent with the estimate in the Proposing Release that the disclosure on Form N-CSR of a fund's proxy voting record would take 10 hours per semi-annual filing on Form N-CSR, at an annual cost of $1,379 per fund. By contrast, a fund industry trade group estimated, based on a survey of fund complexes conducted on its behalf by a third-party, that proxy voting record disclosure would cost approximately $3,380 per fund in start-up costs, and $5,530 per year in ongoing costs.

We note that we have modified our proposal in two significant ways, in part in response to concerns expressed about costs by commenters. First, the amendments will require disclosure of proxy votes cast in annual reports on new Form N-PX, rather than semi-annually on Form N-CSR. Second, we are not adopting the proposed requirement that funds disclose in their annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders votes that were inconsistent with their proxy voting policies and procedures. Because of these modifications, we have revised our burden estimates for Form N-CSR and rule 30e-1. The burden estimate for disclosure of a fund's proxy voting record will be the burden estimated for new Form N-PX. These revisions to the burden estimates are described below.

Form N-1A

Form N-1A, including the amendments, contains collection of information requirements. The likely respondents to this information collection are open-end funds registering with the Commission on Form N-1A. Compliance with the disclosure requirements of Form N-1A is mandatory. Responses to the disclosure requirements are not confidential.

Prior to the proposed amendments, the estimated hour burden for preparing an initial registration statement on Form N-1A was 801 hours per portfolio, and the estimated hour burden for preparing post-effective amendments on Form N-1A was 99 hours per portfolio. The Commission estimates that, on an annual basis, 193 portfolios file initial registration statements on Form N-1A and 7,525 portfolios file post-effective amendments on Form N-1A. Thus, the total hour burden for the preparation and filing of Form N-1A, prior to the proposed amendments, was 899,568 hours.

We estimated in the Proposing Release that the amendments would increase the hour burden per portfolio per filing of an initial registration statement by 8 hours, to 809 hours per portfolio, and would increase the hour burden per portfolio per filing of a post-effective amendment to a registration statement by 2 hours, to 101 hours per portfolio. Thus, the current total annual hour burden for all funds for preparation and filing of initial registration statements and post-effective amendments to Form N-1A is 916,162 hours.

Form N-2

Form N-2, including the amendments, contains collection of information requirements. The likely respondents to this information collection are closed-end funds registering with the Commission on Form N-2. Compliance with the disclosure requirements of Form N-2 is mandatory. Responses to the disclosure requirements are not confidential.

Prior to the proposed amendments, the estimated hour burden for preparing an initial registration statement on Form N-2 was 536.7 burden hours per filing, and the estimated annual hour burden for preparing post-effective amendments on Form N-2 was 101.7 hours per filing. The Commission estimates that, on an annual basis, 140 respondents file an initial registration statement on Form N-2 and 38 respondents file post-effective amendments on Form N-2. Thus, the total annual hour burden for the preparation and filing of Form N-2, prior to the proposed amendments, was 79,003 hours.

We estimated in the Proposing Release that the amendments would increase the hour burden per filing of an initial registration statement on Form N-2 by 8 hours, to 544.7 hours per filing, and would increase the hour burden per filing of a post-effective amendment to a registration statement on Form N-2 by 2 hours, to 103.7 hours per filing. Thus, the current total annual hour burden for all funds for preparation and filing of initial registration statements and post-effective amendments on Form N-2 is 80,198 hours.

Form N-3

Form N-3, including the amendments, contains collection of information requirements. The likely respondents to this information collection are separate accounts, organized as management investment companies and offering variable annuities, registering with the Commission on Form N-3. Compliance with the disclosure requirements of Form N-3 is mandatory. Responses to the disclosure requirements are not confidential.

Prior to the proposed amendments, the estimated hour burden for preparing an initial registration statement on Form N-3 was 907.2 hours per portfolio, and the estimated hour burden for preparing post-effective amendments on Form N-3 was 148.4 hours per portfolio. The Commission estimates that, on an annual basis, no initial registration statements will be filed on Form N-3 and 60 post-effective amendments will be filed on Form N-3. The estimated average number of portfolios per filing is 4, bringing the estimated total number of portfolios in post-effective amendments to filings on Form N-3 annually to 240. Thus, the total hour burden for the preparation and filing of Form N-3, prior to the proposed amendments, was 35,616 hours.

We estimated in the Proposing Release that the amendments to Form N-3 would increase the hour burden per portfolio of an initial registration statement by 8 hours, to 915.2 hours per portfolio, and would increase the hour burden per portfolio of a post-effective amendment to a registration statement by 2 hours, to 150.4 hours per portfolio. Thus, the current total annual hour burden for all funds for preparation and filing of initial registration statements and post-effective amendments on Form N-3 will be 36,096 hours.

Form N-CSR

Form N-CSR, including the amendments, contains collection of information requirements. The respondents to this information collection will be closed-end management investment companies subject to rule 30e-1 under the Investment Company Act of 1940 registering with the Commission on Form N-2. Compliance with the disclosure requirements of Form N-CSR is mandatory. Responses to the disclosure requirements are not confidential.

The current estimated total hour burden for preparation of Form N-CSR is 35,139 hours. In the Proposing Release, we estimated that 3,700 registered investment companies would file Form N-CSR on a semi-annual basis for a total of 7,400 filings. We estimated in the Proposing Release that the amendments to Form N-CSR would increase the hour burden per filing of each semi-annual report on Form N-CSR by 10 hours, or 74,000 hours total. However, we have modified our proposal to require funds to disclose their proxy voting record in reports on new Form N-PX on an annual basis, rather than in reports on Form N-CSR on a semi-annual basis. As proposed, however, we are requiring registered closed-end management investment companies to include in their annual reports on Form N-CSR a description of the policies and procedures that they use to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities. We estimate that 663 closed-end management investment companies will file reports on Form N-CSR, and are revising our estimate of the increase in the hour burden resulting from the amendments to 2 hours per filing. We estimate that the total annual burden attributable to the disclosure of proxy voting policies and procedures for closed-end funds will be 1,326 hours. Thus, the new total annual hour burden for preparation and filing of Form N-CSR will be 36,465 hours.

Shareholder Reports

Rule 30e-1, including the amendments to Forms N-1A, N-2, and N-3, contains collection of information requirements. Compliance with the disclosure requirements of rule 30e-1 is mandatory. Responses to the disclosure requirements are not confidential.

There are approximately 3,700 funds subject to rule 30e-1. We estimated in the Proposing Release that the hour burden for preparing and filing semi-annual and annual shareholder reports in compliance with rule 30e-1, prior to the proposed amendments, was 202.5 hours per year, and that the amendments would increase the hour burden of complying with rule 30e-1 by 10 hours per fund per year for a total increase in burden hours of 37,000 hours. However, we have revised our proposed amendments to eliminate the proposed requirement that annual and semi-annual shareholder reports include disclosure of proxy votes that are inconsistent with the fund's proxy voting policies. Thus, we are revising our estimate of the increase in the hour burden of complying with rule 30e-1 attributable to the proposed amendments to 3,700 hours, rather than 37,000 hours, to reflect the elimination of this proposed disclosure requirement. The total hour burden of complying with rule 30e-1 will be 203.5 hours per year, for a total annual burden to the industry of 752,950 hours.

Rule 30b1-4

The purpose of rule 30b1-4 is to improve the transparency of information about funds' proxy voting records. Rule 30b1-4 will require a fund to file Form N-PX, containing its complete proxy voting record for the twelve-month period ended June 30, by no later than August 31 of each year. The respondents to rule 30b1-4 will be registered management investment companies, other than small business investment companies registered with the Commission on Form N-5.

We estimate that there are approximately 3,700 funds that will be affected by the rule. Each of these 3,700 funds will be required by rule 30b1-4 to file complete proxy voting records with the Commission on Form N-PX. For purposes of this PRA analysis, the burden associated with the requirement of Rule 30b1-4 has been included in the collection of information required by Form N-PX, rather than the rule. Compliance with rule 30b1-4 is mandatory for every registered management investment company, other than a small business investment company registered with the Commission on Form N-5. Responses to the disclosure requirements are not confidential.

Form N-PX

Form N-PX contains collection of information requirements. The respondents to this information collection will be registered management investment companies, other than small business investment companies registered with the Commission on Form N-5. Compliance with the disclosure requirements of Form N-PX is mandatory. Responses to the disclosure requirements are not confidential.

Every registered management investment company, other than a small business investment company registered with the Commission on Form N-5, will be required to file Form N-PX, containing its complete proxy voting record for the twelve-month period ended June 30, by no later than August 31 of each year. We estimate that there are approximately 3,700 funds registered with the Commission, with 5,200 fund portfolios that hold equity securities that will be required to file Form N-PX. We further estimate that for each of these funds the disclosure of its proxy voting record in filings on Form N-PX as of the end of each twelve-month period ended June 30 will require, on average, 14.4 hours per filing per equity portfolio, for a total annual burden of 74,880 hours (14.4 hours per filing x 5,200 equity portfolios).

In the Proposing Release, we estimated that the hour burden imposed by the proposed amendments to Form N-CSR, including the requirement for a fund to disclose its proxy voting record on Form N-CSR, would increase the hour burden per filing of a Form N-CSR by 10 hours, or 74,000 hours total. This total burden hour estimate is comparable to our estimate of 74,880 total burden hours for filing Form N-PX. However, our estimate of the hour burden per filing of Form N-PX differs from the estimated hour burden per filing of Form N-CSR, in part because Form N-PX will be filed annually rather than semi-annually, and in part because we are calculating the hour burden for Form N-PX by portfolio, rather than by fund.

Request for Comments

We request comments on the accuracy of our estimates with respect to Form N-PX. Pursuant to 44 U.S.C. 3506(c)(2)(B), the Commission solicits comments to: (i) evaluate whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the agency, including whether the information will have practical utility; (ii) evaluate the accuracy of the Commission's estimate of burden of the proposed collection of information; (iii) determine whether there are ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and (iv) evaluate whether there are ways to minimize the burden of the collection of information on those who are to respond, including through the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology.

Persons submitting comments on the collection of information requirements should direct the comments to the Office of Management and Budget, Attention: Desk Officer for the Securities and Exchange Commission, Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Room 3208, New Executive Office Building, Washington, DC 20503, and should send a copy to Jonathan G. Katz, Secretary, Securities and Exchange Commission, 450 5th Street, NW, Washington, DC 20549-0609, with reference to File No. S7-36-02. OMB is required to make a decision concerning the collection of information between 30 and 60 days after publication of this Release. Consequently, a comment to OMB is best assured of having its full effect if OMB receives it within 30 days after publication of this Release.

V. Cost/Benefit Analysis

The Commission is sensitive to the costs and benefits imposed by its rules. The amendments we are adopting will require funds to provide disclosure about how they vote proxies of the portfolio securities they hold. A fund will be required to disclose in its registration statement the policies and procedures that it uses to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities, and to include disclosure about the availability of the fund's proxy voting record. This disclosure will be included in the fund's Statement of Additional Information ("SAI") (and on Form N-CSR also, in the case of a closed-end fund's policies and procedures), which is not part of the fund's prospectus but is delivered to investors free of charge upon request. We are also requiring a fund to file with the Commission an annual report on Form N-PX, containing the fund's complete proxy voting record for the twelve-month period ended June 30, by no later than August 31 of each year. Our amendments will also require a fund to include in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders disclosure that the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures are available (i) without charge, upon request from the fund, (ii) on the fund's website, if applicable, and (iii) on the SEC website. In addition, a fund will be required to state in its registration statement and reports to shareholders that its proxy voting record is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; or on or through the fund's website at a specified Internet address; or both; and (ii) on the SEC website.

In the Proposing Release, we analyzed the costs and benefits of our proposals and requested comments and data regarding the costs and benefits of the proposed form amendments. These comments are summarized below.

A. Benefits

The amendments to the registration statement and reporting forms that we are adopting will benefit fund investors, by providing them with access to information about how funds vote their proxies.

First, the amendments will provide better information to investors who wish to determine:

- to which fund managers they should allocate their capital, and
- whether their existing fund managers are adequately maximizing the value of their shares.

The investment adviser to a mutual fund is a fiduciary that owes the fund a duty of "utmost good faith, and full and fair disclosure." This fiduciary duty extends to all functions undertaken on the fund's behalf, including the voting of proxies relating to the fund's portfolio securities. An investment adviser voting proxies on behalf of a fund, therefore, must do so in a manner consistent with the best interests of the fund and its shareholders. The increased transparency resulting from proxy voting disclosure may increase investors' confidence that their fund managers are voting proxies in accordance with their fiduciary duties. Without disclosure about how the fund votes proxies, fund shareholders cannot evaluate this aspect of their managers' performance. To the extent that investors choose among funds based on their proxy voting policies and records, in addition to other factors such as expenses, performance, and investment policies, investors will be better able to select funds that suit their preferences. Further, insofar as investors may over-emphasize certain of these factors, e.g., past performance, in selecting funds, it may be beneficial to provide additional information to use in selecting funds. On a related point, we anticipate that over time, commercial third-party information providers will offer services that will enable investors to better analyze proxy voting by funds. These developments will further facilitate the benefits to fund investors from proxy vote disclosure.

Second, in some situations the interests of a fund's shareholders may conflict with those of its investment adviser with respect to proxy voting. This may occur, for example, when a fund's adviser also manages or seeks to manage the retirement plan assets of a company whose securities are held by the fund. In these situations, a fund's adviser may have an incentive to support management recommendations to further its business interests. The amendments require funds to disclose how they address such conflicts of interest in determining how to vote their proxies. This disclosure requirement may benefit fund shareholders by deterring voting decisions that are motivated by considerations of the interests of the fund's adviser rather than the interests of fund shareholders. Further, the increased transparency resulting from proxy voting disclosure may increase investors' confidence that their fund managers are voting proxies in accordance with their fiduciary duties.

A third significant benefit of the amendments comes from providing stronger incentives to fund managers to vote their proxies conscientiously. The amendments could increase the incentives for fund managers to vote their proxies carefully, and thereby improve corporate performance and enhance shareholder value. The improved corporate performance that could result from better decision making in corporate governance matters may benefit fund investors. In addition, other equity holders may benefit from the improvement to corporate governance that results from more conscientious proxy voting by fund managers. We note that assets held in equity funds account for approximately 18% of the $11 trillion market capitalization of all publicly traded U.S. corporations, and therefore funds exercise a considerable amount of influence in proxy votes affecting the value of these corporations.

The benefits to the economy that will result from improved corporate governance are difficult to measure. While measuring the effects of such a rule involves a high degree of uncertainty, the scale of the aggregate portfolio holdings involved suggests that they may be substantial.

A number of commenters addressed the benefits of the proposals identified in the Proposing Release. Most commenters who addressed the costs and benefits of our proposals concurred with our assessment of the benefits of the proposed requirements to disclose the policies and procedures that funds use to determine how to vote proxies relating to securities held in their portfolios.

Our proposals to require disclosure of the actual votes cast by funds generated divergent views as to the possible benefits of this disclosure. Many commenters, including individual investors, labor unions, trustees of pension and retirement plans, and funds that currently make their proxy voting records available to their shareholders agreed with our assessment of the benefits of this disclosure, and argued that these benefits would be substantial. These commenters stated that investors would benefit from the increased transparency resulting from disclosure of proxy voting records, by allowing investors to consider a fund's proxy voting record when making an investment decision. In addition, commenters argued that disclosure of proxy votes cast would have beneficial effects across the entire U.S. economy, by encouraging better decision making in corporate governance matters, which would enhance shareholder value of the issuers of portfolio securities and, in turn, benefit both investors in the fund and other investors in these issuers.

Many other commenters, however, argued that the disclosure of proxy votes cast would not benefit fund investors. These commenters, who consisted primarily of funds, investment advisers, and members of boards of directors of funds, argued that the funds with which they are associated have received virtually no requests from their shareholders for proxy voting information. They also argued that investors who care about proxy vote disclosure can decide to invest in those funds that choose to disclose their votes.

The arguments of these commenters do not address two important considerations, however. First, investors consider many factors besides proxy voting histories when choosing their investment managers. If other factors—for example, fund performance—are more important to them than proxy voting, competitive pressures alone may cause few funds to reveal their proxy votes. The fact that market pressure has not forced many funds to reveal their votes merely suggests that investors do not value transparency of proxy votes as much as they value other factors. That does not mean that investors do not value transparency of proxy votes. In addition, the availability of proxy voting information may increase shareholder interest in the future. Second, these arguments do not consider the external benefits that all fund investors may obtain if, as discussed above, disclosure increases the incentives for fund managers to vote their proxies more carefully, and thereby improve corporate performance and enhance shareholder value.

Commenters who objected to the proposed disclosure requirement also questioned whether disclosure of proxy voting records would benefit investors by discouraging voting motivated by conflicts of interest, and noted that the Proposing Release did not provide any evidence of any fund failing to vote its proxies in its shareholders' best interests due to a conflict of interest. However, as noted above, funds may have strong incentives to vote in a certain way when, for example, a fund's adviser also manages or seeks to manage the retirement plan assets of a company whose securities are held by the fund. It may be difficult to prove that a particular vote in such a situation was motivated by a conflict of interest, and therefore disclosure may be the most effective means of deterring these conflicts.

In addition, commenters objected to the argument that proxy voting disclosure would result in benefits to all investors by encouraging funds to be more engaged in corporate governance of issuers held in their portfolios. The commenters asserted that funds were already sufficiently engaged in corporate governance issues, and that requiring disclosure of proxy votes by funds, but not other institutional investors, would unfairly single out one class of investors and force them to bear the burdens of the Commission's broader objectives with respect to the improvement of corporate governance.

We recognize that while the costs of the disclosure requirements will be borne by funds, the benefits of improved corporate governance resulting from the disclosure will accrue to all investors. We note, however, that investors in a fund may benefit from any improved oversight of its portfolio companies resulting from more careful proxy voting by other funds. In addition, we note that some of the other positive effects resulting from the disclosure, such as allowing investors to better evaluate whether their fund managers are voting proxies in accordance with their fiduciary duties, are benefits to fund investors.

We also note that, as adopted, the disclosure required by the amendments will provide the same benefits to investors as the proposal. However, the modifications to the proposal will mitigate the costs of disclosure, for funds and fund investors, by requiring a fund to file its proxy voting record on Form N-PX annually, by allowing a fund flexibility in determining how to disclose its proxy voting record to shareholders, and by not requiring a fund to disclose votes that are inconsistent with its policies and procedures.

B. Costs

The amendments will lead to some additional costs for funds, which may be passed on to fund shareholders. As discussed below, the amendments require new disclosure by a fund regarding how it votes proxies relating to portfolio securities it holds, in its SAI (and in Form N-CSR for closed-end funds), in annual reports on new Form N-PX, and in the fund's annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders. The direct costs of this disclosure will include both internal costs (for attorneys and other non-legal staff of a fund, such as computer programmers, to prepare and review the required disclosure) and external costs (for typesetting, printing, and mailing of the disclosure).

First, the amendments require disclosure of the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures, and disclosure about the availability of its proxy voting record, in the fund's SAI (and in the case of a closed-end fund, disclosure of its policies and procedures on Form N-CSR also). Because the SAI is typically not typeset and is only provided to shareholders upon request, we estimate that the external costs per fund of this additional disclosure in the SAI will be minimal. Similarly, because the disclosure in Form N-CSR will only be required to be provided to shareholders upon request, we estimate that the external costs of this disclosure on Form N-CSR will be minimal as well. For purposes of the Paperwork Reduction Act, we have estimated that the disclosure requirements will add 19,596 hours to the burden of completing Forms N-1A, N-2, N-3, and N-CSR. We estimate that this additional burden will equal total internal costs of $1,350,948 annually, or $365 per fund.

Second, the amendments will require a fund to file with the Commission an annual report on new Form N-PX, containing the fund's complete proxy voting record for the twelve month period ended June 30, by no later than August 31 of each year, and to make available to its shareholders the information contained in Form N-PX. We estimate that because this information will be available on the Commission's website, and because we anticipate that many funds will choose to make this information available to their shareholders on or through their websites, the external costs to funds (for typesetting, printing, and mailing) of providing this disclosure to shareholders will be minimal. For purposes of the Paperwork Reduction Act, we estimate that funds will spend 74,880 hours to comply with Form N-PX, or 14.4 hours per equity fund portfolio filing on Form N-PX annually. Further, we estimate that funds will file reports on Form N-PX for 5,200 portfolios holding equity securities. Thus, we estimate that the burden of filing Form N-PX will equal $5,162,227 in total internal costs annually, or $992 per equity fund portfolio. We had originally proposed to require a fund to file its complete proxy voting record as part of its semi-annual reports on Form N-CSR. However, we modified our proposal in response to one commenter who suggested that requiring disclosure on Form N-CSR would impose unnecessary costs and substantial administrative complexity for fund complexes that have funds with staggered fiscal year ends.

Third, with respect to reports to shareholders, funds will be required to include in their annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders disclosure about the availability of information regarding the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures, and the fund's proxy voting record. We estimate that to comply with these disclosure requirements, a typical fund will need to include at most one additional page in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders, at a typesetting cost of $55 per page and a printing cost of $0.025 per page. We estimate that a typical fund may have, on average, 30,000 shareholder accounts; therefore, the additional disclosure in shareholder reports will cost approximately $1,610 ( $($0.025 \times 30,000 \text{ shareholder accounts, plus } $55) \times 2 \text{ reports per year}$ ) in external costs per fund. Based on the Commission's estimate of 3,700 funds that are required to transmit annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders, we estimate these external costs will be $5,957,000 for the industry as a whole. In addition, we estimate for purposes of the Paperwork Reduction Act that these disclosure requirements will add 3,700 burden hours for funds required to transmit shareholder reports, or one hour per fund, equal to internal costs of $255,078 for the industry annually, or $69 per investment company.

Therefore, based on this analysis, we estimate that the total external and internal direct costs of the additional disclosure required by the amendments will be $12,725,253. Because the amendments may have the effect of inducing fund advisers and fund boards to devote more resources to articulating their proxy voting policies and procedures in more detail, and to monitoring proxy voting decisions, they may result in higher expenses and advisory fees for funds. Some or all of these expenses may be passed on to shareholders.

Numerous commenters responded to the Commission's request for comment on the potential costs of the proposed disclosure requirements, particularly with respect to the required disclosure of their complete proxy voting records in reports on Form N-CSR, and the proposed disclosure of inconsistent votes in annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders. A number of commenters, principally members of the fund industry, argued that the Commission's estimates substantially underestimated the direct costs of the proposed disclosure requirements. First, commenters argued that the estimates omitted any start-up or one-time transition costs, noting that fund groups would need to establish systems or make arrangements with outside vendors to capture the information on proxy votes cast. Second, a commenter argued that while some fund groups rely on outside service providers to vote their proxies, and these service providers may provide proxy voting records in electronic form, many fund groups do not use such outside service providers, and hence may have higher costs to compile their proxy voting records in electronic form. Third, commenters argued that the costs of preparing the voting record disclosure may be higher for funds with significant holdings in foreign securities, because foreign proxies typically contain more proposals than those of U.S. issuers, and certain required data, such as ticker symbols and sponsorship of proposals, is not readily available for meetings of foreign portfolio companies. Fourth, some fund groups also stated that they would incur costs by having to hire and train shareholder servicing personnel in order to respond to requests from shareholders for the proxy voting records disclosed in Form N-CSR.

We continue to believe that our estimates of the direct costs imposed by the disclosure are reasonable. First, we note that our cost estimates, which were based in part on the costs of funds that currently disclose their proxy votes, incorporate start-up costs and one-time transition costs amortized over time. In addition, we believe that start-up costs should be limited in most cases, because most funds currently keep track of information regarding their proxy votes. Second, our cost estimates are derived both from funds that outsource the collection and disclosure of proxy voting information, and from funds that perform these tasks internally. We anticipate that funds will choose to provide the required proxy voting information in the most cost-efficient manner. Third, with respect to the argument that the costs incurred by funds with significant foreign holdings may be higher than estimated, we note that we have modified our proposal to include an instruction permitting a fund to omit exchange ticker symbols and CUSIP numbers if they are not available through reasonably practicable means. Finally, with respect to the argument that funds would incur costs by having to hire and train personnel to respond to requests for their proxy voting records, we note that we have modified our proposals to allow funds to choose to provide their proxy voting records to shareholders through website disclosure or upon request, which should reduce the number of shareholder requests received by phone.

Other commenters argued that the estimates of direct costs in the Proposing Release were reasonable. Several fund groups which currently disclose proxy voting records on their websites as well as through hard copy stated that based on their experience the costs of the proposed disclosure requirements would be minimal. These commenters argued that funds should already be keeping track of their proxy votes internally, so that providing the required disclosure should be a matter of converting existing data to new fields for web interface. One commenter noted that the expense ratios of funds that disclose their proxy votes are not higher than those of funds in general.

A few commenters, including supporters and opponents of the proposed requirement to disclose proxy voting records, provided specific estimates of the direct costs of providing this disclosure. One fund group which opposed the requirement to disclose its proxy voting record prepared a sample disclosure in the format prescribed by the proposed amendment to Form N-CSR, and estimated that the collection of votes from its information systems would take four hours, reformatting the data to the format of Form N-CSR would take eight hours, and that reconfirming that each vote was cast in accordance with the fund's proxy voting policies would take at least another two hours. Another fund group which recently began to post its proxy voting guidelines and proxy voting records for two of its funds on its website estimated that this task took approximately two days. These estimates are generally consistent with our estimate that proxy vote disclosure on Form N-PX will take 14.4 hours per equity portfolio per filing, at an annual cost of $992 per equity portfolio. By contrast, a fund industry trade group estimated, based on a survey of eight fund complexes conducted on its behalf by a third-party, that proxy voting record disclosure would cost approximately $3,380 per fund in start-up costs, and $5,530 per year in ongoing costs.

We also note, as discussed above, that we have modified our proposals in three significant ways, in part in response to concerns expressed about costs by commenters. First, the amendments will require disclosure of proxy votes cast in annual reports on Form N-PX, rather than semi-annually on Form N-CSR. Second, we are not adopting the proposed requirement that funds disclose in their annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders votes that were inconsistent with their proxy voting policies and procedures. Third, rather than requiring funds to send their proxy voting records without charge and upon request, we are permitting them to choose to make their records available either upon request or by making available an electronic version on or through their websites.

The rules may also impose potential indirect costs on fund managers. Several commenters identified certain indirect costs that they argued were not addressed by the cost-benefit analysis in the Proposing Release. First, commenters argued that depriving funds of confidential voting would subject them to possible retaliatory actions by corporate management of the issuers of portfolio securities, such as restricting access by portfolio managers to corporate personnel. These costs are difficult to quantify. Further, these commenters did not provide any evidence that this retaliatory action has occurred or might occur as a result of proxy vote disclosure. We also note that while it is possible that corporations could retaliate against fund managers if they knew that those fund managers had voted against them in the past, it is also possible that corporations could react by trying to work harder to develop cooperative relationships with fund managers. One additional advantage of the amendments is that they will permit fund managers to demonstrate credibly to management of a portfolio company that they have been willing to vote against the recommendations of corporate management in other cases.

Second, several commenters, including funds, claimed that required disclosure of proxy voting records would politicize the process of proxy voting and thereby impose costs on funds in order to address orchestrated campaigns in the media and elsewhere by special interest groups, which would detract from a fund's ability to concentrate on the management of its portfolio. These commenters did not provide any estimates of the magnitude of these costs, however. Some commenters argued that proxy vote disclosure might lead to certain groups threatening to encourage their members and others to withdraw their investments from a fund complex unless the funds' adviser voted in a certain way. To the extent that this possibility is real, and that fund managers may be pressured by large or influential shareholders to vote as directed, making voting policies and procedures available to investors will mitigate this influence to a large degree. Because of the disclosure requirements we are adopting, shareholders will be able to evaluate how closely fund managers follow their stated proxy voting policies, and to react adversely to fund managers who vote inconsistently with these policies.

VI. Consideration of Burden on Competition; Promotion of Efficiency, Competition, and Capital Formation

Section 23(a)(2) of the Exchange Act requires us, when adopting rules under the Exchange Act, to consider the impact that any new rule would have on competition. Section 23(a)(2) also prohibits us from adopting any rule that would impose a burden on competition not necessary or appropriate in furtherance of the purposes of the Exchange Act. In addition, Section 2(c) of the Investment Company Act, Section 2(b) of the Securities Act, and Section 3(f) of the Exchange Act require the Commission, when engaging in rulemaking that requires it to consider or determine whether an action is necessary or appropriate in the public interest, to consider, in addition to the protection of investors, whether the action will promote efficiency, competition, and capital formation. The Commission has considered these factors.

The amendments requiring disclosure of funds' proxy voting policies and procedures and actual proxy voting records are intended to provide greater transparency for fund shareholders regarding the management of their investments in funds. The amendments may improve efficiency. The enhanced disclosure requirements will provide shareholders with greater access to information regarding the proxy voting policies and decisions of the funds in which they invest, which should promote more efficient allocation of investments by investors and more efficient allocation of assets among competing funds. The amendments may also improve competition, as enhanced disclosure may prompt funds to seek to differentiate themselves based on their proxy voting policies and practices. Finally, the effects of the amendments on capital formation are unclear. Although, as noted above, we believe that the amendments will benefit investors, the magnitude of the effect of the amendments on efficiency, competition, and capital formation is difficult to quantify.

In the Proposing Release, we requested comment on whether the proposed amendments would promote efficiency, competition, and capital formation, or, conversely, would impose a burden on competition. The Commission received several letters addressing the effect of the proposed amendments on efficiency, competition, and capital formation. A number of commenters expressed concern that the required disclosure, particularly the requirements that funds disclose their proxy votes cast and any votes that are inconsistent with their proxy voting policies, may have adverse effects on competition and capital formation among funds. Commenters argued that the amendments would disadvantage funds relative to other institutional investors such as banks and pension funds, because funds would be the only class of investors not allowed to vote confidentially. Further, the commenters argued, depriving funds of confidential voting would subject them to possible retaliatory actions by corporate management of the issuers of portfolio securities, such as restricting access by portfolio managers to corporate personnel. Commenters also argued that requiring funds to disclose their proxy votes would subject them to orchestrated campaigns in the media and elsewhere by special interest groups with social or political agendas different from those of fund shareholders, which would detract from a fund's ability to concentrate on the management of its portfolio and ultimately harm fund shareholders. Finally, commenters asserted that the proposed disclosure requirements would impose substantial costs on funds, which would be passed on to their shareholders.

Other commenters, however, argued that proxy voting disclosure would improve competition by allowing investors who wish to consider proxy voting policies and records when deciding between two funds to do so. According to one such commenter, mandating proxy voting disclosure would thereby allow proxy voting policies and records to be fully "valued" by the marketplace. Many commenters also asserted that because funds hold a significant percentage of equity securities, requiring proxy vote disclosure by funds would improve corporate governance and accountability among issuers of portfolio securities, which would benefit investors broadly. With respect to the argument that disclosure would harm funds by "politicizing" the proxy voting process, one commenter argued that to the extent that this meant funds would come under market pressure for behavior that their investors disapprove of, this would be a positive, not a negative, result.

As discussed in more detail in the Cost-Benefit Analysis above, we continue to believe that the proxy vote disclosure required by the amendments will provide several benefits to fund investors. The amendments will provide better information to investors to use in selecting funds, and in determining whether fund managers are adequately maximizing the value of their shares. The amendments may also deter votes motivated by conflicts of interest. In addition, the amendments may provide stronger incentives to fund managers to vote their proxies carefully, which could thereby improve corporate performance and enhance shareholder value. With respect to the commenters' argument that the amendments may disadvantage funds by depriving them of confidential voting, we note that there is no evidence that retaliatory action by portfolio company management has occurred or might occur as a result of proxy vote disclosure, and that it is possible that this disclosure will encourage corporations to work harder to develop cooperative relationships with fund managers. With respect to the argument that disclosure of a fund's proxy voting record may subject it to pressure from special interest groups to vote in a certain manner, we note that to the extent that this possibility is real, making voting policies and procedures available to investors will mitigate this influence to a large degree. With respect to the argument that the proposed disclosure requirements would impose substantial costs on funds, we have modified certain of our proposals to mitigate costs by requiring a fund to file its proxy voting record annually on new Form N-PX rather than semi-annually on Form N-CSR, by eliminating the requirement that a fund disclose its proxy votes (or failures to vote) that are inconsistent with its proxy voting policies and procedures, and by permitting a fund to choose to make available to its shareholders its record of how it voted proxies relating to portfolio securities on or through its website or upon request.

VII. Final Regulatory Flexibility Analysis

This Final Regulatory Flexibility Analysis ("FRFA") has been prepared in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 604, and relates to the Commission's rule and form amendments under the Securities Act, the Exchange Act, and the Investment Company Act to require funds to provide disclosure about how they vote proxies of portfolio securities they hold. Under the amendments, a fund will be required to disclose in its registration statement the policies and procedures that it uses to determine how to vote the proxies of portfolio securities. The amendments also require a fund to file with the Commission on new Form N-PX, and to make available to its shareholders, on or through its website or upon request, its record of how it voted proxies relating to portfolio securities.

Specifically, a fund will be required to disclose in its statement of additional information ("SAI") its policies and procedures used to determine how to vote proxies of the securities held in its portfolio, and to provide disclosure regarding the availability of its proxy voting record to shareholders. The amendments also require a fund to file with the Commission, in an annual report on Form N-PX, its complete proxy voting record for the most recent twelve-month period ended June 30. The amendments require a fund to include in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders disclosure that the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures, are available (i) without charge, upon request from the fund, (ii) on the fund's website, if applicable, and (iii) on the SEC website. The amendments also require a fund to state in its registration statement and reports to shareholders that its proxy voting record is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; or on or through the fund's website at a specified Internet address; or both; and (ii) on the SEC website. The Commission prepared an Initial Regulatory Flexibility Analysis ("IRFA") in accordance with 5 U.S.C. 603 in conjunction with the Proposing Release, which was made available to the public. The Proposing Release included the IRFA and solicited comments on it.

A. Reasons for, and Objectives of, Amendments

Proxy voting decisions may play an important role in maximizing the value of a fund's investments for its shareholders. Requiring funds to disclose specific proxy voting information could enable shareholders to make an informed assessment as to whether funds are utilizing proxy voting for the benefit of fund shareholders. We are adopting these amendments because we believe that requiring management investment companies to disclose their proxy policies and procedures as well as voting records will result in greater transparency for fund shareholders regarding the overall management of their investments. We also believe it is possible to achieve this improved disclosure efficiently at minimal cost because of recent advances in technology, such as the Internet.

B. Significant Issues Raised by Public Comment

No comments specifically addressed the IRFA. However, a few commenters asserted that the proposed amendments that would require disclosure of a fund's proxy voting record would have a negative impact on small entities. These commenters noted that the loss of confidential voting that would result from the disclosure of proxy votes would raise the risk that portfolio company management might retaliate against a fund, and that this risk of retaliation would be disproportionately greater for small funds. One commenter argued that small funds should not be required to bear the burden and costs of providing proxy voting disclosure, when many much larger institutional investors, such as pension plans, insurance companies, common and collective trust funds, and hedge funds would not be required to do so. On the other hand, an association of "socially responsible" funds commented that some smaller fund companies have been providing proxy voting disclosure for some time, with little cost to their investors.

C. Small Entities Subject to the Rule

For purposes of the Regulatory Flexibility Act, an investment company is a small entity if it, together with other investment companies in the same group of related investment companies, has net assets of $50 million or less as of the end of its most recent fiscal year. Approximately 205 out of 3700 investment companies that will be affected by this rule meet this definition.

D. Reporting, Recordkeeping, and Other Compliance Requirements

The amendments require a fund to disclose in its SAI (and in Form N-CSR, in the case of a closed-end fund) the policies and procedures it uses to determine how to vote proxies for the securities held in its portfolio, and to provide disclosure in its SAI regarding the availability of its proxy voting record to shareholders. The amendments also require a fund to file with the Commission, on Form N-PX, its complete proxy voting record for its most recent twelve-month period ended June 30. Finally, the amendments require a fund to include in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders disclosure that a description of the policies and procedures that the fund uses to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities is available

(i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; (ii) on the fund's website, if applicable; and (iii) on the SEC website. The amendments also require a fund to state in its registration statement and reports to shareholders that its proxy voting record is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; or on or through the fund's website at a specified Internet address; or both; and (ii) on the SEC website.

The Commission estimates some one-time formatting and ongoing costs and burdens that will be imposed on all funds, but which may have a relatively greater impact on smaller firms. These include the costs related to disclosing proxy voting policies and procedures to fund shareholders; filing proxy voting records with the Commission on Form N-PX; and disclosing voting records through website disclosure or upon request. These costs could include expenses for computer time, legal and accounting fees, information technology staff, and additional computer and telephone equipment. However, we believe, based on consultations with a number of fund complexes, including smaller fund complexes, that many investment companies presently collect in-house or outsource the collection of proxy voting information on a basis at least as current as annually and, therefore, that the marginal cost increases for most funds will be minimal.

E. Agency Action to Minimize Effect on Small Entities

The Commission believes at the present time that special compliance or reporting requirements for small entities, or an exemption from coverage for small entities, would not be appropriate or consistent with investor protection. The disclosure amendments will provide shareholders with greater transparency regarding a fund's proxy voting policies and procedures, as well as records of votes cast. Different disclosure requirements for small entities, such as reducing the level of proxy voting disclosure that small entities would have to provide shareholders, may create the risk that those shareholders would not receive sufficient information to make an informed evaluation as to whether the fund's board and its investment adviser are complying with their fiduciary duties to vote proxies of portfolio securities in the best interest of fund shareholders. We believe it is important for the proxy disclosure required by the amendments to be provided to shareholders by all funds, not just funds that are not considered small entities.

We have endeavored through the amendments to minimize the regulatory burden on all funds, including small entities, while meeting our regulatory objectives. Small entities should benefit from the Commission's reasoned approach to the amendments to the same degree as other investment companies. Further clarification, consolidation, or simplification of the amendments for funds that are small entities would be inconsistent with the Commission's concern for investor protection. Finally, we do not consider using performance rather than design standards to be consistent with our statutory mandate of investor protection in the present context.

We note, however, that we have modified our proposals in response to comments, in part to reduce the regulatory burden on funds, including small funds. As adopted, our amendments will require a fund to provide disclosure of its proxy voting record annually on Form N-PX, rather than semi-annually. In addition, we are not adopting the proposed requirement that a fund's annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders include all votes that are inconsistent with the fund's proxy voting policies and procedures. Further, we are modifying our proposed requirement that a fund must send its proxy voting record without charge and upon request, by permitting a fund to make its proxy voting record available on or through its website instead.

VIII. Statutory Authority<

The Commission is adopting amendments to Forms N-1A, N-2, N-3, and N-CSR pursuant to authority set forth in Sections 5, 6, 7, 10, 19(a), and 28 of the Securities Act [15 U.S.C. 77e, 77f, 77g, 77j], 77s(a), and 77z-3], Sections 10(b), 13, 15(d), 23(a), and 36 of the Exchange Act [15 U.S.C. 78j(b), 78m, 78o(d), 78w(a), and 78mm], and Sections 6(c), 8, 24(a), 30, and 38 of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a-6(c), 80a-8, 80a-24(a), 80a-29, and 80a-37]. Item 13. Management of the Fund

*****

(f) Proxy Voting Policies. Unless the Fund invests exclusively in non-voting securities, describe the policies and procedures that the Fund uses to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities, including the procedures that the Fund uses when a vote presents a conflict between the interests of Fund shareholders, on the one hand, and those of the Fund's investment adviser; principal underwriter; or any affiliated person of the Fund, its investment adviser, or its principal underwriter, on the other. Include any policies and procedures of the Fund's investment adviser, or any other third party, that the Fund uses, or that are used on the Fund's behalf, to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities. Also, state that information regarding how the Fund voted proxies relating to portfolio securities during the most recent 12-month period ended June 30 is available (1) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; or on or through the Fund's website at a specified Internet address; or both; and (2) on the Commission's website at <http://www.sec.gov>.

Instructions.

1. A Fund may satisfy the requirement to provide a description of the policies and procedures that it uses to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities by including a copy of the policies and procedures themselves.
2. If a Fund discloses that the Fund's proxy voting record is available by calling a toll-free (or collect) telephone number, and the Fund (or financial intermediary through which shares of the Fund may be purchased or sold) receives a request for this information, the Fund (or financial intermediary) must send the information disclosed in the Fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX, within three business days of receipt of the request, by first-class mail or other means designed to ensure equally prompt delivery.
3. If a Fund discloses that the Fund's proxy voting record is available on or through its website, the Fund must make available free of charge the information disclosed in the Fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX on or through its website as soon as reasonably practicable after filing the report with the Commission. The information disclosed in the Fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX must remain available on or through the Fund's website for as long as the Fund remains subject to the requirements of Rule 30b1-4 (17 CFR 270.30b1-4) and discloses that the Fund's proxy voting record is available on or through its website.

Item 22. Financial Statements

(b) ***

(7) A statement that a description of the policies and procedures that the Fund uses to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; (ii) on the Fund's website, if applicable; and (iii) on the Commission's website at <http://www.sec.gov>.

Instruction. When a Fund (or financial intermediary through which shares of the Fund may be purchased or sold) receives a request for a description of the policies and procedures that the Fund uses to determine how to vote proxies, the Fund (or financial intermediary) must send the information disclosed in response to Item 13(f) of this Form, within three business days of receipt of the request, by first-class mail or other means designed to ensure equally prompt delivery.

(8) A statement that information regarding how the Fund voted proxies relating to portfolio securities during the most recent 12-month period ended June 30 is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; or on or through the Fund's website at a specified Internet address; or both; and (ii) on the Commission's website at <http://www.sec.gov>.

Instructions.

1. If a Fund discloses that the Fund's proxy voting record is available by calling a toll-free (or collect) telephone number, and the Fund (or financial intermediary through which shares of the Fund may be purchased or sold) receives a request for this information, the Fund (or financial intermediary) must send the information disclosed in the Fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX, within three business days of receipt of the request, by first-class mail or other means designed to ensure equally prompt delivery.
2. If a Fund discloses that the Fund's proxy voting record is available on or through its website, the Fund must make available free of charge the information disclosed in the Fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX on or through its website as soon as reasonably practicable after filing the report with the Commission. The information disclosed in the Fund's most recently filed report on Form N-PX must remain available on or through the Fund's website for as long as the Fund remains subject to the requirements of Rule 30b1-4 (17 CFR 270.30b1-4) and discloses that the Fund's proxy voting record is available on or through its website.

- (5) A statement that a description of the policies and procedures that the Fund uses to determine how to vote proxies relating to portfolio securities is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; (ii) on the Fund's website, if applicable; and (iii) on the Commission's website at <http://www.sec.gov>.

Instruction. When a Fund (or financial intermediary through which shares of the Fund may be purchased or sold) receives a request for a description of the policies and procedures that the Fund uses to determine how to vote proxies, the Fund (or financial intermediary) must send the information disclosed in response to Item 13(f) of this Form, within three business days of receipt of the request, by first-class mail or other means designed to ensure equally prompt delivery.

- (6) A statement that information regarding how the Fund voted proxies relating to portfolio securities during the most recent 12-month period ended June 30 is available (i) without charge, upon request, by calling a specified toll-free (or collect) telephone number; or on or through the Fund's website at a specified Internet address; or both; and (ii) on the Commission's website at <http://www.sec.gov>.

Instruction. Instructions 1 and 2 to Item 22(b)(8) also apply to this Item 22(c)(6).

7. Form N-2 (referenced in §§ 239.14 and 274.11a-1) is amended by:

- a. In Item 18, adding paragraph 16;
- b. In Item 23, removing "and" from the end of Instruction 4.e.;
- c. In Item 23, removing the period from the end of Instruction 4.f. and in its place adding a semi-colon;
- d. In Item 23, adding Instructions 4.g. and 4.h.;
- e. In Item 23, removing "and" from the end of Instruction 5.c.;
- f. In Item 23, removing the period from the end of Instruction 5.d. and in its place adding a semi-colon;
- g. In Item 23, adding Instructions 5.e. and 5.f.;
- h. In Item 23, redesignating Instruction 6 as Instruction 7; and
- i. In Item 23, adding new Instruction 6.

These additions read as follows:

Note: The text of Form N-2 does not, and these amendments will not, appear in the Code of Federal Regulations.

No items of this Form shall be answered by incorporating any information by reference.

E. Definitions

Unless the context clearly indicates the contrary, terms used in this Form N-PX have meanings as defined in the Act and the rules and regulations thereunder. Unless otherwise indicated, all references in the form to statutory sections or to rules are sections of the Act and the rules and regulations thereunder.

F. Signature and Filing of Report.

1. If the report is filed in paper pursuant to a hardship exemption from electronic filing (see Item 201 et seq. of Regulation S-T (17 CFR 232.201 et seq.)), eight complete copies of the report shall be filed with the Commission. At least one complete copy of the report filed with the Commission must be manually signed. Copies not manually signed must bear typed or printed signatures.

2.(a) The report must be signed by the registrant, and on behalf of the registrant by its principal executive officer or officers.

(b) The name and title of each person who signs the report shall be typed or printed beneath his or her signature. Attention is directed to Rule 8b-11 under the Act (17 CFR 270.8b-11) concerning manual signatures and signatures pursuant to powers of attorney.

Item 1. Proxy Voting Record.

Disclose the following information for each matter relating to a portfolio security considered at any shareholder meeting held during the period covered by the report and with respect to which the registrant was entitled to vote:

- (a) The name of the issuer of the portfolio security;
- (b) The exchange ticker symbol of the portfolio security;
- (c) The Council on Uniform Securities Identification Procedures ("CUSIP") number for the portfolio security;
- (d) The shareholder meeting date;
- (e) A brief identification of the matter voted on;
- (f) Whether the matter was proposed by the issuer or by a security holder;
- (g) Whether the registrant cast its vote on the matter;
- (h) How the registrant cast its vote (e.g., for or against proposal, or abstain; for or withhold regarding election of directors); and
- (i) Whether the registrant cast its vote for or against management.

Instructions.

1. In the case of a registrant that offers multiple series of shares, provide the information required by this Item separately for each series. The term "series" means shares offered by a registrant that represent undivided interests in a portfolio of investments and that are preferred over all other series of shares for assets specifically allocated to that series in accordance with Rule 18f-2(a) under the Act (17 CFR 270.18f-2(a)).

2. The exchange ticker symbol or CUSIP number required by paragraph (b) or (c) of this Item may be omitted if it is not available through reasonably practicable means, e.g., in the case of certain securities of foreign issuers.

Signatures

[See General Instruction F]

Pursuant to the requirements of the Investment Company Act of 1940, the registrant has duly caused this report to be signed on its behalf by the undersigned, thereunto duly authorized.

See Investment Advisers Act Release No. 2106 (Jan. 31, 2003).

For simplicity, this release focuses on mutual funds (i.e., open-end management investment companies). An open-end management investment company is an investment company, other than a unit investment trust or face-amount certificate company, that offers for sale or has outstanding any redeemable security of which it is the issuer. See Sections 4 and 5(a)(1) of the Investment Company Act [15 U.S.C. 80a-4 and 80a-5(a)(1)]. The amendments, however, would also apply to registered closed-end management investment companies and insurance company separate accounts organized as management investment companies that offer variable annuity contracts.

Investment Company Act Release No. 25739 (Sept. 20, 2002) [67 FR 60828 (Sept. 26, 2002)].

The Commission has submitted additional collections of information to OMB for Form N-CSR in connection with Investment Company Act Release No. 25775 (Oct. 22, 2002) [67 FR 66208 (Oct. 30, 2002)] (code of ethics and financial expert disclosure); Investment Company Act Release No. 25838 (Dec. 2, 2002) [67 FR 76780 (Dec. 13, 2002)] (auditor independence provisions of the Sarbanes-Oxley Act); Investment Company Act Release No. 25845 (Dec. 10, 2002) [67 FR 77593 (Dec. 18, 2002)] (revisions to rule 10b-18 under the Exchange Act); Investment Company Act Release No. 25870 (Dec. 18, 2002) [68 FR 160 (Jan. 2, 2003)] (shareholder reports and quarterly portfolio disclosure); and Investment Company Act Release No. 25885 (Jan. 8, 2003) [68 FR 2637 (Jan. 17, 2003)] (standards relating to listed company audit committees). These submissions are currently pending before OMB. If these submissions are approved, the approved total burden hours for Form N-CSR will be 195,472 hours. With the adjustment to reflect the modifications we are making here to our proposed amendments to Form N-CSR, the approved total burden hours for Form N-CSR would be 122,798 hours (195,472 - (74,000 - 1,326)).

Rule 30e-1(a) under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [17 CFR 270.30e-1(a)] requires funds to include in their shareholder reports the information that is required by the fund's registration statement form.

We have submitted an additional collection of information to OMB in connection with Investment Company Act Release No. 25870 (Dec. 18, 2002) [68 FR 160 (Jan. 2, 2003)] (proposing amendments regarding shareholder reports and quarterly portfolio disclosure). This submission is currently pending before OMB. If the submission is approved, the approved total burden hours for complying with rule 30e-1 will be 926,350 hours. With the adjustment to reflect the modifications we are making here to our proposed amendments to Forms N-1A, N-2, and N-3, the approved total burden hours for complying with rule 30e-1 would be 893,050 hours (926,350-(37,000-3,700)).

The estimate of 3,700 funds is based on the number of management investment companies currently registered with the Commission. We estimate, based on data from the Investment Company Institute and other sources, that there are approximately 4,700 fund portfolios that invest primarily in equity securities and 500 "hybrid" or bond portfolios that may hold some equity securities, for a total of 5,200 portfolios holding equity securities.

The estimate of 14.4 hours per equity portfolio is based on the staff's consultations with funds that currently provide disclosure of their proxy voting records, and estimates that the average equity fund will cast votes at 144 shareholder meetings during a twelve-month reporting period, and will vote on three matters at each shareholder meeting, for a total of 432 matters voted on per year. The estimate of the number of shareholder meetings per equity fund is based on the staff's analysis of data on the average number of equities held per fund from the December 2002 edition of the Morningstar Principia Pro database. The estimate of the number of matters voted on at each shareholder meeting is based on information provided to the staff by a third-party provider of proxy voting services for funds and other institutional investors.

Proposing Release, supra note 4, 67 FR at 60834.

We believe it is more appropriate to estimate the burden of complying with Form N-PX by portfolio, rather than by fund, as we estimated the burden of complying with Form N-CSR in the Proposing Release. We note that many funds do not have portfolios that hold equity securities, while many funds have multiple equity portfolios. Funds with multiple equity portfolios would be required to report their proxy voting records for each portfolio holding equity securities.

See, e.g., ICI Letter, supra note 55, at 12.

Because closed-end funds do not offer their shares continuously, and are therefore generally not required to maintain an updated SAI to meet their obligations under the Securities Act of 1933, they will be required to disclose their proxy voting policies and procedures in their annual reports on Form N-CSR. We are not requiring closed-end funds to provide disclosure about the availability of their proxy voting policies and records on Form N-CSR.

This represents 16,594 additional hours for Form N-1A, 1,196 additional hours for Form N-2, 480 additional hours for Form N-3, and 1,326 additional hours for Form N-CSR. The estimated total hour burden for disclosure of proxy voting policies and procedures differs from the figure of 18,270 hours used in the Proposing Release, because here we are including the estimated hour burden for disclosure of policies and procedures by closed-end funds on Form N-CSR as well.

These figures are based on a Commission estimate that approximately 3,700 management investment companies are subject to the amendments and an estimated hourly wage rate of $68.94. The estimate of the number of funds is based on data derived from the Commission's EDGAR filing system. The estimated wage rate figure is based on published hourly wage rates for compliance attorneys in New York City ($74.22) and programmers ($27.91), and the estimate, based on the Commission staff's discussions with certain fund complexes, that attorneys and programmers will divide time equally on compliance with the proxy voting disclosure requirements, yielding a weighted wage rate of $51.065 ( $($74.22 \times .50) + (27.91 \times .50) = $51.065$ ). See Securities Industry Association, Report on Management & Professional Earnings in the Securities Industry 2001 (Oct. 2001). This weighted wage rate was then adjusted upward by 35% for overhead, reflecting the costs of supervision, space, and administrative support, to obtain the total per hour internal cost of $68.94 ( $51.065 \times 1.35 = $68.94$ ).

The estimate of 14.4 hours per equity portfolio is based on the staff's consultations with funds that currently provide disclosure of their proxy voting records, and estimates that the average equity fund will cast votes at 144 shareholder meetings during a twelve-month reporting period, and will vote on three matters at each shareholder meeting, for a total of 432 matters voted on per year. The estimate of the number of shareholder meetings per equity fund is based on the staff's analysis of data on the average number of equities held per fund from the December 2002 edition of the Morningstar Principia Pro database. The estimate of the number of matters voted on at each shareholder meeting is based on information provided to the staff by a third-party provider of proxy voting services for funds and other institutional investors.

This estimate is based on the staff's analysis of data from the Investment Company Institute and other sources indicating that there are approximately 4,700 fund portfolios that invest primarily in equity securities and 500 "hybrid" or bond portfolios that may hold some equity securities.

These figures are based on the Commission's estimate that approximately 3,700 funds, with 5,200 portfolios holding equity securities, will report their proxy voting records on Form N-PX, an estimate of 14.4 hours per equity fund portfolio filing on Form N-PX, and an estimated hourly wage rate of $68.94. See supra note 77.

This estimate is based on information provided to the Division of Investment Management by registered investment companies regarding printing and typesetting costs for prospectuses and SAIs.

This estimate regarding the average number of shareholder accounts per typical fund is derived from data provided in the Mutual Fund Fact Book, supra note 9, at 63, 64.

These figures are based on a Commission estimate that approximately 3,700 investment companies will be subject to the amendments and an estimated hourly wage rate of $68.94. See supra note 77.

The Commission has modified its estimate of the total external and internal costs of the additional disclosure required by the amendments from the estimate in the Proposing Release, to reflect that it is not adopting the proposal to require a fund to disclose in its annual and semi-annual reports to shareholders information regarding any proxy votes that are inconsistent with its proxy voting policies and procedures, and that it is requiring funds to disclose their proxy voting records annually on Form N-PX rather than semi-annually on Form N-CSR.

By comparison, a third-party service provider of proxy voting services to funds and other institutional investors indicated to the staff that for a basic vote disclosure website it charges a $3,000 setup fee, a $12,000 base fee for disclosure for the first fund in the complex, and $1,000 for additional funds after the first fund. Thus, a fund complex with 20 funds would pay $34,000 ( $$3,000 + $12,000 + (19 \times $1,000)$ ), or $1,700 per fund.

Shareholder Communications Facilitation

(Release No. 34-23847; 1C-15435; File No. 87-12-86)

Agency: Securities and Exchange Commission.

Action: Final rules.

Summary: The Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") today is adopting new Rule 14b-2 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 ("Exchange Act") and related amendments to Rules 14a-1, 14a-13, 14c-1 and 14c-7, which implement provisions of the Shareholder Communications Act of 1985. New Rule 14b-2 and the related rule amendments will govern: (1) The process by which registrants communicate with the beneficial owners of securities registered in the name of a bank, association or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers (hereinafter collectively referred to as "banks"); and (2) the proxy processing activities of banks.

In addition, the Commission is adopting certain other amendments to Rule 14a-3 regarding the circumstances under which registrants are no longer obligated to deliver annual reports or proxy statements to security holders. This amendment will also apply to registrant's delivery obligations in connection with information statements under Rule 14c-2.

Originally issued December 18, 1952 (17 FR 11431)

As revised through October 22, 1992 (57 FR 48290)

Unless the context otherwise requires, all terms used in this regulation have the same meanings as in the Act or elsewhere in the general rules and regulations thereunder. In addition, the following definitions apply unless the context otherwise requires:

- a. Associate. The term "associate," used to indicate a relationship with any person, means:
  1. Any corporation or organization (other than the registrant or a majority owned subsidiary of the registrant) of which such person is an officer or partner or is, directly or indirectly, the beneficial owner of 10 percent or more of any class of equity securities;
  2. Any trust or other estate in which such person has a substantial beneficial interest or as to which such person serves as trustee or in a similar fiduciary capacity; and
  3. Any relative or spouse of such person, or any relative of such spouse, who has the same home as such person or who is a director or officer of the registrant or any of its parents or subsidiaries.
- b. Employee benefit plan. For purposes of §§ 240.14a-13, 240.14b-1 and 240.14b-2, the term "employee benefit plan" means any purchase, savings, option, bonus, appreciation, profit sharing, thrift, incentive, pension or similar plan solely for employees, directors, trustees or officers.
- c. Entity that exercises fiduciary powers. The term "entity that exercises fiduciary powers" means any entity that holds securities in nominee name or otherwise on behalf of a beneficial owner but does not include a clearing agency registered pursuant to Section 17A of the Act or a broker or a dealer.
- d. Exempt employee benefit plan securities. For purposes of §§ 240.14a-13, 240.14b-1 and 240.14b-2, the term "exempt employee benefit plan securities" means:
  1. Securities of the registrant held by an employee benefit plan, as defined in paragraph (b) of this section, where such plan is established by the registrant; or
  2. If notice regarding the current solicitation has been given pursuant to § 240.14a-13\(a\)\(1\)\(ii\)\(C\) or if notice regarding the current request for a list of names, addresses and securities positions of beneficial owners has been given pursuant to § 240.14a-13\(b\)\(3\), securities of the registrant held by an employee benefit plan, as defined in paragraph (b) of this section, where such plan is established by an affiliate of the registrant.
- e. Last fiscal year. The term "last fiscal year" of the registrant means the last fiscal year of the registrant ending prior to the date of the meeting for which proxies are to be solicited or if the solicitation involves written authorizations or consents in lieu of a meeting, the earliest date on which that they may be used to effect corporate action.
- f. Proxy. The term "proxy" includes every proxy, consent or authorization within the meaning of Section 14(a) of the Act. The consent or authorization may take the form of failure to object or to dissent.
- g. Proxy statement. The term "proxy statement" means the statement required by § 240.14a-3\(a\) whether or not contained in a single document.
- h. Record date. The term "record date" means the date as of which the record holders of securities entitled to vote at a meeting or by written consent or authorization shall be determined.
- i. Record holder. For purposes of §§ 240.14a-13, 240.14b-1 and 240.14b-2, the term "record holder" means any broker, dealer, voting trustee, bank, association or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers which holds securities of record in nominee name or otherwise or as a participant in a clearing agency registered pursuant to Section 17A of the Act.
- j. Registrant. The term "registrant" means the issuer of the securities in respect of which proxies are to be solicited.
- k. Respondent bank. For purposes of §§ 240.14a-13, 240.14b-1 and 240.14b-2, the term "respondent bank" means any bank, association or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers which holds securities on behalf of beneficial owners and deposits such securities for safekeeping with another bank, association or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers.

I. Solicitation.

1. The terms "solicit" and "solicitation" include:
  - i. Any request for a proxy whether or not accompanied by or included in a form of proxy;
  - ii. Any request to execute or not to execute, or to revoke, a proxy; or
  - iii. The furnishing of a form of proxy or other communication to security holders under circumstances reasonably calculated to result in the procurement, withholding or revocation of a proxy.
2. The terms do not apply, however, to:
  - i. The furnishing of a form of proxy to a security holder upon the unsolicited request of such security holder;
  - ii. The performance by the registrant of acts required by § 240.14a-7;
  - iii. The performance by any person of ministerial acts on behalf of a person soliciting a proxy; or
  - iv. A communication by a security holder who does not otherwise engage in a proxy solicitation (other than a solicitation exempt under § 240.14a-2) stating how the security holder intends to vote and the reasons therefore, provided that the communication:
    - A. Is made by means of speeches in public forums, press releases, published or broadcast opinions, statements, or advertisements appearing in a broadcast media, or newspaper, magazine or other bona fide publication disseminated on a regular basis,
    - B. Is directed to persons to whom the security holder owes a fiduciary duty in connection with the voting of securities of a registrant held by the security holder, or
    - C. Is made in response to unsolicited requests for additional information with respect to a prior communication by the security holder made pursuant to this paragraph (l)(2)(iv).

Obligations of registrant in communicating with beneficial owners

As revised through January 10, 1992 (57 FR 1099)

- a. If the registrant knows that securities of any class entitled to vote at a meeting (or by written consents or authorizations if no meeting is held) with respect to which the registrant intends to solicit proxies, consents or authorizations are held of record by a broker, dealer, voting trustee, bank, association, or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers in nominee name or otherwise, the registrant shall:
  1. By first class mail or other equally prompt means:
    - i. Inquire of each such record holder:
      - A. Whether other persons are the beneficial owners of such securities and if so, the number of copies of the proxy and other soliciting material necessary to supply such material to such beneficial owners;
      - B. In the case of an annual (or special meeting in lieu of the annual) meeting, or written consents in lieu of such meeting, at which directors are to be elected, the number of copies of the annual report to security holders necessary to supply such report to beneficial owners to whom such reports are to be distributed by such record holder or its nominee and not by the registrant;
      - C. If the record holder has an obligation under § 240.14b-1(b)(3) or § 240.14b-2(b)(4)(ii) and (iii), whether an agent has been designated to act on its behalf in fulfilling such obligation and, if so, the name and address of such agent; and
      - D. Whether it holds the registrant's securities on behalf of any respondent bank and, if so, the name and address of each such respondent bank; and
    - ii. Indicate to each such record holder:
      - A. Whether the registrant, pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section, intends to distribute the annual report to security holders to beneficial owners of its securities whose names, addresses and securities positions are disclosed pursuant to § 240.14b-1(b)(3) and § 240.14b-2(b)(4)(ii) and (iii);
      - B. The record date; and
      - C. At the option of the registrant, any employee benefit plan established by an affiliate of the registrant that holds securities of the registrant that the registrant elects to treat as exempt employee benefit plan securities;
  2. Upon receipt of a record holder's or respondent bank's response indicating, pursuant to § 240.14b-2(b)(1)(i), the names and addresses of its respondent banks, within one business day after the date such response is received, make an inquiry of and give notification to each such respondent bank in the same manner required by paragraph (a)(1) of this section; Provided, however, the inquiry required by paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this section shall not cover beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities;
  3. Make the inquiry required by paragraph (a)(1) of this section at least 20 business days prior to the record date of the meeting of security holders, or
    - i. If such inquiry is impracticable 20 business days prior to the record date of a special meeting, as many days before the record date of such meeting as is practicable or,
    - ii. If consents or authorizations are solicited, and such inquiry is impracticable 20 business days before the earliest date on which they may be used to effect corporate action, as many days before that date as is practicable, or
    - iii. At such later time as the rules of a national securities exchange on which the class of securities in question is listed may permit for good cause shown;

Provided, however, That if a record holder or respondent bank has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such inquiries, the inquiry shall be made to such designated office(s) or department(s); and

4. Supply, in a timely manner, each record holder and respondent bank of whom the inquiries required by paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this section are made with copies of the proxy, other proxy soliciting material, and/or the annual report to security holders, in such quantities, assembled in such form and at such place(s), as the record holder or respondent bank may reasonably request in order to send such material to each beneficial owner of securities who is to be furnished with such material by the record holder or respondent bank; and
5. Upon the request of any record holder or respondent bank that is supplied with proxy soliciting material and/or annual reports to security holders pursuant to paragraph (a)(4) of this section, pay its reasonable expenses for completing the mailing of such material to beneficial owners.

Note 1: If the registrant's list of security holders indicates that some of its securities are registered in the name of a clearing agency registered pursuant to Section 17A of the Act (e.g., "Cede & Co.," nominee for the Depository Trust Company), the registrant shall make appropriate inquiry of the clearing agency and thereafter of the participants in such clearing agency who may hold on behalf of a beneficial owner or respondent bank, and shall comply with the above paragraph with respect to any such participant (see § 240.14a-1).

Note 2: The attention of registrants is called to the fact that each broker, dealer, bank, association, and other entity that exercises fiduciary powers has an obligation pursuant to § 240.14b-1 and § 240.14b-2 (except as provided therein with respect to exempt employee benefit plan securities held in nominee name) and, with respect to brokers and dealers, applicable self-regulatory organization requirements to obtain and forward, within the time periods prescribed therein, (a) proxies (or in lieu thereof requests for voting instructions) and proxy soliciting materials to beneficial owners on whose behalf it holds securities, and (b) annual reports to security holders to beneficial owners on whose behalf it holds securities, unless the registrant has notified the record holder or respondent bank that it has assumed responsibility to mail such material to beneficial owners whose names, addresses, and securities positions are disclosed pursuant to § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\) and § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\).

Note 3: The attention of registrants is called to the fact that registrants have an obligation, pursuant to paragraph (d) of this section, to cause proxies (or in lieu thereof requests for voting instructions), proxy soliciting material and annual reports to security holders to be furnished, in a timely manner, to beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities.

- b. Any registrant requesting pursuant to § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\), or § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\) a list of names, addresses and securities positions of beneficial owners of its securities who either have consented or have not objected to disclosure of such information shall:
  1. By first class mail or other equally prompt means, inquire of each record holder and each respondent bank identified to the registrant pursuant to § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(i\) whether such record holder or respondent bank holds the registrant's securities on behalf of any respondent banks and, if so, the name and address of each such respondent bank;
  2. Request such list to be compiled as of a date no earlier than five business days after the date the registrant's request is received by the record holder or respondent bank; Provided, however, That if the record holder or respondent bank has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such requests, the request shall be made to such designated office(s) or department(s);
  3. Make such request to the following persons that hold the registrant's securities on behalf of beneficial owners: all brokers, dealers, banks, associations and other entities that exercises fiduciary powers; Provided however, such request shall not cover beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities as defined in § 240.14a-1\(d\)\(1\); and, at the option of the registrant, such request may give notice of any employee benefit plan established by an affiliate of the registrant that holds securities of the registrant that the registrant elects to treat as exempt employee benefit plan securities;
  4. Use the information furnished in response to such request exclusively for purposes of corporate communications; and
  5. Upon the request of any record holder or respondent bank to whom such request is made, pay the reasonable expenses, both direct and indirect, of providing beneficial owner information. Note: A registrant will be deemed to have satisfied its obligations under paragraph (b) of this section by requesting consenting and non-objecting beneficial owner lists from a designated agent acting on behalf of the record holder or respondent bank and paying to that designated agent the reasonable expenses of providing the beneficial owner information.
- c. A registrant, at its option, may mail its annual report to security holders to the beneficial owners whose identifying information is provided by record holders and respondent banks, pursuant to § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\) and § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\), provided that such registrant notifies the record holders and respondent banks, at the time it makes the inquiry required by paragraph (a) of this section, that the registrant will mail the annual report to security holders to the beneficial owners so identified.
- d. If a registrant solicits proxies, consents or authorizations from record holders and respondent banks who hold securities on behalf of beneficial owners, the registrant shall cause proxies (or in lieu thereof requests or voting instructions), proxy soliciting material and annual reports to security holders to be furnished, in a timely manner, to beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities.

Securities and Exchange Commission SEC Rule 14b-1 SEC Regulation 240.14b-1 17 CFR 240.14b-1

Obligation of registered brokers and dealers in connection with the prompt forwarding of certain communications to beneficial owners

Originally issued July 13, 1977 (42 FR 35955)

As revised through January 10, 1992 (57 FR 1099)

- a. Definitions. Unless the context otherwise requires, all terms used in this section shall have the same meanings as in the Act and, with respect to proxy soliciting material, as in § 240.14a-1 thereunder and, with respect to information statements, as in § 240.14c-1 thereunder. In addition, as used in this section, the term "registrant" means:
  1. The issuer of a class of securities registered pursuant to Section 12 of the Act; or
  2. An investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940.
- b. Dissemination and beneficial owner information requirements. A broker or dealer registered under Section 15 of the Act shall comply with the following requirements for disseminating certain communications to beneficial owners and providing beneficial owner information to registrants.
  1. The broker or dealer shall respond, by first class mail or other equally prompt means, directly to the registrant no later than seven business days after the date it receives an inquiry made in accordance with § 240.14a-13\(a\) or § 240.14c-7\(a\) by indicating, by means of a search card or otherwise:

- i. The approximate number of customers of the broker or dealer who are beneficial owners of the registrant's securities that are held of record by the broker, dealer, or its nominee;
  - ii. The number of customers of the broker or dealer who are beneficial owners of the registrant's securities who have objected to disclosure of their names, addresses, and securities positions if the registrant has indicated, pursuant to § 240.14a-13\(a\)\(1\)\(ii\)\(A\) or § 240.14c-7\(a\)\(1\)\(ii\)\(A\), that it will distribute the annual report to security holders to beneficial owners of its securities whose names, addresses and securities positions are disclosed pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section; and
  - iii. The identity of the designated agent of the broker or dealer, if any, acting on its behalf in fulfilling its obligations under paragraph (b)(3) of this section; Provided, however, that if the broker or dealer has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such inquiries, receipt for purposes of paragraph (b)(1) of this section shall mean receipt by such designated office(s) or department(s).
2. The broker or dealer shall, upon receipt of the proxy, other proxy soliciting material, information statement, and/or annual reports to security holders, forward such materials to its customers who are beneficial owners of the registrant's securities no later than five business days after receipt of the proxy material, information statement or annual reports.
3. The broker or dealer shall, through its agent or directly:
- i. Provide the registrant, upon the registrant's request, with the names, addresses, and securities positions, compiled as of a date specified in the registrant's request which is no earlier than five business days after the date the registrant's request is received, of its customers who are beneficial owners of the registrant's securities and who have not objected to disclosure of such information; Provided, however, that if the broker or dealer has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such requests, receipt shall mean receipt by such designated office(s) or department(s); and
  - ii. Transmit the data specified in paragraph (b)(3)(i) of this section to the registrant no later than five business days after the record date or other date specified by the registrant.
- Note 1: Where a broker or dealer employs a designated agent to act on its behalf in performing the obligations imposed on the broker or dealer by paragraph (b)(3) of this section, the five business day time period for determining the date as of which the beneficial owner information is to be compiled is calculated from the date the designated agent receives the registrant's request. In complying with the registrant's request for beneficial owner information under paragraph (b)(3) of this section, a broker or dealer need only supply the registrant with the names, addresses, and securities positions of non-objecting beneficial owners.
- Note 2: If a broker or dealer receives a registrant's request less than five business days before the requested compilation date, it must provide a list compiled as of a date that is no more than five business days after receipt and transmit the list within five business days after the compilation date.
- c. Exceptions to dissemination and beneficial owner information requirements. A broker or dealer registered under Section 15 of the Act shall be subject to the following with respect to its dissemination and beneficial owner information requirements.
1. With regard to beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities, the broker or dealer shall:
    - i. Not include information in its response pursuant to paragraph \(b\)\(1\) of this section or forward proxies (or in lieu thereof requests for voting instructions), proxy soliciting material, information statements, or annual reports to security holders pursuant to paragraph \(b\)\(2\) of this section to such beneficial owners; and
    - ii. Not include in its response, pursuant to paragraph \(b\)\(3\) of this section, data concerning such beneficial owners.
  2. A broker or dealer need not satisfy:
    - i. Its obligations under paragraphs (b)(2) and (b)(3) of this section if a registrant does not provide assurance of reimbursement of the broker's or dealer's reasonable expenses, both direct and indirect, incurred in connection with performing the obligations imposed by paragraphs (b)(2) and (b)(3) of this section; or
    - ii. Its obligation under paragraph (b)(2) of this section to forward annual reports to non-objecting beneficial owners identified by the broker or dealer, through its agent or directly, pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section if the registrant notifies the broker or dealer pursuant to § 240.14a-13\(c\) or § 240.14c-7\(c\) that the registrant will mail the annual report to such non-objecting beneficial owners identified by the broker or dealer and delivered in a list to the registrant pursuant to paragraph \(b\)\(3\) of this section.

Securities and Exchange Commission

SEC Rule 14b-2 SEC Regulation 240.14b-2 17 CFR 240.14b-2

Obligation of banks, associations and other entities that exercise fiduciary powers in connection with the prompt forwarding of certain communications to beneficial owners.

As revised through January 10, 1992 (57 FR 1100)

- A. Definitions. Unless the context otherwise requires, all terms used in this section shall have the same meanings as in the Act and, with respect to proxy soliciting material, as in § 240.14a-1 thereunder and, with respect to information statements, as in § 240.14c-1 thereunder. In addition, as used in this section, the following terms shall apply:
1. The term "bank" means a bank, association, or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers.
  2. The term "beneficial owner" includes any person who has or shares, pursuant to an instrument, agreement, or otherwise, the power to vote, or to direct the voting of a security.

Note 1: If more than one person shares voting power, the provisions of the instrument creating that voting power shall govern with respect to whether consent to disclosure of beneficial owner information has been given.

Note 2: If more than one person shares voting power or if the instrument creating that voting power provides that such power shall be exercised by different persons depending on the nature of the corporate action involved, all persons entitled to exercise such power shall be deemed beneficial owners; Provided, however, that only one such beneficial owner need be designated among the beneficial owners to receive proxies or requests for voting instructions, other proxy soliciting material, information statements, and/or annual reports to security holders, if the person so designated assumes the obligation to disseminate, in a timely manner, such materials to the other beneficial owners.

3. The term "registrant" means:

- i. The issuer of a class of securities registered pursuant to Section 12 of the Act; or
- ii. An investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940.

B. Dissemination and beneficial owner information requirements. A bank shall comply with the following requirements for disseminating certain communications to beneficial owners and providing beneficial owner information to registrants.

1. The bank shall:

- i. Respond, by first class mail or other equally prompt means, directly to the registrant, no later than one business day after the date it receives an inquiry made in accordance with § 240.14a-13\(a\) or § 240.14c-7\(a\) by indicating the name and address of each of its respondent banks that holds the registrant's securities on behalf of beneficial owners, if any; and
- ii. Respond, by first class mail or other equally prompt means, directly to the registrant no later than seven business days after the date it receives an inquiry made in accordance with § 240.14a-13\(a\) or § 240.14c-7\(a\) by indicating, by means of a search card or otherwise:
  - A. The approximate number of customers of the bank who are beneficial owners of the registrant's securities that are held of record by the bank or its nominee;
  - B. If the registrant has indicated, pursuant to § 240.14a-13\(a\)\(1\)\(iii\)\(A\) or § 240.14c-7\(a\)\(1\)\(iii\)\(A\), that it will distribute the annual report to security holders to beneficial owners of its securities whose names, addresses, and securities positions are disclosed pursuant to paragraphs (b)(4)(ii) and (iii) of this section:
    1. With respect to customer accounts opened on or before December 28, 1986, the number of beneficial owners of the registrant's securities who have affirmatively consented to disclosure of their names, addresses, and securities positions; and
    2. With respect to customer accounts opened after December 28, 1986, the number of beneficial owners of the registrant's securities who have not objected to disclosure of their names, addresses, and securities positions; and
  - C. The identity of its designated agent, if any, acting on its behalf in fulfilling its obligations under paragraphs (b)(4)(ii) and (iii) of this section; Provided, however, that, if the bank or respondent bank has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such inquiries, receipt for purposes of paragraphs (b)(1)(i) and (ii) of this section shall mean receipt by such designated office(s) or department(s).

2. Where proxies are solicited, the bank shall, within five business days after the record date:

- i. Execute an omnibus proxy, including a power of substitution, in favor of its respondent banks and forward such proxy to the registrant; and
- ii. Furnish a notice to each respondent bank in whose favor an omnibus proxy has been executed that it has executed such a proxy, including a power of substitution, in its favor pursuant to paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section.

3. Upon receipt of the proxy, other proxy soliciting material, information statement, and/or annual reports to security holders, the bank shall forward such materials to each beneficial owner on whose behalf it holds securities, no later than five business days after the date it receives such material and, where a proxy is solicited, the bank shall forward, with the other proxy soliciting material and/or the annual report, either:

- i. A properly executed proxy:
  - A. Indicating the number of securities held for such beneficial owner;
  - B. Bearing the beneficial owner's account number or other form of identification, together with instructions as to the procedures to vote the securities;
  - C. Briefly stating which other proxies, if any, are required to permit securities to be voted under the terms of the instrument creating that voting power or applicable state law; and
  - D. Being accompanied by an envelope addressed to the registrant or its agent, if not provided by the registrant; or
- ii. A request for voting instructions (for which registrant's form of proxy may be used and which shall be voted by the record holder bank or respondent bank in accordance with the instructions received), together with an envelope addressed to the record holder bank or respondent bank.

4. The bank shall:

- i. Respond, by first class mail or other equally prompt means, directly to the registrant no later than one business day after the date it receives an inquiry made in accordance with § 240.14a-13\(b\)\(1\) or § 240.14c-7\(b\)\(1\) by indicating the name and address of each of its respondent banks that holds the registrant's securities on behalf of beneficial owners, if any;
- ii. Through its agent or directly, provide the registrant, upon the registrant's request, and within the time specified in paragraph (b)(4)(iii) of this section, with the names, addresses, and securities position, compiled as of a date specified in the registrant's request which is no earlier than five business days after the date the registrant's request is received, of:
  - A. With respect to customer accounts opened on or before December 28, 1986, beneficial owners of the registrant's securities on whose behalf it holds securities who have consented affirmatively to disclosure of such information, subject to paragraph \(b\)\(5\) of this section; and
  - B. With respect to customer accounts opened after December 28, 1986, beneficial owners of the registrant's securities on whose behalf it holds securities who have not objected to disclosure of such information;
 Provided, however, that if the record holder bank or respondent bank has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such requests, receipt for purposes of paragraphs (b)(4)(i) and (ii) of this section shall mean receipt by such designated office(s) or department(s); and
- iii. Through its agent or directly, transmit the data specified in paragraph (b)(4)(ii) of this section to the registrant no later than five business days after the date specified by the registrant.

Note 1: Where a record holder bank or respondent bank employs a designated agent to act on its behalf in performing the obligations imposed on it by paragraphs (b)(4)(ii) and (iii) of this section, the five business day time period for determining the date as of which the beneficial owner information is to be compiled is calculated from the date the designated agent receives the registrant's request. In complying with the registrant's request for beneficial owner information under paragraphs (b)(4)(ii) and (iii) of this section, a record holder bank or respondent bank need only supply the registrant with the names, addresses and securities positions of affirmatively consenting and non-objecting beneficial owners.

Note 2: If a record holder bank or respondent bank receives a registrant's request less than five business days before the requested compilation date, it must provide a list compiled as of a date that is no more than five business days after receipt and transmit the list within five business days after the compilation date.

5. For customer accounts opened on or before December 28, 1986, unless the bank has made a good faith effort to obtain affirmative consent to disclosure of beneficial owner information pursuant to paragraph (b)(4)(ii) of this section, the bank shall provide such information as to beneficial owners who do not object to disclosure of such information. A good faith effort to obtain affirmative consent to disclosure of beneficial owner information shall include, but shall not be limited to, making an inquiry:
    - i. Phrased in neutral language, explaining the purpose of the disclosure and the limitations on the registrant's use thereof;
    - ii. Either in at least one mailing separate from other account mailings or in repeated mailings; and
    - iii. In a mailing that includes a return card, postage paid enclosure.
- C. Exceptions to dissemination and beneficial owner information requirements. The bank shall be subject to the following respect to its dissemination and beneficial owner requirements.
1. With regard to beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities, the bank shall not:
    - i. Include information in its response pursuant to paragraph (b)(1) of this section; or forward proxies (or in lieu thereof requests for voting instructions), proxy soliciting material, information statements, or annual reports to security holders pursuant to paragraph (b)(3) of this section to such beneficial owners; or
    - ii. Include in its response pursuant to paragraphs (b)(4) and (b)(5) of this section data concerning such beneficial owners.
  2. The bank need not satisfy:
    - i. Its obligations under paragraphs (b)(2), (b)(3), and (b)(4) of this section if a registrant does not provide assurance of reimbursement of its reasonable expenses, both direct and indirect, incurred in connection with performing the obligations imposed by paragraphs (b)(2), (b)(3), and (b)(4) of this section; or
    - ii. Its obligation under paragraph (b)(3) of this section to forward annual reports to consenting and non-objecting beneficial owners identified pursuant to paragraphs (b)(4)(ii) and (iii) of this section if the registrant notifies the record holder bank or respondent bank, pursuant to § 240.14a-13(c) or § 240.14c-7(c), that the registrant will mail the annual report to beneficial owners whose names addresses and securities positions are disclosed pursuant to paragraphs (b)(4)(ii) and (iii) of this section.
  3. For the purposes of determining the fees which may be charged to registrants pursuant to § 240.14a-13(b)(5), § 240.14c-7(a)(5), and paragraph (c)(2) of this section for performing obligations under paragraphs (b)(2), (b)(3), and (b)(4) of this section, an amount no greater than that permitted to be charged by brokers or dealers for reimbursement of their reasonable expenses, both direct and indirect, incurred in connection with performing the obligations imposed by paragraphs (b)(2) and (b)(3) of § 240.14b-1, shall be deemed to be reasonable.

SEC Rule 14c-1 SEC Regulation 240.14c-1 17 CFR 240.14c-1

Distribution of Information Pursuant to Section 14(C) Definitions

Originally issued November 20, 1986 (51 FR 42070)

As revised through January 10, 1992 (57 FR 1101)

Unless the context otherwise requires, all terms used in this regulation have the same meanings as in the Act or elsewhere in the general rules and regulations thereunder. In addition, the following definitions apply unless the context otherwise requires:

- a. Associate. The term "associate," used to indicate a relationship with any person, means:
  1. Any corporation or organization (other than the registrant or a majority owned subsidiary of the registrant) of which such person is an officer or partner or is, directly or indirectly, the beneficial owner of 10 percent or more of any class of equity securities;
  2. Any trust or other estate in which such person has a substantial beneficial interest or as to which such person serves as trustee or in a similar fiduciary capacity; and
  3. Any relative or spouse of such person, or any relative of such spouse, who has the same home as such person or who is a director or officer of the registrant or any of its parents or subsidiaries.
- b. Employee benefit plan. For purposes of § 240.14c-7, the term "employee benefit plan" means any purchase, savings, option, bonus, appreciation, profit sharing, thrift, incentive, pension or similar plan primarily for employees, directors, trustees or officers.
- c. Entity that exercises fiduciary powers. The term "entity that exercises fiduciary powers" means any entity that holds securities in nominee name or otherwise on behalf of a beneficial owner but does not include a clearing agency registered pursuant to Section 17A of the Act, or a broker or a dealer.
- d. Exempt employee benefit plan securities. For purposes of § 240.14c-7, the term "exempt employee benefit plan securities" means:
  1. Securities of the registrant held by an employee benefit plan, as defined in paragraph (b) of this section, where such plan is established by the registrant; or
  2. If notice regarding the current distribution of information statements has been given pursuant to § 240.14c-7(a)(1)(ii)(C) or if notice regarding the current request for a list of names, addresses and securities positions of beneficial owners has been given pursuant to § 240.14c-7(b)(3), securities of the registrant held by an employee benefit plan, as defined in paragraph (b) of this section, where such plan is established by an affiliate of the registrant.
- e. Information statement. The term "information statement" means the statement required by § 240.14c-2, whether or not contained in a single document.

- f. Last fiscal year. The term "last fiscal year" of the registrant means the last fiscal year of the registrant ending prior to the date of the meeting with respect to which an information statement is required to be distributed, or if the information statement involves consents or authorizations in lieu of a meeting, the earliest date on which they may be used to effect corporate action.
- g. Proxy. The term "proxy" includes every proxy, consent or authorization within the meaning of Section 14(a) of the Act. The consent or authorization may take the form of failure to object or to dissent.
- h. Record date. The term "record date" means the date as of which the record holders of securities entitled to vote at a meeting or by written consent or authorization shall be determined.
- i. Record holder. For purposes of § 240.14c-7, the term "record holder" means any broker, dealer, voting trustee, bank, association or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers which holds securities of record in nominee name or otherwise or as a participant in a clearing agency registered pursuant to Section 17A of the Act.
- j. Registrant. The term "registrant" means:
  - 1. The issuer of a class of securities registered pursuant to Section 12 of the Act; or
  - 2. An investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 that has made a public offering of its securities.
- k. Respondent bank. For purposes of § 240.14c-7, the term "respondent bank" means any bank, association or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers which holds securities on behalf of beneficial owners and deposits such securities for safekeeping with another bank, association or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers.

Providing Copies of material for certain beneficial owners.

As revised through January 10, 1992 (57 FR 1102)

- a. (a) If the registrant knows that securities of any class entitled to vote at a meeting, or by written authorizations or consents if no meeting is held, are held of record by a broker, dealer, voting trustee, or bank, association, or other entity that exercises fiduciary powers in nominee name or otherwise, the registrant shall:
  - 1. By first class mail or other equally prompt means:
    - i. Inquire of each such record holder:
      - A. Whether other persons are the beneficial owners of such securities and, if so, the number of copies of the information statement necessary to supply such material to such beneficial owners;
      - B. In the case of an annual (or special meeting in lieu of the annual) meeting, or written consents in lieu of such meeting, at which directors are to be elected, the number of copies of the annual report to security holders, necessary to supply such report to such beneficial owners for whom proxy material has not been and is not to be made available and to whom such reports are to be distributed by such record holder or its nominee and not by the registrant;
      - C. If the record holder or respondent bank has an obligation under § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\) or § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\), whether an agent has been designated to act on its behalf in fulfilling such obligation, and, if so, the name and address of such agent; and
      - D. Whether it holds the registrant's securities on behalf of any respondent bank and, if so, the name and address of each such respondent bank; and
    - ii. Indicate to each such record holder:
      - A. Whether the registrant pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section, intends to distribute the annual report to security holders to beneficial owners of its securities whose names, addresses and securities positions are disclosed pursuant to § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\) and § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\);
      - B. The record date; and
      - C. At the option of the registrant, any employee benefit plan established by an affiliate of the registrant that holds securities of the registrant that the registrant elects to treat as exempt employee benefit plan securities;
  - 2. Upon receipt of a record holder's or respondent bank's response indicating, pursuant to § 240.14b-2\(a\)\(1\), the names and addresses of its respondent banks, within one business day after the date such response is received, make an inquiry of and give notification to each such respondent bank in the same manner required by paragraph (a)(1) of this section; Provided, however, the inquiry required by paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this section shall not cover beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities;
  - 3. Make the inquiry required by paragraph (a)(1) of this section on the earlier of:
    - i. At least 20 business days prior to the record date of the meeting of security holders or the record date of written consents in lieu of a meeting; or
    - ii. At least 20 business days prior to the date the information statement is required to be sent or given pursuant to § 240.14c-2\(b\);

Provided, however, That, if a record holder or respondent bank has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such inquiries, the inquiry shall be made to such designated office(s) or department(s);
  - 4. Supply, in a timely manner, each record holder and respondent bank of whom the inquires required by paragraphs (a)(1) and paragraphs (a)(2) of this section are made with copies of the information statement and/or the annual report to security holders, in such quantities, assembled in such form and at such place(s), as the record holder or respondent bank may reasonably request in order to send such material to each beneficial owner of securities who is to be furnished with such material by the record holder or respondent bank; and
  - 5. Upon the request of any record holder or respondent bank that is supplied with information statements and/or annual reports to security holders pursuant to paragraph (a)(3) of this section, pay its reasonable expenses for completing the mailing of such material to beneficial owners.

Note 1: If the registrant's list of security holders indicates that some of its securities are registered in the name of a clearing agency registered pursuant to Section 17A of the Act (e.g., "Cede & Co.," nominee for the Depository Trust Company), the registrants shall make appropriate inquiry of the clearing agency and thereafter of the participants in such clearing agency who may hold on behalf of a beneficial owner or respondent bank, and shall comply with the above paragraph with respect to any such participant (see § 240.14c-1 (h)).

Note 2: The requirement for sending an annual report to security holders of record having the same address will be satisfied by sending at least one report to a holder of record at that address provided that those holders of record to whom a report is not sent agree thereto in writing. This procedure is not available to registrants, however, where banks, associations, other entities that exercise fiduciary powers, brokers, dealers and other persons hold securities in nominee accounts or "street names" on behalf of beneficial owners, and such persons are not relieved of any obligation to obtain or send such annual report to the beneficial owners.

Note 3: The attention of registrants is called to the fact that each broker, dealer, bank, association, and other entity that exercises fiduciary powers has an obligation pursuant to § 240.14b-1 and § 240.14b-2 (except as provided therein with respect to exempt employee benefit plan securities held in nominee name) and, with respect to brokers and dealers, applicable self-regulatory organization requirements to obtain and forward, within the time periods prescribed therein, (a) information statements to beneficial owners on whose behalf it holds securities, and (b) annual reports to security holders to beneficial owners on whose behalf it holds securities, unless the registrant has notified the record holder or respondent bank that it has assumed responsibility to mail such material to beneficial owners whose names, addresses, and securities positions are disclosed pursuant to § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\) and § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\).

Note 4: The attention of registrants is called to the fact that registrants have an obligation, pursuant to paragraph (d) of this section, to cause information statements and annual reports to security holders to be furnished, in accordance with § 240.14c-2, to beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities.

- b. Any registrant requesting pursuant to § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\) and § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\) a list of names, addresses and securities positions of beneficial owners of its securities who either have consented or have not objected to disclosure of such information shall:
1. By first class mail or other equally prompt means, inquire of each record holder and each respondent bank identified to the registrant pursuant to § 240.14b-2(e)(1) whether such record holder or respondent bank holds the registrant's securities on behalf of any respondent banks and, if so, the name and address of each such respondent bank;
  2. Request such list be compiled as of a date no earlier than five business days after the date the registrant's request is received by the record holder or respondent bank; Provided, however, That if the record holder or respondent bank has informed the registrant that a designated office(s) or department(s) is to receive such requests, the request shall be made to such designated office(s) or department(s);
  3. Make such request to the following persons that hold the registrant's securities on behalf of beneficial owners: all brokers, dealers, banks, associations and other entities that exercise fiduciary powers; Provided, however, such request shall not cover beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities as defined in § 240.14a-1\(d\)\(1\); and, at the option of the registrant, such request may give notice of any employee benefit plan established by an affiliate of the registrant that holds securities of the registrant that the registrant elects to treat as exempt employee benefit plan securities;
  4. Use the information furnished in response to such request exclusively for purposes of corporate communications; and
  5. Upon the request of any record holder or respondent bank to whom such request is made, pay the reasonable expenses, both direct and indirect, of providing beneficial owner information.

Note: A registrant will be deemed to have satisfied its obligations under paragraph (b) of this section by requesting consenting and non-objecting beneficial owner lists from a designated agent acting on behalf of the record holder or respondent bank and paying to that designated agent the reasonable expenses of providing the beneficial owner information.

- c. A registrant, at its option, may mail its annual report to security holders to the beneficial owners whose identifying information is provided by record holders and respondent banks, pursuant to § 240.14b-1\(b\)\(3\) and § 240.14b-2\(b\)\(4\)\(ii\) and \(iii\), provided that such registrant notifies the record holders and respondent banks at the time it makes the inquiry required by paragraph (a) of this section that the registrant will mail the annual report to security holders to the beneficial owners so identified.
- d. If a registrant furnishes information statements to record holders and respondent banks who hold securities on behalf of beneficial owners, the registrant shall cause information statements and annual reports to security holders to be furnished, in accordance with § 240.14c-2, to beneficial owners of exempt employee benefit plan securities.

National Association of Securities Dealers (NASD)

Rule 2711.

Research Analysts and Research Reports

(amended by SR-NASD-2002-74 effective June 4, 2002 and SR-NASD-2002-154 effective July 29, 2003)

Rule 2711. Research Analysts and Research Reports

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711 No later than Tuesday, July 9, 2002, except for those sections which indicate a different implementation date below

(a) Definitions

For purposes of this rule, the following terms shall be defined as provided.

- (1) "Investment banking department" means any department or division, whether or not identified as such, that performs any investment banking service on behalf of a member.
- (2) "Investment banking services" include, without limitation, acting as an underwriter in an offering for the issuer; acting as a financial adviser in a merger or acquisition; providing venture capital, equity lines of credit, PIPEs or similar investments; or serving as placement agent for the issuer.

- (3) "Member of a research analyst's household" means any individual whose principal residence is the same as the research analyst's principal residence.
- (4) "Public appearance" means any participation in a seminar, forum (including an interactive electronic forum), radio, television or print media interview, or other public speaking activity, or the writing of a print media article, in which a research analyst makes a recommendation or offers an opinion concerning an equity security.
- (5) "Research analyst" means the associated person who is primarily responsible for, and any associated person who reports directly or indirectly to such a research analyst in connection with, preparation of the substance of a research report, whether or not any such person has the job title of "research analyst."
- (6) "Research analyst account" means any account in which a research analyst or member of the research analyst's household has a financial interest, or over which such analyst has discretion or control, other than an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940. This term does not include a "blind trust" account that is controlled by a person other than the research analyst or member of the research analyst's household where neither the research analyst nor a member of the research analyst's household knows of the account's investments or investments transactions.
- (7) "Research department" means any department or division, whether or not identified as such, that is principally responsible for preparing the substance of a research report on behalf of a member.
- (8) "Research Report" means a written or electronic communication that includes an analysis of equity securities of individual companies or industries, and that provides information reasonably sufficient upon which to base an investment decision.
- (9) "Subject company" means the company whose equity securities are the subject of a research report or a public appearance.

(b) Restrictions on Relationship with Research Department

- (1) No research analyst may be subject to the supervision or control of any employee of the member's investment banking department, and no personnel engaged in investment banking activities may have any influence or control over the compensatory evaluation of a research analyst.
- (2) Except as provided in paragraph (b)(3), no employee of the investment banking department or any other employee of the member who is not directly responsible for investment research ("non-research personnel"), other than legal or compliance personnel, may review or approve a research report of the member before its publication.
- (3) Non-research personnel may review a research report before its publication as necessary only to verify the factual accuracy of information in the research report or identify any potential conflict of interest, provided that:
- (A) any written communication between non-research personnel and research department personnel concerning the content of a research report must be made either through authorized legal or compliance personnel of the member or in a transmission copied to such personnel; and
- (B) any oral communication between non-research personnel and research department personnel concerning the content of a research report must be documented and made either through authorized legal or compliance personnel acting as intermediary or in a conversation conducted in the presence of such personnel.

(c) Restrictions on Communications with the Subject Company

- (1) Except as provided in paragraphs (c)(2) and (c)(3), a member may not submit a research report to the subject company before its publication.
- (2) A member may submit sections of such a research report to the subject company before its publication for review as necessary only to verify the factual accuracy of information in those sections, provided that:
- (A) the sections of the research report submitted to the subject company do not contain the research summary, the research rating or the price target;
- (B) a complete draft of the research report is provided to legal or compliance personnel before sections of the report are submitted to the subject company; and
- (C) if after submitting the sections of the research report to the subject company the research department intends to change the proposed rating or price target, it must first provide written justification to, and receive written authorization from, legal or compliance personnel for the change. The member must retain copies of any draft and the final version of such a research report for three years following its publication.

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(c)(2) No later than Wednesday, September 9, 2002

- (3) The member may notify a subject company that the member intends to change its rating of the subject company's securities, provided that the notification occurs on the business day before the member announces the rating change, after the close of trading in the principal market of the subject company's securities.
- (4) No research analyst may participate in efforts to solicit investment banking business. Accordingly, no research analyst may, among other things, participate in any "pitches" for investment banking business to prospective investment banking clients, or have other communications with companies for the purpose of soliciting investment banking business.

(d) Restrictions on Research Analyst Compensation

- (1) No member may pay any bonus, salary or other form of compensation to a research analyst that is based upon a specific investment banking services transaction.
- (2) The compensation of a research analyst who is primarily responsible for the preparation of the substance of a research report must be reviewed and approved at least annually by a committee that reports to the members board' of directors, or when the member has no board of directors, to a senior executive officer of the member. This committee may not have representation from the member's investment banking department. The committee must consider the following factors when reviewing such a research analyst's compensation, if applicable:

NASD members must implement the following provisions of Rule 2711(d)(2) no later than October 27, 2003

- (A) the research analyst's individual performance, including the analyst's productivity and the quality of the analyst's research;
- (B) the correlation between the research analyst's recommendations and the stock price performance; and
- (C) the overall ratings received from clients, sales force, and peers independent of the member's investment banking department, and other independent ratings services.

The committee may not consider as a factor in reviewing and approving such a research analyst's compensation his or her contributions to the member's investment banking business. The committee must document the basis upon which each such research analyst's compensation was established. The annual attestation required by Rule 2711(i) must certify that the committee reviewed and approved each such research analyst's compensation and documented the basis upon which this compensation was established.

(e) Prohibition of Promise of Favorable Research

No member may directly or indirectly offer favorable research, a specific rating or a specific price target, or threaten to change research, a rating or a price target, to a company as consideration or inducement for the receipt of business or compensation.

(f) Restrictions on Publishing Research Reports and Public Appearances; Termination of Coverage

(1) No member may publish or otherwise distribute a research report and no research analyst may make a public appearance regarding a subject company for which the member acted as manager or co-manager of:

(A) an initial public offering, for 40 calendar days following the date of the offering; or

(B) a secondary offering, for 10 calendar days following the date of the offering; provided that:

(i) paragraphs (f)(1)(A) and (f)(1)(B) will not prevent a member from publishing or otherwise distributing a research report, or prevent a research analyst from making a public appearance, concerning the effects of significant news or a significant event on the subject company within such 40- and 10-day periods, and provided further that legal or compliance personnel authorize publication of that research report before it is issued or authorize the public appearance before it is made; and

(ii) paragraph (f)(1)(B) will not prevent a member from publishing or otherwise distributing a research report pursuant to SEC Rule 139 regarding a subject company with "actively-traded securities," as defined in Regulation M, 17 CFR 242.101(c)(1), and will not prevent a research analyst from making a public appearance concerning such a company.

(2) No member that has agreed to participate or is participating as an underwriter or dealer (other than as manager or co-manager) of an issuer's initial public offering may publish or otherwise distribute a research report or make a public appearance regarding that issuer for 25 calendar days after the date of the offering.

(3) For purposes of paragraphs (f)(1) and (f)(2), the term "date of the offering" refers to the later of the effective date of the registration statement or the first date on which the security was bona fide offered to the public.

(4) No member that has acted as a manager or co-manager of a securities offering may publish or otherwise distribute a research report or make a public appearance concerning a subject company 15 days prior to and after the expiration, waiver or termination of a lock-up agreement or any other agreement that the member has entered into with a subject company or its shareholders that restricts or prohibits the sale of securities held by the subject company or its shareholders after the completion of a securities offering. This paragraph will not prevent a member from publishing or otherwise distributing a research report concerning the effects of significant news or a significant event on the subject company within such period, provided legal or compliance personnel authorize publication of that research report before it is issued. In addition, this paragraph shall not apply to the publication or distribution of a research report pursuant to SEC Rule 139 regarding a subject company with "actively traded securities," as defined in Regulation M, 17 CFR 242.101(c)(1), or to a public appearance concerning such a subject company.

(5) If a member intends to terminate its research coverage of a subject company, notice of this termination must be made. The member must make available a final research report on the subject company using the means of dissemination equivalent to those it ordinarily uses to provide the customer with its research reports on the subject company. The report must be comparable in scope and detail to prior research reports and must include a final recommendation or rating, unless it is impracticable for the member to produce a comparable report (e.g., if the research analyst covering the subject company or sector has left the member or if the member terminates coverage of the industry or sector). If it is impracticable to produce a final recommendation or rating, the final research report must disclose the member's rationale for the decision to terminate coverage.

(g) Restrictions on Personal Trading by Research Analysts

(1) No research analyst account may purchase or receive any securities before the issuer's initial public offering if the issuer is principally engaged in the same types of business as companies that the research analyst follows.

(2) No research analyst account may purchase or sell any security issued by a company that the research analyst follows, or any option on or derivative of such security, for a period beginning 30 calendar days before and ending five calendar days after the publication of a research report concerning the company or a change in a rating or price target of the company's securities; provided that:

(A) a member may permit a research analyst account to sell securities held by the account that are issued by a company that the research analyst follows, within 30 calendar days after the research analyst began following the company for the member;

(B) a member may permit a research analyst account to purchase or sell any security issued by a subject company within 30 calendar days before the publication of a research report or change in the rating or price target of the subject company's securities due to significant news or a significant event concerning the subject company, provided that the legal or compliance personnel pre-approve the research report and any change in the rating or price target.

(3) No research analyst account may purchase or sell any security or any option on or derivative of such security in a manner inconsistent with the research analyst's recommendation as reflected in the most recent research report published by the member.

(4) Legal or compliance personnel may authorize a transaction otherwise prohibited by paragraphs (g)(2) and (g)(3) based upon an unanticipated significant change in the personal financial circumstances of the beneficial owner of the research analyst account, provided that:

(A) legal or compliance personnel authorize the transaction before it is entered;

(B) each exception is granted in compliance with policies and procedures adopted by the member that are reasonably designed to ensure that these transactions do not create a conflict of interest between the professional responsibilities of the research analyst and the personal trading activities of a research analyst account; and

(C) the member maintains written records concerning each transaction and the justification for permitting the transaction for three years following the date on which the transaction is approved.

(5) The prohibitions in paragraphs (g)(1) through (g)(3) do not apply to a purchase or sale of the securities of:

(A) any registered diversified investment company as defined under Section (5)(b)(1) of the Investment Company Act of 1940; or

(B) any other investment fund over which neither the research analyst nor a member of the research analyst's household has any investment discretion or control, provided that:

(i) the research analyst accounts collectively own interests representing no more than 1% of the assets of the fund;

(ii) the fund invests no more than 20% of its assets in securities of issuers principally engaged in the same types of business as companies that the research analyst follows; and

(iii) if the investment fund distributes securities in kind to the research analyst or household member before the issuer's initial public offering, the research analyst or household member must either divest those securities immediately or the research analyst must refrain from participating in the preparation of research reports concerning that issuer.

(6) Legal or compliance personnel of the member shall pre-approve all transactions of persons who oversee research analysts to the extent such transactions involve equity securities of subject companies covered by the research analysts that they oversee. This pre-approval requirement shall apply to all persons, such as the director of research, supervisory analyst, or member of a committee, who have direct influence or control with respect to the preparation of the substance of research reports or establishing or changing a rating or price target of a subject company's equity securities.

(h) Disclosure Requirements

(1) Ownership and Material Conflicts of Interest

A member must disclose in research reports and a research analyst must disclose in public appearances:

(A) if the research analyst or a member of the research analyst's household has a financial interest in the securities of the subject company, and the nature of the financial interest (including, without limitation, whether it consists of any option, right, warrant, future, long or short position);

(B) if, as of the end of the month immediately preceding the date of publication of the research report or the public appearance (or the end of the second most recent month if the publication date is less than 10 calendar days after the end of the most recent month), the member or its affiliates beneficially own 1% or more of any class of common equity securities of the subject company. Computation of beneficial ownership of securities must be based upon the same standards used to compute ownership for purposes of the reporting requirements under Section 13(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934;

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(h)(1)(B) No later than Wednesday, November 6, 2002

(C) any other actual, material conflict of interest of the research analyst of which the research analyst or member knows or has reason to know at the time of publication of the research report or at the time of the public appearance.

(2) Receipt of Compensation

NASD members must implement the new compensation and client disclosure provisions of Rule 2711(h)(2) no sooner than January 29, 2004

(A) A member must disclose in research reports:

(i) if the research analyst received compensation:

(a.) based upon (among other factors) the member's investment banking revenues; or

(b.) from the subject company in the past 12 months.

(ii) the member or affiliate:

a. managed or co-managed a public offering of securities for the subject company in the past 12 months;

b. received compensation for investment banking services from the subject company in the past 12 months; or

c. expects to receive or intends to seek compensation for investment banking services from the subject company in the next 3 months.

(iii) if (1) as of the end of the month immediately preceding the date of publication of the research report (or the end of the second most recent month if the publication date is less than 30 calendar days after the end of the most recent month) or (2) to the extent the research analyst or an employee of the member with the ability to influence the substance of the research knows:

a. the member received any compensation for products or services other than investment banking services from the subject company in the past 12 months; or

b. the subject company currently is, or during the 12-month period preceding the date of distribution of the research report was, a client of the member. In such cases, the member also must disclose the types of services provided to the subject company. For purposes of this Rule 2711(h)(2), the types of services provided to the subject company shall be described as investment banking services, non-investment banking securities-related services, and non-securities services.

(iv) if, to the extent the research analyst or an employee of the member with the ability to influence the substance of the research report knows an affiliate of the member received any compensation for products or services other than investment banking services from the subject company in the past 12 months.

(v) if, to the extent the research analyst or member has reason to know, an affiliate of the member received any compensation for products or services other than investment banking services from the subject company in the past 12 months.

a. This requirement will be deemed satisfied if such compensation is disclosed in research reports within 30 days after completion of the last calendar quarter, provided that the member has taken steps reasonably designed to identify any such compensation during that calendar quarter. This requirement shall not apply to any subject company as to which the member initiated coverage since the beginning of the current calendar quarter.

b. The research analyst and the member will be presumed not to have reason to know whether an affiliate received any compensation for products or services other than investment banking services from the subject company in the past 12 months if the member maintains and enforces policies and procedures reasonably designed to prevent the research analysts and employees of the member with the ability to influence the substance of research reports from, directly or indirectly, receiving information from the affiliate concerning whether the affiliate received such compensation.

(vi) For the purposes of this Rule 2711(h)(2), an employee of the member with the ability to influence the substance of the research report is an employee who, in the ordinary course of that person's duties, has the authority to review the particular research report and to change that research report prior to publication.

(B) A research analyst must disclose in public appearances:

- (i) if, to the extent the research analyst knows or has reason to know, the member or any affiliate received any compensation from the subject company in the past 12 months;
- (ii) if the research analyst received any compensation from the subject company in the past 12 months; or
- (iii) if, to the extent the research analyst knows or has reason to know, the subject company currently is, or during the 12-month period preceding the date of distribution of the research report, was, a client of the member. In such cases, the research analyst also must disclose the types of services provided to the subject company, if known by the research analyst.

(C) A member or research analyst will not be required to make a disclosure required by paragraphs (h)(2)(A)(ii)(b) and (c), (h)(2)(A)(iii)(b), or (h)(2)(B)(i) and (iii) to the extent such disclosure would reveal material non-public information regarding specific potential future investment banking transactions of the subject company.

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(h)(2)(C) as they apply to disclosures under Rules 2711(h)(2)(A)(ii)(b) and (c) no later than July 29, 2003, and as they apply to disclosures under Rule 2711(h)(2)(A)(iii)(b), (h)(2)(B)(i) and (iii) by Jan. 26, 2004

(3) Position as Officer or Director

A member must disclose in research reports and a research analyst must disclose in public appearances if the research analyst or a member of the research analyst's household serves as an officer, director or advisory board member of the subject company.

(4) Meaning of Ratings

A member must define in its research reports the meaning of each rating used by the member in its rating system. The definition of each rating must be consistent with its plain meaning.

(5) Distribution of Ratings

- (A) Regardless of the rating system that a member employs, a member must disclose in each research report the percentage of all securities rated by the member to which the member would assign a "buy," "hold/neutral," or "sell" rating.
- (B) In each research report, the member must disclose the percentage of subject companies within each of these three categories for whom the member has provided investment banking services within the previous twelve months.
- (C) The information that is disclosed under paragraphs (h)(5)(A) and (h)(5)(B) must be current as of the end of the most recent calendar quarter (or the second most recent calendar quarter if the publication date is less than 15 calendar days after the most recent calendar quarter).

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(h)(5) No later than Wednesday, September 9, 2002

(6) Price Chart

A member must present in any research report concerning an equity security on which the member has assigned any rating for at least one year, a line graph of the security's daily closing prices for the period that the member has assigned any rating or for a three-year period, whichever is shorter. The line graph must:

- (A) indicate the dates on which the member assigned or changed each rating or price target;
- (B) depict each rating and price target assigned or changed on those dates; and
- (C) be current as of the end of the most recent calendar quarter (or the second most recent calendar quarter if the publication date is less than 15 calendar days after the most recent calendar quarter).

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(h)(5) No later than Wednesday, September 9, 2002

(7) Price Targets

A member must disclose in research reports the valuation methods used to determine a price target. Price targets must have a reasonable basis and must be accompanied by a disclosure concerning the risks that may impede achievement of the price target.

(8) Market Making

A member must disclose in research reports if it was making a market in the subject company's securities at the time that the research report was published.

(9) Disclosure Required by Other Provisions

In addition to the disclosure required by this rule, members and research analysts must provide disclosure in research reports and public appearances that is required by applicable law or regulation, including NASD Rule 2210 and the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws.

(10) Prominence of Disclosure

The disclosures required by this paragraph (h) must be presented on the front page of research reports or the front page must refer to the page on which disclosures are found. Disclosures and references to disclosures must be clear, comprehensive and prominent.

(11) Disclosures in Research Reports Covering Six or More Companies

When a member distributes a research report covering six or more subject companies, for purposes of the disclosures required in paragraph (h), such research report may direct the reader in a clear manner as to where they may obtain applicable current disclosures in written or electronic format.

(12) Records of Public Appearances

Members must maintain records of public appearances by research analysts sufficient to demonstrate compliance by those research analysts with the applicable disclosure requirements under paragraph (h) of this Rule. Such records must be maintained for three years from the date of the public appearance.

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(j) no later than Sept. 29, 2003

(i) Supervisory Procedures

Each member subject to this rule must adopt and implement written supervisory procedures reasonably designed to ensure that the member and its employees comply with the provisions of this rule (including the attestation requirements of Rule 2711(d)(2)), and a senior officer of such a member must attest annually to NASD by April 1 of each year that it has adopted and implemented those procedures.

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(i) in accordance with the implementation schedule for Rule 2711

(j) Prohibition of Retaliation Against Research Analysts

No member and no employee of a member who is involved with the member's investment banking activities may, directly or indirectly, retaliate against or threaten to retaliate against any research analyst employed by the member or its affiliates as a result of an adverse, negative, or otherwise unfavorable research report or public appearance written or made by the research analyst that may adversely affect the member's present or prospective investment banking relationship with the subject company of a research report. This prohibition shall not limit a member's authority to discipline or terminate a research analyst, in accordance with the member's policies and procedures, for any cause other than the writing of such an unfavorable research report or the making of such an unfavorable public appearance.

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(j) no later than July 29, 2003.

(k) Exceptions for Small Firms

NASD members must implement the provisions of Rule 2711(k) no later than July 29, 2003

The provisions of paragraph (b) shall not apply to members that over the previous three years, on average per year, have participated in 10 or fewer investment banking services transactions as manager or co-manager and generated $5 million or less in gross investment banking services revenues from those transactions. For purposes of this paragraph (k), the term "investment banking services transactions" includes the underwriting of both corporate debt and equity securities but not municipal securities. Members that qualify for this exemption must maintain records for three years of any communication that, but for this exemption, would be subject to paragraph (b) of this Rule.

As Amended

AN ACT To provide for the regulation of the sale of certain securities in interstate and foreign commerce and through the mails, and the regulation of the trust indentures under which the same are issued, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, the Act entitled "An Act to provide full and fair disclosure of the character of securities sold in interstate and foreign commerce and through the mails, and to prevent frauds in the sale thereof, and for other purposes", approved May 27, 1933, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following:

Section 301 Short Title

This title, divided into sections as follows, may be cited as the "Trust Indenture Act of 1939". [Codified to 15 USC 77aaa]

[Source: Section 301 of title III of the Act of May 27, 1933 (Pub. L. No. 22, 48 Stat. 74), effective May 27, 1933, as added by section 301 of title III of the Act of August 3, 1939 (Pub. L. No. 253; 53 Stat. 1149), effective August 3, 1939]

Section 302 Necessity for Regulation

(a) Upon the basis of facts disclosed by the reports of the Securities and Exchange Commission made to the Congress pursuant to section 211 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and otherwise disclosed and ascertained, it is hereby declared that the national public interest and the interest of investors in notes, bonds, debentures, evidences of indebtedness, and certificates of interest or participation therein, which are offered to the public, are adversely affected -

(1) when the obligor fails to provide a trustee to protect and enforce the rights and to represent the interests of such investors, notwithstanding the fact that -

(A) individual action by such investors for the purpose of protecting and enforcing their rights is rendered impracticable by reason of the disproportionate expense of taking such action, and

(B) concerted action by such investors in their common interest through representatives of their own selection is impeded by reason of the wide dispersion of such investors through many States, and by reason of the fact that information as to the names and addresses of such investors generally is not available to such investors;

(2) when the trustee does not have adequate rights and powers, or adequate duties and responsibilities, in connection with matters relating to the protection and enforcement of the rights of such investors; when, notwithstanding the obstacles to concerted action by such investors, and the general and reasonable assumption by such investors that the trustee is under an affirmative duty to take action for the protection and enforcement of their rights, trust indentures -

(A) generally provide that the trustee shall be under no duty to take any such action, even in the event of default, unless it receives notice of default, demand for action, and indemnity, from the holders of substantial percentages of the securities outstanding thereunder, and

(B) generally relieve the trustee from liability even for its own negligent action or failure to act;

(3) when the trustee does not have resources commensurate with its responsibilities, or has any relationship to or connection with the obligor or any underwriter of any securities of the obligor, or holds, beneficially or otherwise, any interest in the obligor or any such underwriter, which relationship, connection, or interest involves a material conflict with the interests of such investors;

(4) when the obligor is not obligated to furnish to the trustee under the indenture and to such investors adequate current information as to its financial condition, and as to the performance of its obligations with respect to the securities outstanding under such indenture; or when the communication of such information to such investors is impeded by the fact that information as to the names and addresses of such investors generally is not available to the trustee and to such investors;

(5) when the indenture contains provisions which are misleading or deceptive, or when full and fair disclosure is not made to prospective investors of the effect of important indenture provisions; or

(6) when, by reason of the fact that trust indentures are commonly prepared by the obligor or underwriter in advance of the public offering of the securities to be issued thereunder, such investors are unable to participate in the preparation thereof, and, by reason of their lack of understanding of the situation, such investors would in any event be unable to procure the correction of the defects enumerated in this subsection.

(b) Practices of the character above enumerated have existed to such an extent that, unless regulated, the public offering of notes, bonds, debentures, evidences of indebtedness, and certificates of interest or participation therein, by the use of means and instruments of transportation and communication in interstate commerce and of the mails, is injurious to the capital markets, to investors, and to the general public; and it is hereby declared to be the policy of this title, in accordance with which policy all the provisions of this title shall be interpreted, to meet the problems and eliminate the practices, enumerated in this section, connected with such public offerings. [Codified to 15 USC 77bbb]

Section 303 Definitions

When used in this title, unless the context otherwise requires -

(1) Any term defined in section 2 of the Securities Act of 1933, and not otherwise defined in this section, shall have the meaning assigned to such term in such section 2.

(2) The terms "sale", "sell", "offer to sell", "offer for sale", and "offer" shall include all transactions included in such terms as provided in paragraph (3) of section 2 of the Securities Act of 1933, except that an offer or sale of a certificate of interest or participation shall be deemed an offer or sale of the security or securities in which such certificate evidences an interest or participation if and only if such certificate gives the holder thereof the right to convert the same into such security or securities.

(3) The term "prospectus" shall have the meaning assigned to such term in paragraph (10) of section 2 of the Securities Act of 1933, except that in the case of securities which are not registered under the Securities Act of 1933, such term shall not include any communication -

(A) if it is proved that prior to or at the same time with such communication a written statement if any required by section 306 was sent or given to the persons to whom the communication was made, or

(B) if such communication states from whom such statement may be obtained (if such statement is required by rules or regulations under paragraphs (1) or (2) of subsection (b) of section 306) and, in addition, does no more than identify the security, state the price thereof, state by whom orders will be executed and contain such other information as the Commission, by rules or regulations deemed necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, and subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed therein, may permit.

(4) The term "underwriter" means any person who has purchased from an issuer with a view to, or offers or sells for an issuer in connection with, the distribution of any security, or participates or has a direct or indirect participation in any such undertaking, or participates or has a participation in the direct or indirect underwriting of any such undertaking; but such term shall not include a person whose interest is limited to a commission from an underwriter or dealer not in excess of the usual and customary distributors' or sellers' commission.

(5) The term "director" means any director of a corporation, or any individual performing similar functions with respect to any organization whether incorporated or unincorporated.

(6) The term "executive officer" means the president, every vice president, every trust officer, the cashier, the secretary, and the treasurer of a corporation, and any individual customarily performing similar functions with respect to any organization whether incorporated or unincorporated, but shall not include the chairman of the board of directors.

(7) The term "indenture" means any mortgage, deed of trust, trust or other indenture, or similar instrument or agreement (including any supplement or amendment to any of the foregoing), under which securities are outstanding or are to be issued, whether or not any property, real or personal, is, or is to be, pledged, mortgaged, assigned, or conveyed thereunder.

(8) The term "application" or "application for qualification" means the application provided for in section 305 or 307, and includes any amendment thereto and any report, document, or memorandum accompanying such application or incorporated therein by reference.

(9) The term "indenture to be qualified" means -

(A) the indenture under which there has been or is to be issued a security in respect of which a particular registration statement has been filed, or

(B) the indenture in respect of which a particular application has been filed.

(10) The term "indenture trustee" means each trustee under the indenture to be qualified, and each successor trustee.

(11) The term "indenture security" means any security issued or issuable under the indenture to be qualified

(12) The term "obligor", when used with respect to any such indenture security, means every person (including a guarantor) who is liable thereon, and, if such security is a certificate of interest or participation, such term means also every person (including a guarantor) which such certificate evidences an interest or participation; but such term shall not include the trustee under an indenture under which certificates of interest or participation, equipment trust certificates, or like securities are outstanding.

(13) The term "paying agent", when used with respect to any such indenture security, means any person authorized by an obligor thereon -

(A) to pay the principal of or interest on such security on behalf of such obligor, or

(B) if such security is a certificate of interest or participation, equipment trust certificate, or like security, to make such payment on behalf of the trustee.

(14) The term "State" means any State of the United States.

(15) The term "Commission" means the Securities and Exchange Commission.

(16) The term "voting security" means any security presently entitling the owner or holder thereof to vote in the direction or management of the affairs of a person, or any security issued under or pursuant to any trust, agreement, or arrangement whereby a trustee or trustees or agent or agents for the owner or holder of such security are presently entitled to vote in the direction or management of the affairs of a person; and a specified percentage of the voting securities of a person means such amount of the outstanding voting securities of such person as entitled the holder or holders thereof to cast such specified percentage of the aggregate votes which the holders of all the outstanding voting securities of such person are entitled to cast in the direction or management of the affairs of such person.

(17) The terms "Securities Act of 1933", "Securities Exchange Act of 1934", and "Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935" shall be deemed to refer, respectively, to such Acts, as amended, whether amended prior to or after the enactment of this title.

(18) The term "Bankruptcy Act" means the Bankruptcy Act or title 11.

(No. 95-598; 92 Stat. 2674), effective October 1, 1979; sections 501 and 502 of title V of the Act of December 4, 1987 (Pub. L. No. 100-181; 101 Stat. 1260), effective December 4, 1987; and section 402 of title IV of the Act of November 15, 1990 (Pub. L. No. 101-550; 104 Stat. 2722), effective November 15, 1990]

Section 304 Exempted Securities and Transactions

(a) The provisions of this title shall not apply to any of the following securities:

(1) any security other than -

(A) a note, bond, debenture, or evidence of indebtedness, whether or not secured, or

(B) a certificate of interest or participation in any such note, bond, debenture, or evidence of indebtedness, or

(C) a temporary certificate for, or guarantee of, any such note, bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, or certificate;

(2) any certificate of interest or participation in two or more securities having substantially different rights and privileges, or a temporary certificate for any such certificate;

(3) Reserved.

(4) (A) any security exempted from the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 by paragraph (2), (3), (4), (5), (6), (7), (8), or (11) of subsection 3(a) thereof;

(B) any security exempted from the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, as amended, by paragraph (2) of subsection 3(a) thereof, as amended by section 401 of the Employment Securities Amendments of 1970.

(5) any security issued under a mortgage indenture as to which a contract of insurance under the National Housing Act is in effect; and any such security shall be deemed to be exempt from the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 to the same extent as though such security were specifically enumerated in section 3(a)(2) of such Act;

(6) any note, bond, debenture, or evidence of indebtedness issued or guaranteed by a foreign government or by a subdivision, department, municipality, agency, or instrumentality thereof;

(7) any guarantee of any security which is exempted by this subsection;

(8) any security which has been or is to be issued otherwise than under an indenture, but this exemption shall not be applied within a period of twelve consecutive months to an aggregate principal amount of securities of the same issuer greater than the figure stated in section 3(b) of the Securities Act of 1933 [15 USC 77c(b)] limiting exemptions thereunder, or such lesser amount as the Commission may establish by its rules and regulations;

(9) any security which has been or is to be issued under an indenture which limits the aggregate principal amount of securities at any time outstanding thereunder to $10,000,000, or such lesser amount as the Commission may establish by its rules and regulations, but this exemption shall not be applied within a period of thirty-six consecutive months to more than $10,000,000 aggregate principal amount of securities of the same issuer, or such lesser amount as the Commission may establish by its rules and regulations; or

(10) any security issued under a mortgage or trust deed indenture as to which a contract of insurance under title XI of the National Housing Act is in effect: and any such security shall be deemed to be exempt from the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 to the same extent as though such security were specifically enumerated in section 3(a)(2), as amended, of the Securities Act of 1933.

In computing the aggregate principal amount of securities to which the exemptions provided by paragraphs (8) and (9) may be applied, securities to which the provisions of sections 305 and 306 would not have applied, irrespective of the provisions of those paragraphs, shall be disregarded.

(b) The provisions of sections 305 and 306 shall not apply -

- (1) to any of the transactions exempted from the provisions of section 5 of the Securities Act of 1933 by section 4 thereof, or
- (2) to any transaction which would be so exempted but for the last sentence of paragraph (11) of section 2 of such Act.

(c) The Commission shall, on application by the issuer and after opportunity for hearing thereon, by order exempt from any one or more provisions of this title any security issued or proposed to be issued under any indenture under which, at the time such application is filed, securities referred to in paragraph (3) of subsection (a) of this section are outstanding or on January 1, 1959, such securities were outstanding, if and to the extent that the Commission finds that compliance with such provision or provisions, through the execution of a supplemental indenture or otherwise -

- (1) would require, by reason of the provisions of such indenture, or the provisions of any other indenture or agreement made prior to the enactment of this title, or the provisions of any applicable law, the consent of the holders of securities outstanding under any such indenture or agreement; or
- (2) would impose an undue burden on the issuer, having due regard to the public interest and the interests of investors.

(d) The Commission may, by rules or regulations upon its own motion, or by order on application by an interested person, exempt conditionally or unconditionally any person, registration statement, indenture, security or transaction, or any class or classes of persons, registration statements, indentures, securities, or transactions, from any one or more of the provisions of this title, if and to the extent that such exemption is necessary or appropriate in the public interest and consistent with the protection of investors and the purposes fairly intended by this title. The Commission shall by rules and regulations determine the procedures under which an exemption under this subsection shall be granted, and may, in its sole discretion, decline to entertain any application for an order of exemption under this subsection.

(e) The Commission may from time to time by its rules and regulations, and subject to such terms and conditions as may be prescribed herein, add to the securities exempted as provided in this section any class of securities issued by a small business investment company under the Small Business Investment Act of 1958 if it finds, having regard to the purposes of that Act, that the enforcement of this Act with respect to such securities is not necessary in the public interest and for the protection of investors.

Section 305 Securities Required to be Registered Under Securities Act

(a) Subject to the provisions of section 304, a registration statement relating to a security shall include the following information and documents, as though such inclusion were required by the provisions of section 7 of the Securities Act of 1933 -

- (1) such information and documents as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe in order to enable the Commission to determine whether any person designated to act as trustee under the indenture under which such security has been or is to be is eligible to act as such under subsection (a) of section 310; and
- (2) an analysis of any provisions of such indenture with respect to -
  - (A) the definition of what shall constitute a default under such indenture, and the withholding of notice to the indenture security holders of any such default,
  - (B) the authentication and delivery of the indenture securities and the application of the proceeds thereof,
  - (C) the release or the release and substitution of any property subject to the lien of the indenture,
  - (D) the satisfaction and discharge of the indenture, and
  - (E) the evidence required to be furnished by the obligor upon the indenture securities to the trustee as to compliance with the conditions and covenants provided for in such indenture.

The information and documents required by paragraph (1) of this subsection with respect to the person designated to act as indenture trustee shall be contained in a separate part of such registration statement, which part shall be signed by such person. Such part of the registration statement shall be deemed to be a document filed pursuant to this title, and the provisions of sections 11, 12, 17, and 24 of the Securities Act of 1933 shall not apply to statements therein or omissions therefrom.

(b) (1) Except as may be permitted by paragraph (2) of this subsection, the Commission shall issue an order prior to the effective date of registration refusing to permit such a registration statement to become effective, if it finds that -

- (A) the security to which such registration statement relates has not been or is not to be issued under an indenture; or
- (B) any person designated as trustee under such indenture is not eligible to act as such under subsection (a) of section 310;

but no such order shall be issued except after notice and opportunity for hearing within the periods and in the manner required with respect to refusal orders pursuant to section 8(b) of the Securities Act of 1933. If and when the Commission deems that the objections on which such order was based have been met, the Commission shall enter an order rescinding such refusal order, and the registration shall become effective at the time provided in section 8(a) of the Securities Act of 1933, or upon the date of such rescission, whichever shall be later.

(2) In the case of securities registered under the Securities Act of 1933, which securities are eligible to be issued, offered, or sold on a delayed basis by or on behalf of the registrant, the Commission shall not be required to issue an order pursuant to paragraph (1) of subsection (b) of section 305 for failure to designate a trustee eligible to act under subsection \(a\) of section 310 if, in accordance with such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the Commission, the issuer of such securities files an application for the purpose of determining such trustee's eligibility under subsection (a) of section 310. The Commission shall issue an order prior to the effective date of such application refusing to permit the application to become effective, if it finds that any person designated as trustee under such indenture is not eligible to act as such under subsection \(a\) of section 310, but no order shall be issued except after notice and opportunity for hearing within the periods and in the manner required with respect to refusal orders pursuant to section 8(b) of the Securities Act of 1933. If after notice and opportunity for hearing the Commission issues an order under this provision, the obligor shall within 5 calendar days appoint a trustee meeting the requirements of subsection (a) of section 310. No such appointment shall be effective and such refusal order shall be rescinded by the Commission until a person eligible to act as trustee under subsection (a) of section 310 has been appointed. If no order is issued, an application filed pursuant to this paragraph shall be effective the tenth day after filing thereof or such earlier date as the Commission may determine, having due regard to the adequacy of information provided therein, the public interest, and the protection of investors.

(c) A prospectus relating to any such security shall include to the extent the Commission may prescribe by rules and regulations as necessary and appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, as though such inclusion were required by section 10 of the Securities Act of 1933, a written statement containing the analysis set forth in the registration statement, of any indenture provisions with respect to the matters specified in paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of this section, together with a supplementary analysis, prepared by the Commission, of such provisions and of the effect thereof, if, in the opinion of the Commission, the inclusion of such supplementary analysis is necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, and the Commission so declares by order after notice and, if demanded by the issuer, opportunity for hearing thereon. Such order shall be entered prior to the effective date of registration, except that if opportunity for hearing thereon is demanded by the issuer such order shall be entered within a reasonable time after such opportunity for hearing.

(d) The provisions of sections 11, 12, 17, and 24 of the Securities Act of 1933, and the provisions of sections 323 and 325 of this title, shall not apply to statements in or omissions from any analysis required under the provisions of this section or section 306 or 307.

Section 306 Securities Not Registered Under Securities Act

(a) In the case of any security which is not registered under the Securities Act of 1933 and to which this subsection is applicable notwithstanding the provisions of section 304, unless such security has been or is to be issued under an indenture and an application for qualification is effective as to such indenture, it shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly -

- (1) to make use of any means or instruments of transportation or communication in interstate commerce or of the mails to sell such security through the use or medium of any prospectus or otherwise; or
- (2) to carry or cause to be carried through the mails or in interstate commerce, by any means or instruments of transportation, any such security for the purpose of sale or for delivery after sale.

(b) In case of any security which is not registered under the Securities Act of 1933, but which has been or is to be issued under an indenture as to which an application for qualification is effective, it shall be unlawful for any person, directly, or indirectly -

- (1) to make use of any means or instruments of transportation or communication in interstate commerce or of the mails to carry or transmit any prospectus relating to any such security, unless such prospectus, to the extent the Commission may prescribe by rules and regulations as necessary and appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, includes or is accompanied by a written statement that contains the information specified in subsection \(c\) of section 305; or
- (2) to carry or to cause to be carried through the mails or interstate commerce any such security for the purpose of sale or for delivery after sale, unless, to the extent the Commission may prescribe by rules and regulations as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, accompanied or preceded by a written statement that contains the information specified in subsection \(c\) of section 305.

(c) It shall be unlawful for any person, directly or indirectly, to make use of any means or instruments of transportation or communication in interstate commerce or of the mails to offer to sell through the use or medium of any prospectus or otherwise any security which is not registered under the Securities Act of 1933 and to which this subsection is applicable notwithstanding the provisions of section 304, unless such security has been or is to be issued under an indenture and an application for qualification has been filed as to such indenture, or while the application is the subject of a refusal order or stop order or (prior to qualification) any public proceeding or examination under section 307\(c\).

Section 307 Qualification of Indentures Covering Securities Not Required to be Registered

(a) In the case of any security which is not required to be registered under the Securities Act of 1933 and to which subsection \(a\) of section 306 is applicable notwithstanding the provisions of section 304, an application for qualification of the indenture under which such security has been or is to be issued shall be filed with the Commission by the issuer of such security. Each such application shall be in such form, and shall be signed in such manner, as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors. Each such application shall include the information and documents required by subsection \(a\) of section 305. The information and documents required by paragraph (1) of such subsection with respect to the person designated to act as indenture trustee shall be contained in a separate part of such application, which part shall be signed by such person. Each such application shall also include such of the other information and documents which would be required to be filed in order to register such indenture security under the Securities Act of 1933 as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe as necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors. An application may be withdrawn by the applicant at any time prior to the effective date thereof. Subject to the provisions of section 321, the information and documents contained in or filed with any application shall be made available to the public under such regulations as the Commission may prescribe, and copies thereof, photostatic or otherwise, shall be furnished to every applicant therefore at such reasonable charge as the Commission may prescribe.

(b) The filing with the Commission of an application, or of an amendment to an application, shall be deemed to have taken place upon the receipt thereof by the Commission, but, in the case of an application, only if it is accompanied or preceded by payment to the Commissioner of a filing fee in the amount of $100, such payment to be made in cash or by United States postal money order or certified or bank check, or in such other medium of payment as the Commission may authorize by rule and regulation.

(c) The provisions of section 8 of the Securities Act of 1933 and the provisions of subsection \(b\) of section 305 of this title shall apply with respect to every such application, as though such application were a registration statement filed pursuant to the provisions of such Act.

Section 308 Integration of Procedure With Securities Act and Other Acts

(a) The Commission, by such rules and regulations or orders as it deems necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, shall authorize the filing of any information or documents required to be filed with the Commission under this title, or under the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, by incorporating by reference any information or documents on file with the Commission under this title or under any such Act.

(b) The Commission, by such rules and regulations or orders as it deems necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, shall provide for the consolidation of applications, reports, and proceedings under this title with registration statements, applications, reports, and proceedings under the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935.

Section 309 When Qualification Becomes Effective: Effect of Qualification

(a) The indenture under which a security has been or is to be issued shall be deemed to have been qualified under this title -

(1) when registration becomes effective as to such security; or

(2) when an application for the qualification of such indenture becomes effective, pursuant to section 307.

(b) After qualification has become effective as to the indenture under which a security has been or is to be issued, no stop order shall be issued pursuant to section 8(d) of the Securities Act of 1933, suspending the effectiveness of the registration statement relating to such security or of the application for qualification of such indenture, except on one or more of the grounds specified in section 8 of such Act, or the failure of the issuer to file an application as provided for by section 305\(b\)\(2\).

(c) The making, amendment, or rescission of a rule, regulation, or order under the provisions of this title (except to the extent authorized by subsection \(a\) of section 314 with respect to rules and regulations prescribed pursuant to such subsection) shall not affect the qualification, form, or interpretation of any indenture as to which qualification became effective prior to the making, amendment, or rescission of such rule, regulation, or order.

(d) No trustee under an indenture which has been qualified under this title shall be subject to any liability because of any failure of such indenture to comply with any of the provisions of this title, or any rule, regulation, or order thereunder.

(e) Nothing in this title shall be construed as empowering the Commission to conduct an investigation or other proceeding for the purpose of determining whether the provisions of an indenture which has been qualified under this title are being complied with, or to enforce such provisions.

Section 310 Eligibility and Disqualification of Trustee

(a) Persons Eligible for Appointment as Trustee

(1) There shall at all times be one or more trustees under every indenture qualified or to be qualified pursuant to this title, at least one of whom shall at all times be a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the United States or of any State or Territory or of the District of Columbia or a corporation or other person permitted to act as trustee by the Commission (referred to in this title as the institutional trustee), which -

(A) is authorized under such laws to exercise corporate trust powers, and

(B) is subject to supervision or examination by Federal, State, Territorial, or District of Columbia authority.

The Commission may, pursuant to such rules and regulations as it may prescribe, or by order on application, permit a corporation or other person organized and doing business under the laws of a foreign government to act as sole trustee under an indenture qualified or to be qualified pursuant to this title, if such corporation or other person -

(A) is authorized under such laws to exercise corporate trust powers, and

(B) is subject to supervision or examination by authority of such foreign government or a political subdivision thereof substantially equivalent to supervision or examination applicable to United States institutional trustees.

In prescribing such rules and regulations or making such order, the Commission shall consider whether under such laws, a United States institutional trustee is eligible to act as sole trustee under an indenture relating to securities sold within the jurisdiction of such foreign government.

(2) Such institution* trustee shall have at all times a combined capital and surplus of a specified minimum amount, which shall not be less than $150,000. If such institutional trustee publishes reports of condition at least annually, pursuant to law or to the requirements of said supervising or examining authority, the indenture may provide that, for the purposes of this paragraph, the combined capital and surplus of such trustee shall be deemed to be its combined capital and surplus as set forth in its most recent report of condition so published.

(3) If the indenture to be qualified requires or permits the appointment of one or more co-trustees in addition to such institutional trustee, the rights, powers, duties, and obligations conferred or imposed upon the trustees or any of them shall be conferred or imposed upon and exercised or performed by such institutional trustee, or such institutional trustee and such co-trustees jointly, except to the extent that under any law of any jurisdiction in which any particular act or acts are to be performed, such institutional trustee shall be incompetent or unqualified to perform such act or acts, in which event such rights, powers, duties and obligations shall be exercised and performed by such co-trustees.

(4) In the case of certificates of interest or participation, the indenture trustee or trustees shall have the legal power to exercise all of the rights, powers, and privileges of a holder of the security or securities in which such certificates evidence an interest or participation.

(5) No obligor upon the indenture securities or person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such obligor shall serve as trustee upon such indenture securities.

(b) Disqualification of Trustee. If any indenture trustee has or shall acquire any conflicting interest as hereinafter defined -

(i) then, within 90 days after ascertaining that it has such conflicting interest, and if the default (as defined in the next sentence) to which such conflicting interest relates has not been cured or duly waived or otherwise eliminated before the end of such 90-day period, such trustee shall either eliminate such conflicting interest or, except as otherwise provided below in this subsection, resign, and the obligor upon the indenture securities shall take prompt steps to have a successor appointed in the manner provided in the indenture;

(ii) in the event that such trustee shall fail to comply with the provisions of clause (i) of this subsection, such trustee shall, within 10 days after the expiration of such 90-day period, transmit notice of such failure to the indenture security holders in the manner and to the extent provided in subsection \(c\) of section 313; and

(iii) subject to the provisions of subsection \(e\) of section 315, unless such trustee's duty to resign is stayed as provided below in this subsection, any security holder who has been a bona fide holder of indenture securities for at least six months may, on behalf of himself and all others similarly situated, petition any court of competent jurisdiction for the removal of such trustee, and the appointment of a successor, if such trustee fails, after written request thereof by such holder to comply with the provisions of clause (i) of this subsection.

For the purposes of this subsection, an indenture trustee shall be deemed to have a conflicting interest if the indenture securities are in default (as such term is defined in such indenture, but exclusive of any period of grace or requirement of notice) and -

(1) such trustee is trustee under another indenture under which any other securities, or certificates of interest or participation in any other securities, of an obligor upon the indenture securities are outstanding or is trustee for more than one outstanding series of securities, as hereafter defined, under a single indenture of an obligor, unless -

(A) the indenture securities are collateral trust notes under which the only collateral consists of securities issued under such other indenture,

(B) such other indenture is a collateral trust indenture under which the only collateral consists of indenture securities, or

(C) such obligor has no substantial unmortgaged assets and is engaged primarily in the business of owning, or of owning and developing and/or operating, real estate, and the indenture to be qualified and such other indenture are secured by wholly separate and distinct parcels of real estate:

Provided, That the indenture to be qualified shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that such provision is excluded) to contain a provision excluding from the operation of this paragraph other series under such indenture, and any other indenture or indentures under which other securities, or certificates of interest or participation in other securities, of such an obligor are outstanding, if -

(i) the indenture to be qualified and any such other indenture or indentures (and all series of securities issuable thereunder) are wholly unsecured and rank equally, and such other indenture or indentures (and such series) are specifically described in the indenture to be qualified or are thereafter qualified under this title, unless the Commission shall have found and declared by order pursuant to subsection \(b\) of section 305 or subsection \(c\) of section 307 that differences exist between the provisions of the indenture (or such series) to be qualified and the provisions of such other indenture or indentures (or such series) which are so likely to involve a material conflict of interest as to make it necessary in the public interest or for the protection of investors to disqualify such trustee from acting as such under one of such indentures, or

(ii) the issuer shall have sustained the burden of proving, on application to the Commission and after opportunity for hearing thereon, that trusteeship under the indenture to be qualified and such other indenture or under more than one outstanding series under a single indenture is not so likely to involve a material conflict of interest as to make it necessary in the public interest or for the protection of investors to disqualify such trustee from acting as such under one of such indentures or with respect to such series;

(2) such trustee or any of its directors or executive officers is an underwriter for an obligor upon the indenture securities;

(3) such trustee directly or indirectly controls or is directly or indirectly controlled by or is under direct or indirect common control with an underwriter for an obligor upon the indenture securities;

(4) such trustee or any of its directors or executive officers is a director, officer, partner, employee, appointee, or representative of an obligor upon the indenture securities, or of an underwriter (other than the trustee itself) for such an obligor who is currently engaged in the business of underwriting, except that -

(A) one individual may be a director and/or an executive officer of the trustee and a director and/or an executive officer of such obligor, but may not be at the same time an executive officer of both the trustee and of such obligor,

(B) if and so long as the number of directors of the trustee in office is more than nine, one additional individual may be a director and/or an executive officer of the trustee and a director of such obligor, and

(C) such trustee may be designated by any such obligor or by any underwriter for any such obligor, to act in the capacity of transfer agent, registrar, custodian, paying agent, fiscal agent, escrow agent, or depository, or in any other similar capacity, or, subject to the provisions of paragraph (1) of this subsection, to act as trustee, whether under an indenture or otherwise;

(5) 10 per centum or more of the voting securities of such trustee is beneficially owned either by an obligor upon the indenture securities or by any director, partner or executive officer thereof, or 20 per centum or more of such voting securities is beneficially owned, collectively by any two or more of such persons; or 10 per centum or more of the voting securities of such trustee is beneficially owned either by an underwriter for any such obligor or by any director, partner, or executive officer thereof, or is beneficially owned, collectively, by any two or more such persons;

(6) such trustee is the beneficial owner of, or holds as collateral security for an obligation which is in default as hereinafter defined -

(A) 5 per centum or more of the voting securities, or 10 per centum or more of any other class of security, of an obligor upon the indenture securities, not including indentures securities and securities issued under any other indenture under which such trustee is also trustee, or

(B) 10 per centum or more of any class of security of an underwriter for any such obligor;

(7) such trustee is the beneficial owner of, or holds as collateral security for an obligation which is in default as hereafter defined, 5 per centum or more of the voting securities of any person who, to the knowledge of the trustee, owns 10 per centum or more of the voting securities of, or controls directly or indirectly or is under direct or indirect common control with, an obligor upon the indenture securities;

(8) such trustee is the beneficial owner of, or holds as collateral security for an obligation which is in default as hereinafter defined, 10 per centum or more of any class of security of any person who, to the knowledge of the trustee, owns 50 per centum or more of the voting securities of an obligor upon the indenture securities;

(9) such trustee owns, on the date of default upon the indenture securities (as such term is defined in such indenture but exclusive of any period of grace or requirement of notice) or any anniversary of such default while such default upon the indenture securities remains outstanding, in the capacity of executor, administrator, testamentary or inter vivos trustee, guardian, committee or conservator, or in any other similar capacity, an aggregate of 25 per centum or more of the voting securities, or of any class of security, of any person, the beneficial ownership of a specified percentage of which would have constituted a conflicting interest under paragraph (6), (7), or (8) of this subsection. As to any such securities of which the indenture trustee acquired ownership through becoming executor, administrator or testamentary trustee of an estate which include them, the provisions of the preceding sentence shall not apply for a period of not more than 2 years from the date of such acquisition, to the extent that such securities included in such estate do not exceed 25 per centum of such voting securities or 25 per centum of any such class of security. Promptly after the dates of any such default upon the indenture securities and annually in each succeeding year that the indenture securities remain in default the trustee shall make a check of its holding of such securities in any of the above-mentioned capacities as of such dates. If the obligor upon the indenture securities fails to make payment in full of principal or interest under such indenture when and as the same becomes due and payable, and such failure continues for 30 days thereafter, the trustee shall make a prompt check of its holdings of such securities in any of the above-mentioned capacities as of the date of the expiration of such 30-day period, and after such date, notwithstanding the foregoing provisions of this paragraph, all such securities so held by the trustee, with sole or joint control over such securities vested in it, shall be considered as though beneficially owned by such trustee, for the purposes of paragraphs (6), (7), and (8) of this subsection; or

(10) except under the circumstances described in paragraphs (1), (3), (4), (5) or (6) of section 311\(b\) of this title, the trustee shall be or shall become a creditor of the obligor.

For purposes of paragraph (1) of this subsection, and of section 316\(a\) of this title, the term "series of securities" or "series" means a series, class or group of securities issuable under an indenture pursuant to whose terms holders of one such series may vote to direct the indenture trustee, or otherwise take action pursuant to a vote of such holders, separately from holders of another such series:

Provided, That "series of securities" or "series" shall not include any series of securities issuable under an indenture if all such series rank equally and are wholly unsecured.

The specification of percentages in paragraphs (5) to (9), inclusive, of this subsection shall not be construed as indicating that the ownership of such percentages of the securities of a person is or is not necessary or sufficient to constitute direct or indirect control for the purposes of paragraph (3) or (7) of this subsection.

For the purposes of paragraphs (6), (7), (8), and (9) of this subsection -

(A) the terms "security" and "securities" shall include only such securities as are generally known as corporate securities, but shall not include any note or other evidence of indebtedness issued to evidence an obligation to repay moneys lent to a person by one or more banks, trust companies, or banking firms, or any certificate of interest or participation in any such note or evidence of indebtedness;

(B) an obligation shall be deemed to be in default when a default in payment of principal shall have continued for thirty days or more, and shall not have been cured; and

(C) the indenture trustee shall not be deemed the owner or holder of -

(i) any security which it holds as collateral security (as trustee or otherwise) for any obligation which is not in default as above defined, or

(ii) any security which it holds as collateral security under the indenture to be qualified, irrespective of any default thereunder, or

(iii) any security which it holds as agent for collection, or as custodian, escrow agent or depository, or in any similar representative capacity.

For the purposes of this subsection, the term "underwriter" when used with reference to an obligor upon the indenture securities means every person who, within one year prior to the time as of which the determination is made, was an underwriter of any security of such obligor outstanding at the time of the determination.

Except in the case of a default in the payment of the principal of or interest on any indenture security, or in the payment of any sinking or purchase fund installment, the indenture trustee shall not be required to resign as provided by this subsection if such trustee shall have sustained the burden of proving, on application to the Commission and after opportunity for hearing thereon, that -

(i) the default under the indenture may be cured or waived during a reasonable period and under the procedures described in such application, and

(ii) a stay of the trustee's duty to resign will not be inconsistent with the interests of holders of the indenture securities. The filing of such an application shall automatically stay the performance of the duty to resign until the Commission orders otherwise.

Any resignation of an indenture trustee shall become effective only upon the appointment of a successor trustee and such successor's acceptance of such an appointment.

(c) Applicability of Section. The Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 shall not be held to establish or authorize the establishment of any standards regarding the eligibility and qualifications of any trustee or prospective trustee under an indenture to be qualified under this title, or regarding the provisions to be included in any such indenture with respect to the eligibility and qualifications of the trustee thereunder, other than those established by the provisions of this section.

Section 311 Preferential Collection of Claims Against Obligor

(a) Subject to the provisions of subsection \(b\) of this section, if the indenture trustee shall be, or shall become, a creditor, directly or indirectly, secured or unsecured, of an obligor upon the indenture securities, within three months prior to a default as defined in the last paragraph of this subsection, or subsequent to such a default, then, unless and until such a default shall be cured, such trustee shall set apart and hold in a special account for the benefit of the trustee individually and the indenture security holders -

(1) an amount equal to any and all reductions in the amount due and owing upon any claim as such creditor in respect of principal or interest, effected after the beginning of such three months' period and valid as against such obligor and its other creditors, except any such reduction resulting from the receipt or disposition of any property described in paragraph (2) of this subsection, or from the exercise of any right of set-off which the trustee could have exercised if a petition in bankruptcy had been filed by or against such obligor upon the date of such default; and

(2) all property received in respect of any claim as such creditor, either as security therefore, or in satisfaction or composition thereof, or otherwise, after the beginning of such three months' period, or an amount equal to the proceeds of any such property, if disposed of, subject, however, to the rights, if any, of such obligor and its other creditors in such property or such proceeds.

Nothing herein contained shall affect the right of the indenture trustee -

(A) to retain for its own account -

- (i) payments made on account of any such claim by any person (other than such obligor) who is liable thereon, and
- (ii) the proceeds of the bona fide sale of any such claim by the trustee to a third person, and
- (iii) distributions made in cash, securities, or other property in respect of claims filed against such obligor in bankruptcy or receivership or in proceedings for reorganization pursuant to the Bankruptcy Act or applicable State law;

(B) to realize, for its own account, upon any property held by it as security for any such claim, if such property was so held prior to the beginning of such three months' period;

(C) to realize, for its own account, but only to the extent of the claim hereinafter mentioned, upon any property held by it as security for any such claim, if such claim was created after the beginning of such three months' period and such property period was received as security therefor simultaneously with the creation thereof, and if the trustee shall sustain the burden of proving that at the time such property was so received the trustee had no reasonable cause to believe that a default as defined in the last paragraph of this subsection would occur within three months; or

(D) to receive payment on any claim referred to in paragraph (B) or (C), against the release of any property held as security for such claim as provided in paragraph (B) or (C), as the case may be, to the extent of the fair value of such property.

For the purposes of paragraphs (B), (C), and (D), property substituted after the beginning of such three months' period for property held as security at the time of such substitution shall, to the extent of the fair value of the property released, have the same status as the property released, and, to the extent that any claim referred to in any of such paragraphs is created in renewal of or in substitution for or for the purpose of repaying or refunding any preexisting claim of the indenture trustee as such creditor, such claim shall have the same status as such preexisting claim.

If the trustee shall be required to account, the funds and property held in such special account and the proceeds thereof shall be apportioned between the trustee and the indenture security holders in such manner that the trustee and the indenture security holders realize, as a result of payments from such special account and payments of dividends on claims filed against such obligor in bankruptcy or receivership or in proceedings for reorganization pursuant to the Bankruptcy Act or applicable State law, the same percentage of their respective claims, figured before crediting to the claim of the trustee anything on account of the receipt by it from such obligor of the funds and property in such special account and before crediting to the respective claims of the trustee and the indenture security holders dividends on claims filed against such obligor in bankruptcy or receivership or in proceedings for reorganization pursuant to the Bankruptcy Act or applicable State law, but after crediting thereon receipts on account of the indebtedness represented by their respective claims from all sources other than from such dividends and from the funds and property so held in such special account. As used in this paragraph, with respect to any claim, the term "dividends" shall include any distribution with respect to such claim, in bankruptcy or receivership or in proceedings for reorganization pursuant to the Bankruptcy Act or applicable State law, whether such distribution is made in cash, securities, or other property, but shall not include any such distribution with respect to the secured portion, if any, of such claim. The court in which such bankruptcy, receivership, or proceeding for reorganization is pending shall have jurisdiction -

- (i) to apportion between the indenture trustee and the indenture security holders, in accordance with the provisions of this paragraph, the funds and property held in such special account and the proceeds thereof, or
- (ii) in lieu of such apportionment, in whole or in part, to give to the provisions of this paragraph due consideration in determining the fairness of the distributions to be made to the indenture trustee and the indenture security holders with respect to their respective claims, in which event it shall not be necessary to liquidate or to appraise the value of any securities or other property held in such special account or as security for any such claim, or to make a specific allocation of such distributions as between the secured and unsecured portions of such claims, or otherwise to apply the provisions of this paragraph as a mathematical formula.

Any indenture trustee who has resigned or been removed after the beginning of such three months' period shall be subject to the provisions of this subsection as though such resignation or removal had not occurred. Any indenture trustee who has resigned or been removed prior to the beginning of such three months' period shall be subject to the provisions of this subsection if and only if the following conditions exist -

- (i) the receipt of property or reduction of claim which would have given rise to the obligation to account, if such indenture trustee had continued as trustee, occurred after the beginning of such three months' period; and
- (ii) such receipt of property or reduction of claim occurred within three months after such resignation or removal.

As used in this subsection, the term "default" means any failure to make payment in full of principal or interest, when and as the same becomes due and payable, under any indenture which has been qualified under this title, and under which the indenture trustee is trustee and the person of whom the indenture trustee is directly or indirectly a creditor is an obligor; and the term "indenture security holder" means all holders of securities outstanding under any such indenture under which any such default exists. In any case commenced under the Bankruptcy Act of July 1, 1898, or any amendment thereto enacted prior to November 6, 1978, all references to periods of three months shall be deemed to be references to periods of four months.

(b) The indenture to be qualified shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that any such provision is excluded) to contain provisions excluding from the operation of subsection (a) of this section a creditor relationship arising from -

- (1) the ownership or acquisition of securities issued under any indenture, or any security or securities having a maturity of one year or more at the time of acquisition by the indenture trustee;
- (2) advances authorized by a receivership or bankruptcy court of competent jurisdiction, or by the indenture, for the purpose of preserving the property subject to the lien of the indenture or of discharging tax liens or other prior liens or encumbrances on the trust estate, if notice of such advance and of the circumstances surrounding the making thereof is given to the indenture security holders at the time and in the manner provided in the indenture;

- (3) disbursements made in the ordinary course of business in the capacity of trustee under an indenture, transfer agent, registrar, custodian, paying agent, fiscal agent or depository, or other similar capacity.
- (4) an indebtedness created as a result of services rendered or premises rented; or an indebtedness created as a result of goods or securities sold in a cash transaction as defined in the indenture;
- (5) the ownership of stock or of other securities of a corporation organized under the provisions of section 25(a) of the Federal Reserve Act, as amended, which is directly or indirectly a creditor of an obligor upon the indenture securities; or
- (6) the acquisition, ownership, acceptance, or negotiation of any drafts, bills of exchange, acceptances, or obligations which fall within the classification of self-liquidating paper as defined in the indenture.

(c) In the exercise by the Commission of any jurisdiction under the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935 regarding the issue or sale, by any registered holding company or a subsidiary company thereof, of any security of such issuer or seller or of any other company to a person which is trustee under an indenture or indentures of such issuer or seller or other company, or of a subsidiary or associate company or affiliate of such issuer or seller or other company (whether or not such indenture or indentures are qualified or to be qualified under this title), the fact that such trustee will thereby become a creditor, directly or indirectly, of any of the foregoing shall not constitute a ground for the Commission taking adverse action with respect to any application or declaration, or limiting the scope of any rule or regulation which would otherwise permit such transaction to take effect; but in any case in which such trustee is trustee under an indenture of the company of which it will thereby become a creditor, or of any subsidiary company thereof, this subsection shall not prevent the Commission from requiring (if such requirement would be authorized under the provisions of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935) that such trustee, as such, shall effectively and irrevocably agree in writing, for the benefit of the holders from time to time of the securities from time to time outstanding under such indenture, to be bound by the provisions of this section, subsection \(c\) of section 315, and, in case of default (as such term is defined in such indenture), subsection \(d\) of section 315, as fully as though such provisions were included in such indenture. For the purposes of this subsection the terms "registered holding company", "subsidiary company", "associate company", and "affiliate" shall have the respective meanings assigned to such terms in section 2(a) of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935.

Section 312 Bondholders Lists

(a) Each obligor upon the indenture securities shall furnish or cause to be furnished to the institutional trustee thereunder at stated intervals of not more than six months, and at such other times as such trustee may request in writing, all information in the possession or control of such obligor, or of any of its paying agents, as to the names and addresses of the indenture security holders, and requiring such trustee to preserve, in as current a form as is reasonably practicable, all such information so furnished to it or received by it in the capacity of paying agent.

(b) Within five business days after the receipt by the institutional trustee of a written application by any three or more indenture holders stating that the applicants desire to communicate with other indenture security holders with respect to their rights under such indenture or under the indenture securities, and accompanied by a copy of the form of proxy or other communication which such applicants propose to transmit, and by reasonable proof that each such applicant has owned an indenture security for a period of at least six months preceding the date of such application, such institutional trustee shall, at its election, either -

- (1) afford to such applicants access to all information so furnished to or received by such trustee; or
- (2) inform such applicants as to the approximate number of indenture security holders according to the most recent information so furnished to or received by such trustee, and as to the approximate cost of mailing to such indenture security holders the form of proxy or other communication, if any, specified in such application.

If such trustee shall elect not to afford to such applicants access to such information, such trustee shall, upon the written request of such applicants, mail to all such indenture security holders copies of the form of proxy or other communication which is specified in such request, with reasonable promptness after a tender to such trustee of the material to be mailed and of payment, or provision for the payment, of the reasonable expenses of such mailing, unless within five days after such tender, such trustee shall mail to such applicants, and file with the Commission together with a copy of the material to be mailed, a written statement to the effect that, in the opinion of such trustee, such mailing would be contrary to the best interests of the indenture security holders or would be in violation of applicable law. Such written statement shall specify the basis of such opinion. After opportunity for hearing upon the objections specified in the written statement so filed, the Commission may, and if demanded by such trustee or by such applicants shall, enter an order either sustaining one or more of such objections or refusing to sustain any of them. If the Commission shall enter an order refusing to sustain any of such objections, or if, after the entry of an order sustaining one or more of such objections, the Commission shall find, after notice and opportunity for hearing, that all objections so sustained have been met, and shall enter an order so declaring, such trustee shall mail copies of such material to all such indenture security holders with reasonable promptness after the entry of such order and the renewal of such tender.

(c) The disclosure of any such information as to the names and addresses of the indenture security holders in accordance with the provisions of this section, regardless of the source from which such information was derived, shall not be deemed to be a violation of any existing law, or of any law hereafter enacted which does not specifically refer to this section, nor shall such trustee be held accountable by reason of mailing any material pursuant to a request made under subsection (b) of this section.

Section 313 Reports by Indenture Trustee

(a) The indenture trustee shall transmit to the indenture security holders as hereinafter provided, at stated intervals of not more than 12 months, a brief report with respect to any of the following events which may have occurred within the previous 12 months (but if no such event has occurred within such period no report need be transmitted):

- (1) any change to its eligibility and its qualifications under section 310;
- (2) the creation of or any material change to a relationship specified in paragraph \(1\) through \(10\) of section 310\(b\);
- (3) the character and amount of any advances made by it, as indenture trustee, which remain unpaid on the date of such report, and for the reimbursement of which it claims or may claim a lien or charge, prior to that of the indenture securities, on the trust estate or on property or funds held or collected by it as such trustee, if such advances so remaining unpaid aggregate more than one-half of 1 per centum of the principal amount of the indenture securities outstanding on such date;
- (4) the amount, interest rate, and maturity date of all other indebtedness owing to it in its individual capacity, on the date of such report, by the obligor upon the indenture securities, with a brief description of any property held as collateral security therefor, except an indebtedness based upon a creditor relationship arising in any manner described in paragraphs \(2\), \(3\), \(4\), or \(6\) of subsection \(b\) of section 311;
- (5) any change to the property and funds physically in its possession as indenture trustee on the date of such report;
- (6) any change to any release, or release and substitution, of property subject to the lien of the indenture (and the consideration therefor, if any) which it has not previously reported;
- (7) any additional issue of indenture securities which it has not previously reported; and
- (8) any action taken by it in the performance of its duties under the indenture which it has not previously reported and which in its opinion materially affects the indenture securities or the trust estate, except action in respect of a default, notice of which has been or is to be withheld by it in accordance with an indenture provision authorized by subsection \(b\) of section 315.

(b) The indenture trustee shall transmit to the indenture security holders as hereinafter provided, within the times hereinafter specified, a brief report with respect to -

- (1) the release, or release and substitution, of property subject to the lien of the indenture (and the consideration therefor, if any) unless the fair value of such property, as set forth in the certificate or opinion required by paragraph \(1\) of subsection \(d\) of section 314, is less than 10 per centum of the principal amount of indenture securities outstanding at the time of such release, or such release and substitution, such report to be so transmitted within 90 days after such time; and
- (2) the character and amount of any advances made by it as such since the date of the last report transmitted pursuant to the provisions of subsection (a) (or if no such report has yet been so transmitted, since the date of execution of the indenture), for the reimbursement of which it claims or may claim a lien or charge, prior to that of the indenture securities, on the trust estate or on property or funds held or collected by it as such trustee, and which it has not previously reported pursuant to this paragraph, if such advances remaining unpaid at any time aggregate more than 10 per centum of the principal amount of indenture securities outstanding at such time, such report to be so transmitted within 90 days after such time.

(c) Reports pursuant to this section shall be transmitted by mail -

- (1) to all registered holders of indenture securities, as the names and addresses of such holders appear upon the registration books of the obligor upon the indenture securities;
- (2) to such holders of indenture securities as have, within the two years preceding such transmission, filed their names and addresses with the indenture trustee for that purpose; and
- (3) except in the case of reports pursuant to subsection (b) of this section, to all holders of indenture securities whose names and addresses have been furnished to or received by the indenture trustee pursuant to section 312.

(d) A copy of each such report shall, at the time of such transmission to indenture security holders, be filed with each stock exchange upon which the indenture securities are listed, and also with the Commission.

Section 314 Reports by Obligor: Evidence of Compliance With Indenture Provisions

(a) Periodic Reports. Each person who, as set forth in the registration statement or application, is or is to be an obligor upon the indenture securities covered thereby shall -

- (1) file with the indenture trustee copies of the annual reports and of the information, documents, and other reports (or copies of such portions of any of the foregoing as the Commission may by rules and regulations prescribe) which such obligor is required to file with the Commission pursuant to section 13 or section 15(d) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; or, if the obligor is not required to file information, documents, or reports pursuant to either of such sections, then to file with the indenture trustee and the Commission, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Commission, such of the supplementary and periodic information, documents, and reports which may be required pursuant to section 13 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, in respect of a security listed and registered on a national securities exchange as may be prescribed in such rules and regulations;

- (2) file with the indenture trustee and the Commission, in accordance with rules and regulations prescribed by the Commission, such additional information, documents, and reports with respect to compliance by such obligor with the conditions and covenants provided for in the indenture, as may be required by such rules and regulations, including, in the case of annual reports, if required by such rules and regulations, certificates or opinions of independent public accountants, conforming to the requirements of subsection (e) of this section, as to compliance with conditions or covenants, compliance with which is subject to verification by accountants, but no such certificate or opinion shall be required as to any matter specified in clauses (A), (B), or (C) of paragraph (3) of subsection (c);
- (3) transmit to the holders of the indenture securities upon which such person is an obligor, in the manner and to the extent provided in subsection \(c\) of section 313, such summaries of any information, documents, and reports required to be filed by such obligor pursuant to the provisions of paragraph (1) or (2) of this subsection as may be required by rules and regulations prescribed by the Commission; and
- (4) furnish to the indenture trustee, not less often than annually, a brief certificate from the principal executive officer, principal financial officer or principal accounting officer as to his or her knowledge of such obligor's compliance with all conditions and covenants under the indenture. For purposes of this paragraph, such compliance shall be determined without regard to any period of grace or requirement of notice provided under the indenture.

The rules and regulations prescribed under this subsection shall be such as are necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors, having due regard to the types of indentures, and the nature of business of the class of obligors affected thereby, and the amount of indenture securities outstanding under such indentures, and, in the case of any such rules and regulations prescribed after the indentures to which they apply have been qualified under this title, the additional expense, if any, of complying with such rules and regulations. Such rules and regulations may be prescribed either before or after qualification becomes effective as to any such indenture.

(b) Evidence of Recording Indenture. If the indenture to be qualified is or is to be secured by the mortgage or pledge of property, the obligor upon the indenture securities shall furnish to the indenture trustee -

- (1) promptly after the execution and delivery of the indenture, an opinion of counsel (who may be of counsel for such obligor) either stating that in the opinion of such counsel the indenture has been properly recorded and filed so as to make effective the lien intended to be created thereby, and reciting the details of such action, or stating that in the opinion of such counsel no such action is necessary to make such lien effective; and
- (2) at least annually after the execution and delivery of the indenture, an opinion of counsel (who may be of counsel for such obligor) either stating that in the opinion of such counsel such action has been taken with respect to the recording, filing, rerecording, and refiling of the indenture as is necessary to maintain the lien of such indenture, and reciting the details of such action, or stating that in the opinion of such counsel no such action is necessary to maintain such lien.

(c) Evidence of Compliance With Conditions Precedent. The obligor upon the indenture securities shall furnish to the indenture trustee evidence of compliance with the conditions precedent, if any, provided for in the indenture (including any covenants compliance with which constitutes a condition precedent) which relate to the authentication and delivery of the indenture securities, to the release or the release and substitution of property subject to the lien of the indenture, to the satisfaction and discharge of the indenture, or to any other action to be taken by the indenture trustee at the request or upon the application of such obligor. Such evidence shall consist of the following:

- (1) certificates or opinions made by officers of such obligor who are specified in the indenture, stating that such conditions precedent have been complied with;
- (2) an opinion of counsel (who may be of counsel for such obligor) stating that in his opinion such conditions precedent have been complied with; and
- (3) in the case of conditions precedent compliance with which is subject to verification by accountants (such as conditions with respect to the preservation of specified ratios, the amount of net quick assets, negative-pledge clauses, and other similar specific conditions), a certificate or opinion of an accountant, who, in the case of any such conditions precedent to the authentication and delivery of indenture securities, and not otherwise, shall be an independent public accountant selected or approved by the indenture trustee in the exercise of reasonable care, if the aggregate principal amount of such indenture securities and of other indenture securities authenticated and delivered since the commencement of the then current calendar year (other than those with respect to which a certificate or opinion of an accountant is not required or with respect to which a certificate or opinion of an independent public accountant has previously been furnished) is 10 per centum or more of the aggregate amount of the indenture securities at the time outstanding; but no certificate or opinion need be made by any person other than an officer or employee of such obligor who is specified in the indenture, as to -
  - (A) dates or periods not covered by annual reports required to be filed by the obligor, in the case of conditions precedent which depend upon a state of facts as of a date or dates or for a period or periods different from that required to be covered by such annual reports, or
  - (B) the amount and value of property additions, except as provided in paragraph (3) of subsection (d), or (C) the adequacy of depreciation, maintenance, or repairs.

(d) Certificates of Fair Value. If the indenture to be qualified is or is to be secured by the mortgage or pledge of property or securities, the obligor upon the indenture securities shall furnish to the indenture trustee a certificate or opinion of an engineer, appraiser, or other expert as to the fair value -

- (1) of any property or securities to be released from the lien of the indenture, which certificate or opinion shall state that in the opinion of the person making the same the proposed release will not impair the security under such indenture in contravention of the provisions thereof, and requiring further that such certificate or opinion shall be made by an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert, if the fair value of such property or securities and of all other property or securities released since the commencement of the then current calendar year, as set forth in the certificates or opinions required by this paragraph, is 10 per centum or more of the aggregate principal amount of the indenture securities at the time outstanding; but such a certificate or opinion of an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert shall not be required in the case of any release of property or securities, if the fair value thereof as set forth in the certificate or opinion required by this paragraph is less than $25,000 or less than 1 per centum of the aggregate principal amount of the indenture securities at the time outstanding;

(2) to such obligor of any securities (other than indenture securities and securities secured by a lien prior to the lien of the indenture upon property subject to the lien of the indenture), the deposit of which with the trustee is to be made the basis for the authentication and delivery of indenture securities, the withdrawal of cash constituting a part of the trust estate or the release of property or securities subject to the lien of the indenture, and requiring further that if the fair value to such obligor of such securities and of all other such securities made the basis of any such authentication and delivery, withdrawal, or release since the commencement of the then current calendar year, as set forth in the certificates or opinions required by this paragraph, is 10 per centum or more of the aggregate principal amount of the indenture securities at the time outstanding, such certificate or opinion shall be made by an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert and, in the case of the authentication and delivery of indenture securities, shall cover the fair value to such obligor of all other such securities so deposited since the commencement of the current calendar year as to which a certificate or opinion of an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert has not previously been furnished; but such a certificate of an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert shall not be required with respect to any securities so deposited, if the fair value thereof to such obligor as set forth in the certificate or opinion required by this paragraph is less than $25,000 or less than 1 per centum of the aggregate principal amount of the indenture securities at the time outstanding; and

(3) to such obligor of any property the subjection of which to the lien of the indenture is to be made the basis for the authentication and delivery of indenture securities, the withdrawal of cash constituting a part of the trust estate, or the release of property or securities subject to the lien of the indenture, and requiring further that if

(A) within six months prior to the date of acquisition thereof by such obligor, such property has been used or operated, by a person or persons other than such obligor, in a business similar to that in which it has been or is to be used or operated by such obligor, and

(B) the fair value to such obligor of such property as set forth in such certificate or opinion is not less than $25,000 and not less than 1 per centum of the aggregate principal amount of the indenture securities at the time outstanding, such certificate or opinion shall be made by an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert and, in the case of the authentication and delivery of indenture securities, shall cover the fair value to the obligor of any property so used or operated which has been so subjected to the lien of the indenture since the commencement of the then current calendar year, and as to which a certificate or opinion of an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert has not previously been furnished.

The indenture to be qualified shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that such provision is excluded) to provide that any such certificate or opinion may be made by an officer or employee of the obligor upon the indenture securities who is duly authorized to make such certificate or opinion by the obligor from time to time, except in cases in which this subsection requires that such certificate or opinion be made by an independent person. In such cases, such certificate or opinion shall be made by an independent engineer, appraiser, or other expert selected or approved by the indenture trustee in the exercise of reasonable care.

(e) Recitals as to Basis of Certificate or Opinion. Each certificate or opinion with respect to compliance with a condition or covenant provided for in the indenture (other than certificates provided pursuant to subsection (a)(4) of this section) shall include -

- (1) a statement that the person making such certificate or opinion has read such covenant or condition;
- (2) a brief statement as to the nature and scope of the examination or investigation upon which the statements or opinions contained in such certificate or opinion are based;
- (3) a statement that, in the opinion of such person, he has made such examination or investigation as is necessary to enable him to express an informed opinion as to whether or not such covenant or condition has been complied with; and
- (4) a statement as to whether or not, in the opinion of such person, such condition or covenant has been complied with.

(f) Parties May Provide for Additional Evidence. Nothing in this section shall be construed either as requiring the inclusion in the indenture to be qualified of provisions that the obligor upon the indenture securities shall furnish to the indenture trustee any other evidence of compliance with the conditions and covenants provided for in the indenture than the evidence specified in this section, or as preventing the inclusion of such provisions in such indenture, if the parties so agree.

Section 315 Duties and Responsibility of the Trustee

(a) Duties Prior to Default. The indenture to be qualified shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that any such provision is excluded) to provide that, prior to default (as such term is defined in such indenture) -

- (1) the indenture trustee shall not be liable except for the performance of such duties as are specifically set out in such indenture; and
- (2) the indenture trustee may conclusively rely, as to the truth of the statements and the correctness of the opinions expressed therein, in the absence of bad faith on the part of such trustee, upon certificates or opinions conforming to the requirements of the indenture;

but the indenture trustee shall examine the evidence furnished to it pursuant to section 314 to determine whether or not such evidence conforms to the requirements of the indenture.

(b) Notice of Defaults. The indenture trustee shall give to the indenture security holders, in the manner and the extent provided in subsection \(c\) of

section 313, notice of all defaults known to the trustee, within ninety days after the occurrence thereof; Provided That such indenture shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that such provision is excluded) to provide that, except in the case of default in the payment of the principal of or interest on any indenture security, or in the payment of any sinking or purchase fund installment, the trustee shall be protected in withholding such notice if and so long as the board of directors, the executive committee, or a trust committee of directors and/or responsible officers, of the trustee in good faith determine that the withholding of such notice is in the interests of the indenture security holders.

(c) Duties of the Trustee in Case of Default. The indenture trustee shall exercise in case of default (as such term is defined in such indenture) such of the rights and powers vested in it by such indenture, and to use the same degree of care and skill in their exercise, as a prudent man would exercise or use under the circumstances in the conduct of his own affairs.

(d) Responsibility of the Trustee. The indenture to be qualified shall not contain any provisions relieving the indenture trustee from liability for its own negligent action, its own negligent failure to act, or its own willful misconduct, except that -

(1) such indenture shall automatically be deemed (unless it expressly provided therein that any such provision is excluded) to contain the provisions authorized by paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) of this section;

(2) such indenture shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that any such provision is excluded) to contain provisions protecting the indenture trustee from liability for any error of judgment made in good faith by a responsible officer or officers of such trustee, unless it shall be proved that such trustee was negligent in ascertaining the pertinent facts; and

(3) such indenture shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that any such provision is excluded) to contain provisions protecting the indenture trustee with respect to any action taken or omitted to be taken by it in good faith in accordance with the direction of the holders of not less than a majority in principal amount of the indenture securities at the time outstanding (determined as provided in subsection \(a\) of section 316) relating to the time, method, and place of conducting any proceeding for any remedy available to such trustee, or exercising any trust or power conferred upon such trustee, under such indenture.

(e) Undertaking for Costs. The indenture to be qualified shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that any such provision is excluded) to contain provisions to the effect that all parties thereto, including the indenture security holders, agree that the court may in its discretion require, in any suit for the enforcement of any right or remedy under such indenture, or in any suit against the trustee for any action taken or omitted by it as trustee, the filing by any party litigant in such suit of an undertaking to pay the costs of such suit, and that such court may in its discretion assess reasonable costs, including reasonable attorneys' fees, against any party litigant in such suit, having due regard to the merits and good faith of the claims or defenses made by such party litigant: Provided, That the provisions of this subsection shall not apply to any suit instituted by such trustee, to any suit instituted by any indenture security holder, or group of indenture security holders, holding in the aggregate more than 10 per centum in principal amount of the indenture securities outstanding, or to any suit instituted by any indenture security holder for the enforcement of the payment of the principal of or interest on any indenture security, on or after the respective due dates expressed in such indenture security.

Section 316 Direction and Waivers by Bondholders; Prohibition of Impairment of Holder's Right to Payment

(a) The indenture to be qualified -

(1) shall automatically be deemed (unless it is expressly provided therein that any such provision is excluded) to contain provisions authorizing the holders of not less than a majority in principal amount of the indenture securities or if expressly specified in such indenture, of any series of securities at the time outstanding -

(A) to direct the time, method, and place of conducting any proceeding for any remedy available to such trustee, or exercising any trust or power conferred upon such trustee, under such indenture, or

(B) on behalf of the holders of all such indenture securities, to consent to the waiver of any past default and its consequences; or

(2) may contain provisions authorizing the holders of not less than 75 per centum in principal amount of the indenture securities or if expressly specified in such indenture, of any series of securities at the time outstanding to consent on behalf of the holders of all such indenture securities to the postponement of any interest payment for a period not exceeding three years from its due date.

For the purposes of this subsection and paragraph \(3\) of subsection \(d\) of section 315, in determining whether the holders of the required principal amount of indenture securities have concurred in any such direction or consent, indenture securities owned by any obligor upon the indenture securities, or by any person directly or indirectly controlling or controlled by or under direct or indirect common control with any such obligor, shall be disregarded, except that for the purpose of determining whether the indenture trustee shall be protected in relying on any such direction or consent, only indenture securities which such trustee knows are so owned shall be so disregarded.

(b) Notwithstanding any other provision of the indenture to be qualified, the right of any holder of any indenture security to receive payment of the principal of and interest on such indenture security, on or after the respective due dates expressed in such indenture security, or to institute suit for the enforcement of any such payment on or after such respective dates, shall not be impaired or affected without the consent of such holder, except as to a postponement of an interest payment consented to as provided in paragraph (2) of subsection (a), and except that such indenture may contain provisions limiting or denying the right of any such holder to institute any such suit, if and to the extent that the institution or prosecution thereof or the entry of judgment therein would, under applicable law, result in the surrender, impairment, waiver, or loss of the lien of such indenture upon any property subject to such lien.

(c) The obligor upon any indenture qualified under this title may set a record date for purposes of determining the identity of indenture security holders entitled to vote or consent to any action by vote or consent authorized or permitted by subsection (a) of this section. Unless the indenture provides otherwise, such record date shall be the later of 30 days prior to the first solicitation of such consent or the date of the most recent list of holders furnished to the trustee pursuant to section 312 of this title prior to such solicitation.

Section 317 Special Powers of Trustee: Duties of Paying Agents

(a) The indenture trustee shall be authorized -

(1) in the case of a default in payment of the principal of any indenture security, when and as the same shall become due and payable, or in the case of a default in payment of the interest on any such security, when and as the same shall become due and payable and the continuance of such default for such period as may be prescribed in such indenture, to recover judgment, in its own name and as trustee of an express trust, against the obligor upon the indenture securities for the whole amount of such principal and interest remaining unpaid; and

(2) to file such proofs of claim and other papers or documents as may be necessary or advisable in order to have the claims of such trustee and of the indenture security holders allowed in any judicial proceedings relative to the obligor upon the indenture securities, its creditors, or its property.

(b) Each paying agent shall hold in trust for the benefit of the indenture security holders or the indenture trustee all sums held by such paying agent for the payment of the principal of or interest on the indenture securities, and shall give to such trustee notice of any default by an obligor upon the indenture securities in the making of any such payment.

Section 318 Effect of Prescribed Indenture Provisions

(a) if any provision of the indenture to be qualified limits, qualifies, or conflicts with the duties imposed by operation of subsection (c) of this section, the imposed duties shall control.

(b) The indenture to be qualified may contain, in addition to provision specifically authorized under this title to be included therein, any other provisions the inclusion of which is not in contravention of any provision of this title.

(c) The provisions of sections 310 to and including 317 that impose duties on any person (including provisions automatically deemed included in an indenture unless the indenture provides that such provisions are excluded) are a part of and govern every qualified indenture, whether or not physically contained therein, shall be deemed retroactively to govern each indenture heretofore qualified, and prospectively to govern each indenture hereafter qualified under this title and shall be deemed retroactively to amend and supersede inconsistent provisions in each such indenture heretofore qualified. The foregoing provisions of this subsection shall not be deemed to effect the inclusion (by retroactive amendment or otherwise) in the text of any indenture heretofore qualified of any of the optional provisions contemplated by section 310\(b\)\(1\), 311\(b\), 314\(d\), 315\(a\), 315\(b\), 315\(d\), 315\(e\), or 316\(a\)\(1\).

Section 319 Rules, Regulations, and Orders

(a) The Commission shall have authority from time to time to make, issue, amend, and rescind such rules and regulations and such orders as it may deem necessary or appropriate in the public interest or for the protection of investors to carry out the provisions of this title, including rules and regulations defining accounting, technical, and trade terms used in this title. Among other things, the Commission shall have authority -

(1) by rules and regulations, to prescribe for the purposes of section 310\(b\) the method (to be fixed in indentures to be qualified under this title) of calculating percentages of voting securities and other securities;

(2) by the rules and regulations, to prescribe the definitions of the terms "cash transaction" and "self-liquidating paper" which shall be included in indentures to be qualified under this title, which definitions shall include such of the creditor relationships referred to in paragraphs \(4\) and \(6\) of subsection \(b\) of section 311 as to which the Commission determines that the application of subsection (a) of such section is not necessary in the public interest or for the protection of investors, having due regard for the purposes of such subsection; and

(3) for the purposes of this title, to prescribe the form or forms in which information required in any statement, application, report, or other document filed with the Commission shall be set forth.

For the purpose of its rules or regulations the Commission may classify persons, securities, indentures, and other matters within its jurisdiction and prescribe different requirements for different classes of persons, securities, indentures, or matters.

(b) Subject to the provisions of the Federal Register Act and regulations prescribed under the authority thereof, the rules and regulations of the Commission under this title shall be effective upon publication in the manner which the Commission shall prescribe, or upon such later date as may be provided in such rules and regulations.

(c) No provision of this title imposing any liability shall apply to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any rule, regulation, or order of the Commission, notwithstanding that such rule, regulation, or order may, after such act or omission, be amended or rescinded or be determined by judicial or other authority to be invalid for any reason.

Section 321 Special Powers of the Commission

(a) For the purpose of any investigation or any other proceeding which, in the opinion of the Commission, is necessary and proper for the enforcement of this title, any member of the Commission, or any officer thereof designated by it, is empowered to administer oaths and affirmations, subpoena witnesses, compel their attendance, take evidence, and require the production of any books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, contracts, agreements, or other records which the Commission deems relevant or material to the inquiry. Such attendance of witnesses and the production of any such books, papers, correspondence, memoranda, contracts, agreements, or other records may be required from any place in the United States or in any Territory at any designated place of investigation or hearing. In addition, the Commission shall have the powers with respect to investigations and hearings, and with respect to the enforcement of, and offenses and violations under, this title and rules and regulations and orders prescribed under the authority thereof, provided in sections 20, 22(b), and 22(c) of the Securities Act of 1933.

(b) The Treasury Department, the Comptroller of the Currency, the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve system, the Federal Reserve Banks, and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation are hereby authorized, under such conditions as they may prescribe, to make available to the Commission such reports, records, or other information as they may have available with respect to trustees or prospective trustees under indentures qualified or to be qualified under this title, and to make through their examiners or other employees for the use of the Commission, examinations of such trustees or prospective trustees. Every such trustee or prospective trustee shall, as a condition precedent to qualification of such indenture, consent that reports of examinations by Federal, State, Territorial, or District authorities may be furnished by such authorities to the Commission upon request therefore.

Notwithstanding any provision of this title, no report, record, or other information made available to the Commission under this subsection, no report of an examination made under this subsection for the use of the Commission, no report of an examination made of any trustee or prospective trustee by any Federal, State, Territorial, or District authority having jurisdiction to examine or supervise such trustee, no report made by any such trustee or prospective trustee to any such authority, and no correspondence between any such authority and any such trustee or prospective trustee, shall be divulged or made known or available by the Commission or any member, officer, agent, or employee thereof, to any person other than a member, officer, agent, or employee of the Commission: Provided, That the Commission may make available to the Attorney General of the United States, in confidence, any information obtained from such records, reports of examination, other reports, or correspondence, and deemed necessary by the Commission, or requested by him, for the purpose of enabling him to perform his duties under this title.

(c) Any investigation of a prospective trustee, or any proceeding or requirement for the purpose of obtaining information regarding a prospective trustee, under any provision of this title, shall be limited -

(1) to determining whether such prospective trustee is qualified to act as trustee under the provisions of subsection (b) of section 310;

(2) to requiring the inclusion in the registration statement or application of information with respect to the eligibility of such prospective trustee under paragraph \(1\) of subsection \(a\) of such section 310; and statement or application of the most recent published report of condition of such prospective trustee, as described in paragraph \(2\) of such subsection \(a\), or, if the indenture does not contain the provision with respect to combined capital and surplus authorized by the last sentence of paragraph (2) of subsection (a) of such section 310, to determining whether such prospective trustee is eligible to act as such under such paragraph (2).

(d) The provisions of section 4(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 shall be applicable with respect to the power of the Commission -

(1) to appoint and fix the compensation of such employees as may be necessary for carrying out its functions under this title, and

(2) to lease and allocate such real property as may be necessary for carrying out its functions under this title.

Section 322 Court Review of Orders; Jurisdiction of Offenses and Suits

(a) Orders of the Commission under this title (including orders pursuant to the provisions of sections 305\(b\) and 307\(c\)) shall be subject to review in the same manner, upon the same conditions, and to the same extent, as provided in section 9 of the Securities Act of 1933, with respect to orders of the Commission under such Act.

(b) Jurisdiction of offenses and violations under, and jurisdiction and venue of suits and actions brought to enforce any liability or duty created by, this title, or any rules or regulations or orders prescribed under the authority thereof, shall be as provided in section 22(a) of the Securities Act of 1933.

No. 253; 53 Stat. 1175), effective August 3, 1939; as amended by section 418 of title IV of the Act of November 15, 1990 (Pub. L. No. 101-550; 104 Stat. 2732), effective November 15, 1990]

Section 323 Liability for Misleading Statements

(a) Any person who shall make or cause to be made any statement in any application, report, or document filed with the Commission pursuant to any provisions of this title, or any rule, regulation, or order thereunder, which statement was at the time and in the light of the circumstances under which it was made false or misleading with respect to any material fact, or who shall omit to state any material fact required to be stated therein or necessary to make the statements therein not misleading, shall be liable to any person (not knowing that such statement was false or misleading or of such omission) who, in reliance upon such statement or omission, shall have purchased or sold a security issued under the indenture to which such application, report, or document relates, for damages caused by such reliance, unless the person sued shall prove that he acted in good faith and had no knowledge that such statement was false or misleading or of such omission. A person seeking to enforce such liability may sue at law or in equity in any court of competent jurisdiction. In any such suit the court may, in its discretion, require an undertaking for the payment of the costs of such suit and assess reasonable costs, including reasonable attorney's fees, against either party litigant, having due regard to the merits and good faith of the suit or defense. No action shall be maintained to enforce any liability created under this section unless brought within one year after the discovery of the facts constituting the cause of action and within three years after such cause of action accrued.

(b) The rights and remedies provided by this title shall be in addition to any and all other rights and remedies that may exist under the Securities Act of 1933, or the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, or otherwise at law or in equity; but no person permitted to maintain a suit for damages under the provisions of this title shall recover, through satisfaction of judgment in one or more actions, a total amount in excess of his actual damages on account of the act complained of.

Section 324 Unlawful Representations

It shall be unlawful for any person in offering, selling, or issuing any security to represent or imply in any manner whatsoever that any action or failure to act by the Commission in the administration of this title means that the Commission has in any way passed upon the merits of, or given approval to, any trustee, indenture or security, or any transaction or transactions therein, or that any such action or failure to act with regard to any statement or report filed with or examined by the Commission pursuant to this title or any rule, regulation, or order thereunder, has the effect of a finding by the Commission that such statement or report is true and accurate on its face or that it is not false or misleading.

SEC Rules Under Section 304 Of The Trust Indenture Act Of 1939

Section 260.4a-1 Exempted securities under section 304\(a\)\(8\).

The provisions of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 shall not apply to any security which has been or is to be issued otherwise than under an indenture. The same issuer may not claim this exemption within a period of twelve consecutive months for more than $5,000,000 aggregate principal amount of any securities of the same issuer. [Codified to 17 CFR 260.4a-1] (Issued 12-31-81 at 46 FR 63256, Revised 8-13-92 at 57 FR 36501.)

Section 260.4a-2 Exempted securities under section 304\(d\).

The provisions of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 shall not apply to any security that has been issued or will be issued in accordance with the provisions of Regulation A (17 CFR 230.251 et seq.) under the Securities Act of 1933. [Codified to 17 CFR 260.4a-2] (Issued 8-13-92 at 57 FR 36501.)

Section 260.4a-3 Exempted securities under section 304\(a\)\(9\).

The provisions of the Trust Indenture Act of 1939 shall not apply to any security which has been or is to be issued under an indenture which limits the aggregate principal amount of securities at any time outstanding thereunder to $10,000,000 or less, but this exemption shall not be applied within a period of thirty-six consecutive months to more than $10,000,000 aggregate principal amount of securities of the same issuer. [Codified to 17 CFR 260.4a-3, formerly 17 CFR 260.4a-2] (Issued 12-31-81 at 46 FR 63256, Revised 8-13-92 at 57 FR 36501.)

INTERAGENCY AGREEMENT

Procedures for Cooperation Between the Federal Financial Institution Regulatory Agencies and the Department of Labor in the Enforcement of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974

The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, National Credit Union Administration, Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and Office of Thrift Supervision (the federal financial institution regulatory agencies) as part of their supervision of the institutions regulated by them, conduct examinations and perform other functions which occasionally disclose possible violations of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA). The Department of Labor (DOL) is charged with the administration, interpretation and enforcement of standards of conduct and responsibility of fiduciaries of employee benefit plans under ERISA.

Section 3004(b) of ERISA provides that the Secretary of Labor may utilize the facilities or services of any department, agency, or establishment of the United States, with the lawful consent of such department, agency, or establishment, and each department, agency or establishment of the United States is authorized and directed to cooperate with the Secretary of Labor and, to the extent permitted by law, to provide such information and facilities as the Secretary may request for his assistance in the performance of his functions under ERISA. This agreement is executed pursuant to that authority.

1. To the maximum extent consistent with law and dependent upon the availability of resources, the federal financial institution regulatory agencies shall provide written notification to the DOL of possible violations of ERISA of a significant nature, which are discovered in the course of their supervision of institutions subject to their respective jurisdiction.
2. A possible violation shall be considered significant when, in the view of the appropriate federal financial institution regulatory agency, it falls within the following circumstances:
  - a. Where the financial institution does not serve as plan administrator or plan sponsor, as those terms are defined in ERISA Section 3(16), possible violations of:
    - (1) Title I, Part 4, Section 404, relating to fiduciary duties (including transactions directed by named fiduciaries or qualified investment managers), except where the transaction amounts, individually or in combination with other questionable transactions, constitute less than $100,000;
    - (2) Title I, Part 4 Section 405, relating to liability for breach of co-fiduciary duties (including transactions directed by named fiduciaries or qualified investment managers), except where the transaction amounts, individually or in combination with other questionable transactions, constitute less than $100,000;
    - (3) Title I, Part 4, Sections 406 and 407(a), relating to prohibited transactions, except where the threat of loss to the plan participants is de minimis;
    - (4) Title I, Part 4, Section 411, relating to prohibition against certain persons holding certain positions;
    - (5) Title I, Part 4, Section 412, relating to the bonding requirements as applicable to the financial institution itself.

b. Where the financial institution, in respect to a plan, also serves as plan administrator or plan sponsor, the agencies shall provide written notification of possible violations of the ERISA sections enumerated in a. above and, in addition, shall provide written notification of possible violations of Title I, Part 1, of ERISA relating to reporting and disclosure.

3. The written notification to the DOL shall include the following:

a. The name of the financial institution.

b. The name of the plan.

c. A brief description of the nature of the possible violation, and any corrective action requested by the federal financial institution regulatory agency and/or initiated by the federal financial institution regulatory agency.

4. The DOL agrees that any information received from the federal financial institution regulatory agencies pursuant to this agreement shall, to the extent permissible by law, be held in strict confidence and may be used for investigative purposes only; and that no other use of such information shall be made without the express written authorization of the agency that supplied such information.

5. The written notification shall be sent to the Director of Enforcement, Employee Benefits Security Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, D.C. 20210.

Appendix E — Employee Benefit Law Employee Retirement Income Security Act OF 1974

(Current through P.L. 103-219, approved 3-9-94)

Definitions (selected)

ERISA Section 3

(29 USC 1002)

For purposes of this subchapter:

1. The terms "employee welfare benefit plan" and "welfare plan" mean any plan, fund, or program which was heretofore or is hereafter established or maintained by an employer or by an employee organization, or by both, to the extent that such plan, fund, or program was established or is maintained for the purpose of providing for its participants or their beneficiaries, through the purchase of insurance or otherwise, (A) medical, surgical, or hospital care or benefits, or benefits in the event of sickness, accident, disability, death or unemployment, or vacation benefits, apprenticeship or other training programs, or day care centers, scholarship funds, or prepaid legal services, or (B) any benefit described in section 186(c) of this title (other than pensions on retirement or death, and insurance to provide such pensions).
2. (A) Except as provided in subparagraph (B), the terms "employee pension benefit plan" and "pension plan" mean any plan, fund, or program which was heretofore or is hereafter established or maintained by an employer or by an employee organization, or by both, to the extent that by its express terms or as a result of surrounding circumstances such plan, fund, or program -
  - i. Provides retirement income to employees, or
  - ii. Results in a deferral of income by employees for periods extending to the termination of covered employment or beyond, regardless of the method of calculating the contributions made to the plan, the method of calculating the benefits under the plan or the method of distributing benefits from the plan.
 (B) The Secretary may by regulation prescribe rules consistent with the standards and purposes of this chapter providing one or more exempt categories under which -
  - i. Severance pay arrangements, and
  - ii. Supplemental retirement income payments, under which the pension benefits of retirees or their beneficiaries are supplemented to take into account some portion or all of the increases in the cost of living (as determined by the Secretary of Labor) since retirement, shall, for purposes of this subchapter, be treated as welfare plans rather than pension plans. In the case of any arrangement or payment a principal effect of which is the evasion of the standards or purposes of this chapter applicable to pension plans, such arrangement or payment shall be treated as a pension plan.
3. The term "employee benefit plan" or "plan" means an employee welfare benefit plan or an employee pension benefit plan or a plan which is both an employee welfare benefit plan and an employee pension benefit plan.
4. The term "employee organization" means any labor union or any organization of any kind, or any agency or employee representation committee, association, group, or plan, in which employees participate and which exists for the purpose, in whole or in part, of dealing with employers concerning an employee benefit plan, or other matters incidental to employment relationships; or any employees' beneficiary association organized for the purpose in whole or in part, of establishing such a plan.
5. The term "employer" means any person acting directly as an employer, or indirectly in the interest of an employer, in relation to an employee benefit plan; and includes a group or association of employers acting for an employer in such capacity.
6. The term "employee" means any individual employed by an employer.
7. The term "participant" means any employee or former employee of an employer, or any member or former member of an employee organization, who is or may become eligible to receive a benefit of any type from an employee benefit plan which covers employees of such employer or members of such organization, or whose beneficiaries may be eligible to receive any such benefit.
8. The term "beneficiary" means a person designated by a participant, or by the terms of an employee benefit plan, who is or may become entitled to a benefit thereunder.
9. The term "person" means an individual, partnership, joint venture, corporation, mutual company, joint-stock company, trust, estate, unincorporated organization, association, or employee organization.

10. The term "State" includes any State of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, American Samoa, Guam, Wake Island, and the Canal Zone. The term "United States" when used in the geographic sense means the States and the Outer Continental Shelf lands defined in the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 USC 1331-1343).
11. The term "commerce" means trade, traffic, commerce, transportation, or communication between any State and any place outside thereof.
12. The term "industry or activity affecting commerce" means any activity, business, or industry in commerce or in which a labor dispute would hinder or obstruct commerce or the free flow of commerce, and includes any activity or industry "affecting commerce" within the meaning of the Labor Management Relations Act, 1947 [29 USCA 141 et seq.] or the Railway Labor Act [45 USCA 151 et seq.]
13. The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Labor.
14. The term "party in interest" means, as to an employee benefit plan -

Editor's Note: Also see "Disqualified Person" definition, Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(e\)\(2\).

- A. Any fiduciary (including, but not limited to, any administrator, officer, trustee, or custodian), counsel, or employee of such employee benefit plan;
- B. A person providing services to such plan;
- C. An employer any of whose employees are covered by such plan;
- D. An employee organization any of whose members are covered by such plan;
- E. An owner, direct or indirect, of 50 percent or more of -
  - i. The combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or the total value of shares of all classes of stock of a corporation.
  - ii. The capital interest or the profits interest of a partnership, or
  - iii. The beneficial interest of a trust or unincorporated enterprise, which is an employer or an employee organization described in subparagraph (C) or (D);
- F. A relative (as defined in paragraph (15)) of any individual described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (E);
- G. A corporation, partnership, or trust or estate of which (or in which) 50 percent or more of -
  - i. The combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation,
  - ii. The capital interest or profits interest of such partnership, or
  - iii. The beneficial interest of such trust or estate, is owned directly or indirectly, or held by persons described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), or (E);
- H. An employee, officer, director (or an individual having powers or responsibilities similar to those of officers or directors), or a 10 percent or more shareholder directly or indirectly, of a person described in subparagraph (B), (C), (D), (E), or (G), or of the employee benefit plan; or
- I. A 10 percent or more (directly or indirectly in capital or profits) partner or joint venture of a person described in subparagraph (B), (C), (D), (E), or (G).

The Secretary, after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury, may by regulation prescribe a percentage lower than 50 percent for subparagraph (E) and (G) and lower than 10 percent for subparagraph (H) or (I). The Secretary may prescribe regulations for determining the ownership (direct or indirect) of profits and beneficial interests, and the manner in which indirect stock holdings are taken into account. Any person who is a party in interest with respect to a plan to which a trust described in section 501(c)(22) of Title 26 is permitted to make payments under section 1403 of this title shall be treated as a party in interest with respect to such trust.

15. The term "relative" means a spouse, ancestor, lineal descendant, or spouse of a lineal descendant.

Editor's Note: Also see "Family Member" definition, Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(e\)\(6\).

16. (A) The term "administrator" means -
  - i. The person specifically so designated by the terms of the instrument under which the plan is operated;
  - ii. If an administrator is not so designated, the plan sponsor; or
  - iii. In the case of a plan for which an administrator is not designated and a plan sponsor cannot be identified, such other person as the Secretary may by regulation prescribe.
- (B) The term "plan sponsor" means -
  - i. The employer in the case of an employee benefit plan established or maintained by a single employer,
  - ii. The employee organization in the case of a plan established or maintained by an employee organization, or
  - iii. In the case of a plan established or maintained by two or more employers or jointly by one or more employers and one or more employee organizations, the association, committee, joint board of trustees, or other similar group of representatives of the parties who establish or maintain the plan.

17. The term "separate account" means an account established or maintained by an insurance company under which income, gains, and losses, whether or not realized, from assets allocated to such account, are, in accordance with the applicable contract, credited to or charged against such account without regard to other income, gains, or losses of the insurance company.
18. The term "adequate consideration" when used in part 4 of subtitle B of this subchapter means -
- A. In the case of a security for which there is a generally recognized market, either -
    - i. The price of the security prevailing on a national securities exchange which is registered under section 78f of Title 15, or
    - ii. If the security is not traded on such a national securities exchange, a price not less favorable to the plan than the offering price for the security as established by the current bid and asked prices quoted by persons independent of the issuer and of any party in interest; and
  - B. In the case of an asset other than a security for which there is a generally recognized market, the fair market value of the asset as determined in good faith by the trustee or named fiduciary pursuant to the terms of the plan and in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary.
19. The term "nonforfeitable" when used with respect to a pension benefit or right means a claim obtained by a participant or his beneficiary to that part of an immediate or deferred benefit under a pension plan which arises from the participant's service, which is unconditional, and which is legally enforceable against the plan. For purposes of this paragraph, a right to an accrued benefit derived from employer contributions shall not be treated as forfeitable merely because the plan contains a provision described in section 1053(a)(3) of this title.
20. The term "security" has the same meaning as such term has under section 77b(1) of Title 15.
21. (A) Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (B), a person is a fiduciary with respect to a plan to the extent -

Editor's Note: Also see "Fiduciary" definition, Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(e\)\(3\).

- i. He exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control respecting management of such plan or exercises any authority or control respecting management or disposition of its assets,
  - ii. He renders investment advice for a fee or other compensation, direct or indirect, with respect to any moneys or other property of such plan, or has any authority or responsibility to do so, or
  - iii. He has any discretionary authority or discretionary responsibility in the administration of such plan. Such term includes any person designated under section 1105(c)(1)(B) of this title.
- (B) If any money or other property of an employee benefit plan is invested in securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 USCA 80a-1 et seq.], such investment shall not by itself cause such investment company or such investment company's investment adviser or principal underwriter to be deemed to be a fiduciary or a party in interest as those terms are defined in this subchapter, except insofar as such investment company or its investment adviser or principal underwriter acts in connection with an employee benefit plan covering employees of the investment company, the investment adviser, or its principal underwriter. Nothing contained in this subparagraph shall limit the duties imposed on such investment company, investment adviser, or principal underwriter by any other law.
22. The term "normal retirement benefit" means the greater of the early retirement benefit under the plan, or the benefit under the plan commencing at normal retirement age. The normal retirement benefit shall be determined without regard to -
- A. Medical benefits, and
  - B. Disability benefits not in excess of the qualified disability benefit.

For purposes of this paragraph, a qualified disability benefit is a disability benefit provided by a plan which does not exceed the benefit which would be provided for the participant if he separated from the service at normal retirement age. For purposes of this paragraph, the early retirement benefit under a plan shall be determined without regard to any benefit under the plan which the Secretary of the Treasury finds to be a benefit described in section 1054(b)(1)(G) of this title.

23. The term "accrued benefit" means -
- A. In the case of a defined benefit plan, the individual's accrued benefit determined under the plan and, except as provided in section 1054(c)(3) of this title, expressed in the form of an annual benefit commencing at normal retirement age, or
  - B. In the case of a plan which is an individual account plan, the balance of the individual's account.

The accrued benefit of an employee shall not be less than the amount determined under section 1054(c)(2)(B) of this title with respect to the employee's accumulated contribution.

24. The term "normal retirement age" means the earlier of -
- A. The time a plan participant attains normal retirement age under the plan, or
  - B. The later of -
    - i. The time a plan participant attains age 65, or
    - ii. The 5th anniversary of the time a plan participant commenced participation in the plan.

25. The term "vested liabilities" means the present value of the immediate or deferred benefits available at normal retirement age for participants and their beneficiaries which are nonforfeitable.

26. The term "current value" means fair market value where available and otherwise the fair value as determined in good faith by a trustee or a named fiduciary (as defined in section 1102(a)(2) of this title) pursuant to the terms of the plan and in accordance with regulations of the Secretary, assuming an orderly liquidation at the time of such determination.
27. The term "present value", with respect to a liability, means the value adjusted to reflect anticipated events. Such adjustments shall conform to such regulations as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.
28. The term "normal service cost" or "normal cost" means the annual cost of future pension benefits and administrative expenses assigned, under an actuarial cost method, to years subsequent to a particular valuation date of a pension plan. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe regulations to carry out this paragraph.
29. The term "accrued liability" means the excess of the present value, as of a particular valuation date of a pension plan, of the projected future benefit costs and administrative expenses for all plan participants and beneficiaries over the present value of future contributions for the normal cost of all applicable plan participants and beneficiaries. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe regulations to carry out this paragraph.
30. The term "unfunded accrued liability" means the excess of the accrued liability, under an actuarial cost method which so provides, over the present value of the assets of a pension plan. The Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe regulations to carry out this paragraph.
31. The term "advance funding actuarial cost method" or "actuarial cost method" means a recognized actuarial technique utilized for establishing the amount and incidence of the annual actuarial cost of pension plan benefits and expenses. Acceptable actuarial cost methods shall include the accrued benefit cost method (unit credit method), the entry age normal cost method, the individual level premium cost method, the aggregate cost method, the attained age normal cost method, and the frozen initial liability cost method. The terminal funding cost method and the current funding (pay-as-you-go) cost method are not acceptable actuarial cost methods. The Secretary of the Treasury shall issue regulations to further define acceptable actuarial cost methods.
32. The term "governmental plan" means a plan established or maintained for its employees by the Government of the United States, by the government of any State or political subdivision thereof, or by any agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing. The term "governmental plan" also includes any plan to which the Railroad Retirement Act of 1935 or 1937 [45 USCA 231 et seq.] applies, and which is financed by contributions required under that Act and any plan of an international organization which is exempt from taxation under the provisions of the International Organizations Immunities Act [22 USCA 288 et seq.].
33. (A) The term "church plan" means a plan established and maintained (to the extent required in clause (ii) of subparagraph (B)) for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26.

(B) The term "church plan" does not include a plan -

- i. Which is established and maintained primarily for the benefit of employees (or their beneficiaries) of such church or convention or association of churches who are employed in connection with one or more unrelated trades or businesses (within the meaning of section 513 of Title 26), or
- ii. If less than substantially all of the individuals included in the plan are individuals described in subparagraph (A) or in clause (ii) of subparagraph (C) (or their beneficiaries).

(C) For purposes of this paragraph -

- i. A plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches includes a plan maintained by an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, the principal purpose or function of which is the administration or funding of a plan or program for the provision of retirement benefits or welfare benefits, or both, for the employees of a church or a convention or association of churches, if such organization is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches.
- ii. The term employee of a church or a convention or association of churches includes -
  - I. A duly ordained, commissioned, or licensed minister of a church in the exercise of his ministry, regardless of the source of his compensation;
  - II. An employee of an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26 and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches; and
  - III. An individual described in clause (v).
- iii. A church or a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26 shall be deemed the employer of any individual included as an employee under clause (ii).
- iv. An organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, is associated with a church or a convention or association of churches if it shares common religious bonds and convictions with that church or convention or association of churches.
- v. If an employee who is included in a church plan separates from the service of a church or a convention or association of churches or an organization, whether a civil law corporation or otherwise, which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26 and which is controlled by or associated with a church or a convention or association of churches, the church plan shall not fail to meet the requirements of this paragraph merely because the plan -
  - I. Retains the employee's accrued benefit or account for the payment of benefits to the employee or his beneficiaries pursuant to the terms of the plan; or
  - II. Receives contributions on the employee's behalf after the employee's separation from such service, but only for a period of 5 years after such separation, unless the employee is disabled (within the meaning of the disability provisions of the church plan or, if there are no such provisions in the church plan, within the meaning of section 72(m)(7) of Title 26) at the time of such separation from service.

(D) (i) If a plan established and maintained for its employees (or their beneficiaries) by a church or by a convention or association of churches which is exempt from tax under section 501 of Title 26 fails to meet one or more of the requirements of this paragraph and corrects its failure to meet such requirements within the correction period, the plan shall be deemed to meet the requirements of this paragraph for the year in which the correction was made and for all prior years.

- ii. If a correction is not made within the correction period, the plan shall be deemed not to meet the requirements of this paragraph beginning with the date on which the earliest failure to meet one or more of such requirements occurred.
  - iii. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "correction period" means -
    - I. The period ending 270 days after the date of mailing by the Secretary of the Treasury of a notice of default with respect to the plan's failure to meet one or more of the requirements of this paragraph; or
    - II. Any period set by a court of competent jurisdiction after a final determination that the plan fails to meet such requirements, or, if the court does not specify such period, any reasonable period determined by the Secretary of the Treasury on the basis of all the facts and circumstances, but in any event not less than 270 days after the determination has become final; or
    - III. Any additional period which the Secretary of the Treasury determines is reasonable or necessary for the correction of the default, whichever has the latest ending date.
34. The term "individual account plan" or "defined contribution plan" means a pension plan which provides for an individual account for each participant and for benefits based solely upon the amount contributed to the participant's account, and any income, expenses, gains and losses, and any forfeitures of accounts of other participants which may be allocated to such participant's account.
35. The term "defined benefit plan" means a pension plan other than an individual account plan; except that a pension plan which is not an individual account plan and which provides a benefit derived from employer contributions which is based partly on the balance of the separate account of a participant -
- A. For the purposes of section 1052 of this title, shall be treated as an individual account plan, and
  - B. For the purposes of paragraph (23) of this section and section 1054 of this title, shall be treated as an individual account plan to the extent benefits are based upon the separate account of a participant and as a defined benefit plan with respect to the remaining portion of benefits under the plan.
36. The term "excess benefit plan" means a plan maintained by an employer solely for the purpose of providing benefits for certain employees in excess of the limitations on contributions and benefits imposed by section 415 of Title 26 on plans to which that section applies, without regard to whether the plan is funded. To the extent that a separable part of a plan (as determined by the Secretary of Labor) maintained by an employer is maintained for such purpose, that part shall be treated as a separate plan which is an excess benefit plan.
37. (A) The term "multiemployer plan" means a plan -
- i. To which more than one employer is required to contribute,
  - ii. Which is maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between one or more employee organizations and more than one employer, and
  - iii. Which satisfies such other requirements as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation.
- B. For purposes of this paragraph, all trades or businesses (whether or not incorporated) which are under common control within the meaning of section 1301(b)(1) of this title are considered a single employer.
  - C. Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a plan is a multiemployer plan on and after its termination date if the plan was a multiemployer plan under this paragraph for the plan year preceding its termination date.
  - D. For purposes of this subchapter, notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this paragraph, for any plan year which began before September 26, 1980, the term "multiemployer plan" means a plan described in this paragraph (37) as in effect immediately before such date.
  - E. Within one year after September 26, 1980, a multiemployer plan may irrevocably elect, pursuant to procedures established by the corporation and subject to the provisions of sections 1453(b) and (c) of this title, that the plan shall not be treated as a multiemployer plan for all purposes under this chapter or Title 26 if for each of the last 3 plan years ending prior to the effective date of the Multiemployer Pension Plan Amendments Act of 1980 -
    - i. The plan was not a multiemployer plan because the plan was not a plan described in subparagraph (A)(iii) of this paragraph and section 414(f)(1)(C) of Title 26 (as such provisions were in effect on the day before September 26, 1980); and
    - ii. The plan had been identified as a plan that was not a multiemployer plan in substantially all its filings with the corporation, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of the Treasury.
  - F. (i) For purposes of this title a qualified football coaches plan -
    - I. Shall be treated as a multiemployer plan to the extent not inconsistent with the purposes of this subparagraph; and
    - II. Notwithstanding section 401(k)(4)(B) of Title 26, may include a qualified cash and deferred arrangement.
  - ii. For purposes of this subparagraph, the term "qualified football coaches plan" means any defined contribution plan which is established and maintained by an organization -
    - I. Which is described in section 501(c) of Title 26;
    - II. The membership of which consists entirely of individuals who primarily coach football as full-time employees of 4-year colleges or universities described in section 170(b)(1)(A)(ii) of Title 26; and
    - III. Which was in existence on September 18, 1986.
38. The term "investment manager" means any fiduciary (other than a trustee or named fiduciary, as defined in section 1102(a)(2) of this title) -

- A. Who has the power to manage, acquire, or dispose of any asset of a plan;
- B. Who is -
  - i. Registered as an investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 [15 USCA 80b-1 et seq.];
  - ii. Is a bank, as defined in that Act; or
  - iii. Is an insurance company qualified to perform services described in subparagraph (A) under the laws of more than one State; and
- C. Has acknowledged in writing that he is a fiduciary with respect to the plan.

39. The terms "plan year" and "fiscal year of the plan" mean, with respect to a plan, the calendar, policy, or fiscal year on which the records of the plan are kept.

40. (A) The term "multiple employer welfare arrangement" means an employee welfare benefit plan, or any other arrangement (other than an employee welfare benefit plan), which is established or maintained for the purpose of offering or providing any benefit described in paragraph (1) to the employees of two or more employers (including one or more self-employed individuals), or to their beneficiaries, except that such term does not include any such plan or other arrangement which is established or maintained -

- ii. Under or pursuant to one or more agreements which the Secretary finds to be collective bargaining agreements,
- iii. By a rural electric cooperative, or
- iv. By a rural telephone cooperative association.

B. For purposes of this paragraph -

- i. Two or more trades or businesses, whether or not incorporated, shall be deemed a single employer if such trades or businesses are within the same control group,
- ii. The term "control group" means a group of trades or businesses under common control,
- iii. The determination of whether a trade or business is under "common control" with another trade or business shall be determined under regulations of the Secretary applying principles similar to the principles applied in determining whether employees of two or more trades or businesses are treated as employed by a single employer under section 1301(b) of this title, except that, for purposes of this paragraph, common control shall not be based on an interest of less than 25 percent,
- iv. The term "rural electric cooperative" means -
  - I. Any organization which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) of Title 26 and which is engaged primarily in providing electric service on a mutual or cooperative basis, and
  - II. Any organization described in paragraph (4) or (6) of section 501(c) of Title 26 which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Title 26 and at least 80 percent of the members of which are organizations described in subclause (I), and
- v. The term "rural telephone cooperative association" means an organization described in paragraph (4) or (6) of section 501(c) of Title 26 which is exempt from tax under section 501(a) of such Title and at least 80 percent of the members of which are organizations engaged primarily in providing telephone service to rural areas of the United States on a mutual, cooperative, or other basis.

41. Single-employer plan. The term "single-employer plan" means an employee benefit plan other than a multiemployer plan.

Coverage

ERISA Section 401

a. This part shall apply to any employee benefit plan described in section 4(a) (and not exempted under section 4(b)), other than:

1. A plan which is unfunded and is maintained by an employer primarily for the purpose of providing deferred compensation for a select group of management or highly compensated employees; or
2. Any agreement described in section 736 of Title 26, which provides payments to a retired partner or deceased partner or a deceased partner's successor in interest.

b. For purposes of this part:

1. In the case of a plan which invests in any security issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 [15 USCA 80a-1 et seq.], the assets of such plan shall be deemed to include such security but shall not, solely by reason of such investment, be deemed to include any assets of such investment company.
2. In the case of a plan to which a guaranteed benefit policy is issued by an insurer, the assets of such plan shall be deemed to include such policy, but shall not, solely by reason of the issuance of such policy, be deemed to include any assets of such insurer. For purposes of this paragraph:
  - A. The term "insurer" means an insurance company, insurance service, or insurance organization, qualified to do business in a State.
  - B. The term "guaranteed benefit policy" means an insurance policy or contract to the extent that such policy or contract provides for benefits the amount of which is guaranteed by the insurer. Such term includes any surplus in a separate account, but excludes any other portion of a separate account.

ERISA Section 402

(29 USC 1102)

a. Named fiduciaries

1. Every employee benefit plan shall be established and maintained pursuant to a written instrument. Such instrument shall provide for one or more named fiduciaries who jointly or severally shall have authority to control and manage the operation and administration of the plan.
2. For purposes of this subchapter, the term "named fiduciary" means a fiduciary who is named in the plan instrument, or who, pursuant to a procedure specified in the plan, is identified as a fiduciary -
  - A. By a person who is an employer or employee organization with respect to the plan or
  - B. By such an employer and such an employee organization acting jointly.

b. Requisite features of plan. Every employee benefit plan shall -

1. Provide a procedure for establishing and carrying out a funding policy and method consistent with the objectives of the plan and the requirements of this subchapter,
2. Describe any procedure under the plan for the allocation of responsibilities for the operation and administration of the plan (including any procedure described in section 1105(c)(1) of this title),
3. Provide a procedure for amending such plan, and for identifying the persons who have authority to amend the plan, and
4. Specify the basis on which payments are made to and from the plan.

c. Optional features of plan. Any employee benefit plan may provide -

1. That any person or group of persons may serve in more than one fiduciary capacity with respect to the plan (including service both as trustee and administrator);
2. That a named fiduciary, or a fiduciary designated by a named fiduciary pursuant to a plan procedure described in section 1105(c)(1) of this title, may employ one or more persons to render advice with regard to any responsibility such fiduciary has under the plan; or
3. That a person who is a named fiduciary with respect to control or management of the assets of the plan may appoint an investment manager or managers to manage (including the power to acquire and dispose of) any assets of a plan.

Establishment of Trust

ERISA Section 403

a. Benefit plan assets to be held in trust; authority of trustees.

Except as provided in subsection (b) of this section, all assets of an employee benefit plan shall be held in trust by one or more trustees. Such trustee or trustees shall be either named in the trust instrument or in the plan instrument described in section 1102(a) of this title or appointed by a person who is a named fiduciary, and upon acceptance of being named or appointed, the trustee or trustees shall have exclusive authority and discretion to manage and control the assets of the plan, except to the extent that -

1. The plan expressly provides that the trustee or trustees are subject to the direction of a named fiduciary who is not a trustee, in which case the trustees shall be subject to proper directions of such fiduciary which are made in accordance with the terms of the plan and which are not contrary to this chapter, or
2. Authority to manage, acquire, or dispose of assets of the plan is delegated to one or more investment managers pursuant to section 1102(c)(3) of this title.

b. Exceptions. The requirements of subsection (a) of this section shall not apply -

1. To any assets of a plan which consist of insurance contracts or policies issued by an insurance company qualified to do business in a State;
2. To any assets of such an insurance company or any assets of a plan which are held by such an insurance company;
3. To a plan -
  - A. Some or all of the participants of which are employees described in section 401(c)(1) of Title 26; or
  - B. Which consists of one or more individual retirement accounts described in section 408 of Title 26; to the extent that such plan's assets are held in one or more custodial accounts which qualify under section 401(f) or 408(h) of Title 26, whichever is applicable.
4. To a plan which the Secretary exempts from the requirement of subsection (a) of this section and which is not subject to any of the following provisions of this chapter -
  - A. Part 2 of this subtitle,
  - B. Part 3 of this subtitle, or
  - C. Subchapter III of this chapter; or
5. To a contract established and maintained under section 403(b) of Title 26 to the extent that the assets of the contract are held in one or more custodial accounts pursuant to section 403(b)(7) of Title 26.
6. Any plan, fund or program under which an employer, all of whose stock is directly or indirectly owned by employees, former employees or their beneficiaries, proposes through an unfunded arrangement to compensate retired employees for benefits which were forfeited by such employees under a pension plan maintained by a former employer prior to the date such pension plan became subject to this chapter.

c. Assets of plan not to inure to benefit of employer; allowable purposes of holding plan assets

1. Except as provided in paragraph (2), (3), or (4) or subsection (d) of this section, or under sections 1342 and 1344 of this title (relating to termination of insured plans), or under section 420 of Title 26 as in effect on January 1, 1995) the assets of a plan shall never inure to the benefit of any employer and shall be held for the exclusive purposes of providing benefits to participants in the plan and their beneficiaries and defraying reasonable expenses of administering the plan.
2. (A) In the case of a contribution, or a payment of withdrawal liability under part 1 of subtitle E of subchapter III of this chapter -
  - i. If such contribution or payment is made by an employer to a plan (other than a multiemployer plan) by a mistake of fact, paragraph (1) shall not prohibit the return of such contribution to the employer within one year after the payment of the contribution, and
  - ii. If such contribution or payment is made by an employer to a multiemployer plan by a mistake of fact or law (other than a mistake relating to whether the plan is described in section 401(a) of Title 26 or the trust which is part of such plan is exempt from taxation under section 501(a) of Title 26), paragraph (1) shall not prohibit the return of such contribution or payment to the employer within 6 months after the plan administrator determines that the contribution was made by such a mistake.
- B. If a contribution is conditioned on initial qualification of the plan under section 401 or 403(a) of Title 26, and if the plan receives an adverse determination with respect to its initial qualification, then paragraph (1) shall not prohibit the return of such contribution to the employer within one year after such determination, but only if the application for the determination is made by the time prescribed by law for filing the employer's return for the taxable year in which such plan was adopted, or such later date as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe.
- C. If a contribution is conditioned upon the deductibility of the contribution under section 404 of Title 26, then, to the extent the deduction is disallowed, paragraph (1) shall not prohibit the return to the employer of such contribution (to the extent disallowed) within one year after the disallowance of the deduction.
3. In the case of a withdrawal liability payment which has been determined to be an overpayment, paragraph (1) shall not prohibit the return of such payment to the employer within 6 months after the date of such determination.
4. Redesignated (3).

d. Termination of plan.

1. Upon termination of a pension plan to which section 1321 of this title does not apply at the time of termination and to which this part applies (other than a plan to which no employer contributions have been made) the assets of the plan shall be allocated in accordance with the provisions of section 1344 of this title, except as otherwise provided in regulations of the Secretary.
2. The assets of a welfare plan which terminates shall be distributed in accordance with the terms of the plan, except as otherwise provided in regulations of the Secretary.

Fiduciary Duties

ERISA Section 404

(29 USC 1104)

a. Prudent man standard of care.

1. Subject to sections 1103(c) and (d), 1342, and 1344 of this title, a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and -
  - A. For the exclusive purpose of:
    - i. Providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries; and
    - ii. Defraying reasonable expenses of administering the plan;
  - B. With the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims;
  - C. By diversifying the investments of the plan so as to minimize the risk of large losses, unless under the circumstances it is clearly prudent not to do so; and
  - D. In accordance with the documents and instruments governing the plan insofar as such documents and instruments are consistent with the provisions of this subchapter and subchapter III of this chapter.
2. In the case of an eligible individual account plan (as defined in section 1107(d)(3) of this title), the diversification requirement of paragraph (1)(C) and the prudence requirement (only to the extent that it requires diversification) of paragraph (1)(B) is not violated by acquisition or holding of qualifying employer real property or qualifying employer securities (as defined in section 1107(d)(4) and (5) of this title).

b. Indicia of ownership of assets outside jurisdiction of district courts.

Except as authorized by the Secretary by regulation, no fiduciary may maintain the indicia of ownership of any assets of a plan outside the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States.

c. Control over assets by participant or beneficiary.

In the case of a pension plan which provides for individual accounts and permits a participant or beneficiary to exercise control over the assets in his account, if a participant or beneficiary exercises control over the assets in his account (as determined under regulations of the Secretary) -

1. Such participant or beneficiary shall not be deemed to be a fiduciary by reason of such exercise, and
2. No person who is otherwise a fiduciary shall be liable under this part for any loss, or by reason of any breach, which results from such participant's or beneficiary's exercise of control.

d. Plan terminations.

1. If, in connection with the termination of a pension plan which is a single-employer plan, there is an election to establish or maintain a qualified replacement plan, or to increase benefits, as provided under section 4980(d) of Title 26, a fiduciary shall discharge the fiduciary's duties under this subchapter and subchapter III of this chapter in accordance with the following requirements:
  - A. In the case of a fiduciary of the terminated plan, any requirement -
    - i. Under section 4980(d)(2)(B) of Title 26 with respect to the transfer of assets from the terminated plan to a qualified replacement plan, and
    - ii. Under section 4980(d)(2)(B)(ii) or 4980(d)(3) of Title 26 with respect to any increase in benefits under the terminated plan.
  - B. In the case of a fiduciary of a qualified replacement plan, any requirement -
    - i. Under section 4980(d)(2)(A) of Title 26 with respect to participation in the qualified replacement plan of active participants in the terminated plan,
    - ii. Under section 4980(d)(2)(B) of Title 26 with respect to the receipt of assets from the terminated plan, and
    - iii. Under section 4980(d)(2)(C) of Title 26 with respect to the allocation of assets to participants of the qualified replacement plan.
2. For purposes of this subsection -
  - A. Any term used in this subsection which is also used in section 4980(d) of Title 26 shall have the same meaning as when used in such section, and
  - B. Any reference in this subsection to Title 26 shall be a reference to Title 26 as in effect immediately after the enactment of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1990.

Co-Fiduciary Liability

ERISA Section 405

(29 USC 1105)

a. Circumstances giving rise to liability

In addition to any liability which he may have under any other provision of this part, a fiduciary with respect to a plan shall be liable for a breach of fiduciary responsibility of another fiduciary with respect to the same plan in the following circumstances:

1. If he participates knowingly in, or knowingly undertakes to conceal, an act or omission of such other fiduciary, knowing such act or omission is a breach;
2. If, by his failure to comply with section 1104(a)(1) of this title in the administration of his specific responsibilities which give rise to his status as a fiduciary, he has enabled such other fiduciary to commit a breach; or
3. If he has knowledge of a breach by such other fiduciary, unless he makes reasonable efforts under the circumstances to remedy the breach.

b. Assets held by two or more trustees.

1. Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) of this section and in section 1103(a)(1) and (2) of this title, if the assets of a plan are held by two or more trustees -
  - A. Each shall use reasonable care to prevent a co-trustee from committing a breach; and
  - B. They shall jointly manage and control the assets of the plan, except that nothing in this subparagraph (B) shall preclude any agreement, authorized by the trust instrument, allocating specific responsibilities, obligations, or duties among trustees, in which event a trustee to whom certain responsibilities, obligations, or duties have not been allocated shall not be liable by reason of this subparagraph (B) either individually or as a trustee for any loss resulting to the plan arising from the acts or omissions on the part of another trustee to whom such responsibilities, obligations, or duties have been allocated.
2. Nothing in this subsection shall limit any liability that a fiduciary may have under subsection (a) of this section or any other provision of this part.
3. (A) In the case of a plan the assets of which are held in more than one trust, a trustee shall not be liable under paragraph (1) except with respect to an act or omission of a trustee of a trust of which he is a trustee.

(B) No trustee shall be liable under this subsection for following instructions referred to in section 1103(a)(1) of this title.

c. Allocation of fiduciary responsibility; designated persons to carry out fiduciary responsibilities

1. The instrument under which a plan is maintained may expressly provide for procedures (A) for allocating fiduciary responsibilities (other than trustee responsibilities) among named fiduciaries, and (B) for named fiduciaries to designate persons other than named fiduciaries to carry out fiduciary responsibilities (other than trustee responsibilities) under the plan.
2. If a plan expressly provides for a procedure described in paragraph (1), and pursuant to such procedure any fiduciary responsibility of a named fiduciary is allocated to any person, or a person is designated to carry out any such responsibility, then such named fiduciary shall not be liable for an act or omission of such person in carrying out such responsibility except to the extent that -
  - A. The named fiduciary violated section 1104(a)(1) of this title -
    - i. With respect to such allocation or designation,
    - ii. With respect to the establishment or implementation of the procedure under paragraph (1), or
    - iii. In continuing the allocation or designation; or
  - B. The named fiduciary would otherwise be liable in accordance with subsection (a) of this section.
3. For purposes of this subsection, the term "trustee responsibility" means any responsibility provided in the plan's trust instrument (if any) to manage or control the assets of the plan, other than a power under the trust instrument of a named fiduciary to appoint an investment manager in accordance with section 1102(c)(3) of this title.

d. Investment managers.

1. If an investment manager or managers have been appointed under section 1102(c)(3) of this title, then, notwithstanding subsections (a)(2) and (3) and subsection (b) of this section, no trustee shall be liable for the acts or omissions of such investment manager or managers, or be under an obligation to invest or otherwise manage any asset of the plan which is subject to the management of such investment manager.
2. Nothing in this subsection shall relieve any trustee of any liability under this part for any act of such trustee.

Prohibited Transactions

ERISA Section 406

(29 USC 1106)

Editor's Note: Also see Prohibited Transaction provisions of Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(c\)\(1\).

a. Transactions between plan and party in interest. Except as provided in section 1108 of this title:

1. A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not cause the plan to engage in a transaction, if he knows or should know that such transaction constitutes a direct or indirect -
  - A. Sale or exchange, or leasing, of any property between the plan and a party in interest;
  - B. Lending of money or other extension of credit between the plan and a party in interest;
  - C. Furnishing of goods, services, or facilities between the plan and a party in interest;
  - D. Transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a party in interest, of any assets of the plan; or
  - E. Acquisition, on behalf of the plan, of any employer security or employer real property in violation of section 1107(a) of this title.
2. No fiduciary who has authority or discretion to control or manage the assets of a plan shall permit the plan to hold any employer security or employer real property if he knows or should know that holding such security or real property violates section 1107(a) of this title.

b. Transactions between plan and fiduciary. A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not -

1. Deal with the assets of the plan in his own interest or for his own account,
2. In his individual or in any other capacity act in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or represent a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries, or
3. Receive any consideration for his own personal account from any party dealing with such plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan.

c. Transfer of real or personal property to plan by party in interest.

A transfer of real or personal property by a party in interest to a plan shall be treated as a sale or exchange if the property is subject to a mortgage or similar lien which the plan assumes or if it is subject to a mortgage or similar lien which a party-in-interest placed on the property within the 10-year period ending on the date of the transfer.

10 Percent Limitation on Employer Securities and Employer Real Property

ERISA Section 407

(29 USC 1107)

a. Percentage limitation. Except as otherwise provided in this section and section 1114 of this title:

1. A plan may not acquire or hold -
  - A. Any employer security which is not a qualifying employer security, or
  - B. Any employer real property which is not qualifying employer real property.

Editor's Note: See DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408e: Qualifying Employer Securities and Real Estate.

2. A plan may not acquire any qualifying employer security or qualifying employer real property, if immediately after such acquisition the aggregate fair market value of employer securities and employer real property held by the plan exceeds 10 percent of the fair market value of the assets of the plan.
3. (A) After December 31, 1984, a plan may not hold any qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property (or both) to the extent that the aggregate fair market value of such securities and property determined on December 31, 1984, exceeds 10 percent of the greater of -
  - i. The fair market value of the assets of the plan, determined on December 31, 1984, or
  - ii. The fair market value of the assets of the plan determined on January 1, 1975.
 (B) Subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall not apply to any plan which on any date after December 31, 1974; and before January 1, 1985, did not hold employer securities or employer real property (or both) the aggregate fair market value of which determined on such date exceeded 10 percent of the greater of -
  - i. The fair market value of the assets of the plan, determined on such date, or
  - ii. The fair market value of the assets of the plan determined on January 1, 1975.

4. (A) After December 31, 1979, a plan may not hold any employer securities or employer real property in excess of the amount specified in regulations under subparagraph (B). This subparagraph shall not apply to a plan after the earliest date after December 31, 1974, on which it complies with such regulations.

(B) Not later than December 31, 1976, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations which shall have the effect of requiring that a plan divest itself of 50 percent of the holdings of employer securities and employer real property which the plan would be required to divest before January 1, 1985, under paragraph (2) or subsection (c) of this section (whichever is applicable).

b. Exception

1. Subsection (a) of this section shall not apply to any acquisition or holding of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property by an eligible individual account plan.
2. Cross References.
  - A. For exemption from diversification requirements for holding of qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property by eligible individual account plans, see section 1104(a)(2) of this title.
  - B. For exemption from prohibited transactions for certain acquisitions of qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property which are not in violation of 10 percent limitation, see section 1108(e) of this title.
  - C. For transitional rules respecting securities or real property subject to binding contracts in effect on June 30, 1974, see section 1114(c) of this title.

c. Election

1. A plan which makes the election, under paragraph (3) shall be treated as satisfying the requirement of subsection (a)(3) of this section if and only if employer securities held on any date after December 31, 1974 and before January 1, 1985 have a fair market value, determined as of December 31, 1974, not in excess of 10 percent of the lesser of -
  - A. The fair market value of the assets of the plan determined on such date (disregarding any portion of the fair market value of employer securities which is attributable to appreciation of such securities after December 31, 1974) but not less than the fair market value of plan assets on January 1, 1975, or
  - B. An amount equal to the sum of -
    - i. The total amount of the contributions to the plan received after December 31, 1974, and prior to such date, plus
    - ii. The fair market value of the assets of the plan, determined on January 1, 1975.
2. For purposes of this subsection, in the case of an employer security held by a plan after January 1, 1975, the ownership of which is derived from ownership of employer securities held by the plan on January 1, 1975, or from the exercise of rights derived from such ownership, the value of such security held after January 1, 1975, shall be based on the value as of January 1, 1975, of the security from which ownership was derived. The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to carry out this paragraph.
3. An election under this paragraph may not be made after December 31, 1975. Such an election shall be made in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, and shall be irrevocable. A plan may make an election under this paragraph only if on January 1, 1975, the plan holds no employer real property. After such election and before January 1, 1985 the plan may not acquire any employer real property.

d. Definitions.

For purposes of this section -

1. The term "employer security" means a security issued by an employer of employees covered by the plan, or by an affiliate of such employer. A contract to which section 1108(b)(5) of this title applies shall not be treated as a security for purposes of this section.
2. The term "employer real property" means real property (and related personal property) which is leased to an employer of employees covered by the plan, or to an affiliate of such employer. For purposes of determining the time at which a plan acquires employer real property for purposes of this section, such property shall be deemed to be acquired by the plan on the date on which the plan acquires the property or on the date on which the lease to the employer (or affiliate) is entered into, whichever is later.
3. (A) The term "eligible individual account plan" means an individual account plan which is-
  - i. A profit-sharing, stock bonus, thrift, or savings plan;
  - ii. An employee stock ownership plan; or
  - iii. A money purchase plan which was in existence on September 2, 1974, and which on such date invested primarily in qualifying employer securities. Such term excludes an individual retirement account or annuity described in section 408 of Title 26.
 (B) Notwithstanding subparagraph (A), a plan shall be treated as an eligible individual account plan with respect to the acquisition or holding of qualifying employer real property or qualifying employer securities only if such plan explicitly provides for acquisition and holding of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property (as the case may be). In the case of a plan in existence on September 2, 1974, this subparagraph shall not take effect until January 1, 1976.
 (C) The term "eligible individual account plan" does not include any individual account plan the benefits of which are taken into account in determining the benefits payable to a participant under any defined benefit plan.
4. The term "qualifying employer real property" means parcels of employer real property -
  - A. If a substantial number of the parcels are dispersed geographically;
  - B. If each parcel of real property and the improvements thereon are suitable (or adaptable without excessive cost) for more than one use;
  - C. Even if all of such real property is leased to one lessee (which may be an employer, or an affiliate of an employer); and
  - D. If the acquisition and retention of such property comply with the provisions of this part (other than section 1104(a)(1)(B) of this title to the extent it requires diversification, and sections 1104(a)(1)(C), 1106 of this title, and subsection (a) of this section).

5. The term "qualifying employer security" means an employer security which is -

- A. Stock,
- B. A marketable obligation (as defined in subsection (e)), or
- C. An interest in a publicly traded partnership (as defined in section 7704(b) of Title 26, but only if such partnership is an existing partnership as defined in section 10211(c)(2)(A) of the Revenue Act of 1987 (Public Law 100-203).

After December 17, 1987, in the case of a plan other than an eligible individual account plan, an employer security described in subparagraph (A) or (C) shall be considered a qualifying employer security only if such employer security satisfies the requirements of subsection (f)(1) of this section.

6. The term "employee stock ownership plan" means an individual account plan -

Editor's Note: Also see "ESOP" definition, Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(e\)\(7\).

- A. Which is a stock bonus plan which is qualified, or a stock bonus plan and money purchase plan both of which are qualified, under section 401 of Title 26, and which is designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities, and
- B. Which meets such other requirements as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe by regulation.

7. A corporation is an affiliate of an employer if it is a member of any controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563(a) of Title 26, except that "applicable percentage" shall be substituted for "80 percent" wherever the latter percentage appears in such section) of which the employer who maintains the plan is a member. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "applicable percentage" means 50 percent, or such lower percentage as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation. A person other than a corporation shall be treated as an affiliate of an employer to the extent provided in regulations of the Secretary. An employer which is a person other than a corporation shall be treated as affiliated with another person to the extent provided by regulations of the Secretary. Regulations under this paragraph shall be prescribed only after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury.

8. The Secretary may prescribe regulations specifying the extent to which conversions, splits, the exercise of rights, and similar transactions are not treated as acquisitions.

9. For purposes of this section, an arrangement which consists of a defined benefit plan and an individual account plan shall be treated as 1 plan if the benefits of such individual account plan are taken into account in determining the benefits payable under such defined benefit plan.

e. Marketable obligations. For purposes of subsection (d)(5) of this section, the term "marketable obligation" means a bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as "obligation") if -

1. Such obligation is acquired -

A. On the market, either -

- i. At the price of the obligation prevailing on a national securities exchange which is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, or
- ii. If the obligation is not traded on such a national securities exchange, at a price not less favorable to the plan than the offering price for the obligation as established by current bid and asked prices quoted by persons independent of the issuer;

B. From an underwriter, at a price -

- i. Not in excess of the public offering price for the obligation as set forth in a prospectus or offering circular filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and
- ii. At which a substantial portion of the same issue is acquired by persons independent of the issuer; or

C. Directly from the issuer, at a price not less favorable to the plan than the price paid currently for a substantial portion of the same issue by persons independent of the issuer;

2. Immediately following acquisition of such obligation -

A. Not more than 25 percent of the aggregate amount of obligations issued in such issue and outstanding at the time of acquisition is held by the plan, and

B. At least 50 percent of the aggregate amount referred to in subparagraph (A) is held by persons independent of the issuer; and

3. Immediately following acquisition of the obligation, not more than 25 percent of the assets of the plan is invested in obligations of the employer or an affiliate of the employer.

f. Maximum percentage of stock held by plan; time of holding or acquisition; necessity of legally binding contract

1. Stock satisfies the requirements of this paragraph if, immediately following the acquisition of such stock -

- A. No more than 25 percent of the aggregate amount of stock of the same class issued and outstanding at the time of acquisition is held by the plan, and
  - B. At least 50 percent of the aggregate amount referred to in subparagraph (A) is held by persons independent of the issuer.
2. Until January 1, 1993, a plan shall not be treated as violating subsection (a) of this section solely by holding stock which fails to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (1) if such stock -
    - A. Has been so held since December 17, 1987, or
    - B. Was acquired after December 17, 1987, pursuant to a legally binding contract in effect on December 17, 1987, and has been so held at all times after the acquisition.
  3. After December 17, 1987, no plan may acquire stock which does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (1) unless the acquisition is made pursuant to a legally binding contract in effect on such date.

Statutory Exemption from Prohibited Transactions

ERISA Section 408

a. Grant of exemptions.

The Secretary shall establish an exemption procedure for purposes of this subsection. Pursuant to such procedure, he may grant a conditional or unconditional exemption of any fiduciary or transaction, or class of fiduciaries or transactions, from all or part of the restrictions imposed by sections 1106 and 1107(a) of this title. Action under this subsection may be taken only after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury. An exemption granted under this section shall not relieve a fiduciary from any other applicable provision of this chapter. The Secretary may not grant an exemption under this subsection unless he finds that such exemption is -

1. Administratively feasible,
2. In the interest of the plan and of its participants and beneficiaries, and
3. Protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of such plan.

Editor's Note: See DOL Regulation 2570.30 through .52, which replaced DOL ERISA Procedure 75-1.

Before granting an exemption under this subsection from section 1106(a) or 1107(a) of this title, the Secretary shall publish notice in the Federal Register of the pendency of the exemption, shall require that adequate notice be given to interested persons, and shall afford interested persons opportunity to present views. The Secretary may not grant an exemption under this subsection from section 1106(b) of this title unless he affords an opportunity for a hearing and makes a determination on the record with respect to the findings required by paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of this subsection.

b. Enumeration of transactions exempted from section 1106 prohibitions. The prohibitions provided in section 1106 of this title shall not apply to any of the following transactions:

1. Any loans made by the plan to parties in interest who are participants or beneficiaries of the plan if such loans -

Editor's Note: Also see participant loan provisions of Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(d\)\(1\) and DOL Regulation 2550.408b-1.

- A. Are available to all such participants and beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis,
  - B. Are not made available to highly compensated employees (within the meaning of section 414(q) of Title 26), in an amount greater than the amount made available to other employees,
  - C. Are made in accordance with specific provisions regarding such loans set forth in the plan,
  - D. Bear a reasonable rate of interest, and
  - E. Are adequately secured.
2. Contracting or making reasonable arrangements with a party in interest for office space, or legal, accounting, or other services necessary for the establishment or operation of the plan, if no more than reasonable compensation is paid therefore.

Editor's Note: Also see ancillary services provisions of Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(d\)\(2\).

3. A loan to an employee stock ownership plan (as defined in section 1107(d)(6) of this title), if -

Editor's Note: Also see ESOP loan provisions of Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(d\)\(3\).

- A. Such loan is primarily for the benefit of participants and beneficiaries of the plan, and
- B. Such loan is at an interest rate which is not in excess of a reasonable rate.

If the plan gives collateral to a party in interest for such loan, such collateral may consist only of qualifying employer securities (as defined in section 1107(d)(5) of this title).

4. The investment of all or part of a plan's assets in deposits which bear a reasonable interest rate in a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States or a State, if such bank or other institution is a fiduciary of such plan and if -

Editor's Note: Also see deposit provisions of Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(d\)\(4\).

- A. The plan covers only employees of such bank or other institution and employees of affiliates of such bank or other institution, or
  - B. Such investment is expressly authorized by a provision of the plan or by a fiduciary (other than such bank or institution or affiliate thereof) who is expressly empowered by the plan to so instruct the trustee with respect to such investment.
5. Any contract for life insurance, health insurance, or annuities with one or more insurers which are qualified to do business in a State, if the plan pays no more than adequate consideration, and if each such insurer or insurers is -
- A. The employer maintaining the plan, or
  - B. A party in interest which is wholly owned (directly or indirectly) by the employer maintaining the plan, or by any person which is a party in interest with respect to the plan, but only if the total premiums and annuity considerations written by such insurers for life insurance, health insurance, or annuities for all plans (and their employers) with respect to which such insurers are parties in interest (not including premiums or annuity considerations written by the employer maintaining the plan) do not exceed 5 percent of the total premiums and annuity considerations written for all lines of insurance in that year by such insurers (not including premiums or annuity considerations written by the employer maintaining the plan).
6. The providing of an ancillary service by a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States or a State, if such bank or other institution is a fiduciary of such plan, and if -

Editor's Note: Also see bank ancillary services provisions of Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(d\)\(6\).

- A. Such bank or similar financial institution has adopted adequate internal safeguards which assure that the providing of such ancillary service is consistent with sound banking and financial practice, as determined by Federal or State supervisory authority, and
- B. The extent to which such ancillary service is provided is subject to specific guidelines issued by such bank or similar financial institution (as determined by the Secretary after consultation with Federal and State supervisory authority), and adherence to such guidelines would reasonably preclude such bank or similar financial institution from providing such ancillary service -
  - i. In an excessive or unreasonable manner, and
  - ii. In a manner that would be inconsistent with the best interests of participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans.

Such ancillary services shall not be provided at more than reasonable compensation.

7. The exercise of a privilege to convert securities, to the extent provided in regulations of the Secretary, but only if the plan receives no less than adequate consideration pursuant to such conversion.
8. Any transaction between a plan and -
- i. A common or collective trust fund or pooled investment fund maintained by a party in interest which is a bank or trust company supervised by a State or Federal agency or
  - ii. A pooled investment fund of an insurance company qualified to do business in a State, if -

Editor's Note: Also see collective investment fund provisions of Internal Revenue Code § 4975\(d\)\(8\).

- A. The transaction is a sale or purchase of an interest in the fund,
  - B. The bank, trust company, or insurance company receives not more than reasonable compensation, and
  - C. Such transaction is expressly permitted by the instrument under which the plan is maintained, or by a fiduciary (other than the bank, trust company, or insurance company, or an affiliate thereof) who has authority to manage and control the assets of the plan.
9. The making by a fiduciary of a distribution of the assets of the plan in accordance with the terms of the plan if such assets are distributed in the same manner as provided under section 1344 of this title (relating to allocation of assets).
10. Any transaction required or permitted under part 1 of subtitle E of subchapter III of this chapter.
11. A merger of multiemployer plans, or the transfer of assets or liabilities between multiemployer plans, determined by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation to meet the requirements of section 1411 of this title.
12. The sale by a plan to a party in interest on or after December 18, 1987, of any stock, if -
- A. The requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (e) of this section are met with respect to such stock,
  - B. On the later of the date on which the stock was acquired by the plan, or January 1, 1975, such stock constituted a qualifying employer security (as defined in section 1107(d)(5) of this title as then in effect), and
  - C. Such stock does not constitute a qualifying employer security (as defined in section 1107(d)(5) of this title as in effect at the time of the sale).

13. Any transfer in a taxable year beginning before January 1, 2001, of excess pension assets from a defined benefit plan to a retiree health account in a qualified transfer permitted under section 420 of Title 26 (as in effect on January 1, 1996).

c. Fiduciary benefits and compensation not prohibited by section 1106. Nothing in section 1106 of this title shall be construed to prohibit any fiduciary from -

1. Receiving any benefit to which he may be entitled as a participant or beneficiary in the plan, so long as the benefit is computed and paid on a basis which is consistent with the terms of the plan as applied to all other participants and beneficiaries;
2. Receiving any reasonable compensation for services rendered, or for the reimbursement of expenses properly and actually incurred, in the performance of his duties with the plan; except that no person so serving who already receives full-time pay from an employer or an association of employers, whose employees are participants in the plan, or from an employee organization whose members are participants in such plan shall receive compensation from such plan, except for reimbursement of expenses properly and actually incurred; or
3. Serving as a fiduciary in addition to being an officer, employee, agent, or other representative of a party in interest.

d. Owner-employees; family members; shareholder employees. Section 1107(b) of this title and subsections (b), (c), and (e) of this section shall not apply to any transaction in which a plan, directly or indirectly -

1. Lends any part of the corpus or income of the plan to;
2. Pays any compensation for personal services rendered to the plan to; or
3. Acquires for the plan any property from or sells any property to; any person who is with respect to the plan an owner-employee (as defined in section 401(c)(3) of Title 26), a member of the family (as defined in section 267(c)(4) of Title 26) of any such owner-employee, or a corporation controlled by any such owner-employee through the ownership, directly or indirectly, of 50 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or 50 percent or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation. For purposes of this subsection a shareholder employee (as defined in section 1379 of Title 26 as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Subchapter § Revision Act of 1982) and a participant or beneficiary of an individual retirement account or individual retirement annuity described in section 408 of Title 26 or a retirement bond described in section 409 of Title 26 (as effective for obligations issued before January 1, 1984) and an employer or association of employers which establishes such an account or annuity under section 408(c) of Title 26 shall be deemed to be an owner-employee.

e. Acquisition or sale by plan of qualifying employer securities; acquisition, sale, or lease by plan of qualifying employer real property.

Sections 1106 and 1107 of this title shall not apply to the acquisition or sale by a plan of qualifying employer securities (as defined in section 1107(d)(5) of this title) or acquisition, sale or lease by a plan of qualifying employer real property (as defined in section 1107(d)(4) of this title) -

1. If such acquisition, sale, or lease is for adequate consideration (or in the case of a marketable obligation, at a price not less favorable to the plan than the price determined under section 1107(e)(1) of this title),
2. If no commission is charged with respect thereto, and
3. If -
  - A. The plan is an eligible individual account plan (as defined in section 1107(d)(3) of this title), or
  - B. In the case of an acquisition or lease of qualifying employer real property by a plan which is not an eligible individual account plan, or of an acquisition of qualifying employer securities by such a plan, the lease or acquisition is not prohibited by section 1107(a) of this title.

f. Applicability of statutory prohibitions to mergers or transfers. Section 1106(b)(2) of this title shall not apply to any merger or transfer described in subsection (b)(11) of this section.

Liability for Breach of Fiduciary Duty

(29 USC 1109)

- a. Any person who is a fiduciary with respect to a plan who breaches any of the responsibilities, obligations, or duties imposed upon fiduciaries by this subchapter shall be personally liable to make good to such plan any losses to the plan resulting from each such breach, and to restore to such plan any profits of such fiduciary which have been made through use of assets of the plan by the fiduciary, and shall be subject to such other equitable or remedial relief as the court may deem appropriate, including removal of such fiduciary. A fiduciary may also be removed for a violation of section 1111 of this title.
- b. No fiduciary shall be liable with respect to a breach of fiduciary duty under this subchapter if such breach was committed before he became a fiduciary or after he ceased to be a fiduciary.

Exculpatory Provisions: Insurance

(29 USC 1110)

- a. Except as provided in sections 1105(b)(1) and 1105(d) of this title, any provision in an agreement or instrument which purports to relieve a fiduciary from responsibility or liability for any responsibility, obligation, or duty under this part shall be void as against public policy.
- b. Nothing in this subpart shall preclude -
  1. A plan from purchasing insurance for its fiduciaries or for itself to cover liability or losses occurring by reason of the act or omission of a fiduciary, if such insurance permits recourse by the insurer against the fiduciary in the case of a breach of a fiduciary obligation by such fiduciary;
  2. A fiduciary from purchasing insurance to cover liability under this part from and for his own account; or

3. An employer or an employee organization from purchasing insurance to cover potential liability of one or more persons who serve in a fiduciary capacity with regard to an employee benefit plan.

Prohibition Against Certain Persons Holding Certain Positions

(29 USC 1111)

a. Conviction or imprisonment. No person who has been convicted of, or has been imprisoned as a result of his conviction of, robbery, bribery, extortion, embezzlement, fraud, grand larceny, burglary, arson, a felony violation of Federal or State law involving substances defined in section 802(6) of Title 21, murder, rape, kidnapping, perjury, assault with intent to kill, any crime described in section 80a-9(a)(1) of Title 15, a violation of any provision of this chapter, a violation of section 186 of this title, a violation of chapter 63 of Title 18, a violation of section 874, 1027, 1503, 1505, 1506, 1510, 1951, or 1954 of Title 18, a violation of the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act of 1959 (29 USC 401), any felony involving abuse or misuse of such person's position or employment in a labor organization or employee benefit plan to seek or obtain an illegal gain at the expense of the members of the labor organization or the beneficiaries of the employee benefit plan, or conspiracy to commit any such crimes or attempt to commit any such crimes, or a crime in which any of the foregoing crimes is an element, shall serve or be permitted to serve -

1. As an administrator, fiduciary, officer, trustee, custodian, counsel, agent, employee, or representative in any capacity of any employee benefit plan,
2. As a consultant or adviser to an employee benefit plan, including but not limited to any entity whose activities are in whole or substantial part devoted to providing goods or services to any employee benefit plan, or
3. In any capacity that involves decision making authority or custody or control of the moneys, funds, assets, or property of any employee benefit plan, during or for the period of thirteen years after such conviction or after the end of such imprisonment, whichever is later, unless the sentencing court on the motion of the person convicted sets a lesser period of at least three years after such conviction or after the end of such imprisonment, whichever is later, or unless prior to the end of such period, in the case of a person so convicted or imprisoned -

A. His citizenship rights, having been revoked as a result of such conviction, have been fully restored, or

B. If the offense is a Federal offense, the sentencing judge or, if the offense is a State or local offense, the United States district court for the district in which the offense was committed, pursuant to sentencing guidelines and policy statements under section 994(a) of Title 28, determines that such person's service in any capacity referred to in paragraphs (1) through (3) would not be contrary to the purposes of this subchapter. Prior to making any such determination the court shall hold a hearing and shall give notice to such proceeding by certified mail to the Secretary of Labor and to State, county, and Federal prosecuting officials in the jurisdiction or jurisdictions in which such person was convicted. The court's determination in any such proceeding shall be final. No person shall knowingly hire, retain, employ, or otherwise place any other person to serve in any capacity in violation of this subsection.

Notwithstanding the preceding provisions of this subsection, no corporation or partnership will be precluded from acting as an administrator, fiduciary, officer, trustee, custodian, counsel, agent, or employee of any employee benefit plan or as a consultant to any employee benefit plan without a notice, hearing, and determination by such court that such service would be inconsistent with the intention of this section.

b. Penalty. Any person who intentionally violates this section shall be fined not more than $10,000 or imprisoned for not more than five years, or both.

c. Definitions. For the purpose of this section -

1. A person shall be deemed to have been "convicted" and under the disability of "conviction" from the date of the judgment of the trial court, regardless of whether that judgment remains under appeal.
2. The term "consultant" means any person who, for compensation, advises, or represents an employee benefit plan or who provides other assistance to such plan, concerning the establishment or operation of such plan.
3. A period of parole or supervised release shall not be considered as part of a period of imprisonment.

d. Payment of salary into escrow. Whenever any person -

1. By operation of this section, has been barred from office or other position in an employee benefit plan as a result of a conviction, and
2. Has filed an appeal of that conviction, any salary which would be otherwise due such person by virtue of such office or position, shall be placed in escrow by the individual or organization responsible for payment of such salary. Payment of such salary into escrow shall continue for the duration of the appeal or for the period of time during which such salary would be otherwise due, whichever period is shorter. Upon the final reversal of such person's conviction on appeal, the amounts in escrow shall be paid to such person. Upon the final sustaining of that person's conviction on appeal, the amounts in escrow shall be returned to the individual or organization responsible for payments of those amounts. Upon final reversal of such person's conviction, such person shall no longer be barred by this statute from assuming any position from which such person was previously barred.

Bonding of Fiduciaries

(29 USC 1112)

a. Requisite bonding of plan officials. Every fiduciary of an employee benefit plan and every person who handles funds or other property of such a plan (hereafter in this section referred to as "plan official") shall be bonded as provided in this section; except that -

1. Where such plan is one under which the only assets from which benefits are paid are the general assets of a union or of an employer, the administrator, officers, and employees of such plan shall be exempt from the bonding requirements of this section, and

2. No bond shall be required of a fiduciary (or of any director, officer, or employee of such fiduciary) if such fiduciary -
- A. Is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the United States or of any State; and
  - B. Is authorized under such laws to exercise trust powers or to conduct an insurance business; and
  - C. Is subject to supervision or examination by Federal or State authority; and
  - D. Has at all times a combined capital and surplus in excess of such a minimum amount as may be established by regulations issued by the Secretary, which amount shall be at least $1,000,000. Paragraph (2) shall apply to a bank or other financial institution which is authorized to exercise trust powers and the deposits of which are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, only if such bank or institution meets bonding or similar requirements under State law which the Secretary determines are at least equivalent to those imposed on banks by Federal law; or
  - E. Is registered as a broker or dealer under Section 15(b) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 if the broker or dealer is subject to the fidelity bond requirements of a self-regulatory organization.

The amount of such bond shall be fixed at the beginning of each fiscal year of the plan. Such amount shall be not less than 10 per centum of the amount of funds handled. In no case shall such bond be less than $1,000 nor more than $500,000, except in the case of a plan that holds employer securities, in which case the maximum amount of such bond shall be $1,000,000. The Secretary, however, after due notice and opportunity for hearing to all interested parties, and after consideration of the record, may prescribe an amount in excess of $500,000, subject to the 10 per centum limitation of the preceding sentence. For purposes of fixing the amount of such bond, the amount of funds handled shall be determined by the funds handled by the person, group, or class to be covered by such bond and by their predecessor or predecessors, if any, during the preceding reporting year, or if the plan has no preceding reporting year, the amount of funds to be handled during the current reporting year by such person, group, or class, estimated as provided in regulations of the Secretary. Such bond shall provide protection to the plan against loss by reason of acts of fraud or dishonesty on the part of the plan official, directly or through connivance with others. Any bond shall have as surety thereon a corporate surety company which is an acceptable surety on Federal bonds under authority granted by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to sections 9304-9308 of Title 31. Any bond shall be in a form or of a type approved by the Secretary, including individual bonds or schedule of blanket forms of bonds which cover a group or class.

- b. Unlawful acts. It shall be unlawful for any plan official to whom subsection (a) of this section applies, to receive, handle, disburse, or otherwise exercise custody or control of any of the funds or other property of any employee benefit plan, without being bonded as required by subsection (a) of this section and it shall be unlawful for any plan official of such plan, or any other person having authority to direct the performance of such functions, to permit such functions, or any of them, to be performed by any plan official, with respect to whom the requirements of subsection (a) of this section have not been met.
- c. Conflict of interest prohibited in procuring bonds. It shall be unlawful for any person to procure any bond required by subsection (a) of this section from any surety or other company or through any agent or broker in whose business operations such plan or any party in interest in such plan has any control or significant financial interest, direct or indirect.
- d. Exclusiveness of statutory basis for bonding requirement for persons handling funds or other property of employee benefit plans.
Nothing in any other provision of law shall require any person, required to be bonded as provided in subsection (a) of this section because he handles funds or other property of an employee benefit plan, to be bonded insofar as the handling by such person of the funds or other property of such plan is concerned.
- e. Regulations. The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section including exempting a plan from the requirements of this section where he finds that -
  1. Other bonding arrangements or
  2. The overall financial condition of the plan would be adequate to protect the interests of the beneficiaries and participants.

When, in the opinion of the Secretary, the administrator of a plan offers adequate evidence of the financial responsibility of the plan, or that other bonding arrangements would provide adequate protection of the beneficiaries and participants, he may exempt such plan from the requirements of this section.

Limitation on Actions

(29 USC 1113)

No action may be commenced under this subchapter with respect to a fiduciary's breach of any responsibility, duty, or obligation under this part, or with respect to a violation of this part, after the earlier of -

1. Six years after (A) the date of the last action which constituted a part of the breach or violation, or (B) in the case of an omission, the latest date on which the fiduciary could have cured the breach or violation, or
2. Three years after the earliest date on which the plaintiff had actual knowledge of the breach or violation; except that in the case of fraud or concealment, such action may be commenced not later than six years after the date of discovery of such breach or violation.

Civil Enforcement

(29 USC 1132)

(i) Administrative assessment of civil penalty. In the case of a transaction prohibited by section 406 (29 USC 1106) by a party in interest with respect to a plan to which this part applies, the Secretary may assess a civil penalty against such party in interest. The amount of such penalty may not exceed 10 percent of the amount involved in each such transaction (as defined in section 4975\(f\)\(4\) of the Internal Revenue Code, amended as of 1997) for each year or part thereof during which the prohibited transaction continues, except that, if the transaction is not corrected (in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe in regulations which shall be consistent with section 4975\(f\)\(5\) of such Code within 90 days after notice from the Secretary (or such longer period as the Secretary may permit), such penalty may be in an amount not more than 100 percent of the amount involved. This subsection shall not apply to a transaction with respect to a plan described in section 4975\(e\)\(1\) of such Code.

(l) (1) Civil penalties on violations by fiduciaries. In the case of -

- A. Any breach of fiduciary responsibility under (or any violation of) part 4 by a fiduciary, or
- B. Any knowing participation in such breach or violation by any other person, the Secretary shall assess a civil penalty against such fiduciary or other person in an amount equal to 20 percent of the applicable recovery amount.

(2) For purposes of paragraph (l), the term "applicable recovery amount" means any amount which is recovered from a fiduciary or other person with respect to a breach or violation described in paragraph (1) -

- A. Pursuant to any settlement agreement with the Secretary, or
- B. Ordered by a court to be paid by such fiduciary or other person to a plan or its participants and beneficiaries in a judicial proceeding instituted by the Secretary under subsection (a)(2) or (a)(5).

(3) The Secretary may, in the Secretary's sole discretion, waive or reduce the amount of the penalty under paragraph (l) if the Secretary determines in writing that -

- A. The fiduciary or other person acted reasonably and in good faith, or
- B. It is reasonable to expect that the fiduciary or other person will not be able to restore all losses to the plan without severe financial hardship unless such waiver or reduction is granted.

(4) The penalty imposed on a fiduciary or other person under this subsection with respect to any transaction shall be reduced by the amount of any penalty or tax imposed on such fiduciary or other person with respect to such transaction under subsection (i) of this section and section 4975 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986.

Trust Examination Manual

Appendix E — Employee Benefit Law

Internal Revenue Code

Section 72(p)

26 USC 72(p)

Participant Loans Treated as Distributions

As Amended through 1988 (P.L. 100-647)

1. Treatment as Distributions. -- For purposes of this section -
  - A. Loans. -- If during any taxable year a participant or beneficiary receives (directly or indirectly) any amount as a loan from a qualified employer plan, such amount shall be treated as having been received by such individual as a distribution under such plan.
  - B. Assignments or pledges. -- If during any taxable year a participant or beneficiary assigns (or agrees to assign) or pledges (or agrees to pledge) any portion of his interest in a qualified employer plan, such portion shall be treated as having been received by such individual as a loan from such plan.
2. Exception of certain loans. --
  - A. General rule. -- Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any loan to the extent that such loan (when added to the outstanding balance of all other loans from such plan whether made on, before, or after August 13, 1982), does not exceed the lesser of --
    - i. $50,000, reduced by the excess (if any) of
      - I. The highest outstanding balance of loans from the plan during the 1-year period ending on the day before the date on which such loan was made, over
      - II. The outstanding balance of loans from the plan on the date which such loan was more, or
    - ii. The greater of --
      - I. One-half of the present value of the nonforfeitable accrued benefit of the employee under the plan, or
      - II. $10,000.

For purposes of clause (ii) the present value of the nonforfeitable accrued benefit shall be determined without regard to any accumulated deductible employee contributions (as defined in subsection (O)(5)(b)).
  - B. Requirement that loan be repayable within 5 years. --
    - i. In general. -- Subparagraph (A) shall not apply to any loan unless such loan, by its terms, is required to be repaid within 5 years.
    - ii. Exception for home loans. -- Clause (i) shall not apply to any loan used to acquire any dwelling unit which within a reasonable time is to be used (determined at the time the loan is made) as a principal residence of the participant.
  - C. Requirement of level amortization. -- Except as provided in regulations, this paragraph shall not apply to any loan unless substantially level amortization of such loan (with payments not less frequently than quarterly) is required over the term of the loan.
  - D. Related employers and related plans. -- For purposes of this paragraph
    - i. The rules of subsections (b), (c), and (m) of section 414 shall apply, and
    - ii. All plans of an employer (determined after the application of such subsections) shall be treated as 1 plan.
3. Denial of interest deductions in certain cases. --
  - A. In general. No deduction otherwise allowable under this chapter shall be allowed under this chapter for any interest paid or accrued on any loan to which paragraph (1) does not apply by reason of paragraph (2) during the period described in subparagraph (B).

B. Period to which subparagraph (A) applies. --For purposes of subparagraph (A), the period described in this subparagraph is the period--

- i. On or after the 1st day on which the individual to whom the loan is made is a key employee (as defined in section 416(i)), or
- ii. Such loan is secured by amounts attributable to elective deferrals described in subparagraph (A) or (C) of section 402(g)(3), made to a key employee (as defined in section 416(i)), or

4. Qualified employer plan, etc. For purposes of this subsection

A. Qualified employer plan -

i. In general. - The term "qualified employer plan" means -

- I. A plan described in section 401(a) which includes a trust exempt from tax under section 501(a).
- II. A annuity plan described in section 403(a), and
- III. A plan under which amounts are contributed by an individual's employer for an annuity contract described in section 403(b).

ii. Special rules. - The term "qualified employer plan" -

- I. Shall include any plan which was (or was determined to be) a qualified employer plan or a government plan, but
- II. Shall not include a plan described in subsection (e)(7).

B. Government plan. The term "government plan" means any plan, whether or not qualified, established and maintained for its employees by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by an agency or instrumentality of any of the foregoing.

5. Special rules for loans, etc., from certain contracts. For purposes of this subsection, any amount received as a loan under a contract purchased under a qualified employer plan (and any assignment or pledge with respect to such a contract) shall be treated as a loan under such employer plan.

Participant Loans Treated as Distributions – IRS Guidelines

Section 72(p) was added by section 236 of the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsibility Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 324), and amended by the Technical Corrections Act of 1982 (96 Stat. 2365), the Deficit Reduction Act of 1984 (98 Stat. 494), the Tax Reform Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 2085), and the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988 (102 Stat. 3342).

Section 72(p)-1 was added on July 31, 2000 [Federal Register Volume 65, Number 147].

Statutory effective date: Section 72\(p\) applies to assignments, pledges, and loans made after August 13, 1982.

Regulatory effective date: Section 72(p)-1 applies to assignments, pledges, and loans made on or after January 1, 2002.

Refer to response to question # 22 (a) through (c)(2) below for applicability dates.

Sec. 1.72(p)-1 Loans treated as distributions.

The questions and answers in this section provide guidance under section 72\(p\) pertaining to loans from qualified employer plans (including government plans and tax-sheltered annuities and employer plans that were formerly qualified). The examples included in the questions and answers in this section are based on the assumption that a bona fide loan is made to a participant from a qualified defined contribution plan pursuant to an enforceable agreement (in accordance with paragraph (b) of Q&A-3 of this section), with adequate security and with an interest rate and repayment terms that are commercially reasonable. (The particular interest rate used, which is solely for illustration, is 8.75 percent compounded annually.) In addition, unless the contrary is specified, it is assumed in the examples that the amount of the loan does not exceed 50 percent of the participant's nonforfeitable account balance, the participant has no other outstanding loan (and had no prior loan) from the plan or any other plan maintained by the participant's employer or any other person required to be aggregated with the employer under section 414(b), (c) or (m), and the loan is not excluded from section 72\(p\) as a loan made in the ordinary course of an investment program as described in Q&A-18 of this section. The regulations and examples in this section do not provide guidance on whether a loan from a plan would result in a prohibited transaction under section 4975 of the Internal Revenue Code or on whether a loan from a plan covered by Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (88 Stat. 829) (ERISA) would be consistent with the fiduciary standards of ERISA or would result in a prohibited transaction under section 406 of ERISA. The questions and answers are as follows:

Q-1: In general, what does section 72\(p\) provide with respect to loans from a qualified employer plan?

A-1: (a) Loans. Under section 72\(p\), an amount received by a participant or beneficiary as a loan from a qualified employer plan is treated as having been received as a distribution from the plan (a deemed distribution), unless the loan satisfies the requirements of Q&A-3 of this section. For purposes of section 72(p) and this section, a loan made from a contract that has been purchased under a qualified employer plan (including a contract that has been distributed to the participant or beneficiary) is considered a loan made under a qualified employer plan.

(b) Pledges and assignments. Under section 72\(p\), if a participant or beneficiary assigns or pledges (or agrees to assign or pledge) any portion of his or her interest in a qualified employer plan as security for a loan, the portion of the individual's interest assigned or pledged (or subject to an agreement to assign or pledge) is treated as a loan from the plan to the individual, with the result that such portion is subject to the deemed distribution rule described in paragraph (a) of this Q&A-1. For purposes of section 72(p) and this section, any assignment or pledge of (or agreement to assign or to pledge) any portion of a participant's or beneficiary's interest in a contract that has been purchased under a qualified employer plan (including a contract that has been distributed to the participant or beneficiary) is considered an assignment or pledge of (or agreement to assign or to pledge) an interest in a qualified employer plan. However, if all or a portion of a participant's or beneficiary's interest in a qualified employer plan is pledged or assigned as security for a loan from the plan to the participant or the beneficiary, only the amount of the loan received by the participant or the beneficiary, not the amount pledged or assigned, is treated as a loan.

Q-2: What is a qualified employer plan for purposes of section 72\(p\)?

A-2: For purposes of section 72\(p\) and this section, a qualified employer plan means--

- (a) A plan described in section 401(a) which includes a trust exempt from tax under section 501(a);
- (b) An annuity plan described in section 403(a);
- (c) A plan under which amounts are contributed by an individual's employer for an annuity contract described in section 403(b);
- (d) Any plan, whether or not qualified, established and maintained for its employees by the United States, by a State or political subdivision thereof, or by an agency or instrumentality of the United States, a State or a political subdivision of a State; or
- (e) Any plan which was (or was determined to be) described in paragraph (a), (b), (c), or (d) of this Q&A-2.

Q-3: What requirements must be satisfied in order for a loan to a participant or beneficiary from a qualified employer plan not to be a deemed distribution?

A-3: (a) In general. A loan to a participant or beneficiary from a qualified employer plan will not be a deemed distribution to the participant or beneficiary if the loan satisfies the repayment term requirement of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\), the level amortization requirement of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(C\), and the enforceable agreement requirement of paragraph (b) of this Q&A-3, but only to the extent the loan satisfies the amount limitations of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(A\).

(b) Enforceable agreement requirement. A loan does not satisfy the requirements of this paragraph unless the loan is evidenced by a legally enforceable agreement (which may include more than one document) and the terms of the agreement demonstrate compliance with the requirements of section 72\(p\)\(2\) and this section. Thus, the agreement must specify the amount and date of the loan and the repayment schedule. The agreement does not have to be signed if the agreement is enforceable under applicable law without being signed. The agreement must be set forth either--

- (1) In a written paper document;
- (2) In an electronic medium that is reasonably accessible to the participant or the beneficiary and that is provided under a system that satisfies the following requirements:
  - (i) The system must be reasonably designed to preclude any individual other than the participant or the beneficiary from requesting a loan.
  - (ii) The system must provide the participant or the beneficiary with a reasonable opportunity to review and to confirm, modify, or rescind the terms of the loan before the loan is made.
  - (iii) The system must provide the participant or the beneficiary, within a reasonable time after the loan is made, a confirmation of the loan terms either through a written paper document or through an electronic medium that is reasonably accessible to the participant or the beneficiary and that is provided under a system that is reasonably designed to provide the confirmation in a manner no less understandable to the participant or beneficiary than a written document and, under which, at the time the confirmation is provided, the participant or the beneficiary is advised that he or she may request and receive a written paper document at no charge, and, upon request, that document is provided to the participant or beneficiary at no charge; or
- (3) In such other form as may be approved by the Commissioner.

Q-4: If a loan from a qualified employer plan to a participant or beneficiary fails to satisfy the requirements of Q&A-3 of this section, when does a deemed distribution occur?

A-4: (a) Deemed distribution. For purposes of section 72, a deemed distribution occurs at the first time that the requirements of Q&A-3 of this section are not satisfied, in form or in operation. This may occur at the time the loan is made or at a later date. If the terms of the loan do not require repayments that satisfy the repayment term requirement of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\) or the level amortization requirement of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(C\), or the loan is not evidenced by an enforceable agreement satisfying the requirements of paragraph (b) of Q&A-3 of this section, the entire amount of the loan is a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\) at the time the loan is made. If the loan satisfies the requirements of Q&A-3 of this section except that the amount loaned exceeds the limitations of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(A\), the amount of the loan in excess of the applicable limitation is a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\) at the time the loan is made. If the loan initially satisfies the requirements of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(A\), \(B\) and \(C\) and the enforceable agreement requirement of paragraph (b) of Q&A-3 of this section, but payments are not made in accordance with the terms applicable to the loan, a deemed distribution occurs as a result of the failure to make such payments. See Q&A-10 of this section regarding when such a deemed distribution occurs and the amount thereof and Q&A-11 of this section regarding the tax treatment of a deemed distribution.

(b) Examples. The following examples illustrate the rules in paragraph (a) of this Q&A-4 and are based upon the assumptions described in the introductory text of this section:

Example 1. (i) A participant has a nonforfeitable account balance of $200,000 and receives $70,000 as a loan repayable in level quarterly installments over five years.

(ii) Under section 72\(p\), the participant has a deemed distribution of $20,000 (the excess of $70,000 over $50,000) at the time of the loan, because the loan exceeds the $50,000 limit in section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(A\)\(i\). The remaining $50,000 is not a deemed distribution.

Example 2. (i) A participant with a nonforfeitable account balance of $30,000 borrows $20,000 as a loan repayable in level monthly installments over five years.

(ii) Because the amount of the loan is $5,000 more than 50% of the participant's nonforfeitable account balance, the participant has a deemed distribution of $5,000 at the time of the loan. The remaining $15,000 is not a deemed distribution. (Note also that, if the loan is secured solely by the participant's account balance, the loan may be a prohibited transaction under section 4975 because the loan may not satisfy 29 CFR 2550.408b-1\(f\)\(2\).)

Example 3. (i) The nonforfeitable account balance of a participant is $100,000 and a $50,000 loan is made to the participant repayable in level quarterly installments over seven years. The loan is not eligible for the section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\)\(ii\) exception for loans used to acquire certain dwelling units.

(ii) Because the repayment period exceeds the maximum five-year period in section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\)\(i\), the participant has a deemed distribution of $50,000 at the time the loan is made.

Example 4. (i) On August 1, 2002, a participant has a nonforfeitable account balance of $45,000 and borrows $20,000 from a plan to be repaid over five years in level monthly installments due at the end of each month. After making monthly payments through July 2003, the participant fails to make any of the payments due thereafter.

(ii) As a result of the failure to satisfy the requirement that the loan be repaid in level monthly installments, the participant has a deemed distribution. See paragraph (c) of Q&A-10 of this section regarding when such a deemed distribution occurs and the amount thereof.

Q-5: What is a principal residence for purposes of the exception in section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\)\(ii\) from the requirement that a loan be repaid in five years?

A-5: Section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\)\(ii\) provides that the requirement in section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\)\(i\) that a plan loan be repaid within five years does not apply to a loan used to acquire a dwelling unit which will within a reasonable time be used as the principal residence of the participant (a principal residence plan loan). For this purpose, a principal residence has the same meaning as a principal residence under section 121.

Q-6: In order to satisfy the requirements for a principal residence plan loan, is a loan required to be secured by the dwelling unit that will within a reasonable time be used as the principal residence of the participant?

A-6: A loan is not required to be secured by the dwelling unit that will within a reasonable time be used as the participant's principal residence in order to satisfy the requirements for a principal residence plan loan.

Q-7: What tracing rules apply in determining whether a loan qualifies as a principal residence plan loan?

A-7: The tracing rules established under section 163\(h\)\(3\)\(B\) apply in determining whether a loan is treated as for the acquisition of a principal residence in order to qualify as a principal residence plan loan.

Q-8: Can a refinancing qualify as a principal residence plan loan?

A-8: (a) Refinancings. In general, no, a refinancing cannot qualify as a principal residence plan loan. However, a loan from a qualified employer plan used to repay a loan from a third party will qualify as a principal residence plan loan if the plan loan qualifies as a principal residence plan loan without regard to the loan from the third party.

(b) Example. The following example illustrates the rules in paragraph (a) of this Q&A-8 and is based upon the assumptions described in the introductory text of this section:

Example. (i) On July 1, 2003, a participant requests a $50,000 plan loan to be repaid in level monthly installments over 15 years. On August 1, 2003, the participant acquires a principal residence and pays a portion of the purchase price with a $50,000 bank loan. On September 1, 2003, the plan loans $50,000 to the participant, which the participant uses to pay the bank loan.

(ii) Because the plan loan satisfies the requirements to qualify as a principal residence plan loan (taking into account the tracing rules of section 163\(h\)\(3\)\(B\)), the plan loan qualifies for the exception in section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\)\(ii\).

Q-9: Does the level amortization requirement of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(C\) apply when a participant is on a leave of absence without pay?

A-9: (a) Leave of absence. The level amortization requirement of section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(C\) does not apply for a period, not longer than one year (or such longer period as may apply under section 414\(u\)), that a participant is on a bona fide leave of absence, either without pay from the employer or at a rate of pay (after income and employment tax withholding) that is less than the amount of the installment payments required under the terms of the loan. However, the loan (including interest that accrues during the leave of absence) must be repaid by the latest date permitted under section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(B\) (e.g., the suspension of payments cannot extend the term of the loan beyond 5 years, in the case of a loan that is not a principal residence plan loan) and the amount of the installments due after the leave ends (or, if earlier, after the first year of the leave or such longer period as may apply under section 414\(u\)) must not be less than the amount required under the terms of the original loan.

(b) Military service. See section 414\(u\)\(4\) for special rules relating to military service.

(c) Example. The following example illustrates the rules of paragraph (a) of this Q&A-9 and is based upon the assumptions described in the introductory text of this section:

Example. (i) On July 1, 2002, a participant with a nonforfeitable account balance of $80,000 borrows $40,000 to be repaid in level monthly installments of $825 each over 5 years. The loan is not a principal residence plan loan. The participant makes 9 monthly payments and commences an unpaid leave of absence that lasts for 12 months. Thereafter, the participant resumes active employment and resumes making repayments on the loan until the loan is repaid in full (including interest that accrued during the leave of absence). The amount of each monthly installment is increased to $1,130 in order to repay the loan by June 30, 2007.

- (ii) Because the loan satisfies the requirements of section 72\(p\)\(2\), the participant does not have a deemed distribution. Alternatively, section 72(p)(2) would be satisfied if the participant continued the monthly installments of $825 after resuming active employment and on June 30, 2007 repaid the full balance remaining due.

Q-10: If a participant fails to make the installment payments required under the terms of a loan that satisfied the requirements of Q&A-3 of this section when made, when does a deemed distribution occur and what is the amount of the deemed distribution?

A-10: (a) Timing of deemed distribution. Failure to make any installment payment when due in accordance with the terms of the loan violates section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(C\) and, accordingly, results in a deemed distribution at the time of such failure. However, the plan administrator may allow a cure period and section 72(p)(2)(C) will not be considered to have been violated if the installment payment is made not later than the end of the cure period, which period cannot continue beyond the last day of the calendar quarter following the calendar quarter in which the required installment payment was due.

(b) Amount of deemed distribution. If a loan satisfies Q&A-3 of this section when made, but there is a failure to pay the installment payments required under the terms of the loan (taking into account any cure period allowed under paragraph (a) of this Q&A-10), then the amount of the deemed distribution equals the entire outstanding balance of the loan (including accrued interest) at the time of such failure.

(c) Example. The following example illustrates the rules in paragraphs (a) and (b) of this Q&A-10 and is based upon the assumptions described in the introductory text of this section:

Example. (i) On August 1, 2002, a participant has a nonforfeitable account balance of $45,000 and borrows $20,000 from a plan to be repaid over 5 years in level monthly installments due at the end of each month. After making all monthly payments due through July 31, 2003, the participant fails to make the payment due on August 31, 2003 or any other monthly payments due thereafter. The plan administrator allows a three-month cure period.

(ii) As a result of the failure to satisfy the requirement that the loan be repaid in level installments pursuant to section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(C\), the participant has a deemed distribution on November 30, 2003, which is the last day of the three-month cure period for the August 31, 2003 installment. The amount of the deemed distribution is $17,157, which is the outstanding balance on the loan at November 30, 2003. Alternatively, if the plan administrator had allowed a cure period through the end of the next calendar quarter, there would be a deemed distribution on December 31, 2003 equal to $17,282, which is the outstanding balance of the loan at December 31, 2003.

Q-11: Does section 72 apply to a deemed distribution as if it were an actual distribution?

A-11: (a) Tax basis. If the employee's account includes after-tax contributions or other investment in the contract under section 72(e), section 72 applies to a deemed distribution as if it were an actual distribution, with the result that all or a portion of the deemed distribution may not be taxable.

(b) Section 72(t) and (m). Section 72(t) (which imposes a 10 percent tax on certain early distributions) and section 72(m)(5) (which imposes a separate 10 percent tax on certain amounts received by a 5-percent owner) apply to a deemed distribution under section 72(p) in the same manner as if the deemed distribution were an actual distribution.

Q-12: Is a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\) treated as an actual distribution for purposes of the qualification requirements of section 401, the distribution provisions of section 402, the distribution restrictions of section 401(k)(2)(B) or 403(b)(11), or the vesting requirements of Sec. 1.411(a)-7(d)(5) (which affects the application of a graded vesting schedule in cases involving a prior distribution)?

A-12: No; thus, for example, if a participant in a money purchase plan who is an active employee has a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\), the plan will not be considered to have made an in-service distribution to the participant in violation of the qualification requirements applicable to money purchase plans. Similarly, the deemed distribution is not eligible to be rolled over to an eligible retirement plan and is not considered an impermissible distribution of an amount attributable to elective contributions in a section 401(k) plan. See also Sec. 1.402(c)-2, Q&A-4(d) and Sec. 1.401(k)-1(d)(6)(ii).

Q-13: How does a reduction (offset) of an account balance in order to repay a plan loan differ from a deemed distribution?

A-13: (a) Difference between deemed distribution and plan loan offset amount.

(1) Loans to a participant from a qualified employer plan can give rise to two types of taxable distributions-

- (i) A deemed distribution pursuant to section 72\(p\); and
- (ii) A distribution of an offset amount.

(2) As described in Q&A-4 of this section, a deemed distribution occurs when the requirements of Q&A-3 of this section are not satisfied, either when the loan is made or at a later time. A deemed distribution is treated as a distribution to the participant or beneficiary only for certain tax purposes and is not a distribution of the accrued benefit. A distribution of a plan loan offset amount (as defined in Sec. 1.402(c)-2, Q&A-9(b)) occurs when, under the terms governing a plan loan, the accrued benefit of the participant or beneficiary is reduced (offset) in order to repay the loan (including the enforcement of the plan's security interest in the accrued benefit). A distribution of a plan loan offset amount could occur in a variety of circumstances, such as where the terms governing the plan loan require that, in the event of the participant's request for a distribution, a loan be repaid immediately or treated as in default.

(b) Plan loan offset. In the event of a plan loan offset, the amount of the account balance that is offset against the loan is an actual distribution for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, not a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\). Accordingly, a plan may be prohibited from making such an offset under the provisions of section 401(a), 401(k)(2)(B) or 403(b)(11) prohibiting or limiting distributions to an active employee. See Sec. 1.402(c)-2, Q&A-9(c), Example 6. See also Q&A-19 of this section for rules regarding the treatment of a loan after a deemed distribution.

Q-14: How is the amount includible in income as a result of a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\) required to be reported?

A-14: The amount includible in income as a result of a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\) is required to be reported on Form 1099-R (or any other form prescribed by the Commissioner).

Q-15: What withholding rules apply to plan loans?

A-15: To the extent that a loan, when made, is a deemed distribution or an account balance is reduced (offset) to repay a loan, the amount includible in income is subject to withholding. If a deemed distribution of a loan or a loan repayment by benefit offset results in income at a date after the date the loan is made, withholding is required only if a transfer of cash or property (excluding employer securities) is made to the participant or beneficiary from the plan at the same time. See Secs. 35.3405-1, f-4, and 31.3405(c)-1, Q&A-9 and Q&A-11, of this chapter for further guidance on withholding rules.

Q-16: If a loan fails to satisfy the requirements of Q&A-3 of this section and is a prohibited transaction under section 4975, is the deemed distribution of the loan under section 72\(p\) a correction of the prohibited transaction?

A-16: No, a deemed distribution is not a correction of a prohibited transaction under section 4975. See Secs. 141.4975-13 and 53.4941(e)-1(c)(1) of this chapter for guidance concerning correction of a prohibited transaction.

Q-17: What are the income tax consequences if an amount is transferred from a qualified employer plan to a participant or beneficiary as a loan, but there is an express or tacit understanding that the loan will not be repaid?

A-17: If there is an express or tacit understanding that the loan will not be repaid or, for any reason, the transaction does not create a debtor-creditor relationship or is otherwise not a bona fide loan, then the amount transferred is treated as an actual distribution from the plan for purposes of the Internal Revenue Code, and is not treated as a loan or as a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\).

Q-18: If a qualified employer plan maintains a program to invest in residential mortgages, are loans made pursuant to the investment program subject to section 72\(p\)?

A-18: (a) Residential mortgage loans made by a plan in the ordinary course of an investment program are not subject to section 72\(p\) if the property acquired with the loans is the primary security for such loans and the amount loaned does not exceed the fair market value of the property. An investment program exists only if the plan has established, in advance of a specific investment under the program, that a certain percentage or amount of plan assets will be invested in residential mortgages available to persons purchasing the property who satisfy commercially customary financial criteria. A loan will not be considered as made under an investment program if--

- (1) Any of the loans made under the program matures upon a participant's termination from employment;
- (2) Any of the loans made under the program is an earmarked asset of a participant's or beneficiary's individual account in the plan; or
- (3) The loans made under the program are made available only to participants or beneficiaries in the plan.

(b) Paragraph (a)(3) of this Q&A-18 shall not apply to a plan which, on December 20, 1995, and at all times thereafter, has had in effect a loan program under which, but for paragraph (a)(3) of this Q&A-18, the loans comply with the conditions of paragraph (a) of this Q&A-18 to constitute residential mortgage loans in the ordinary course of an investment program.

(c) No loan that benefits an officer, director, or owner of the employer maintaining the plan, or their beneficiaries, will be treated as made under an investment program.

(d) This section does not provide guidance on whether a residential mortgage loan made under a plan's investment program would result in a prohibited transaction under section 4975, or on whether such a loan made by a plan covered by Title I of ERISA would be consistent with the fiduciary standards of ERISA or would result in a prohibited transaction under section 406 of ERISA. See 29 CFR 2550.408b-1.

Q-19: If there is a deemed distribution under section 72\(p\), is the interest that accrues thereafter on the amount of the deemed distribution an indirect loan for income tax purposes?

A-19: (a) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (b) of this Q&A-19, a deemed distribution of a loan is treated as a distribution for purposes of section 72. Therefore, a loan that is deemed to be distributed under section 72\(p\) ceases to be an outstanding loan for purposes of section 72, and the interest that accrues thereafter under the plan on the amount deemed distributed is disregarded in applying section 72 to the participant or beneficiary. Even though interest continues to accrue on the outstanding loan (and is taken into account for purposes of determining the tax treatment of any subsequent loan in accordance with paragraph (b) of this Q&A-19), this additional interest is not treated as an additional loan (and, thus, does not result in an additional deemed distribution) for purposes of section 72\(p\). However, a loan that is deemed distributed under section 72\(p\) is not considered distributed for all purposes of the Internal Revenue Code. See Q&A-11 through Q&A-16 of this section.

(b) Exception for purposes of applying section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(A\) to a subsequent loan. In the case of a loan that is deemed distributed under section 72\(p\) and that has not been repaid (such as by a plan loan offset), the unpaid amount of such loan, including accrued interest, is considered outstanding for purposes of applying section 72\(p\)\(2\)\(A\) to determine the maximum amount of any subsequent loan to the participant or beneficiary.

Q-20: May a participant refinance an outstanding loan or have more than one loan outstanding from a plan?

A-20: [Reserved]

Q-21: Is a participant's tax basis under the plan increased if the participant repays the loan after a deemed distribution?

A-21: (a) Repayments after deemed distribution. Yes, if the participant or beneficiary repays the loan after a deemed distribution of the loan under section 72\(p\), then, for purposes of section 72\(e\), the participant's or beneficiary's investment in the contract (tax basis) under the plan increases by the amount of the cash repayments that the participant or beneficiary makes on the loan after the deemed distribution. However, loan repayments are not treated as after-tax contributions for other purposes, including sections 401\(m\) and 415\(c\)\(2\)\(B\).

(b) Example. The following example illustrates the rules in paragraph (a) of this Q&A-21 and is based on the assumptions described in the introductory text of this section:

Example. (i) A participant receives a $20,000 loan on January 1, 2003, to be repaid in 20 quarterly installments of $1,245 each. On December 31, 2003, the outstanding loan balance ($19,179) is deemed distributed as a result of a failure to make quarterly installment payments that were due on September 30, 2003 and December 31, 2003. On June 30, 2004, the participant repays $5,147 (which is the sum of the three installment payments that were due on September 30, 2003, December 31, 2003, and March 31, 2004, with interest thereon to June 30, 2004, plus the installment payment due on June 30, 2004). Thereafter, the participant resumes making the installment payments of $1,245 from September 30, 2004 through December 31, 2007. The loan repayments made after December 31, 2003 through December 31, 2007 total $22,577.

(ii) Because the participant repaid $22,577 after the deemed distribution that occurred on December 31, 2003, the participant has investment in the contract (tax basis) equal to $22,577 (14 payments of $1,245 each plus a single payment of $5,147) as of December 31, 2007.

Q-22: When is the effective date of section 72\(p\) and the regulations in this section?

A-22: (a) Statutory effective date. Section 72\(p\) generally applies to assignments, pledges, and loans made after August 13, 1982.

(b) Regulatory effective date. This section applies to assignments, pledges, and loans made on or after January 1, 2002.

(c) Loans made before the regulatory effective date--(1) General rule. A plan is permitted to apply Q&A-19 and Q&A-21 of this section to a loan made before the regulatory effective date in paragraph (b) of this Q&A-22 (and after the statutory effective date in paragraph (a) of this Q&A-22) if there has not been any deemed distribution of the loan before the transition date or if the conditions of paragraph (c)(2) of this Q&A-22 are satisfied with respect to the loan.

(2) Consistency transition rule for certain loans deemed distributed before the regulatory effective date.

(i) The rules in this paragraph (c)(2) of this Q&A-22 apply to a loan made before the regulatory effective date in paragraph (b) of this Q&A-22 (and after the statutory effective date in paragraph (a) of this Q&A-22) if there has been any deemed distribution of the loan before the transition date.

(ii) The plan is permitted to apply Q&A-19 and Q&A-21 of this section to the loan beginning on any January 1, but only if the plan reported, in Box 1 of Form 1099-R, for a taxable year no later than the latest taxable year that would be permitted under this section (if this section had been in effect for all loans made after the statutory effective date in paragraph (a) of this Q&A-22), a gross distribution of an amount at least equal to the initial default amount. For purposes of this section, the initial default amount is the amount that would be reported as a gross distribution under Q&A-4 and Q&A-10 of this section and the transition date is the January 1 on which a plan begins applying Q&A-19 and Q&A-21 of this section to a loan.

(iii) If a plan applies Q&A-19 and Q&A-21 of this section to such a loan, then the plan, in its reporting and withholding on or after the transition date, must not attribute investment in the contract (tax basis) to the participant or beneficiary based upon the initial default amount.

(iv) This paragraph (c)(2)(iv) of this Q&A-22 applies if—

(A) The plan attributed investment in the contract (tax basis) to the participant or beneficiary based on the deemed distribution of the loan;

(B) The plan subsequently made an actual distribution to the participant or beneficiary before the transition date; and

(C) Immediately before the transition date, the initial default amount (or, if less, the amount of the investment in the contract so attributed) exceeds the participant's or beneficiary's investment in the contract (tax basis). If this paragraph (c)(2)(iv) of this Q&A-22 applies, the plan must treat the excess (the loan transition amount) as a loan amount that remains outstanding and must include the excess in the participant's or beneficiary's income at the time of the first actual distribution made on or after the transition date.

(3) Examples. The rules in paragraph (c)(2) of this Q&A-22 are illustrated by the following examples, which are based on the assumptions described in the introductory text of this section (and, except as specifically provided in the examples, also assume that no distributions are made to the participant and that the participant has no investment in the contract with respect to the plan). Example 1, Example 2, and Example 4 of this paragraph (c)(3) of this Q&A-22 illustrate the application of the rules in paragraph (c)(2) of this Q&A-22 to a plan that, before the transition date, did not treat interest accruing after the initial deemed distribution as resulting in additional deemed distributions under section 72\(p\). Example 3 of this paragraph (c)(3) of this Q&A-22 illustrates the application of the rules in paragraph (c)(2) of this Q&A-22 to a plan that, before the transition date, treated interest accruing after the initial deemed distribution as resulting in additional deemed distributions under section 72(p). The examples are as follows:

Example 1. (i) In 1998, when a participant's account balance under a plan is $50,000, the participant receives a loan from the plan. The participant makes the required repayments until 1999 when there is a deemed distribution of $20,000 as a result of a failure to repay the loan. For 1999, as a result of the deemed distribution, the plan reports, in Box 1 of Form 1099-R, a gross distribution of $20,000 (which is the initial default amount in accordance with paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this Q&A-22) and, in Box 2 of Form 1099-R, a taxable amount of $20,000. The plan then records an increase in the participant's tax basis for the same amount ($20,000). Thereafter, the plan disregards, for purposes of section 72, the interest that accrues on the loan after the 1999 deemed distribution. Thus, as of December 31, 2001, the total taxable amount reported by the plan as a result of the deemed distribution is $20,000 and the plan's records show that the participant's tax basis is the same amount ($20,000). As of January 1, 2002, the plan decides to apply Q&A-19 of this section to the loan. Accordingly, it reduces the participant's tax basis by the initial default amount of $20,000, so that the participant's remaining tax basis in the plan is zero. Thereafter, the amount of the outstanding loan is not treated as part of the account balance for purposes of section 72. The participant attains age 59½ in the year 2003 and receives a distribution of the full account balance under the plan consisting of $60,000 in cash and the loan receivable. At that time, the plan's records reflect an offset of the loan amount against the loan receivable in the participant's account and a distribution of $60,000 in cash.

(ii) For the year 2003, the plan must report a gross distribution of $60,000 in Box 1 of Form 1099-R and a taxable amount of $60,000 in Box 2 of Form 1099-R.

Example 2. (i) The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that in 1999, immediately prior to the deemed distribution, the participant's account balance under the plan totals $50,000 and the participant's tax basis is $10,000. For 1999, the plan reports, in Box 1 of Form 1099-R, a gross distribution of $20,000 (which is the initial default amount in accordance with paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this Q&A-22) and reports, in Box 2 of Form 1099-R, a taxable amount of $16,000 (the $20,000 deemed distribution minus $4,000 of tax basis ($10,000 times ($20,000/$50,000)) allocated to the deemed distribution). The plan then records an increase in tax basis equal to the $20,000 deemed distribution, so that the participant's remaining tax basis as of December 31, 1999, totals $26,000 ($10,000 minus $4,000 plus $20,000). Thereafter, the plan disregards, for purposes of section 72, the interest that accrues on the loan after the 1999 deemed distribution. Thus, as of December 31, 2001, the total taxable amount reported by the plan as a result of the deemed distribution is $16,000 and the plan's records show that the participant's tax basis is $26,000. As of January 1, 2002, the plan decides to apply Q&A-19 of this section to the loan. Accordingly, it reduces the participant's tax basis by the initial default amount of $20,000, so that the participant's remaining tax basis in the plan is $6,000. Thereafter, the amount of the outstanding loan is not treated as part of the account balance for purposes of section 72. The participant attains age 59½ in the year 2003 and receives a distribution of the full account balance under the plan consisting of $60,000 in cash and the loan receivable. At that time, the plan's records reflect an offset of the loan amount against the loan receivable in the participant's account and a distribution of $60,000 in cash.

(ii) For the year 2003, the plan must report a gross distribution of $60,000 in Box 1 of Form 1099-R and a taxable amount of $54,000 in Box 2 of Form 1099-R.

Example 3. (i) In 1993, when a participant's account balance in a plan is $100,000, the participant receives a loan of $50,000 from the plan. The participant makes the required loan repayments until 1995 when there is a deemed distribution of $28,919 as a result of a failure to repay the loan. For 1995, as a result of the deemed distribution, the plan reports, in Box 1 of Form 1099-R, a gross distribution of $28,919 (which is the initial default amount in accordance with paragraph (c)(2)(ii) of this Q&A-22) and, in Box 2 of Form 1099-R, a taxable amount of $28,919. For 1995, the plan also records an increase in the participant's tax basis for the same amount ($28,919). Each year thereafter through 2001, the plan reports a gross distribution equal to the interest accruing that year on the loan balance, reports a taxable amount equal to the interest accruing that year on the loan balance reduced by the participant's tax basis allocated to the gross distribution, and records a net increase in the participant's tax basis equal to that taxable amount. As of December 31, 2001, the taxable amount reported by the plan as a result of the loan totals $44,329 and the plan's records for purposes of section 72 show that the participant's tax basis totals the same amount ($44,329). As of January 1, 2002, the plan decides to apply Q&A-19 of this section. Accordingly, it reduces the participant's tax basis by the initial default amount of $28,919, so that the participant's remaining tax basis in the plan is $15,410 ($44,329 minus $28,919). Thereafter, the amount of the outstanding loan is not treated as part of the account balance for purposes of section 72. The participant attains age 59½ in the year 2003 and receives a distribution of the full account balance under the plan consisting of $180,000 in cash and the loan receivable equal to the $28,919 outstanding loan amount in 1995 plus interest accrued thereafter to the payment date in 2003. At that time, the plan's records reflect an offset of the loan amount against the loan receivable in the participant's account and a distribution of $180,000 in cash.

(ii) For the year 2003, the plan must report a gross distribution of $180,000 in Box 1 of Form 1099-R and a taxable amount of $164,590 in Box 2 of Form 1099-R ($180,000 minus the remaining tax basis of $15,410).

Example 4. (i) The facts are the same as in Example 1, except that in 2000, after the deemed distribution, the participant receives a $10,000 hardship distribution. At the time of the hardship distribution, the participant's account balance under the plan totals $50,000. For 2000, the plan reports, in Box 1 of Form 1099-R, a gross distribution of $10,000 and, in Box 2 of Form 1099-R, a taxable amount of $6,000 (the $10,000 actual distribution minus $4,000 of tax basis ($10,000 times ($20,000/$50,000)) allocated to this actual distribution). The plan then records a decrease in tax basis equal to $4,000, so that the participant's remaining tax basis as of December 31, 2000, totals $16,000 ($20,000 minus $4,000). After 1999, the plan disregards, for purposes of section 72, the interest that accrues on the loan after the 1999 deemed distribution. Thus, as of December 31, 2001, the total taxable amount reported by the plan as a result of the deemed distribution plus the 2000 actual distribution is $26,000 and the plan's records show that the participant's tax basis is $16,000. As of January 1, 2002, the plan decides to apply Q&A-19 of this section to the loan. Accordingly, it reduces the participant's tax basis by the initial default amount of $20,000, so that the participant's remaining tax basis in the plan is reduced from $16,000 to zero. However, because the $20,000 initial default amount exceeds $16,000, the plan records a loan transition amount of $4,000 ($20,000 minus $16,000). Thereafter, the amount of the outstanding loan, other than the $4,000 loan transition amount, is not treated as part of the account balance for purposes of section 72. The participant attains age 59½ in the year 2003 and receives a distribution of the full account balance under the plan consisting of $60,000 in cash and the loan receivable. At that time, the plan's records reflect an offset of the loan amount against the loan receivable in the participant's account and a distribution of $60,000 in cash.

(ii) In accordance with paragraph (c)(2)(iv) of this Q&A-22, the plan must report in Box 1 of Form 1099-R a gross distribution of $64,000 and in Box 2 of Form 1099-R a taxable amount for the participant for the year 2003 equal to $64,000 (the sum of the $60,000 paid in the year 2003 plus $4,000 as the loan transition amount).

Internal Revenue Code

Section 408(h)

26 USC 408(h)

Custodial Accounts

For purposes of this section, a custodial account shall be treated as a trust if the assets of such account are held by a bank (as defined in subsection (n)) or another person who demonstrates, to the satisfaction of the Secretary, that the manner in which he will administer the account will be consistent with the requirements of this section, and if the custodial account would, except for the fact that it is not a trust, constitute an individual retirement account described in subsection (a). For purposes of this title, in the case of a custodial account treated as a trust by reason of the preceding sentence, the custodian of such account shall be treated as the trustee thereof.

Investments in Collectibles Treated as Distributions

As Amended through 1988 (P.L. 100-647)

Editor's Note: Also see PTE 91-55, which permits IRA accounts to hold US American Eagle gold coins.

- In general. The acquisition by an individual retirement account or by an individually-directed account under a plan described in section 401(a) of any collectible shall be treated (for purposes of this section and section 402) as a distribution from such account in an amount equal to the cost to such account of such collectible.
- Collectible defined. For purposes of this subsection, the term "collectible" means --
  - A. Any work of art,
  - B. Any rug or antique,
  - C. Any metal or gem,
  - D. Any stamp or coin,
  - E. Any alcoholic beverage, or

F. Any other tangible personal property specified by the Secretary for purposes of this subsection.

- Exception for Certain Coins. In the case of an individual retirement account, paragraph (2) shall not apply to any gold coin described in paragraph (7), (8), (9), or (10) of Section 5112(A) of Title 31 or any silver coin described in Section 5112(e) of Title 31.

Internal Revenue Code

Section 408(q)

26 USC 408(q)

Deemed Individual Retirement Accounts

(q) Deemed IRAs under qualified employer plans

(1) General rule

If -

(B) under the terms of the qualified employer plan, such account or annuity meets the applicable requirements of this section or section 408A for an individual retirement account or annuity, then such account or annuity shall be treated for purposes of this title in the same manner as an individual retirement plan and not as a qualified employer plan (and contributions to such account or annuity as contributions to an individual retirement plan and not to the qualified employer plan). For purposes of subparagraph (B), the requirements of subsection (a)(5) shall not apply.

(2) Special rules for qualified employer plans

For purposes of this title, a qualified employer plan shall not fail to meet any requirement of this title solely by reason of establishing and maintaining a program described in paragraph (1).

(3) Definitions

For purposes of this subsection -

(A) Qualified employer plan

The term "qualified employer plan" has the meaning given such term by section 72(p)(4); except such term shall not include a government plan which is not a qualified plan unless the plan is an eligible deferred compensation plan (as defined in section 457(b)).

(B) Voluntary employee contribution

The term "voluntary employee contribution" means any contribution (other than a mandatory contribution within the meaning of section 411(c)(2)(C)) -

(i) which is made by an individual as an employee under a qualified employer plan which allows employees to elect to make contributions described in paragraph (1), and

(ii) with respect to which the individual has designated the contribution as a contribution to which this subsection applies.

26 USC 409(e)

Qualifications for Tax Credit ESOPs – Voting Rights

As Amended through 1997 (P.L. 105-34)

(e) Voting rights

1. In general

A plan meets the requirements of this subsection if it meets the requirements of paragraph (2) or (3), whichever is applicable.

2. Requirements where employer has a registration-type class of securities

If the employer has a registration-type class of securities, the plan meets the requirements of this paragraph only if each participant or beneficiary in the plan is entitled to direct the plan as to the manner in which securities of the employer which are entitled to vote and are allocated to the account of such participant or beneficiary are to be voted.

3. Requirement for other employers

If the employer does not have a registration-type class of securities, the plan meets the requirements of this paragraph only if each participant or beneficiary in the plan is entitled to direct the plan as to the manner in which voting rights under securities of the employer which are allocated to the account of such participant or beneficiary are to be exercised with respect to any corporate matter which involves the voting of such shares with respect to the approval or disapproval of any corporate merger or consolidation, recapitalization, reclassification, liquidation, dissolution, sale of substantially all assets of a trade or business, or such similar transaction as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations.

4. Registration-type class of securities defined

For purposes of this subsection, the term, "registration-type class of securities" means -

- A. a class of securities required to be registered under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, and
- B. a class of securities which would be required to be so registered except for the exemption from registration provided in subsection (g)(2)(H) of such section 12.

5. 1 vote per participant

A plan meets the requirements of paragraph (3) with respect to an issue if -

- A. the plan permits each participant 1 vote with respect to such issue, and
- B. the trustee votes the shares held by the plan in the proportion determined after application of subparagraph (A).

26 USC 417

Special Rules for Survivor Annuity Requirements

Section. 417. Definitions and special rules for purposes of minimum survivor annuity requirements

(a) Election to waive qualified joint and survivor annuity or qualified preretirement survivor annuity

(1) In general

A plan meets the requirements of section 401(a)(11) only if –

(A) under the plan, each participant -

- (i) may elect at any time during the applicable election period to waive the qualified joint and survivor annuity form of benefit or the qualified preretirement survivor annuity form of benefit (or both), and
- (ii) may revoke any such election at any time during the applicable election period, and

(B) the plan meets the requirements of paragraphs (2), (3), and (4) of this subsection.

(2) Spouse must consent to election

Each plan shall provide that an election under paragraph (1)(A)(i) shall not take effect unless -

- (A) (i) the spouse of the participant consents in writing to such election, (ii) such election designates a beneficiary (or a form of benefits) which may not be changed without spousal consent (or the consent of the spouse expressly permits designations by the participant without any requirement of further consent by the spouse), and (iii) the spouse's consent acknowledges the effect of such election and is witnessed by a plan representative or a notary public, or
- (B) it is established to the satisfaction of a plan representative that the consent required under subparagraph (A) may not be obtained because there is no spouse, because the spouse cannot be located, or because of such other circumstances as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe.

Any consent by a spouse (or establishment that the consent of a spouse may not be obtained) under the preceding sentence shall be effective only with respect to such spouse.

(3) Plan to provide written explanations

(A) Explanation of joint and survivor annuity

Each plan shall provide to each participant, within a reasonable period of time before the annuity starting date (and consistent with such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe), a written explanation of -

- (i) the terms and conditions of the qualified joint and survivor annuity,
- (ii) the participant's right to make, and the effect of, an election under paragraph (1) to waive the joint and survivor annuity form of benefit,
- (iii) the rights of the participant's spouse under paragraph (2), and
- (iv) the right to make, and the effect of, a revocation of an election under paragraph (1).

(B) Explanation of qualified preretirement survivor annuity

(i) In general

Each plan shall provide to each participant, within the applicable period with respect to such participant (and consistent with such regulations as the Secretary may prescribe), a written explanation with respect to the qualified preretirement survivor annuity comparable to that required under subparagraph (A).

(ii) Applicable period

For purposes of clause (i), the term "applicable period" means, with respect to a participant, whichever of the following periods ends last:

- (I) The period beginning with the first day of the plan year in which the participant attains age 32 and ending with the close of the plan year preceding the plan year in which the participant attains age 35.
- (II) A reasonable period after the individual becomes a participant.
- (III) A reasonable period ending after paragraph (5) ceases to apply to the participant.
- (IV) A reasonable period ending after section 401(a)(11) applies to the participant.

In the case of a participant who separates from service before attaining age 35, the applicable period shall be a reasonable period after separation.

(4) Requirement of spousal consent for using plan assets as security for loans

Each plan shall provide that, if section 401(a)(11) applies to a participant when part or all of the participant's accrued benefit is to be used as security for a loan, no portion of the participant's accrued benefit may be used as security for such loan unless -

- (A) the spouse of the participant (if any) consents in writing to such use during the 90-day period ending on the date on which the loan is to be so secured, and
- (B) requirements comparable to the requirements of paragraph (2) are met with respect to such consent.

(5) Special rules where plan fully subsidizes costs

(A) In general

The requirements of this subsection shall not apply with respect to the qualified joint and survivor annuity form of benefit or the qualified preretirement survivor annuity form of benefit, as the case may be, if such benefit may not be waived (or another beneficiary selected) and if the plan fully subsidizes the costs of such benefit.

(B) Definition

For purposes of subparagraph (A), a plan fully subsidizes the costs of a benefit if under the plan the failure to waive such benefit by a participant would not result in a decrease in any plan benefits with respect to such participant and would not result in increased contributions from such participant.

(6) Applicable election period defined

For purposes of this subsection, the term "applicable election period" means -

- (A) in the case of an election to waive the qualified joint and survivor annuity form of benefit, the 90-day period ending on the annuity starting date, or
- (B) in the case of an election to waive the qualified preretirement survivor annuity, the period which begins on the first day of the plan year in which the participant attains age 35 and ends on the date of the participant's death.

In the case of a participant who is separated from service, the applicable election period under subparagraph (B) with respect to benefits accrued before the date of such separation from service shall not begin later than such date.

(7) Special rules relating to time for written explanation

Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection -

(A) Explanation may be provided after annuity starting date

(i) In general

A plan may provide the written explanation described in paragraph (3)(A) after the annuity starting date. In any case to which this subparagraph applies, the applicable election period under paragraph (6) shall not end before the 30th day after the date on which such explanation is provided.

(ii) Regulatory authority

The Secretary may by regulations limit the application of clause (i), except that such regulations may not limit the period of time by which the annuity starting date precedes the provision of the written explanation other than by providing that the annuity starting date may not be earlier than termination of employment.

(B) Waiver of 30-day period

A plan may permit a participant to elect (with any applicable spousal consent) to waive any requirement that the written explanation be provided at least 30 days before the annuity starting date (or to waive the 30-day requirement under subparagraph (A)) if the distribution commences more than 7 days after such explanation is provided.

(b) Definition of qualified joint and survivor annuity

For purposes of this section and section 401(a)(11), the term "qualified joint and survivor annuity" means an annuity -

- (1) for the life of the participant with a survivor annuity for the life of the spouse which is not less than 50 percent of (and is not greater than 100 percent of) the amount of the annuity which is payable during the joint lives of the participant and the spouse, and
- (2) which is the actuarial equivalent of a single annuity for the life of the participant.

Such term also includes any annuity in a form having the effect of an annuity described in the preceding sentence.

(c) Definition of qualified preretirement survivor annuity

For purposes of this section and section 401(a)(11) -

(1) In general

Except as provided in paragraph (2), the term "qualified preretirement survivor annuity" means a survivor annuity for the life of the surviving spouse of the participant if -

(A) the payments to the surviving spouse under such annuity are not less than the amounts which would be payable as a survivor annuity under the qualified joint and survivor annuity under the plan (or the actuarial equivalent thereof) if -

- (i) in the case of a participant who dies after the date on which the participant attained the earliest retirement age, such participant had retired with an immediate qualified joint and survivor annuity on the day before the participant's date of death, or
- (ii) in the case of a participant who dies on or before the date on which the participant would have attained the earliest retirement age, such participant had -

- (I) separated from service on the date of death,
- (II) survived to the earliest retirement age,
- (III) retired with an immediate qualified joint and survivor annuity at the earliest retirement age,
- and
- (IV) died on the day after the day on which such participant would have attained the earliest retirement age, and

(B) under the plan, the earliest period for which the surviving spouse may receive a payment under such annuity is not later than the month in which the participant would have attained the earliest retirement age under the plan.

In the case of an individual who separated from service before the date of such individual's death, subparagraph (A)(ii)(I) shall not apply.

(2) Special rule for defined contribution plans

In the case of any defined contribution plan or participant described in clause (ii) or (iii) of section 401(a)(11)(B), the term "qualified preretirement survivor annuity" means an annuity for the life of the surviving spouse the actuarial equivalent of which is not less than 50 percent of the portion of the account balance of the participant (as of the date of death) to which the participant had a nonforfeitable right (within the meaning of section 411(a)).

(3) Security interests taken into account

For purposes of paragraphs (1) and (2), any security interest held by the plan by reason of a loan outstanding to the participant shall be taken into account in determining the amount of the qualified preretirement survivor annuity.

(d) Survivor annuities need not be provided if participant and spouse married less than 1 year

(1) In general

Except as provided in paragraph (2), a plan shall not be treated as failing to meet the requirements of section 401(a)(11) merely because the plan provides that a qualified joint and survivor annuity (or a qualified preretirement survivor annuity) will not be provided unless the participant and spouse had been married throughout the 1-year period ending on the earlier of -

- (A) the participant's annuity starting date, or
- (B) the date of the participant's death.

(2) Treatment of certain marriages within 1 year of annuity starting date for purposes of qualified joint and survivor annuities

For purposes of paragraph (1), if -

- (A) a participant marries within 1 year before the annuity starting date, and
- (B) the participant and the participant's spouse in such marriage have been married for at least a 1-year period ending on or before the date of the participant's death, such participant and such spouse shall be treated as having been married throughout the 1-year period ending on the participant's annuity starting date.

(e) Restrictions on cash-outs

(1) Plan may require distribution if present value not in excess of dollar limit

A plan may provide that the present value of a qualified joint and survivor annuity or a qualified preretirement survivor annuity will be immediately distributed if such value does not exceed the dollar limit under section 411(a)(11)(A). No distribution may be made under the preceding sentence after the annuity starting date unless the participant and the spouse of the participant (or where the participant has died, the surviving spouse) consents in writing to such distribution.

(2) Plan may distribute benefit in excess of dollar limit only with consent If -

(A) the present value of the qualified joint and survivor annuity or the qualified preretirement survivor annuity exceeds the dollar limit under section 411(a)(11)(A), and

(B) the participant and the spouse of the participant (or where the participant has died, the surviving spouse) consent in writing to the distribution, the plan may immediately distribute the present value of such annuity.

(3) Determination of present value

(A) In general

(i) Present value

Except as provided in subparagraph (B), for purposes of paragraphs (1) and (2), the present value shall not be less than the present value calculated by using the applicable mortality table and the applicable interest rate.

(ii) Definitions

For purposes of clause (i) -

(I) Applicable mortality table

The term "applicable mortality table" means the table prescribed by the Secretary. Such table shall be based on the prevailing commissioners' standard table (described in section 807(d)(5)

(A)) used to determine reserves for group annuity contracts issued on the date as of which present value is being determined (without regard to any other subparagraph of section 807(d)(5)).

(II) Applicable interest rate

The term "applicable interest rate" means the annual rate of interest on 30-year Treasury securities for the month before the date of distribution or such other time as the Secretary may by regulations prescribe.

(B) Exception

In the case of a distribution from a plan that was adopted and in effect before the date of the enactment of the Retirement Protection Act of 1994, the present value of any distribution made before the earlier of -

(i) the later of the date a plan amendment applying subparagraph (A) is adopted or made effective, or

(ii) the first day of the first plan year beginning after December 31, 1999, shall be calculated, for purposes of paragraphs (1) and (2), using the interest rate determined under the regulations of the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation for determining the present value of a lump sum distribution on plan termination that were in effect on September 1, 1993, and using the provisions of the plan as in effect on the day before such date of enactment; but only if such provisions of the plan met the requirements of section 417(e)(3) as in effect on the day before such date of enactment.

(f) Other definitions and special rules

For purposes of this section and section 401(a)(11) -

(1) Vested participant

The term "vested participant" means any participant who has a nonforfeitable right (within the meaning of section 411(a)) to any portion of such participant's accrued benefit.

(2) Annuity starting date

(A) In general

The term "annuity starting date" means -

(i) the first day of the first period for which an amount is payable as an annuity, or

(ii) in the case of a benefit not payable in the form of an annuity, the first day on which all events have occurred which entitle the participant to such benefit.

(B) Special rule for disability benefits

For purposes of subparagraph (A), the first day of the first period for which a benefit is to be received by reason of disability shall be treated as the annuity starting date only if such benefit is not an auxiliary benefit.

(3) Earliest retirement age

The term "earliest retirement age" means the earliest date on which, under the plan, the participant could elect to receive retirement benefits.

(4) Plan may take into account increased costs

A plan may take into account in any equitable manner (as determined by the Secretary) any increased costs resulting from providing a qualified joint or survivor annuity or a qualified preretirement survivor annuity.

(5) Distributions by reason of security interests

If the use of any participant's accrued benefit (or any portion thereof) as security for a loan meets the requirements of subsection (a)(4), nothing in this section or section 411(a)(11) shall prevent any distribution required by reason of a failure to comply with the terms of such loan.

(6) Requirements for certain spousal consents

No consent of a spouse shall be effective for purposes of subsection (e)(1) or (e)(2) (as the case may be) unless requirements comparable to the requirements for spousal consent to an election under subsection (a)(1)(A) are met.

(7) Consultation with the Secretary of Labor

In prescribing regulations under this section and section 401(a)(11), the Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of Labor.

Internal Revenue Code

26 USC 4975

Tax on Prohibited Transactions

As Amended through July 22, 1998 (P.L. 105-206)

(a) Initial taxes on disqualified person

There is hereby imposed a tax on each prohibited transaction.

The rate of tax shall be equal to 15 percent of the amount involved with respect to the prohibited transaction for each year (or part thereof) in the taxable period. The tax imposed by this subsection shall be paid by any disqualified person who participates in the prohibited transaction (other than a fiduciary acting only as such).

(b) Additional taxes on disqualified person

In any case in which an initial tax is imposed by subsection (a) on a prohibited transaction and the transaction is not corrected within the taxable period, there is hereby imposed a tax equal to 100 percent of the amount involved. The tax imposed by this subsection shall be paid by any disqualified person who participated in the prohibited transaction (other than a fiduciary acting only as such).

(c) Prohibited transaction

(1) General rule

For purposes of this section, the term "prohibited transaction" means any direct or indirect -

- (A) sale or exchange, or leasing, of any property between a plan and a disqualified person;
- (B) lending of money or other extension of credit between a plan and a disqualified person;
- (C) furnishing of goods, services, or facilities between a plan and a disqualified person;
- (D) transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a disqualified person of the income or assets of a plan;
- (E) act by a disqualified person who is a fiduciary whereby he deals with the income or assets of a plan in his own interests or for his own account; or
- (F) receipt of any consideration for his own personal account by any disqualified person who is a fiduciary from any party dealing with the plan in connection with a transaction involving the income or assets of the plan.

(2) Special exemption

The Secretary shall establish an exemption procedure for purposes of this subsection. Pursuant to such procedure, he may grant a conditional or unconditional exemption of any disqualified person or transaction, orders of disqualified persons or transactions, from all or part of the restrictions imposed by paragraph (1) of this subsection. Action under this subparagraph may be taken only after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of Labor. The Secretary may not grant an exemption under this paragraph unless he finds that such exemption is -

(A) administratively feasible,

(B) in the interests of the plan and of its participants and beneficiaries, and

(C) protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of the plan.

Before granting an exemption under this paragraph, the Secretary shall require adequate notice to be given to interested persons and shall publish notice in the Federal Register of the pendency of such exemption and shall afford interested persons an opportunity to present views. No exemption may be granted under this paragraph with respect to a transaction described in subparagraph (E) or (F) of paragraph (1) unless the Secretary affords an opportunity for a hearing and makes a determination on the record with respect to the findings required under subparagraphs (A), (B), and (C) of this paragraph, except that in lieu of such hearing the Secretary may accept any record made by the Secretary of Labor with respect to an application for exemption under section 408\(a\) of title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(3) Special rule for individual retirement accounts

An individual for whose benefit an individual retirement account is established and his beneficiaries shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this section with respect to any transaction concerning such account (which would otherwise be taxable under this section) if, with respect to such transaction, the account ceases to be an individual retirement account by reason of the application of section 408(e)(2)(A) or if section 408(e)(4) applies to such account.

(4) Special rule for medical savings accounts

An individual for whose benefit a medical savings account (within the meaning of section 220(d)) is established shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this section with respect to any transaction concerning such account (which would otherwise be taxable under this section) if section 220(e)(2) applies to such transaction.

(5) Special rule for education individual retirement accounts

An individual for whose benefit an education individual retirement account is established and any contributor to such account shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this section with respect to any transaction concerning such account (which would otherwise be taxable under this section) if section 530(d) applies with respect to such transaction.

(d) Exemptions

Except as provided in subsection (f)(6), the prohibitions provided in subsection (c) shall not apply to -

(1) any loan made by the plan to a disqualified person who is a participant or beneficiary of the plan if such loan -

(A) is available to all such participants or beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis,

(B) is not made available to highly compensated employees (within the meaning of section 414(q)) in an amount greater than the amount made available to other employees,

(C) is made in accordance with specific provisions regarding such loans set forth in the plan,

(D) bears a reasonable rate of interest, and

(E) is adequately secured;

(2) any contract, or reasonable arrangement, made with a disqualified person for office space, or legal, accounting, or other services necessary for the establishment or operation of the plan, if no more than reasonable compensation is paid therefore;

(3) any loan to an leveraged employee stock ownership plan (as defined in subsection (e)(7)), if-

(A) such loan is primarily for the benefit of participants and beneficiaries of the plan, and

(B) such loan is at a reasonable rate of interest, and any collateral which is given to a disqualified person by the plan consists only of qualifying employer securities (as defined in subsection (e)(8));

(4) the investment of all or part of a plan's assets in deposits which bear a reasonable interest rate in a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States or a State, if such bank or other institution is a fiduciary of such plan and if -

(A) the plan covers only employees of such bank or other institution and employees of affiliates of such bank or other institution, or

(B) such investment is expressly authorized by a provision of the plan or by a fiduciary (other than such bank or institution or affiliates thereof) who is expressly empowered by the plan to so instruct the trustee with respect to such investment;

(5) any contract for life insurance, health insurance, or annuities with one or more insurers which are qualified to do business in a State if the plan pays no more than adequate consideration, and if each such insurer or insurers is -

(A) the employer maintaining the plan, or

(B) a disqualified person which is wholly owned (directly or indirectly) by the employer establishing the plan, or by any person which is a disqualified person with respect to the plan, but only if the total premiums and annuity considerations written by such insurers for life insurance, health insurance, or annuities for all plans (and their employers) with respect to which such insurers are disqualified persons (not including premiums or annuity considerations written by the employer maintaining the plan) do not exceed 5 percent of the total premiums and annuity considerations written for all lines of insurance in that year by such insurers (not including premiums or annuity considerations written by the employer maintaining the plan);

(6) the provision of any ancillary service by a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States or a State, if such service is provided at not more than reasonable compensation, if such bank or other institution is a fiduciary of such plan, and if -

(A) such bank or similar financial institution has adopted adequate internal safeguards which assure that the provision of such ancillary service is consistent with sound banking and financial practice, as determined by Federal or State supervisory authority, and

(B) the extent to which such ancillary service is provided is subject to specific guidelines issued by such bank or similar financial institution (as determined by the Secretary after consultation with Federal and State supervisory authority), and under such guidelines the bank or similar financial institution does not provide such ancillary service -

(i) in an excessive or unreasonable manner, and

(ii) in a manner that would be inconsistent with the best interests of participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans;

(7) the exercise of a privilege to convert securities, to the extent provided in regulations of the Secretary but only if the plan receives no less than adequate consideration pursuant to such conversion;

(8) any transaction between a plan and a common or collective trust fund or pooled investment fund maintained by a disqualified person which is a bank or trust company supervised by a State or Federal agency or between a plan and a pooled investment fund of an insurance company qualified to do business in a State if -

(A) the transaction is a sale or purchase of an interest in the fund,

(B) the bank, trust company, or insurance company receives not more than a reasonable compensation, and

(C) such transaction is expressly permitted by the instrument under which the plan is maintained, or by a fiduciary (other than the bank, trust company, or insurance company, or an affiliate thereof) who has authority to manage and control the assets of the plan;

(9) receipt by a disqualified person of any benefit to which he may be entitled as a participant or beneficiary in the plan, so long as the benefit is computed and paid on a basis which is consistent with the terms of the plan as applied to all other participants and beneficiaries; (10) receipt by a disqualified person of any reasonable compensation for services rendered, or for the reimbursement of expenses properly and actually incurred, in the performance of his duties with the plan, but no person so serving who already receives full-time pay from an employer or an association of employers, whose employees are participants in the plan or from an employee organization whose members are participants in such plan shall receive compensation from such fund, except for reimbursement of expenses properly and actually incurred;

(10) service by a disqualified person as a fiduciary in addition to being an officer, employee, agent, or other representative of a disqualified person;

(11) the making by a fiduciary of a distribution of the assets of the trust in accordance with the terms of the plan if such assets are distributed in the same manner as provided under section 4044 of title IV of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (relating to allocation of assets);

(12) any transaction which is exempt from section 406 of such Act by reason of section 408\(e\) of such Act (or which would be so exempt if such section 406 applied to such transaction) or which is exempt from section 406 of such Act by reason of section 408\(b\)\(12\) of such Act;

(13) any transaction required or permitted under part 1 of subtitle E of title IV or section 4223 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, but this paragraph shall not apply with respect to the application of subsection (c)(1) (E) or (F); or

(14) a merger of multiemployer plans, or the transfer of assets or liabilities between multiemployer plans, determined by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation to meet the requirements of section 4231 of such Act, but this paragraph shall not apply with respect to the application of subsection (c)(1) (E) or (F).

(e) Definitions

(1) Plan

For purposes of this section, the term "plan" means -

(A) a trust described in section 401(a) which forms a part of a plan, or a plan described in section 403(a), which trust or plan is exempt from tax under section 501(a),

(B) an individual retirement account described in section 408(a),

(C) an individual retirement annuity described in section 408(b),

(D) a medical savings account described in section 220(d),

(E) an education individual retirement account described in section 530, or

(F) a trust, plan, account, or annuity which, at any time, has been determined by the Secretary to be described in any preceding subparagraph of this paragraph.

(2) Disqualified person

For purposes of this section, the term "disqualified person" means a person who is -

(A) a fiduciary;

(B) a person providing services to the plan;

(C) an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan;

(D) an employee organization any of whose members are covered by the plan;

(E) an owner, direct or indirect, of 50 percent or more of -

- (i) he combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or the total value of shares of all classes of stock of a corporation,
- (ii) the capital interest or the profits interest of a partnership, or
- (iii) the beneficial interest of a trust or unincorporated enterprise, which is an employer or an employee organization described in subparagraph (C) or (D);

(F) a member of the family (as defined in paragraph (6)) of any individual described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (E);

(G) a corporation, partnership, or trust or estate of which (or in which) 50 percent or more of -

- (i) the combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or the total value of shares of all classes of stock of such corporation,
- (ii) the capital interest or profits interest of such partnership, or
- (iii) the beneficial interest of such trust or estate, is owned directly or indirectly, or held by persons described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), (D), or (E);

(H) an officer, director (or an individual having powers or responsibilities similar to those of officers or directors), a 10 percent or more shareholder, or a highly compensated employee (earning 10 percent or more of the yearly wages of an employer) of a person described in subparagraph (C), (D), (E), or (G); or

(I) a 10 percent or more (in capital or profits) partner or joint venture of a person described in subparagraph (C), (D), (E), or (G).

The Secretary, after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of Labor or his delegate, may by regulation prescribe a percentage lower than 50 percent for subparagraphs (E) and (G) and lower than 10 percent for subparagraphs (H) and (I).

(3) Fiduciary

For purposes of this section, the term "fiduciary" means any person who -

- (A) exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control respecting management of such plan or exercises any authority or control respecting management or disposition of its assets,
- (B) renders investment advice for a fee or other compensation, direct or indirect, with respect to any moneys or other property of such plan, or has any authority or responsibility to do so, or
- (C) has any discretionary authority or discretionary responsibility in the administration of such plan. Such term includes any person designated under section 405(c)(1)(B) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(4) Stockholdings

For purposes of paragraphs (2)(E)(i) and (G)(i) there shall be taken into account indirect stockholdings which would be taken into account under section 267(c), except that, for purposes of this paragraph, section 267(c)(4) shall be treated as providing that the members of the family of an individual are the members within the meaning of paragraph (6).

(5) Partnerships; trusts

For purposes of paragraphs (2)(E)(ii) and (iii), (G)(ii) and (iii), and (I) the ownership of profits or beneficial interests shall be determined in accordance with the rules for constructive ownership of stock provided in section 267(c) (other than paragraph (3) thereof), except that section 267(c)(4) shall be treated as providing that the members of the family of an individual are the members within the meaning of paragraph (6).

(6) Member of family

For purposes of paragraph (2)(F), the family of any individual shall include his spouse, ancestor, lineal descendant, and any spouse of a lineal descendant.

(7) Employee stock ownership plan

The term "employee stock ownership plan" means a defined contribution plan -

- (A) which is a stock bonus plan which is qualified, or a stock bonus and a money purchase plan both of which are qualified under section 401(a), and which are designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities; and
- (B) which is otherwise defined in regulations prescribed by the Secretary.

A plan shall not be treated as an employee stock ownership plan unless it meets the requirements of section 409(h), section 409(o), and, if applicable, section 409(n) and section 664(g) and, if the employer has a registration-type class of securities (as defined in section 409(e)(4)), it meets the requirements of section 409(e).

(8) Qualifying employer security

The term "qualifying employer security" means any employer security within the meaning of section 409(l). If any moneys or other property of a plan are invested in shares of an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, the investment shall not cause that investment company or that investment company's investment adviser or principal underwriter to be treated as a fiduciary or a disqualified person for purposes of this section, except when an investment company or its investment adviser or principal underwriter acts in connection with a plan covering employees of the investment company, its investment adviser, or its principal underwriter.

(9) Section made applicable to withdrawal liability payment funds
For purposes of this section -

(A) In general

The term "plan" includes a trust described in section 501(c)(22).

(B) Disqualified person In the case of any trust to which this section applies by reason of subparagraph (A), the term "disqualified person" includes any person who is a disqualified person with respect to any plan to which such trust is permitted to make payments under section 4223 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

(f) Other definitions and special rules
For purposes of this section -

(1) Joint and several liability

If more than one person is liable under subsection (a) or (b) with respect to any one prohibited transaction, all such persons shall be jointly and severally liable under such subsection with respect to such transaction.

(2) Taxable period

The term "taxable period" means, with respect to any prohibited transaction, the period beginning with the date on which the prohibited transaction occurs and ending on the earliest of -

- (A) the date of mailing a notice of deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by subsection (a) under section 6212,
- (B) the date on which the tax imposed by subsection (a) is assessed, or
- (C) the date on which correction of the prohibited transaction is completed.

(3) Sale or exchange; encumbered property

A transfer of real or personal property by a disqualified person to a plan shall be treated as a sale or exchange if the property is subject to a mortgage or similar lien which the plan assumes or if it is subject to a mortgage or similar lien which a disqualified person placed on the property within the 10-year period ending on the date of the transfer.

(4) Amount involved

The term "amount involved" means, with respect to a prohibited transaction, the greater of the amount of money and the fair market value of the other property given or the amount of money and the fair market value of the other property received; except that, in the case of services described in paragraphs (2) and (10) of subsection (d) the amount involved shall be only the excess compensation. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the fair market value -

- (A) in the case of the tax imposed by subsection (a), shall be determined as of the date on which the prohibited transaction occurs; and
- (B) in the case of the tax imposed by subsection (b), shall be the highest fair market value during the taxable period.

(5) Correction

The terms "correction" and "correct" mean, with respect to a prohibited transaction, undoing the transaction to the extent possible, but in any case placing the plan in a financial position not worse than that in which it would be if the disqualified person were acting under the highest fiduciary standards.

(6) Exemptions not to apply to certain transactions

(A) In general

In the case of a trust described in section 401(a) which is part of a plan providing contributions or benefits for employees some or all of whom are owner-employees (as defined in section 401(c)(3)), the exemptions provided by subsection (d) (other than paragraphs (9) and (12)) shall not apply to a transaction in which the plan directly or indirectly -

- (i) lends any part of the corpus or income of the plan to,
- (ii) pays any compensation for personal services rendered to the plan to, or
- (iii) acquires for the plan any property from, or sells any property to, any such owner-employee, a member of the family (as defined in section 267(c)(4)) of any such owner-employee, or any corporation in which any such owner-employee owns, directly or indirectly, 50 percent or more of the total combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or 50 percent or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation.

(B) Special rules for shareholder-employees, etc.

(i) In general

For purposes of subparagraph (A), the following shall be treated as owner-employees:

(I) A shareholder-employee.

(II) A participant or beneficiary of an individual retirement plan (as defined in section 7701(a)(37)).

(III) An employer or association of employees which establishes such an individual retirement plan under section 408(c).

(ii) Exception for certain transactions involving shareholder-employees

Subparagraph (A)(iii) shall not apply to a transaction which consists of a sale of employer securities to an employee stock ownership plan (as defined in subsection (e)(7)) by a shareholder-employee, a member of the family (as defined in section 267(c)(4)) of such shareholder-employee, or a corporation in which such a shareholder-employee owns stock representing a 50 percent or greater interest described in subparagraph (A).

(C) Shareholder-employee

For purposes of subparagraph (B), the term "shareholder-employee" means an employee or officer of an S corporation who owns (or is considered as owning within the meaning of section 318(a)(1)) more than 5 percent of the outstanding stock of the corporation on any day during the taxable year of such corporation.

(g) Application of section

This section shall not apply -

(1) in the case of a plan to which a guaranteed benefit policy (as defined in section 401(b)(2)(B) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974) is issued, to any assets of the insurance company, insurance service, or insurance organization merely because of its issuance of such policy;

(2) to a governmental plan (within the meaning of section 414(d)); or

(3) to a church plan (within the meaning of section 414(e)) with respect to which the election provided by section 410(d) has not been made.

In the case of a plan which invests in any security issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, the assets of such plan shall be deemed to include such security but shall not, by reason of such investment, be deemed to include any assets of such company.

(h) Notification of Secretary of Labor

Before sending a notice of deficiency with respect to the tax imposed by subsection (a) or (b), the Secretary shall notify the Secretary of Labor and provide him a reasonable opportunity to obtain a correction of the prohibited transaction or to comment on the imposition of such tax.

(i) Cross reference

For provisions concerning coordination procedures between Secretary of Labor and Secretary of the Treasury with respect to application of tax imposed by this section and for authority to waive imposition of the tax imposed by subsection (b), see section 3003 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

Definitions
ERISA Section 3

ERISA Section 3(14)
"Party in Interest"

The term "party in interest" means, as to an employee benefit plan -

(A)	Any fiduciary (including, but not limited to, any administrator, officer, trustee, or custodian), counsel, or employee of such employee benefit plan;
(B)	A person providing services to such plan;
(C)	An employer any of whose employees are covered by such plan;
(D)	An employee organization any of whose members are covered by such plan;
(E)	An owner, direct or indirect, of 50% or more of -
	(i) The combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or the total value of shares of all classes of stock of a corporation,
	(ii) The capital interest or the profits interest of a partnership, or
	(iii) The beneficial interest of a trust or unincorporated enterprise, which is the employer or an employee organization described in subparagraph (C) or (D);
(F)	A relative (as defined in paragraph (15)) of any individual described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (E);
(G)	A corporation, partnership, or trust or estate of which (or in which) 50% or more of -
	(i) The combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or the total value of shares of all classes of stock of a corporation,

	(ii)	The capital interest or the profits interest of a partnership, or
	(iii)	The beneficial interest of a such trust or estate, is owned directly or indirectly, or held by persons described in subparagraph (A), (B), (C) (D), or (E);
(H)		An employee, officer, director (or an individual having powers or responsibilities similar to those of officers or directors, or a 10% or more shareholder directly or indirectly, of a person described in subparagraph (B), (C), (D), (E), or (G), or of the employee benefit plan; or
(I)		A 10% or more (directly or indirectly in capital or profits) partner or joint venture of a person described in subparagraph (B), (C), (D), (E) or (G). The Secretary, after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury, may by regulation prescribe a percentage lower than 50%, for subparagraph (E) and (G) and lower than 10% for subparagraph (H) or (I). The Secretary may prescribe regulations for determining the ownership (direct or indirect) of profits and beneficial interests, and the manner in which indirect stock holdings are taken into account. Any person who is a party in interest with respect to a plan to which a trust described in Section 501(c)(22) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 is permitted to make payments under Section 4223 shall be treated as a party in interest with respect to such trust.

A. Conference Report

See the discussion of the term "party in interest" at page 323 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Prohibited Transaction Class Exemptions (PTE)

1. [Plans] Two or more multi-employer plans or multiple employer plans are not parties in interest or disqualified persons with respect to each other merely because they are maintained by the same plan sponsors. However, a multi-employer plan or a multiple employer plan may be a party in interest or a disqualified person with respect to another multiemployer plan or multiple employer plan for other reasons (for example, one plan providing services to another). Final PTE 76-1; AO 77-47.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. [Affiliates] A corporation 50% or more of which is owned by a more than 50% shareholder of the employer maintaining the plan is a party in interest. Proposed PTE I-492.
2. [Banks] A savings and loan association is not a party in interest merely because plan assets are held on deposit. AO 77-11; AO 79-10.
3. [Broker-Dealers] Broker-dealers who execute securities transactions for plans are parties in interest. AO 76-76.
4. [Custodians] Custodians of plan assets are parties in interest. AO 76-76; PLR 7907091.
5. [Employer] Employers are parties in interest. WSB 77-14; PLR 7847034. Directors of an employer are parties in interest. WSB 77-14. An employer council is a party in interest because it acts on behalf of employers. AO 76-103.
6. [Employer] An employer of employees covered by the plan is a party in interest pursuant to ERISA Section 3(14)(C) even if it is merely an affiliate or subsidiary of the employer plan sponsor. Thus, absent a statutory or administrative exemption, the exchange of common stock for preferred stock and the cancellation of a note in connection therewith as a transaction between the affiliate corporation and the plan would constitute a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). AO 81-34A.
7. [Insurance Companies] Insurance companies are not parties in interest merely because they issue group insurance policies to plans. AO 76-36.
8. [Mergers & Acquisitions] A corporation proposes to acquire all of an unrelated third party's assets. In connection therewith, the acquiring corporation will not assume, adopt or maintain the existing plan of the corporation to be acquired. The acquiring corporation desires to purchase or lease a building owned by the plan. Certain employees of the acquired corporation will become employees of the acquiring corporation. The term party in interest includes in Subsection (c) an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan. However, the definition of an employer under Section 3\(14\)\(C\) must be viewed in light of the overall statutory framework of ERISA, including Section 3\(5\). That section provides in relevant part that the term "employer" means any person acting directly as an employer or indirectly in the interest of an employer in relation to an employee benefit plan. Since the acquiring corporation had no relationship with the plan in the past and will not assume, maintain or adopt the plan or its accompanying trust after the acquisition, that entity is not a Section 3(14)(C) "party in interest" to the plan upon its acquisition of substantially all of the plan sponsor's assets. Advisory Opinion 81-78A.
9. [Ownership] A person is not a 50% owner of a corporation or partnership under Section 3\(14\)\(G\) if such 50% ownership interest will not be acquired until sometime in the future. AO 75-147; AO 77-83.
10. [Partners] Section 3\(14\)\(I\) applies only to 10% partners in a party in interest, not 10% partners with a party in interest in a partnership that is not itself a party in interest. AO 75-147; AO 77-83.
11. [Relatives] Relatives are parties in interest. AO 75-137.
12. [Service Providers] Service providers are parties in interest even if they receive no compensation from the plan. WSB 78-17. However, a person who only provides services to the employer before the plan is established is not a party in interest. AO 76-65.
13. [Trustees] Trustees of a plan and employees of a trustee are parties in interest. AO 77-84.
14. [Unions] Unions are parties in interest. AO 76-91; WSB 78-25. Employees of a union are parties in interest. AO 76-91. However, the mere fact that union officers are also directors and employees of a corporation does not make such corporation a party in interest. AO 76-120.

D. Court Decisions

1. Trustees of a pension or welfare plan are parties in interest to the plan under Section 3\(14\)\(A\). Marshall v. Snyder, 430 F. Supp. 1224 (E.D.N.Y. 1977), aff'd in part, 572 F.2d 894 (2d Cir. 1978).
2. Trustees and fiduciaries of employee benefit plans are parties in interest within the meaning of ERISA Section 3(14)(A). Donovan v. Bryans, 566 F. Supp. 1258, 4 EBC 1772 (E.D.Pa. 1983). A party in interest as defined by ERISA Section 3(14) includes any fiduciary and any employer of employees covered by an employee benefit plan. Brock v. Gilliken, 677 F. Supp. 398, 9 EBC 1803 (E.D.N.Y. 1987).
3. In an action by terminated employee claiming applicability of retroactive amendment in employee stock ownership plan, under ERISA Section 3\(14\) a party in interest includes the employer and its officers, directors and major stockholders. Allen v. The Katz Agency, Inc. Employee Stock Ownership Plan, 677 F.2d 193, 3 EBC 1352 (2d Cir. 1982).

4. A construction company is deemed a party in interest under Section 3\(14\)\(G\) when its sole stock owner and president is the trustee of an employee benefit plan and the company receives loans from such plan. Brock v. Gilliken, 677 F. Supp. 398, 9 EBC 1803 (E.D.N.Y. 1987).
5. A law firm that receives excessive amounts of money in relationship to services rendered by the firm and benefits received by the members of the represented employee welfare plan is treated as a party in interest in an action alleging the trustees breached their fiduciary duties by overpaying the law firm. Benvenuto v. Schneider 678 F. Supp. 51, 9 EBC 1528 (E.D.N.Y. 1988).

Section 3(15)
"Relative"
 The term "relative" means a spouse, ancestor, lineal descendant, or spouse of a lineal descendant.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report does not discuss the term "relative."

B. Advisory Opinions

1. The brother of a fiduciary is not a relative under Section 3(15) and, therefore, is not a party in interest under Section 3\(14\)\(F\). AO 77-05.

Section 3(18)
"Adequate Consideration"

The term "adequate consideration" when used in part 4 of subtitle B means:

(A)	In the case of a security for which there is a generally recognized market, either
	(i)	The price of the security prevailing on a national securities exchange which is registered under section 6 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or
	(ii)	If the security is not traded on such a national securities exchange, a price not less favorable to the plan than the offering price for the security as established by the current bid and asked prices quoted by persons independent of the issuer and of any party in interest; and
(B)	In the case of an asset other than a security for which there is a generally recognized market, the market value of the asset as determined in good faith by the trustee or named fiduciary, pursuant to the terms of the plan and in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Secretary [of Labor].

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report does not discuss the definition of the term "adequate consideration."

B. Regulations

DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-18(b) was proposed in 1988 but has not yet been adopted. It provided guidance on how thinly-traded securities should be valued.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. In the absence of regulations under Section 3(18), securities for which there is no generally recognized market should be valued by the trustees or other appropriate plan fiduciary by making a good faith determination of the fair market value of the securities, utilizing recognized methods of determining value. AO 75-141; AO 76-16.
2. If securities are publicly traded in the over-the-counter market and if there are current bid and asked prices quoted by persons independent of the issuer and of any party in interest, a plan may not purchase a controlling block of stock at a price greater than such current bid and asked prices. AO 76-52.
3. Reliance by a plan trustee on a ruling received from the IRS that a method of determining the fair market value of book value shares constitutes a reasonable method of determining fair market value for purposes of Treasury Regulation 1.421-7(e)(2) would be considered evidence that the trustee's determination of fair market value was made in good faith for purposes of Section 3(18)(B). AO 77-35.

D. Court Decisions

1. [ESOP - Stock Valuation] Where an ESOP purchases securities from a sponsoring company that does not have a generally recognized market, adequate consideration as defined in ERISA requires the trustee to exercise objective good faith by prudently using sound business principles of evaluation for the sole benefit of the employees' plan. Trustees who relied on appraisals that were 13 and 20 months old did not exercise good faith and sound business principles, and the amount paid for the securities purchased by the plan was more than adequate consideration. Donovan v. Cunningham, 716 F.2d 1455, 4 EBC 2329 (5th Cir. 1983).
2. Adequate consideration is the price for the stock quoted on the American Stock Exchange. The fact that a sale of the stock over a longer period of time might have resulted in a higher return or that a premium might have been obtained for the sale of a large block need not be taken into account. Leonard v. Drug Fair, Inc., No. 78-1335, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) 97,144 (D.D.C. 1979).

Section 3(21)
"Fiduciary"

Except as otherwise provided in subparagraph (B), a person is a fiduciary with respect to a plan to the extent

(i)	He exercises any discretionary authority or discretionary control respecting management of such plan or exercises any authority or control respecting management or disposition of its assets,
-----	--

(ii)	He renders investment advice for a fee or other compensation, direct or indirect, with respect to any moneys or other property of such plan, or has any authority or responsibility to do so, or
(iii)	He has any discretionary authority or discretionary responsibility in the administration of such plan.
Such term includes any person designated under section 405(c)(1)(B) .

A. Conference Report

See the discussion of the term "fiduciary" at page 323 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

1. Refer to DOL Regulation 2510.3-21 and IRS Regulation 54.4975-9.
2. The regulation clarifies the applicability of the definition fiduciary to persons who provide investment advice to plans and to securities brokers and dealers who execute securities transactions for plans. DOL Regulation 2510.3-21(c)-(e).
3. A person is a fiduciary only to the extent of his or her fiduciary responsibilities to a plan. DOL Regulation 2510.3-21(c)(2), (d)(2).
4. As a general matter, a person (e.g., a securities broker) is not a fiduciary to a plan if he or she does not know, and has no reason to know, that he or she is acting for a plan. Preamble to DOL Regulation 2510.3-21(c)-(e).
5. A fee or other compensation, direct or indirect, for the rendering of investment advice to a plan, within the meaning of Section 3(21)(A)(ii), should be deemed to include all fees or other compensation incident to the transaction in which the investment advice to the plan has been rendered or will be rendered. This may include, for example, brokerage commissions, mutual fund sales commissions and insurance sales commissions. Preamble to DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-21(c)-(e).
6. Depending on the facts and circumstances, a sales presentation and recommendations made to a plan fiduciary by an insurance agent or broker, pension consultant or mutual fund principal underwriter in connection with insurance or annuity contracts or mutual funds may constitute investment advice under Section 3(21). Preamble to DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-21(c)-(e).
7. A person who exercises discretion in the administration of a plan by making final decisions on appeals from claim denials is a fiduciary to the plan under Section 3(21)(A)(iii) even if the plan documents fail to state do the person is a named fiduciary or merely a fiduciary. Preamble to DOL ERISA Regulation 2560.503-1 (Claims Procedure).

C. Interpretive Bulletins

1. [Trustees] A plan trustee and a plan administrator are plan fiduciaries because of the nature of their functions for a plan. IB 75-8, Question D-3.
2. People who perform purely ministerial functions for a plan within a framework of policies, interpretations, rules, practices and procedures made by others are not fiduciaries under Section 3(21). IB 75-8, Question D-2. This question contains examples of purely ministerial functions.
3. An officer, director, or employee of an employer maintaining a plan will not be a fiduciary for the plan, unless he or she has or exercises any of the authority, responsibility or control described in Section 3(21)(A) or provides investment advice to the plan for a fee or other compensation. IB 75-8, Questions D-4 and D-5.
4. An attorney, accountant, actuary, or consultant for a plan who neither exercises nor has any of the responsibilities, authority or control described in Section 3(21)(A), and who does not provide investment advice to the plan for a fee or other compensation, is not a fiduciary to the plan under Section 3(21). IB 75-5, Question D-1.
5. A person who merely calculates the amount of benefits to which a participant is entitled in accordance with a formula contained in a plan document is not a fiduciary under Section 3(21). However, a person who has the final authority to authorize or disallow claims for benefits based on an interpretation of plan provisions relating to eligibility for benefits would be a fiduciary under Section 3(21). IB 75-8, Question D-3.

D. Prohibited Transaction Class Exemptions (PTE)

1. [Broker-Dealers] Where a broker-dealer acts as an investment adviser in recommending securities transactions and a second fiduciary decides whether each such transaction should be entered into, the broker-dealer may be a fiduciary by reason of providing investment advice within the meaning of ERISA Section 3(21)(A)(ii) and Code Section 4975\(e\)\(3\)\(B\). However, since he or she would not have the power to manage, acquire, or dispose of plan assets without the approval of the second fiduciary, he or she would not be an investment manager as that term is defined in ERISA Section 3\(38\). Final PTE C 78-10.
2. [Investment Advisor] A person may be a fiduciary by reason of being an investment adviser even if such person does not exercise investment discretion as that term is defined by the Securities and Exchange Commission under Section 3(a)(35) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. Final PTE C 78-10.

E. Advisory Opinions

1. The term "investment discretion" is defined in Section 3(a)(35) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. In general, a person who exercises investment discretion for a plan under that definition would also be a fiduciary with respect to the plan as defined in Section 3(21) of ERISA and Section 4975\(e\)\(3\) of the Code. A person also would also be a fiduciary as the result of rendering investment advice for compensation to a plan. Proposed Extension of Paragraph I(a) of PTE C 75-1.
2. [Banks] The mere fact that a plan invests in a savings account or certificate of deposit of a savings and loan association does not make the association a plan fiduciary. AO 77-11; AO 79-10.
3. [Custodians] A custodian of plan assets who has no discretionary authority or control over the management of the plan or the disposition of the assets, and who does not provide investment advice to the plan, is not a fiduciary under Section 3(21)(A). PLR 7907091.
4. [Insurance Companies] An insurance company maintaining a separate account in which a plan invests is a fiduciary to the plan. Proposed PTE C 78-19.
5. [Investments] A partnership in which a plan has invested does not become a plan fiduciary merely by reason of such investment. WSB 78-17.
6. [Plan Committee Members] The individuals serving on one investment committee of a plan with responsibility for managing plan assets and appointing investment managers for the plan are fiduciaries under Section 3(21)(A). AO 76-15.
7. [Trust Department Staff] A person who merely makes a report to plan fiduciaries on a plan's asset management staff and serves on a committee that advises

Plan fiduciaries on plan investment policies and objectives will not be a plan fiduciary under Section 3(21)(A) or ERISA Regulations Section 2510.3-21. AO 77-68.

8. The advice and recommendations made to plans and plan fiduciaries by insurance agents and brokers, pension consultants and mutual fund principal underwriters (or their employees) regarding plan purchases of insurance contracts or annuities or mutual fund shares constitutes advice as to the value of securities or other property or recommendations as to the advisability of investing in, purchasing or selling securities or other property and could constitute investment advice so as to classify the persons who furnish such advice as fiduciaries if it is rendered under certain circumstances. Proposed PTE C 77-9; WSB 79-99.

F. Court Decisions

1. [General] The definition of fiduciary under ERISA Section 3(21) is to be broadly construed. Thus, fiduciary should be defined not only by reference to particular titles, such as trustee, but also by considering the authority that a particular person has or exercises over an employee benefit plan. Donovan v. Mercer, 747 F.2d 304, 5 EBC 2512 (5th Cir. 1984).
2. [General] ERISA fiduciary status is determined by focusing on the function performed by the individual rather than on the individual's title; an accounting firm was a fiduciary to the extent that it controlled whether or not contributions were returned to plan participants. Blan v. Marshall and Lasserma, 812 F.2d 810, 8 EBC 1495 (2d Cir. 1987).
3. [General] Because the terms of an employee benefit plan conferred authority on defendants to exercise discretion in the management of the plan and its assets, the defendants were fiduciaries as defined by ERISA Section 3(21). Donovan v. Bryans, 566 F. Supp. 1258, 4 EBC 1772 (E.D.Pa. 1983).
4. [General] ERISA permits the named plan fiduciary the option of delegating the responsibility of investing plan assets to a professional investment adviser who then might assume the ERISA fiduciary obligations to the plan, including the duties of care and loyalty. Lowen v. Tower Asset Management, Inc., 829 F.2d 1209, 8 EBC 2457 (2d Cir. 1987).
5. [General] A fiduciary continues in his status as such absent any clear resignation or removal under permissible circumstances. Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F.Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
6. [General] ERISA Section 3(21)(A) limits the scope of both fiduciary status and responsibility; a person is a fiduciary with only for those aspects of the plan over which he or she exercises control or authority, and his or her fiduciary duty extends solely to those functions. Jury instructions should delineate the requisite control necessary to consider a person a fiduciary and warn jurors against drawing inferences of control or authority merely from a person's status, including status as a former employer, an officer, a principal shareholder or a director. Sommers Drug Stores Co. Employee Profit Sharing Trust v. Corrigan Enterprises, Inc., 793 F.2d 1456, 7 EBC 1782 (5th Cir. 1986), cert. denied, 479 U.S. 1089 (1987).
7. [General] Under ERISA Section 3(21), a person is a fiduciary to a plan to the extent that he or she has any discretionary authority or discretionary responsibility in the administration of such plan. A duty to report "difficulties" concerning borrowers interest payments includes authority, responsibility and discretion to determine what constitutes difficulties. One who is conferred such authority is a fiduciary as defined by ERISA Section 3(21). Davidson v. Cook, 567 F.Supp. 225, 4 EBC 1816 (E.D.Va. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 10 (4th Cir. 1984).
8. [Attorneys] Attorneys who counsel a plan sponsor, members of a plan investment committee, and stockbrokers or dealers who recommend certain securities and then participate in the purchase or sale of the securities and receive a commission for their services, may be plan fiduciaries by reason of providing investment advice for a fee or other compensation. Eaves v. Penn, 587 F.2d 453 (10th Cir. 1978).
9. [Broker-Dealer] A stockbroker is a fiduciary as defined by ERISA when, without authorization, he invests the assets of an employee benefit plan in unsuitable, highly speculative securities and disregards the trustee's instructions to liquidate. Metzner v. D. H. Blair & Co., Inc., 663 F. Supp. 716, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) 993,306, 8 EBC 2159 (S.D.N.Y. 1987).
10. [Custodians] A plan custodian can be a fiduciary, but only if the custodian possesses the requisite discretionary authority and discretionary control required by Section 3(21). The parenthetical language after "any fiduciary" in Section 3\(14\)\(A\) does not expand upon persons who are fiduciaries. A person is only a fiduciary under Section 3(14)(A) if such person is a fiduciary under Section 3(21). The Hibernia Bank v. International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Warehouseman and Helpers of America, 411 F.Supp. 478 (N.D.Cal. 1976).
11. [Insurance Agent] An insurance agent, who was solely responsible for formulating the specifications of an employee plan, represents himself as the administrator of the plan and subsequently gives investment advice regarding such plan, even though he was never formally appointed as plan administrator nor paid a fee for his services, is deemed a fiduciary as defined by Section 3(21)(A). Applying the agency theory of apparent authority, the insurance company, as the principal of the insurance agent, is designated a fiduciary as well. Miller v. Lay Trucking C&, Inc, 606 F. Supp 1326 (N.D.Ind. 1985).
12. [Insurance Companies] Congress did not want to make an insurance company that sells a standard annuity contract - one that provides "benefits the amount of which is guaranteed by the insurer" -- a fiduciary toward the contract's purchaser. However, where pension trustees did not buy an insurance contract with a fixed payment but turned over the assets of the pension plan to an insurance company to manage with full investment discretion, subject only to a modest income guarantee, that company was a fiduciary as defined in Section 3(21) of ERISA. Amato v. Western Union International, Inc., 596 F. Supp. 963, 5 EBC 2718 (S.D.N.Y. 1984), aff'd in part and rev'd in part, 773 F.2d 1402 (2d Cir. 1985).
13. [Mergers & Acquisitions] An individual acted as a plan fiduciary when he recommended, designed, and implemented an amendment to a profit-sharing plan that changed the plan to an ESOP and required the plan to invest large sums of money in employer stock so as to enable the individual to acquire control of the employer. Eaves v. Penn, 587 F.2d 453 (10th Cir. 1978).
14. [Plan Administrator] By the very nature of his position, a plan administrator is a fiduciary to the plan. Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
15. [Plan Sponsor] Officers and directors of a plan sponsor are plan fiduciaries if they exercise control through the selection of the investment committee, administrative committee or plan officers or directors. Eaves v. Penn, 587 F.2d 453 (10th Cir. 1978); Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
16. [Plan Sponsor] An employer, whose only control over the management of the employee welfare plan is its authority to appoint, retain and remove the plan's administrator, is only a fiduciary for these acts and not for any others. Independent Association of Publishers' Employees, Inc. v. Dow Jones & Co., Inc., 671 F Supp. 1365 (S.D.N.Y. 1987).
17. [Plan Sponsor] An employer is a fiduciary to a plan only when and to the extent that it engages in activities governed by ERISA, including acting in the capacity of plan administrator. Amato v. Western Union International, Inc., 773 F.2d 1402, 6 EBC 2226 (2d Cir. 1985), cert. dismissed, 474 U.S. 1113 (1986). Contra Ashenbaugh v. Crucible, Inc., 854 F.2d 1516, 9 EBC 2560 (3d Cir. 1988).

- 18. [Plan Sponsor] An employer that is also a plan administrator of a plan has assumed two distinct statuses. ERISA's fiduciary duty attaches when the employer/administrator performs the function of a plan administrator but not when it acts in the capacity of an employer. When renegotiating a welfare benefit plan or benefits not vesting under ERISA the employer/administrator is acting in its employer capacity and, thus, can breach no ERISA fiduciary duty, because such fiduciary obligations do not attach to employer functions. United Independent Flight Officers, Inc. v. United Air Lines, Inc., 756 F.2d 1262, 6 EBC 1075, 6 EBC 1291, 118 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2474,102 Lab. Cas. (CCH) 911,382 (7th Cir. 1985).
- 19. [Service Provider] Where a defendant provided claims processing services to a health and welfare fund using adjustment standards established jointly by the fund and the defendant and the fund made final determinations on any contested payments according to the adjustment standards, it was not established that the defendant exercised sufficient discretionary authority or control over the fund or its assets to make it a fiduciary within the meaning of Section 3(21)(A) of ERISA. Donovan v. Robbins, 558 F. Supp. 319 (N.D.Ill. 1983), aff'd, 703 F.2d 570 (7th Cir. 1983).
- 20. [Recordkeeping] A company was delegated by a bank trustee or custodian for self-directed IRA accounts the function of maintaining records and preparing appropriate reports required by Section 103 of ERISA. A company maintaining records necessary for the preparation of such reports is a plan fiduciary and must perform these functions with the degree of care set forth in Section 404(a)(1)(B). Redwood Bank v. QTA, Inc., No. C-79-1586, slip op. (N.D.Cal., Oct. 23, 1979).
- 21. [Trustees] The trustees of a pension or welfare plan are fiduciaries under Section 3(21)(A). Marshall v. Snyder, 430 F. Supp. 1224 (E.D.N.Y. 1977), aff'd in part, 572 F.2d 894 (2d Cir. 1978); Marshall v. Dekeyser 485 F. Suay (29, I EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis.1979).
- 22. [Trustees - Directed] Trustees who merely distribute plan assets upon direction from the plan's administrators in accordance with a court order and with no discretionary authority over the plan assets, do not exercise the required authority over a plan's assets that would impose fiduciary responsibilities. Richardson v. U.S. News & World Report, 623 F. Supp. 350 (D.D.C. 1985).
- 23. [Trustees - Directed] Even though a plan trustee has no authority for investment decisions, it cannot disavow itself a responsibility for such decisions, since it is still a fiduciary. However, under the allocation provisions of Section 405\(c\)\(1\), the trustee may, in fact, not be liable for such decisions. Leonard v. Drug Fair, Inc., No. 78-1335, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) 997,144 (D.D.C. 1979).

Section 3(21)(B)

Investment Company (Mutual Fund) as Fiduciary

If any money or other property of an employee benefit plan is invested in securities issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, such investment shall not by itself cause such investment company or such investment company's investment adviser or principal underwriter to be deemed to be a fiduciary or a party in interest as those terms are defined in this title, except insofar as such investment company or its investment adviser or principal underwriter acts in connection with an employee benefit plan covering employees of the investment company, the investment adviser or its principal underwriter. Nothing contained in this subparagraph shall limit the duties imposed on such investment company, investment adviser, or principal underwriter by any other law.

A. Conference Report

See coverage of this provision on pages 296-297 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Interpretive Bulletins

- 1. The principles of Section 3(21)(B) are restated in IB 75-3, which also states that if an investment company, its investment adviser or its principal underwriter is a fiduciary or party in interest for a reason other than the investment in the securities of the investment company, such a person remains a fiduciary or party in interest regardless of Section 3(21)(B).

Section 3(38)

"Investment Manager"

The term "investment manager" means any fiduciary (other than a trustee or named fiduciary, as defined in section 402\(a\)\(2\)) -

(A)	Who has the power to manage, acquire, or dispose of any asset of a plan;
(B)	Who is -
	(i) Registered as an investment advisor under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940;
	(ii) Is a bank, as defined in that Act; or
	(iii) Is an insurance company qualified to perform services described in subparagraph (A) under the laws of more than one State; and
(C)	Has acknowledged in writing that he is a fiduciary with respect to the plan.

A. Conference Report

Page 302 of the Congressional Conference Report discusses the term investment manager.

B. Interpretive Bulletins

- 1. A person who is not registered under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 because of an exemption from registration under that act (and who is not a bank or an insurance company) may not be an investment manager. IB 75-5, Question FR-6.
- 2. A person cannot be an investment manager if his or her application for registration under the Investment Advisers Act is still pending. IB 75-5, Question FR-7.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. An entity is an investment manager as defined in Section 3(38) of ERISA if it meets the three tests set forth in the statute.
2. A person can be both a named fiduciary and an investment manager provided that, as named fiduciary, such person does not have the power on behalf of the plan to appoint himself or herself or monitor his or her own performance as investment manager. AO 77-69/70.
3. A person who is registered only as a broker-dealer under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 cannot serve as an investment manager. AO 76-20.

D. Court Decisions

1. Where an investment management firm had broad powers to manage plan assets, was registered as an investment adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, and had explicitly acknowledged itself as a fiduciary to the plan in its employment contract, it is considered an investment manager as defined in ERISA, regardless of any oral modifications of the agreement. Lowen v. Tower Asset Management, Inc, 829 F.2d 1209, 8 EBC 2457 (2d Cir. 1987).
2. Where an investment management company was not registered as an independent adviser under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, was not a bank or insurance company, and had not acknowledged itself in writing as a fiduciary to the plan, it is not considered an investment manager as defined in ERISA. The trustee of an ESOP may not claim a defense under ERISA Section 405\(d\)\(1\). Whitfield v. Cohen, 682 F.Supp. 188, 9 EBC 1739 (S.D.N.Y 1988).

Plans Covered
ERISA Section 4
Section 4
(a)	Except as provided in subsection (b) and in sections 201, 301 and 401 , this title shall apply to any employee benefit plan if it is established or maintained:
	(1) By any employer engaged in commerce or in any industry or activity affecting commerce; or
	(2) By any employee organization or organizations representing employees engaged in commerce or in any industry or activity affecting commerce; or
	(3) By both.
(b)	The provisions of this title shall not apply to any employee benefit plan if -
	(1) Such plan is a governmental plan (as defined in section 3(32) );
	(2) Such plan is a church plan (as defined in section 3(33) ) with respect to which no election has been made under section 410(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954;
	(3) Such plan is maintained solely for the purpose of complying with applicable workmen's compensation or unemployment compensation or disability insurance laws;
	(4) Such plan is maintained outside of the United States primarily for the benefit of persons substantially all of whom are nonresident aliens; or
	(5) Such plan is an excess benefit plan (as defined in section 3(30) ) and is unfunded.

A. Conference Report

These provisions are discussed on pages 255-256 of the Congressional Conference Report.

Fiduciary Duties
ERISA Section 404
Section 404(a)(1)
Subject to sections 403(c) and (d) , 4042, and 4044, a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and
(A)	For the exclusive purpose of:
	(i) Providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries, and
	(ii) Defraying reasonable expenses of administering the plan;
(B)	With the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims;
(C)	By diversifying the investments of the plan so as to minimize the risk of large losses, unless under the circumstances it is clearly prudent not to do so; and
(D)	In accordance with the documents and instruments governing the plan insofar as such documents and instruments are consistent with the provisions of this subchapter or subchapter III of this chapter.

A. Conference Report

All the fiduciary responsibilities imposed by Section 404\(a\)\(1\) are discussed at pages 302-305 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

1. Plan assets are defined in DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-101.
2. Prudence is covered in DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.404a-1 on "Investment Duties" and the specific coverage of § 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\), below.

3. See DOL ERISA Regulation 404c-1 , which exempts fiduciaries from certain ERISA liability if plans meet certain conditions and participants direct their own investments.

C. Interpretive Bulletins

1. Social Investments ("Economically Targeted Investments") (ETIs). Establishes DOL's position on permissibility of making investments which achieve a social goal in addition to a financial return. The IB indicates that ETIs are not prohibited by ERISA, and that their choice as an investment must follow DOL ERISA regulation 2550.404a-1 regarding Investment Duties, be prudent, not be a prohibited transaction, and not provide less return to a plan than a normal investment. IB 94-1.
2. Proxy Voting. Among the fiduciary responsibilities of an investment manager are those to vote proxies for stock owned by ERISA plans. IB 94-2.
3. Investment Policies. An investment policy designed to further the purposes of a plan and its funding policy is consistent with, but not required by, ERISA 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\). IB 94-2.

D. Advisory Opinions

1. Pursuant to ERISA Procedure 76-1 and particularly Section 5.02(o), the Department of Labor ordinarily will not issue advisory opinions on ERISA Section 404\(a\). AO 80-13A.
2. Service by a bank as trustee of a plan that has a significant portion of its assets invested in employer securities, while the bank is also a substantial secured creditor of the employer, may constitute a violation of Section 404\(a\)\(1\) by the bank. AO 76-32.

E. Court Decisions

1. [Effective Date] Actions by fiduciaries occurring after 1974 are not insulated from ERISA coverage merely because the roots of such action can be traced to an event prior to the effective date of ERISA. Marshall v. Craft, 463 F. Supp. 493 (N.D.Ga. 1978); Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
2. [Exemption Applicability] Exemptions from the prohibited transaction restrictions have no effect on the basic fiduciary responsibility rules of Section 404(a)(1). Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F.Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Vas. 1979).
3. [Precedent] Section 404\(a\)\(1\) codifies the common law rule that a trustee owes individual loyalty to the beneficiaries. Although trustees should carefully consider all recommendations submitted by the parties who appointed them, trustees are bound to exercise their independent judgment when making decisions in the administration of the trust. Sheet Metal Workers' International Association v. Central Florida Sheetmetal Contractors Association, 234 NLRB (CCH) No. 162 (1978).
4. [Precedent] ERISA Section 404 essentially codified the strict fiduciary standards that trustees under Section 302 of the Labor-Management Relations Act must meet. The legislative history of ERISA demonstrates that any employee benefit fund trustee is a fiduciary whose duty to the trust beneficiaries must overcome any loyalty to the interest of the plan that appointed him. N.L.R.B. v. Amax Coal Co., 453 U.S. 322, 107 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2769, 91 Lab. Cas. (CCH) Para 12,821, 2 EBC 1489 (1981).
5. [Bank Stock - Purchase/Retention/Sale of Fiduciary Bank/BHC Stock] The discretionary purchase, retention, or sale of the stock of the fiduciary bank is imprudent. DOL indicates that "it burdens our imagination to envision a situation in which a trustee with investment discretion could make an objective decision, solely on the basis of the prudence standard, regarding the purchase or sale of its own stock." [emphasis added] See 1980 letter from DOL to OCC. Also see AO 88-9 regarding self-directed IRA purchases and AO 88-28 covering self-directed IRA purchases on an initial public offering (IPO) from a mutual-to-stock thrift conversion, and AO 92-23 which permits non-discretionary purchase and retention of holding company stock.
6. [Exclusive Purpose] The statutory phrase, "solely in the interest" is, at least in part, a codification of the most fundamental duty traditionally owed by a trustee - the duty of loyalty. Accordingly, a fiduciary bears a heavy burden in justifying his conduct in situations where his interests or the interests of others come into conflict with those of plan beneficiaries. Marshall v. Snyder, 430 F. Supp. 1224 (S.D.N.Y. 1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 572 F.2d 894 (2d Cir. 1978).
7. [Exclusive Purpose] A plan's administrator who is also an officer for the corporate employer, as a fiduciary has a duty to avoid putting himself in a position where he may be forced to compromise his duty of complete loyalty to the plan to act on the employer's behalf. Amato v. Western Union International, Inc., 773 F.2d 1402, 6 EBC 2226 (2d Cir. 1985), cert. dismissed, 474 U.S. 1113 (1986). Contra Ashenbaugh v. Crucible, Inc., 854 F.2d 1516, 9 EBC 2560 (3d Cir. 1988).
8. [Exclusive Purpose] ERISA Section 404(a)(1) and subsection (a) require a fiduciary to act solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries of a plan and for the exclusive purpose of paying plan benefits at a reasonable cost. One who, in his capacity as a trustee, attempts to prevent a trust from suing him for substantial damages cannot reasonably be said to do so solely for the interest or for the exclusive purpose of benefiting others. Iron Workers Local No. 272 v. Bowen, 624 F.2d 1255 (5th Cir. 1980).
9. [Exclusive Purpose] Preferential effect of trustees' decision alone does not constitute a violation of Section 404\(a\) of ERISA. Id.
10. [Exclusive Purpose] Where trustees resolve to extend plan coverage to themselves as trustees and participants in the plan and paid themselves benefits of the plan, such self-dealing conduct was improper and a violation of fiduciary duty under ERISA Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\). Donovan v. Daugherty, 550 F.Supp. 390, 3 EBC 2079 (S.D.Ala. 1982).
11. [Exclusive Benefit] An employer that creates a retirement program that encourages early retirement, thereby reducing the workforce at overstaffed facilities, does not violate the exclusive purpose duty because of the consequential benefit of enhanced efficiency to the employer. Trenton v. Scott Paper Co., 832 F.2d 806, 45 Fair Empl. Prac. Case (BNA) 327, 45 Empl. Prac. Dec. (CCH) 137,744, 9 EBC 1075 (3d Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 108 S. Ct. 1576, 9 EBC 1968 (1988).
12. [Exclusive Benefit] A fiduciary who pays himself a sales commission from plan assets in the sale of plan property despite the lack of any obligation on the part of the plan to pay the commission violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F. Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
13. [Exclusive Benefit] Where the sale of ownership of the employer is likely to have an impact on the plan's ability to obtain payment on employer notes held by the plan, which, in turn, is likely to affect the plan's ability to pay benefits under the plan, the plan trustees' duties of loyalty and prudence require them to advise the participants of the full facts concerning the sale. Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wisc. 1979).
14. [Exclusive Purpose - Arbitrary & Capricious] Because the potential burden of per se personal liability for any violation of ERISA might deter capable persons from serving as trustees of benefit plans, Section 404 of ERISA does not establish a per se rule of fiduciary conduct and a trustee's decision to cancel past service credits will not be overturned unless it is arbitrary and capricious. Fentron Industries, Inc v. Shopmen Pension Fund, 674 F.2d 1300, 34 Fed. R. Serv.2d 281, 94 Lab. Cas. (CCH) Para 113,559, 3 EBC 1323 (9th Cir. 1982).

15. [Exclusive Purpose - Arbitrary & Capricious] In reviewing the propriety of trustees' action, the judicial standard is whether the trustees acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner or abused their discretion. Robinson v. Central States Pension Fund, 572 F.2d 1208 (8th Cir. 1978). To the same effect: see Robinson v. United Mine Workers, 449 F. Supp. 941 (D.D.C. 1978); Shaw v. Kruidenier, 620 F.2d 307 (8th Cir. 1980); Mosley v. The National Maritime Union Pension and Welfare Plan, 451 F. Supp. 226 (E.D.N.Y. 1978); Taylor v. Bakery and Confectionery Welfare Fund, 455 F. Supp. 816 (E.D.N.C. 1978); Peters v. Operating Engineers Pension Fund, No. CV 76-3747-FW, slip op. (D.C.Cal., April 14, 1979); Bayles v. Central States Pension Fund, 602 F.2d 97 (5th Cir. 1979); Vaughn v. Metal Lathers Local 46 Pension Fund, No. 78 Civ. 2170 (S.D.N.Y. June 14, 1979). To the contrary, see Winpisinger v. Aurora Corporation Illinois, 456 F. Supp. 559 (N.D. Ohio 1978) (standard for judicial review is whether trustees complied with their ERISA fiduciary responsibilities). See also Pierce v. NECA-IBEW Welfare Trust Fund, 488 F. Supp. 559 (E.D.Tenn. 1978), aff'd, 620 F.2d 589 (6th Cir.), cert. denied, 449 U.S. 1015 (1980).
16. [ESOP] While an ESOP fiduciary may be released from certain per se violations on investments in employer securities under the provisions of ERISA Sections 406 and 407, the structure of ERISA itself requires that in making an investment decision of whether or not a plan's assets should be invested in employer securities, an ESOP fiduciary, just as fiduciaries of other plans, is governed by the solely-in-the-interest and prudence tests of Sections 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\). Eaves v. Penn, 587 F.2d 453 (10th Cir. 1978).
17. [ESOP] Trustee's failure to conform stock ownership plan to Treasury requirements applicable to ESOPs in effect at the time of plaintiff's termination was not a breach of fiduciary duty under Section 404\(a\)\(1\) of ERISA for which a beneficiary may sue when defendant's stock ownership plan never functioned as an ESOP within the meaning of ERISA regulations. Allen v. The Katz Agency, Inc. Employee Stock Ownership Plan, 677 F.2d 193, 3 EBC 1352 (2d Cir. 1982).
18. [Plan Management] Corporate shareholders and directors, who are also pension plan investment managers and custodians violated their fiduciary duties when they refused to attend meetings of the shareholders, board of directors and trustees, thereby preventing any action in favor of the plan while also opposing the sale of shares of preferred hospital stock to the plan. Schoenholtz v. Doniger, 628 F. Supp. 1420, 7 EBC 1501 (S. D. N. Y. 1986).
19. [Plan Management] An insurance company that possesses the ultimate responsibility to grant or deny claims is a fiduciary under ERISA and must comply with the fiduciary duties enumerated in Section 404. Wickman v. Northwestern National Life Insurance, 9 EBC 1482 (D. Mass. 1987).
20. [Plan Management] An operator of a corporation's pension plan, who is also controlling the corporation in receivership, does not violate any fiduciary duties by amending the plan, freezing the accrual of benefits, returning excess funds to the corporation, and terminating the plan in accordance with the state court's appointment order and ERISA. Chait v. Bernstein, 645 F. Supp. 1092, 8 EBC 1126 (D.N.J. 1986), aff'd, 835 F.2d 1017, 9 EBC 1257 (3d Cir. 1987).
21. [Contributions] Corporate president violated his fiduciary duties when he failed to forward employer contributions and employee contributions, although they were deducted from employee paychecks; failed to notify employees that contributions had not been forwarded; allocated the monies to corporate expenses; and assumed conflicting roles of fiduciary and an officer of a struggling corporation. PBGC v. Solmsen, 671 F. Supp. 938, 9 EBC 1391 (E.D.N.Y 1987).
22. [Loans] Where trustees did not hold the local's proposal for a "loan at arm's length and compare it to other available investments, but instead did their best to accommodate" the local's needs, they violated ERISA Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\)\(i\). Davidson v. Cook, 567 F. Supp. 225, 4 EBC 1816 (E. D. Va. 1983).
23. [Loans] A trustee breaches its fiduciary obligations by (1) making loans of plan assets under terms more favorable to the debtor than the plan and then not collecting the balance due; (2) allowing loans of plan assets to a debtor with an unproven business record and unstable financial condition; (3) lending an unreasonably large portion of loan assets to one entity and then concealing the existence of such loans; and (4) failing to adhere to guidelines in plan requiring that loans be at a reasonable rate of interest with adequate collateral. Brock v. Gilliken, 677 F. Supp. 398, 9 EBC 1803 (E.D.N.C. 1987).
24. [Loans] A fiduciary who makes or renews loans of plan assets based on inadequate security and at a lower interest rate than contemporaneous loans to others, and who fails to pursue timely repayment of principal and interest and to enforce the security agreement violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F. Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978); Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
25. [Loans/Leases] Pension fund trustees do not breach their fiduciary duties when they approve the construction of an office building after seeking advice from three legal firms, professional engineers, architects, appraisers, contractors and, in addition, eliminate certain aspects or demand cheaper designs when the project appears over budget. Furthermore, a lease agreement with a union that contains certain favorable terms for the union, while also benefiting the plan participants and beneficiaries, does not make the transaction imprudent when the trustees' decisions are calculated to benefit the fund members. Donovan v. Walton, 609 F.Supp. 1221, 6 EBC 1677 (S.D.Fla. 1985), aff'd, Brock v. Walton 794 F.2d 586, 7 EBC 1769, reh'g denied, 802 F.2d 1399 (11th Cir. 1986).
26. [Mergers & Acquisitions] A corporation which, through its pension board, acts as a fiduciary for the employee pension plan, does not breach its fiduciary duties when a purchase agreement selling a division of the company provides for the transfer of all assets, properly allocable under ERISA, to the trustees of the successor corporation's pension plan, provided the sale was not to avoid any unfunded pension obligations. United Steelworkers 2116 v. Cyclops Corp., 653 F. Supp. 574, 8 EBC 1194 (S.D.Ohio 1987), aff'd in part, vacated in part, 860 F.2d 189, 10 EBC 1345 (6th Cir. 1988).
27. [Mergers & Acquisitions] Pension plan fiduciary, who liquidated stock of one corporation to buy shares of another corporation to further his own corporate expansion goal without any effort to seek independent analysis to examine further investment opportunities, does not satisfy the prudent person test. Sandoval v. Simmons, 622 F.2d Supp. 1174, 6 EBC 2161 (C.D.Ill. 1985).
28. [Service in Dual Capacities: Lender and Plan Trustee] Prior to naming a bank as plan trustee, an ERISA plan had invested $796,000 in unsecured notes issued by Supreme Finance (Supreme), a used car finance company. During this time, the bank had extended a $3 million secured line of credit to Supreme. After being named trustee, the bank refused to renew its line of credit because of Supreme's financial difficulties. At the same time, the bank gave notice of resignation as trustee. Supreme subsequently filed for bankruptcy and the only assets remaining were applied to the bank's loan. The federal district court found, and was upheld on appeal, that:
  - a. The bank's acceptance of the trusteeship did not violate ERISA because -
    1. nowhere does ERISA explicitly prohibit a trustee from holding positions of dual loyalties, and
    2. the act did not cause the plan's losses.
  - b. The bank's decision not to renew Supreme's line of credit did not violate ERISA. The court noted that a fiduciary serving in both corporate and fiduciary capacities may make decisions in its own benefit without violating its fiduciary duty to the plan.

(Friend v. Sanwa Bank California, CA 9, No. 92-55641, 9-13-94).

29. [Summary Plan Disclosure] ERISA Section 404\(a\)\(1\) imposes a duty to provide employees with a comprehensive explanation of the plan. However, it does not impose an affirmative duty to alert an individual participant as to the vesting requirements of the plan once that individual notifies fiduciaries that he was "thinking of retirement." Schlomchik v. Retirement Plan of Amalgamated Insurance Fund, 502 F. Supp. 240 (E.D.Pa. 1980), aff'd, 671 F.2d 496 (3d Cir. 1981).

Section 404(a)(1)(A)

Subject to sections 403\(c\) and \(d\), 4042, and 4044, a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and

(A)	For the exclusive purpose of-
(i)	Providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries; and
(ii)	Defraying reasonable expenses of administering the plan.

A. Interpretive Bulletins

1. A vacation plan may pay all or any portion of the benefits to which a plan participant or beneficiary is entitled to a third party without violating Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) if (a) the plan documents expressly provide for such payments to third parties at the direction of a participant or beneficiary, (b) the participant or beneficiary directs in writing that the plan trustees pay a named third party all or a specified portion of the sum of money that would otherwise be paid to the participant or beneficiary, and (c) payment is made to the third party only when or after the money would otherwise be payable to the participant or beneficiary. IB 78-1.
2. Social Investments ("Economically Targeted Investments") (ETIs) Establishes DOL position on permissibility of making investments which achieve a social goal in addition to a financial return. Indicates that ETIs are not prohibited by ERISA, and that their choice as an investment must follow DOL ERISA regulation 2550.404a-1 regarding Investment Duties, be prudent, not be a prohibited transaction, and not provide less return to a plan than a normal investment. IB 94-1.
3. Proxy Voting. Among the fiduciary responsibilities of an investment manager are those to vote proxies for stock owned by ERISA plans. IB 94-2.
4. Investment Policies. An investment policy designed to further the purposes of a plan and its funding policy is consistent with, but not required by, ERISA 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\). IB 94-2.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. Payments by a plan for services rendered by a person prohibited from being employed in any capacity by the plan may violate Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). AO 75-90.
2. If a participant or beneficiary in Plan A refuses to repay an erroneous overpayment of benefits to Plan A, the fiduciaries of Plan B, a related plan, would fail to be acting solely in the interests of the plan's participants and beneficiaries if they attempted to penalize the participant or beneficiary by delaying or reducing benefits under Plan B. AO 77-07.
3. A plan provision authorizing reimbursement of legal fees in the event of any legal action that may arise from the performance of a trustee's fiduciary duties is too broad and would be prohibited under Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). Where a fiduciary is found in a legal proceeding to have violated his fiduciary duties, reimbursement of legal fees by the plan would not be permitted. AO 78-29.

C. Court Decisions

1. [Provide Benefits] Dividing pension benefits, once they are being paid out, between a participant and his divorced spouse does not violate Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). Campa v. Campa, 89 Cal. App.3d 113C (1st Dist. 1979), appeal dismissed, Carpenters Pension Trust Fund for Northern California v. Campa, 444 U. S. 1028 (1980).
2. [Provide Benefits] The payment of rent on behalf of the widow of a former plan trustee constitutes a violation of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) even though the payment was morally commendable and not made for the personal gain of plan fiduciaries. Marshall v. Cuevas, 1 EBC 1580 (D.P.R. 1979).
3. [Provide Benefits] Where a plan participant has nonforfeitable vested pension rights under the plan, the plan administrative committee's denial of those rights; based on a retroactive plan amendment adopted by the plan sponsor violated the administrative committee's fiduciary duty to pay benefits when due. Fox v. Abrams, No. CV 77-881-ALS, slip op. (C.D.Cal. 1978).
4. [Exclusive Purpose] Plan monies, even if they constitute surplus assets, must be applied for the exclusive purpose of plan participants and beneficiaries. Marshall v. Snyder, 430 F. Supp. 1224 (S.D.N.Y. 1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 572 F.2d 894 (2d Cir. 1978).
5. [Exclusive Purpose] Where a plan trustee fails to keep adequate records of the plan's financial obligations, questions of whether the plan owes money to the trustee should be resolved in favor of the plan. Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F. Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
6. [Exclusive Purpose] Lease by a plan of an aircraft unnecessary for plan operation violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\). Usery v. Wilson, 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn. 1977) (consent order).
7. [Exclusive Purpose] Purchase by a multiemployer plan of individual automobile insurance policies for plan trustees and employees violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). Usery v. Wilson, 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn. 1977) (consent order).
8. [Reasonable Expenses] Payments of in excess of $1 million over a two and one-half year period by a multiemployer plan to an individual for administrative services constitutes excessive compensation in violation of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). Marshall v. Snyder, 430 F. Supp. 1224 (S.D.N.Y. 1977), aff'd in part, 572 F.2d 894 (2d Cir. 1978). To the same effect, see Marshall v. Knee, No. C-3-7793 (S.D.Ohio 1977) (complaint).
9. [Reasonable Expenses] A fiduciary who causes a plan to pay excessive amounts for the construction of a building on plan property violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F. Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).

Section 404(a)(1)(B)

"Prudent Man Rule"

Subject to sections 403\(c\) and \(d\), 4042, and 4044, a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character with like aims.

A. Statute

Investments in collectibles are generally prohibited by Section 408\(m\) of the Internal Revenue Code and PTE 91-55.

B. Regulations

1. Refer to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.404a-1.

- a. The regulation sets forth guidelines for plan fiduciaries for compliance with the prudence requirement in connection with their investment duties.
- b. As a general rule, a fiduciary, in connection with his or her investment duties, is required to give appropriate consideration to those facts and circumstances that, given the scope of such fiduciary's investment duties, the fiduciary knows or should know are relevant to the particular investment or investment course of action involved. This includes consideration of the role an investment is intended to play in the plan's investment portfolio for which the fiduciary has investment duties.
- c. The regulations also set forth a safe harbor rule. If a fiduciary complies with the safe harbor rule, the Labor Department will presume that the fiduciary has complied with the prudence requirement.

The safe harbor rule requires a fiduciary in connection with any particular investment or investment course of action -

- a. To determine that the investment is reasonably designed as part of the portfolio (or the portion of the plan's portfolio) for which the fiduciary has investment duties) to further the purposes of the plan, taking into account the investment's risk of loss and opportunity for gain; and
- b. To consider the portfolio's (or portion of the portfolio's) -
  - i. Diversification,
  - ii. Liquidity and current return relative to plan cash flow, needs, and
  - iii. Projected return relative to plan funding requirements.

2. For a definition of plan assets, see DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-101.

3. See DOL ERISA Regulation 404c-1, which exempts fiduciaries from certain ERISA liability, including the duty to monitor for prudence, if plans meet certain conditions and participants direct their own investments.

C. Interpretive Bulletins

1. A plan fiduciary responsible for appointing trustees or other plan fiduciaries should periodically review the performance of such trustees or other fiduciaries. The procedure for review may vary according to the circumstances. IB 75-8, Question FR-17.
2. Plan fiduciaries may rely on information and data supplied by non-fiduciaries in discharging their fiduciary duties. IB 75-8, Question FR-11.
3. Social Investments ("Economically Targeted Investments") (ETIs) Establishes DOL position on permissibility of making investments which achieve a social goal in addition to a financial return. Indicates that ETIs are not prohibited by ERISA, and that their choice as an investment must follow DOL ERISA regulation 2550.404a-1 regarding Investment Duties, be prudent, not be a prohibited transaction, and not provide less return to a plan than a normal investment. IB 94-1.
4. Proxy Voting. Among the fiduciary responsibilities of an investment manager are those to vote proxies for stock owned by ERISA plans. IB 94-2.
5. Investment Policies. An investment policy designed to further the purposes of a plan and its funding policy is consistent with, but not required by, ERISA 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\). IB 94-2.

D. Advisory Opinions

1. [General] Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) does not absolutely prohibit any general type of investment. Whether an investment is prudent depends on the nature of the investment and the character and aims of the plan. AO 75-83.
2. [Bank Stock - Purchase/Retention/Sale of Fiduciary Bank/BHC Stock]: The discretionary purchase, retention, or sale of the stock of the fiduciary bank is imprudent. DOL indicates that "it burdens our imagination to envision a situation in which a trustee with investment discretion could make an objective decision, solely on the basis of the prudence standard, regarding the purchase or sale of its own stock." [emphasis added] See 1980 letter from DOL to OCC. Also see AO 88-9 regarding self-directed IRA purchases and AO 88-28 covering self-directed IRA purchases on an initial public offering (IPO) from a mutual-to-stock thrift conversion, and AO 92-23 which permits non-discretionary purchase and retention of holding company stock.
3. [Mortgage Valuations] Plan fiduciaries will be acting prudently under Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) if they value plan assets consisting of real estate mortgage loans that the plan has no current intention of selling and that are not financially troubled at the remaining principal balance of the loan. Financially troubled loans should be valued on the basis of any guarantees, security or other factors that a prudent person would deem relevant. AO 77-78; AO 77-81.
4. [DOL Investigations] Where the Labor Department is already conducting an investigation of plan investments, the new investment managers for the plan will be acting prudently under Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) if they report any breaches of fiduciary duties by others of which they become aware to the plan trustees and to the Labor Department and make available to the Labor Department all information requested about past transactions. AO 77-60/61; AO 77-79/80.

E. Court Decisions

1. [General] ERISA's prudence test is not that of a prudent lay person but, rather, that of a prudent fiduciary with experience dealing with a similar enterprise. Marshall v. Snyder 430 F. Supp. 1224 (S.D.N.Y. 1977), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 572 F.2d 894 (2d Cir. 1978).
2. [General] Plan trustees violate their fiduciary obligations if they act arbitrarily or capriciously in light of all of the surrounding circumstances. Reviewing courts are hesitant to second guess the trustees' decisions and will do so only if there is no reasonable justification for the decision. Stewart v. National Shopmen Pension Fund, 795 F.2d 1079, 7 EBC 1917 (D.C.Cir. 1986).

3. [General] Fiduciaries are not relieved of their fiduciary responsibilities by their lack of involvement in a particular transaction. By failing to monitor the conduct of other trustees, a trustee may violate Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) and be held liable under Section 405\(a\)\(2\). Marshall v. Dekeyser 485 F, Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wisc. 1979).
4. [General] The prudent person standard found in Section 404 is violated if a trustee who lacks the requisite education, experience and skill to make investment decisions fails to consult independent counsel prior to the making of such decisions. Donovan v. Walton, 609 F. Supp. EM, 6 EBC 1677 (S.D.Fla. 1985), aff'd, Brock c Walton 794 F.2d 586, 7 EBC 1769, reh'g denied, 802 F.2d 1399 (11th Cir. 1986).
5. [Plan Management] Failure by trustees of a multiemployer plan to maintain full and complete minutes of trustees meetings constitutes a violation of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
6. [Plan Management] Implicit in ERISA's standard for fiduciary responsibility set forth under Section 404 is fiduciaries' duty to take an initiative to cause reasonably available evidence to be developed and considered in the decision making process. An employer and underwriter breached the duty to develop such evidence by relying upon erroneous, incomplete and sometimes irrelevant information in denying claims and thereby rendered their decisions in an arbitrary and capricious manner. Rosen v. Hotel and Restaurant Employees Union, 637 F.2d 592, 106 L.R.R.M. (BNA) 2745, 90 Lab. Cas. (CCH) Para 912,612, 2 EBC 1054 (3d Cir.), cert. denied, 454 U.S. 898 (1981).
7. [Arbitrary/Capricious Actions] Pension fiduciaries breach fiduciary duty when they act arbitrarily and capriciously or act with improper discriminatory or bad faith motives. Chambless v. Masters, Mates and Pilots Pension Plan, 571 F. Supp. 1430 (S.D.N.Y. 1983).
8. [Arbitrary/Capricious Actions] Trustees violated the prudent man standard when they failed to adequately investigate the basis and justification for the payment of over $10 million to a claims processing company as fees for services over a two year period, notwithstanding the court's subsequent finding that the fees were reasonable. Brock v. Robbins 830 F.2d 640, 8 EBC 2489 (7th Cir. 1987).
9. [ESOP] While an ESOP fiduciary may be released from certain per se violations on investments in employer securities under the provisions of Sections 406 and 407 of ERISA, the structure of ERISA itself requires that in making an investment decision of whether or not a plan's assets should be invested in employer securities, an ESOP fiduciary, just as fiduciaries of other plans, is governed by the solely-in-the-interest and prudence tests of Sections 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\). Eaves v. Penn, 587 F.2d 453 (10th Cir. 1978).
10. [ESOP] United Missouri Bank won a case where it continued to purchase a distressed company's stock for an ESOP, relying on an independent appraiser's valuation. The 10th Circuit Court of Appeals ruled that the bank (1) followed "proper" directions from the ESOP administrator, (2) paid no more than "appropriate consideration" by relying on the appraisals, (3) retained the stock appropriately because it was restricted by the ESOP agreement and to do so "would have run counter to the intended purpose of [the] ESOP," and (4) maintained an effective Chinese Wall within the bank to prevent transmittal of material inside information from the commercial lending to the trust investment areas. Ershick v. United Missouri Bank of Kansas City, N.A., 948 F.2d 660 (10th Cir. 1991).
11. [ESOP] A Washington bank was found liable for following a similar procedure in Fink v. National Savings & Trust Co., 772 F.2d 951 (D.C. Cir. 1985). The court found the ERISA fiduciary duty of prudence overrides the provisions of plan, such as in ESOPs, which are designed to invest in employer stock.
12. [ESOP] Banc One Arizona settled for $19 million (plus a $1.15 million DOL penalty) involving the Kroy, Inc., ESOP covering 400 employees. Kroy eventually declared bankruptcy. Banc One continued purchasing stock until Kroy declared bankruptcy. Banc One was criticized for apparently paying too much for the stock. The primary issue of the case dealt with ERISA Section 3\(18\)\(B\) regarding "adequate consideration."
13. [ESOP] The Statewide Bancorp ESOP directed the Plan Committee (who were also directors) to invest "primarily" in Statewide stock. The Committee continued to purchase Statewide stock even as its stock price fell to less than 25 cents a share. Eventually, all remaining assets were placed in money market accounts. Statewide declared bankruptcy. The 3rd Circuit Court of Appeals found that the purchase of Statewide stock was permissive, not mandatory. The court held that two standards apply:
  - If the plan requires investment in employer securities, the trustee must comply unless "compliance would be impossible or illegal" or a court approves a deviation.
  - If investment language is permissive, "the fiduciary must still exercise care, skill, and caution in making decisions to acquire or retain the investment." In such permissive situations, the fiduciary is presumed to have complied with ERISA in purchasing employer securities unless the facts and circumstances would defeat or substantially impair the purposes of the trust. If trustees are also directors or officers of the employer, they must show that they acted impartially in investigating available investment alternatives - particularly if the employer is experiencing financial difficulty.

The court evaluated the reasonableness of the trustees' actions under the standard set by the U.S. Supreme Court, in the Firestone Tire and Rubber Co. v. Bruch, 489 U.S. 101 (1989) case. Reasonableness is judged by whether:

- the interpretation is consistent with the goals of the plan;
- it renders any plan language meaningless or internally inconsistent;
- it conflicts with the substantive or procedural requirements of ERISA law;
- the provision has been interpreted consistently; and
- the interpretation is contrary to the clear language of the plan.

Moench v. Robertson, 62 F.3d 553 (3d Cir. 1995).

14. [Investments] Purchase of stock in a financially unstable corporation constitutes a violation of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Usery v. Wilson, et al, No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
15. [Loans] Evidence that mortgage loans were made at interest rates below the prevailing market rate is insufficient to establish a violation of the prudent investor rule established in ERISA Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\) where pension fund trustees, in developing a plan participant mortgage loan program, consulted with experts, including accountants and mortgage brokers; examined and considered rates charged on traditional and nontraditional mortgage loans; examined the prospective borrower's employment background; required that the loan be adequately secured; and thereafter set highest rates that not only generated a higher rate of return than any other portfolio asset but exceeded the fund's actuarial and funding requirements. Brock v. Walton, 794 F.2d 586, 7 EBC 1769 (11th Cir.), reh'g denied, 802 F.2d 1399 (11th Cir. 1986) (en banc).

16. [Loans] Trustees making loans violated the prudence test under ERISA Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) by failing to properly appraise the proposed building, investigate the borrower's financial resources, evaluate the likely rental income to be derived from the building, take an assignment of rents, require sureties on the loan and require a principal repayment schedule. Davidson v. Cook, 567 F. Supp. 225, 4 EBC 1816 (E.D.Va. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 10 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 899 (1984).
17. [Loans] Where independent investigation based on financial statements would have disclosed imprudence of making loans and where trustees failed to seek outside counsel when "under the circumstances then prevailing ... a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters" would have sought outside counsel, ERISA, Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) is violated. A trustee's duty to make an independent investigation includes the obligation of not relying on representations, predictions, and hopes of a borrower. Katsaros v. Cody, 503 F. Supp. 360, 4 EBC 1910 (E.D.N.Y. 1983).
18. [Loans] Even assuming the real estate attorney for the pension fund was a fiduciary, the opening bid of $5 million where the property was allegedly worth less, was not a breach of fiduciary duty of care under Section 404 of ERISA when the bid was made in the context of a foreclosure sale, the final judgment against the debtor was $9,615,422.26, and an unrealistically low bid might have precluded a deficiency judgment. Furthermore, although attorney was not instructed to establish $100,000 bid increments, such action was not imprudent where he was instructed to continue bidding the price upwards to $7 million. Donovan v. Nellis, 528 F. Supp. 538, 33 Fed. Rul. Serv. 2d (Cahaghan) 1742, 2 EBC 2209 (N.D.Fla. 1980).
19. [Loans - Employer] Where plan trustees make loans to employers that lack any security and are at interest rates below those that an arm's length lender would accept under the circumstances the trustees have violated Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Marshall v. Dekeyser; 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
20. [Mergers & Acquisitions] In a contest for corporate control where potential conflicts of interest between plan administrators and beneficiaries existed, administrators who did not conduct independent, "intensive and scrupulous" investigation of plan's investment options violated ERISA Section 404. Leigh v. Engle, 727 F.2d 113, 4 EBC 2702 (7th Cir. 1984).
21. [Mergers & Acquisitions] Trustees breached ERISA's exclusive purpose and prudent man rules Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\), by agreeing to the sale of employer securities to the employer's pension plan as part of alleged attempt to maintain corporate control without conducting any investigation as to the proposed transaction. Dimond v. Retirement Plan, 582 F. Supp. 892, 4 EBC 1457 (W.D.Pa. 1983).
22. [Mergers & Acquisitions] Where sale of ownership of the employer is likely to have an impact on the plan's ability to obtain payment on employer notes held by the plan, which, in turn, is likely to affect the plan's ability to pay benefits under the plan, the plan trustees' duties of loyalty and prudence require them to advise the participants of the full facts concerning the sale. Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
23. [Payments, Excessive] Payment of an excessive amount of rent by a plan for the lease of an aircraft violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E. D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
24. [Payments, Excessive] Trustees of an employee welfare plan breached fiduciary duties when they improperly overpaid a law firm $292,800 for legal services rendered to members of the plan. Law firm that knowingly receives excessive payments from trustees of a plan is held accountable for the breaches committed by the trustees and jointly liable for be overpayment. Benvenuto v. Schneider, 678 F. Supp. 51, 9 EBC 1528 (E.D.N.Y. 1988).
25. [Recordkeeping] A company was delegated by a bank trustee or custodian for self-directed IRA accounts the function of maintaining records and preparing appropriate reports required by Section 103 of ERISA. A company maintaining records necessary for the preparation of such reports is a plan fiduciary and must perform these functions with the degree of care set forth in Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Redwood Bank v. QTA, Inc., No. C-79-1586, slip op. (N.D.Cal., Oct. 23, 1979).
26. [Self-Dealing] Purchase of automobile insurance covering plan trustees and employees, but which does not protect the plan, constitutes a violation of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).

Section 404(a)(1)(C)

Subject to sections 403\(c\) and \(d\), 4042, and 4044, a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and by diversifying the investments of the plan so as to minimize the risk of large losses, unless under the circumstances it is clearly prudent not to do so.

A. Advisory Opinions

1. [Deposits - Insured/Uninsured] The diversification requirement of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\) generally will not be violated if all plan assets in an individual account plan are invested in a federally insured savings account, so long as the account is fully insured. Where the account balance exceeds the amount covered by federal insurance, compliance with Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\) is determined by whether the bank invests its assets in a diversified manner. AO 77-46.
2. [Collective Investment Funds] An investment by an ERISA plan in a single collective investment pool may be deemed to be a properly diversified investment if the pool is itself diversified. In this case, each of the investments of the collective trust is deemed to be an investment of the plan. AO 80-13A.
3. [Mutual funds/Annuities] A plan may invest all of its assets in insurance or annuity contracts (AO 75-79) or a mutual fund (AO 75-93) without violating Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\) dealing with diversification.
4. [Real Estate] Where the assets of a plan consist largely of real estate mortgage loans, the new investment managers of the plan will not violate the diversification requirements of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\) if they follow a policy whereby decisions to retain or dispose of individual loans and properties will be made on the basis of economic and prudent management generally and not on a basis that requires diversification of plan assets in situations in which the principles of economic and prudent management would indicate that such loans and properties should be retained. AO 77-62/63.
5. [REIT] Proper diversification for plan assets invested in a real estate investment trust (REIT) is determined by considering the assets held by the REIT. AO 78-30.

B. Court Decisions

1. [General] Section 404 of ERISA requires that fiduciaries conduct their activities as would a prudent man under similar circumstances. While there is flexibility in the prudence standard, it is not a refuge for fiduciaries who are not equipped to evaluate a complex investment. Glass/Metal Association and Glaziers and Glass Workers Pension Plan, 507 F. Supp. 378, 2 EBC 1006 (D.Hawaii 1980).

2. [General] Where plan trustees, lacking prior lending experience, fail to follow the procedure that a prudent lender would utilize by failing to consider other real estate investment vehicles that offered greater opportunity for diversification, and by committing plan assets without adequate procedures for evaluation of a risk, the plan trustees violated their duty to act with care, skill, prudence and diligence as required under Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of ERISA. Glass/Metal Association and Glaziers and Glass Workers Pension Plan, 507 F. Supp. 378, 2 EBC 1006 (D.Hawaii 1980).
3. [General] In contrast to traditional trust law, both Congress and the courts have recognized that the diversification requirement of ERISA Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\) imposes a separate duty on plan fiduciaries to spread the risk of loss of the plan. Therefore, if consummated, a commitment of 23% of the pension plan's total assets to a single loan would subject a disproportionate amount of the pension trust's assets to the risk of a large loss and violate the diversification requirement. Glass/Metal Association and Glaziers and Glass Workers Pension Plan, 507 F. Supp. 378, 2 EBC 1006 (D.Hawaii 1980).
4. [Loans] A loan of 36% of plan assets to finance the expansion of a hotel and gambling casino violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\). Marshall v. Teamsters Local 282 Pension Trust Fund, 458 F. Supp. 986 (E.D.N.Y. 1978).
5. [Loans - Employers] The investment of virtually all of a plan's assets in loans to employers, on its face, represents a complete failure to diversify the investments of the plan so as to minimize the risk of large losses required by Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\). Once a plaintiff proves failure to diversify, the burden shifts to the defendant to demonstrate that nondiversification was prudent under the circumstances. Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
6. [Loans] Where trustees failed to collect what defendants owed the pension trust, renewed unfavorable loans and failed to diversity holdings, they violated Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) and \(C\). Donovan v. Schmoutey, 592 F. Supp. 1361 (D.Nev. 1984).
7. [Market Valuation] Pension plan service company that fails to revalue the market value of properties to determine a fair rental value to the lessee, the plan's sponsor, and also fails to advise trustees that the plan assets should be diversified and not concentrated in the buildings leased to the plan's sponsor, breaches its fiduciary duties under ERISA. Brock v. Self, 632 F. Supp. 1509, 7 EBC 1512 (W. D. La. 1986).

Section 404(a)(1)(D)

Subject to sections 403\(c\) and \(d\), 4042, and 4044, a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan solely in the interest of the participants and beneficiaries and in accordance with the documents and instruments governing the plan insofar as such documents and instruments are consistent with the provisions of this subchapter or subchapter III of this chapter.

A. Interpretive Bulletins

1. A vacation plan may pay all or any portion of the benefits to which a plan participant or beneficiary is entitled to a different party without violating Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) if (a) the plan documents expressly provide for such payments to third parties at the direction of a participant or beneficiary, (b) the participant or beneficiary directs in writing that the plan trustees pay a named third party all or a specified portion of the sum of money that would otherwise be paid to the participant or beneficiary and (c) payment is made to the third party only when or after the money would otherwise be payable to the participant or beneficiary. IB 78-1.
2. Investment Policies. An investment policy designed to further the purposes of a plan and its funding policy is consistent with, but not required by, ERISA 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(B\). If one exists, it is considered one of the "documents and instruments governing the plan", and must be followed. IB 94-2.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. Within the mandate of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) is the rule that plan trustees and fiduciaries must administer the plan in accordance with clear and unambiguous provisions of the plan document and the law. The fact that policy reasons mandate a change in the plan provisions is relevant to a judicial review of the validity of the plan change, but such conditions are not relevant in the interpretation and implementation of such rule. Where, in this case, the plan's rules were clear and unambiguous and were upheld by the courts as valid, the trustees must enforce them as so written. AO 82-IA.
2. Whether the trustees can accept contributions from employers for certain specific individuals or classes thereof and/or make benefit payments to such individuals is a matter to be determined by the plan document. Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) requires that the plan be administered in accordance with the plan document to the extent that the plan document is in accordance with the law. AO 81-30A.

C. Court Decisions

1. A limitation in the plan instruments on the authority of the trustees to invest plan assets, which is not inconsistent with any provisions of ERISA, is binding on the trustees under Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). Marshall v. Teamsters Local 282 Pension Trust Fund, 458 F. Supp. 986 (E.D.N.Y. 1978).
2. Where plan document provided that administrative committee member having interest in transaction shall not participate in transaction and fiduciary acted contrary to plan terms, there was a violation of ERISA Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). Donovan v. Cunningham, 716 F.2d 1455, 4 EBC 2329 (5th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984).
3. Payment of compensation to plan trustees without express authorization in plan instruments violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
4. Payment of benefits to ineligible persons violates Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
5. A trustee's failure to declare his own forfeiture of benefits under a plan by reason of his violation of a 'bad boy' clause does not constitute a breach of fiduciary duty. Fremont v. McGraw-Edison Company, 460 F. Supp. 599 (N.D.Ill. 1978), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 606 F.2d 752 (7th Cir. 1979), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 951 (1980).
6. Dividing pension benefits, once they are being paid out, between a participant and his divorced spouse does not violate Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). Campa v. Campa, 89 Cal. App.3d 113C (1st Dist. 1979), appeal dismissed, Carpenters Pension Trust Fund for Northern California v. Campa, 444 U. S. 1028 (1980).

Section 404(a)(2)

In the case of an eligible individual account plan (as defined in Section 407\(d\)\(3\)), the diversification requirement of paragraph (1)(C) and the prudence requirement (only to the extent that it requires diversification) of paragraph (1)(B) is not violated by acquisition or holding of qualifying employer real property or qualifying employer securities (as defined in Section 407\(d\)\(4\) and \(5\)).

A. Conference Report

This provision is discussed on page 317 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. The purchase of employer securities by a profit-sharing plan is covered by Section 404(a)(2). AO 75-89; WSB 79-86 (thrift plan).

Section 404(b)

Except as authorized by the Secretary by regulation, no fiduciary may maintain the indicia of ownership of any assets of a plan outside the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States.

Page 306 of the Congressional Conference Report explains this provision.

Refer to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.404b-1.

1. Plan assets may be held by persons located outside the United States if the assets are foreign securities and (a) the plan fiduciary, empowered to authorize such holding is a United States regulated bank, insurance company or investment adviser, has its principal place of business in the United States and meets certain minimum financial conditions; or (b) the securities are in the possession of a United States bank, a registered broker or dealer; or an SEC-designated "satisfactory control location" and certain other conditions are met. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.404b-1.
2. An ADR (American depository receipt) that enables a person to demand delivery of a foreign security constitutes the "indicia of ownership" of the foreign security for purposes of Section 404\(b\). Preamble to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.404b-1.
3. The indicia of ownership of any plan assets (e.g., foreign securities, United States securities, etc.) attributable to contributions made on behalf of plan participants who are Canadian citizens or residents may be maintained in Canada if required by Canadian tax or other laws. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.404b-1.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. Section 404\(b\) does not prohibit the investment of plan assets in enterprises located outside the United States provided that the indicia of ownership (e.g., stock certificates) of such assets is maintained in the U.S. (or in accordance with DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.404b-1). AO 75-80.

Section 404(c)

In the case of a pension plan which provides for individual accounts and permits a participant or beneficiary to exercise control over assets in his account, if a participant or beneficiary exercises control over the assets in the account (as determined under regulations of the Secretary) -

(1)	Such participant or beneficiary shall not be deemed to be a fiduciary by reasons of such exercise, and
(2)	No person who is otherwise a fiduciary shall be liable under this part for any loss, or by reason of any breach, which results from such participant's, or beneficiary's exercise of control.

A. Conference Report

This provision is explained on pages 305-306 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

See DOL ERISA Regulation 404c-1, which exempts fiduciaries from certain ERISA liability if plans meet certain conditions and participants direct their own investments.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. Section 404(c) does not exempt transactions covered by Section 404\(c\) from all provisions of ERISA; it only exempts fiduciaries from liability regarding such transactions and the participant or beneficiary from being a fiduciary by reason of exercising control under Section 404(c). AO 75-81.
2. The fact that transactions might be exempted from the provisions of Section 406 by reason of Section 404\(c\) does not affect the application of Section 4975 of the Code. PLR 7821122.
3. [Individual Account] A person who is a plan fiduciary and who also exercises control over assets in his or her own individual account will not be treated as a fiduciary with respect to such exercise of control. AO 75-24.

D. Court Decisions

1. [Fiduciary Liability for Self-Directed Plan Investments] A 401(k) plan offered GICs as one of several investment vehicles for plan participants, who directed their own investments. GICs were issued, in part, by Executive Life Insurance. The trustees relied on ratings of rating services. When Executive Life encountered financial difficulties and was eventually downgraded by the rating services, the plan notified participants that GIC investments were not guaranteed from loss. Unisys negotiated more liberal waiting periods for transfers from the GIC fund to other investment vehicles, but was restricted on what it could tell participants. As a result, it did not tell participants of Executive Life's problems. Unisys did; however, pay for the replacement of an annuity issued to its Chairman by Executive Life with an annuity from another insurer. Executive Life was declared insolvent by state insurance regulators in 1991. Plan participants sued the fiduciaries for breach of fiduciary responsibilities under ERISA Section 404\(a\). The Unisys trustees' defense was that they were protected from fiduciary responsibility by ERISA Section 404\(c\).

The courts ruled that (1) the duty of prudent inquiry may have been breached by total reliance on insurance rating services, (2) plan fiduciaries did not release material information to plan participants, (3) the participants' control over their investments may release the fiduciaries from investment liability, and (4) the case was remanded back to the District Court so plan participants may pursue their claims [3rd Circuit Court of Appeals, In Re Unisys Savings Plan Litigation (Meinhardt v. Unisys Corp.), 74 F.3d 420 (3d. Cir. 1996)].

Co-Fiduciary Liability
ERISA Section 405
Section 405(a)
In addition to any liability which he may have under any other provision of this part, a fiduciary with respect to a plan shall be liable for a breach of fiduciary responsibility of another fiduciary with respect to the same plan in the following circumstances:
(1)	If he participates knowingly in, or knowingly undertakes to conceal, an act or omission of such other fiduciary, knowing such act or omission is a breach;
(2)	If, by his failure to comply with section 404(a)(1) in the administration of his specific responsibilities which give rise to his status as a fiduciary, he has enabled such other fiduciary to commit a breach; or
(3)	If he had knowledge of a breach by such other fiduciary, unless he makes reasonable efforts under the circumstances to remedy the breach.

A. Conference Report

Pages 299-300 of the Congressional Conference Report discuss co-fiduciary liability provisions.

B. Interpretive Bulletins

1. A plan fiduciary who knows of a breach committed by another fiduciary must take steps to remedy the breach, such as instituting a lawsuit, notifying the Department of Labor or publicizing the breach. Mere resignation by the fiduciary as a protest against the breach is not sufficient. IB 75-5, Question FR-10.
2. Even though a fiduciary has only limited functions to perform (e.g., because the fiduciaries have properly allocated functions among themselves or delegated them to others), the fiduciary can become liable for breaches in other areas by other plan fiduciaries under Section 405\(a\). IB 75-8, Questions FR-13, FR-14 and FR-16.
3. Where the Labor Department is already conducting an investigation of plan investments, the new investment managers for the plan will not be acting in violation of Section 405\(a\) if they report any breaches of fiduciary duties by others of which they become aware to the plan trustees and to the Labor Department and make available to the Labor Department all information requested about past transactions. AO 77-60/61; AO 77-79/80.

C. Court Decisions

1. [General] A fiduciary is liable under ERISA Section 405\(a\)\(1\) if he participates knowingly in, or knowingly undertakes to conceal, a co-fiduciary's breach of duty. Davidson v. Cook, 567 F. Supp. 225, 4 EBC 1816 (E.D.Va. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 10 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 899 (1984).
2. [General] ERISA Section 405 does not impose vicarious liability; actual knowledge is required. The fiduciary must know the other person is a fiduciary to the plan, must know that he participated in the act that constituted a breach, and must know that it was a breach. Donovan v. Cunningham, 716 F.2d 1455, 4 EBC 2329 (5th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984).
3. [General] Under Section 405 of ERISA a fiduciary is liable for a co-fiduciary's breach of fiduciary duties if he knowingly participates and/or conceals such breach; furthermore, a fiduciary is required to make reasonable efforts to remedy a known breach by another fiduciary. Davidson v. Cook, 567 F. Supp. 225, 4 EBC 1816 (E.D. Va. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 10 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 899 (1984).
4. [General] Co-fiduciaries each have responsibility for the actions of the others and will be found liable for the others' breach of fiduciary duty if such co-fiduciary participates knowingly in a breach or if, by his failure to comply with Section 404 of ERISA, he enables another fiduciary to commit a breach. LeFebvre v. Westinghouse Electrical Corp., 549 F. Supp. 1021, 3 EBC 2353, as amended by 3 EBC 2359 (D.Md. 1982), rev'd, 747 F.2d 197 (4th Cir. 1984).
5. [General] Relying on the advice or information of a co-trustee alone may subject a trustee to liability. Katsaros v. Cody, 568 F. Supp. 360, 4 EBC 1910 (E.D.N.Y. 1983).
6. [Omission vs. Commission] Fiduciaries are not relieved of their fiduciary responsibilities by their lack of involvement in a particular transaction. By failing to monitor the conduct of other trustees, a trustee may violate Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) and be held liable under Section 405\(a\)\(2\). Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
7. [Successor Trustees] New trustees of a plan are not required to investigate how prudently prior trustees had negotiated a contract. If the contract terms are found reasonable and no other facts indicate the contrary, new trustees are not liable if prior trustees committed a breach of their fiduciary duties by acting imprudently. Brock v. Robbins, 830 F.2d 640, 8 EBC 2489 (7th Cir. 1987).
8. [Successor Trustees] A successor trustee has a duty to liquidate prior improper investment upon assuming his responsibilities. Marshall v. Craft 463 F. Supp. 493 (N.D.Ga. 1978). See also Morrissey v. Curran, 567 F.2d 546 (2d Cir. 1977).
9. [Resignation Not a Cure] Resignation by a fiduciary is not sufficient to discharge the fiduciary's duty under Section 405(a)(3) to make reasonable efforts to remedy the breach of another fiduciary. Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F. Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).

Section 405(b)
(1)	Except as otherwise provided in subsection (d) and in section 403(a)(1) and (2) , if the assets of a plan are held by two or more trustees -

	(A)	Each shall use reasonable care to prevent a co-trustee from committing a breach; and
	(B)	They shall jointly manage and control the assets of the plan, except that nothing in this subparagraph (B) shall preclude any agreement authorized by the trust instrument, allocating specific responsibilities, obligations, or duties among trustees, in which event a trustee to whom certain responsibilities, obligations, or duties have not been allocated shall not be liable by reason of this subparagraph (B) either individually or as a trustee for any loss resulting to the plan arising from the acts or omissions on the part of another trustee to whom such responsibilities, obligations, or duties have been allocated.
(2)		Nothing in this subsection shall limit any liability that a fiduciary may have under subsection (a) or any other provision of this part.
(3)	(A)	In the case of a plan the assets of which are held in more than one trust, a trustee shall not be liable under paragraph (1) except with respect to an act or omission of a trustee of a trust of which he is a trustee.
	(B)	No trustee shall be liable under this subsection for following instructions referred to in Section 403(a)(1) .

A. Conference Report

The allocation of trustee duties are discussed on pages 300-301 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Interpretive Bulletins

1. A plan fiduciary who knows of a breach committed by another fiduciary must take reasonable steps to remedy the breach, such as instituting a lawsuit, notifying the Department of Labor, or publicizing the breach. Mere resignation by the fiduciary as a protest against the breach is not sufficient. IB 75-5, Question FR-10.

Section 405(c)

(1)	The instrument under which a plan is maintained may expressly provide for procedures -
	(A)	For allocating fiduciary responsibilities (other than trustee responsibilities) among named fiduciaries, and
	(B)	For named fiduciaries to designate persons other than named fiduciaries to carry out fiduciary responsibilities (other than trustee responsibilities) under the plan.
(2)	If a plan expressly provides for a procedure described in paragraph (1), and pursuant to such procedure any fiduciary responsibility of a named fiduciary is allocated to any person, or a person is designated to carry out any such responsibility, then such named fiduciary shall not be liable for an act or omission of such person in carrying out such responsibility except to the extent that -
	(A)	The named fiduciary violated section 404(a)(1) -
	(i)	With respect to such allocation or designation,
	(ii)	With respect to the establishment or implementation of the procedure under paragraph (1), or
	(iii)	In continuing the allocation or designation; or
	(B)	The named fiduciary would otherwise be liable in accordance with subsection (a).
(3)	For purposes of this subsection, the term "trustee responsibility" means any responsibility provided in the plan's trust instrument (if any) to manage or control the assets of the plan, other than a power under the trust instrument of a named fiduciary to appoint an investment manager in accordance with Section 402(c)(3) .

A. Conference Report

General fiduciary duty allocation provisions are covered on page 302 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Interpretive Bulletins

1. [Allocation] Fiduciary responsibilities not involving management or control of plan assets may be allocated among named fiduciaries and may be delegated by named fiduciaries to others if the plan instruments so provide. IB 75-8, Question FR-12.
2. [Allocation] If directors of an employer are the named fiduciaries of the plan, their liability can be limited by the procedures established in the plan instruments for allocating fiduciary responsibilities among named fiduciaries or for designating others to carry out fiduciary responsibilities. IB 75-8, Question D-4.
3. [Allocation] Even if named fiduciaries allocate responsibilities or designate others to perform these functions, they are still liable for breaches in the establishment and implementation of the allocation or designation procedure. IB 75-8, Questions FR-13 and FR-14.
4. [Delegation] Named fiduciaries cannot delegate authority or discretion to manage or control plan assets to anyone other than an investment manager as defined in Section 3(38). IB 75-8, Question FR-15.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. A named fiduciary with the duty to appoint, remove and monitor a plan's investment managers is not responsible for the day-to-day management of plan assets by the investment managers but must be prudent in appointing the investment managers and in continuing to retain them. AO 77-69/70.

D. Court Decisions

1. [Allocation] Fiduciaries are only liable for imprudent investment decisions made by an investment manager, who has been designated as such by the fiduciaries, if the fiduciaries fail to monitor adequately the performance of the investment manager. Brock v. Berman, 673 F. Supp. 634, 8 EBC 1689 (D.Mass. 1987).

2. [Allocation] Even though a plan trustee has no authority for investment decisions, it cannot disavow itself of responsibility for such decisions, since it is still a fiduciary. However, under the allocation provisions of Section 405\(c\)\(1\), the trustee may, in fact, not be liable for such decisions. Leonard v. Drug Fair, Inc., No. 78-1335, Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) Para 97,144 (D.D.C. 1979).
3. [Recordkeeping] A company was delegated by a bank trustee or custodian for self-directed IRA accounts the function of maintaining records and preparing appropriate reports required by Section 103 of ERISA. A company maintaining records necessary for the preparation of such reports is a plan fiduciary and must perform these functions with the degree of care set forth in Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Redwood Bank v. QTA, Inc., No. C-79-1586, slip op. (N.D.Cal., Oct. 23, 1979).

Section 405(d)

(1)	If an investment manager or managers have been appointed under section 402(c)(3) , then, notwithstanding subsections (a)(2) and (3) and subsection (b), no trustee shall be liable for the acts or omissions of such investment manager or managers, or be under an obligation to invest or otherwise manage any assets of the plan which is subject to the management of such investment manager.
(2)	Nothing in this subsection shall relieve any trustee of any liability under this part for any act of such trustee.

A. Conference Report

Investment manager appointment provisions are covered on pages -301-302 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

See the DOL plan assets ERISA Regulation 2510.3-101.

Prohibited Transactions

ERISA Sections 406, 407, 408, 414

Section 406(a)(1)

Except as provided in Section 408 [which contains the exemptions from the prohibited transactions restrictions]:

A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not cause the plan to engage in a transaction, if he knows or should know that such transaction constitutes a direct or indirect -

(A)	Sale or exchange, or leasing, of any property, between the plan and a party in interest;
(B)	Lending of money or other extension of credit between the plan and a party in interest;
(C)	Furnishing of goods, services or facilities between the plan and a party in interest;
(D)	Transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a party in interest, of any assets of the plan; or
(E)	Acquisition, on behalf of the plan, of any employer security or employer real property in violation of section 407(a) which contains the 10% limitation on the acquisition and holding of qualified employer securities and real property.

Investments in collectibles are generally prohibited by Section 408\(m\) of the Internal Revenue Code and PTE 91-55.

B. Conference Report

These prohibited transaction provisions are discussed on pages 306-309 and 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report.

C. Regulations

DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-101 defines plan assets.

D. Prohibited Transaction Class Exemptions (PTE)

1. [Broker] The provision of brokerage services to IRAs and to Keogh plans to which Title I of ERISA is inapplicable is not subject to the prohibited transaction provisions of Title I of ERISA. However, such IRAs and Keogh plans remain subject to the prohibited transaction provisions of Title I of ERISA. Final PTE C 79-1.
2. [Coins and Collectibles] PTE 91-55 permits IRA accounts to invest in American Eagle gold coins.
3. [Broker] Securities broker-dealers regularly provide research, information and advice concerning securities and also effect agency transactions for the purchase or sale of securities in the ordinary course of their business as broker-dealers, and the provision of a combination of such services by a fiduciary with regard to employee benefit plans would constitute prohibited transactions under ERISA and the Code. Proposed Extension of Paragraph 1(a) of PTE C 75-1; Final PTE C 78-10.
4. [Foreign Exchange] A bank fiduciary may use its own services (or those of an affiliate) to invest, on a non-discretionary basis, in foreign currencies and foreign currency options, subject to a number of conditions. See PTE 94-20.
5. [Loan by Union Plan to Provide Projects for Union Employers] A loan by a multiemployer plan or a multiple employer plan to an owner of real property who is not a party in interest or a disqualified person to such plan where the loan is for the purpose of enabling such property owner to make construction improvements on such property, and the property owner contracts with an employer participating in the plan to make such construction improvements, is not a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) - \(D\) of the Code. However, such a loan may give rise to a prohibited transaction if, for example, the loan is made in the context of an arrangement where a specific participating employer is to furnish a portion of the construction, and such employer has a controlling influence over the plan's decision to make the loan. Final PTE C 76-1.

6. [Office Space] In some instances, a multiemployer plan or a multiple employer plan will secure office space and administrative services jointly with a participating employee organization, employer or employer association, or with another multiemployer plan or multiple employer plan that is a party in interest or disqualified person to the plan and will share the costs of securing such office space or administrative services on a pro-rata basis based on each party's use of such space or services. Such joint use of office space or administrative services does not constitute a prohibited transaction. However, if a multiemployer plan or a multiple employer plan independently secures for its own use office space or administrative services and furnishes part of such office space or administrative services to a party in interest or disqualified person, such transactions are prohibited transactions. Final PTE C 76-1.
7. [Securities Lending] A securities lending service, pursuant to which a bank-trustee will lend securities of plans for which it serves as trustee to broker-dealers for an additional fee from the plan, may contravene Section 406\(b\). AO 79-11. But also see PTE 82-63.
8. [Securities Lending] Payment to a party in interest of any commission, finder's fee or other compensation for services in connection with the effecting of a loan of securities by the plan to a broker-dealer, bank or other person would be a prohibited transaction. Proposed PTE I D-762. But also see PTE 82-63.

E. Interpretive Bulletins

1. [Plan Assets] In general, the investment by a plan in securities of a corporation will not be considered to be an investment in the underlying assets of the corporation. The assets of the corporation are not plan assets so subsequent transactions between a party in interest and the corporation will not be prohibited. This general proposition is consistent with Section 401\(b\)\(1\). However, this does not mean that such an investment may not sometimes constitute an indirect prohibited transaction. For example, if a plan invests in a corporation pursuant to an arrangement whereunder it is expected that the corporation will engage in a transaction with a party in interest, such arrangement will be a prohibited transaction. IB 75-2 (This IB contains several examples).
2. [Contributions, In-Kind] Contributions of non-cash ("in-kind") assets to a defined benefit plan is a prohibited transaction. In-kind contributions to a defined contributions or welfare benefit plan may be a prohibited transaction, depending on the facts and circumstances and provisions of the plan. The basic determinant is whether the in-kind contributions represents an attempt to lessen a present or future obligation to make cash contributions to a plan. IB 94-3.
3. [Bonding of Fiduciaries] The purchase of a bond required under Section 412 is not a prohibited transaction. IB 75-5, FR-9.
4. [Payment of Benefits] The mere payment of money to which a participant or beneficiary is entitled, at the direction of the participant or beneficiary, to a party in interest does not contravene Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). IB 78-1.

F. Advisory Opinions

1. [Alienation of Benefits] Because Section 406 prohibits both direct and indirect transactions, a trustee to whom the limitation on compensation in Section 408\(c\)\(2\) applies could not assign his rights to compensation for services rendered to a plan to a party in interest, such as an employer. Therefore, the trustee could not submit a request for compensation to the fund designating his employer as payee on checks issued. WSB 79-92.
2. [Alienation of Vested Benefits] Withholding of benefits from a plan participant and transfer of those benefits to a party in interest in satisfaction of a debt owed by the participant to that party in interest is a prohibited transaction. AO 76-99.
3. [Appointment] The appointment of a bank that is a creditor of the entity maintaining the plan as trustee of the plan assets is not a prohibited transaction. WSB 77-14.
4. [Appointment] The appointment of a party in interest as trustee, and the transfer of plan assets to the trustee pursuant to such appointment, does not constitute a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) and does not contravene Sections 406\(b\)\(1\) or 406\(b\)\(3\). WSB 77-14.
5. [Bank Servicer] The owner of a trust company that acts as a fiduciary to employee benefit plans that renders certain services for the trust company, but not for the plans, is not subject to the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\), since the services would not be a transaction between the plan and a party in interest. AO 82-55A.
6. [Bank Stock - Purchase/Retention/Sale of Fiduciary Bank/BHC Stock]
  - General Discretionary Rule - An ERISA plan may not invest in the stock of a fiduciary bank if the bank has discretion over the transaction. The discretionary retention of such stock would also be prohibited. Non-discretionary purchases, sales, retentions are permitted. See 1980 letter from DOL to OCC.
  - General Non-Discretionary Rule - An ERISA plan may invest in the stock of a fiduciary bank or its bank holding company if the bank has no discretion over the investment. AO 92-23A.
  - Self-Directed Purchases - Permits self-directed accounts to purchase stock (including treasury stock) of the fiduciary bank or its holding company. AO 88-9.
  - Mutual Conversions - Initial Public Offerings - Permits self-directed accounts to purchase stock of the fiduciary bank (or its holding company) in an initial public offering (IPO) or on conversion of a mutual institution to a stock institution. AO 88-28.
7. [Bonds - Rights] The sale or assignment of rights to debentures by a trust to a party in interest is a prohibited transaction. AO 76-72.
8. [Collective Funds] The investment of plan assets in a commingled fund (for example, a qualified group trust) maintained by a bank trustee causes the assets of such commingled fund to be treated as assets of the plan. Consequently, a purchase or holding of a master note (i.e. a nonnegotiable obligation issued by a finance company, the principal amount of which fluctuates on a daily basis depending on how much money the fund desires to loan the issuer) by the commingled fund in which the plan has an interest from a subsidiary of the corporation maintaining the plan constitutes a loan from the plan to the subsidiary in violation of Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Code. PLR 7913114; PLR 7913116; Proposed PTE C 784.
9. [Collective Funds] The mere transfer of assets between a qualified group trust (CIF) and plans invested therein, and the corresponding increase or decrease in qualified group trust units credited to the plans, are intra plan transactions so long as the group trust is a qualified trust under Section 401\(a\) of the Code and the transfers are within the terms of the plan. Accordingly, such transactions do not fall within the restrictions of Section 406 of ERISA or Section 4975\(c\)\(1\) of the Code. PLR 7913116.
10. [Collective Funds - Conversion to Mutual Funds] The conversion of an ERISA collective investment fund would be a prohibited transaction in violation of Section 406. PTE 77-4 would not provide relief for such a conversion. See the 1994 letter from DOL to OCC.

11. [Compensation] The receipt of compensation by a fiduciary from a plan is a prohibited transaction if the fiduciary is already receiving full-time compensation from the employer maintaining the plan. AO 78-08.
12. [Contributions - In-Kind] The contribution to the plan by the employer of a condominium owned by the owner, in lieu of making its contribution to the defined benefit plan, in accordance with the requirements for properly funding the plan, constitutes a prohibited sale or exchange of property between the plan and a party in interest pursuant to Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\).

Section 406 provides that a transfer of real or personal property by a party in interest to a plan shall be treated as a sale or exchange if the property is subject to a mortgage or a lien that the plan assumes or it is subject to a mortgage or similar lien that a party in interest placed on the property within the ten year period ending on the date of the transfer. The transfer of an option to purchase a condominium by a party in interest to the plan followed by the exercise of the option by the plan may also constitute a violation of Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). AO 81-69A.
13. [Deposits] The investment of plan assets in credit union share accounts, at the direction of the plan participants and beneficiaries, is not a prohibited transaction. AO 76-38.
14. [Deposits] The investment of the assets of a noncollectively bargained multiple employer plan covering employees of banks, in savings accounts and certificates of deposit of banks that are contributing employers, constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\) and may also be prohibited under Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\), because members of the administrative board of the plan, which directs plan investments, are officers and employees of contributing employer/banks.

However, Section 408\(b\)\(4\) provides an exemption from Sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\), and 406\(b\)\(2\) for the investment of plan assets in the deposits of certificates of deposit of a bank that is a plan fiduciary or party in interest, if the requirements of DOL ERISA Regulations Section 2550.408b-4 are met. One requirement of the regulation is that, for investments made after November 1, 1977, the plan specify the name(s) of the banks in which deposits may be made. The specifications may be made in the plan by amendment retroactive to November 1, 1977. AO 79-25.
15. [Estates] The purchase of real property from the estate of the sole shareholder of a corporation contributing to a plan is not a prohibited transaction even though one of the executors of the estate formerly was a plan trustee. AO 76-420.
16. [Fees - Own-Bank Plan] A bank is not prohibited from serving as trustee for a plan maintained for the bank's employees where it receives no compensation from the plan for its trustee services [Emphasis added]. AO 79-49.
17. [Fees] The reimbursement of, or payment to, fiduciaries of expenses properly and actually incurred in settlement of pending or threatened litigation by a plan, pursuant to indemnification provisions that do not contravene ERISA, is not a prohibited transaction. AO 77-66/67.
18. [Investment Advisor] The provision of investment advisory, services by a corporation to a plan is not a prohibited transaction even though the corporation also provides such services to other clients who may be parties in interest to the plan. AO 77-44.
19. [Investment Advisor] To the extent that a party renders investment performance measurement services to a plan, providing no more than quantitative measurement and ranking of a plan's investment portfolio and/or management performance based upon objective, reasonable and relevant criteria that are uniformly applied, such service would not constitute the rendering of investment advice. However, where the service provider adopts, applies or modifies performance or portfolio indices in such a way that a plan is furnished with a format for decision making that is designed to influence the plan's continued participation in a particular investment program, the service would constitute investment advice. AO 94-03.
20. [Leases - Sponsor] The leasing by a plan of improved real property to the employer maintaining the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to Sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\), \(C\), \(D\) and \(E\) of ERISA and Sections 4975\(c\)\(a\)\(1\), \(C\) and \(D\) of the Code. In addition, since any property leased to an employer is "employer real property," as defined in Section 407\(d\)\(2\) of ERISA, if such property is not "qualifying employer real property" within the meaning of Section 407\(d\)\(4\) of ERISA, the holding of such property by the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to Sections 406\(a\)\(2\) and 407\(a\)\(1\) of ERISA. Also, to the extent that the employer may be a fiduciary to the plan, as defined in Section 3\(21\)\(A\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(e\)\(3\) of the Code, the lease arrangement may be a prohibited transaction pursuant to Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\) of the Code. Proposed PTE F 192.
21. [Loans - Common Borrower] If a loan is made by a plan to a person in order to encourage that person to do business with the employer, the transaction would be prohibited under Sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) and 406\(b\). WSB 79-63.
22. [Loan by Construction Union Plan to Provide Employment for Union Members] Because it will not opine on factual circumstances, the Department will not opine on construction industry trustees' direction to their investment manager to invest a specified amount of plan assets in construction mortgages within the jurisdiction of the union whose members are plan participants. The Department states, however, that it would not be inconsistent with the requirements of Sections 403\(c\) and 404 for plan fiduciaries to select an investment course of action that reflects non-economic factors so long as application of such factors follows the primary consideration of a broad range of investment opportunities that are economically equally advantageous. Arrangements whereby funds of plans are invested by the fiduciary in transactions that indirectly create employment opportunities and compensation for employee services necessarily require an examination to determine if an indirect use of plan assets for the benefit of a party in interest is involved. AO 85-36A.
23. [Loan by Union Plan to Provide Projects for Union Employers] If a multiemployer plan acquires unimproved real property and arranges for the construction of building structures on such property for the purpose of providing office space for the plan with building contractors and subcontractors some or all of whose employees are participants or beneficiaries of the plan, the arrangement between the plan and such building contractors and subcontractors would constitute prohibited transactions. Proposed PTE I 76-2.
24. [Loans - Sponsor] Where a plan has a loan outstanding to X Corp. and the employer with respect to the plan acquires a majority or controlling interest in X Corp., the loan would become a prohibited, indirect extension of credit to the employer, in addition to being a direct prohibited extension of credit to X Corp. However, if the loan transaction is contemplated before the acquisition, the loan would not be a prohibited transaction. AO 79-37.
25. [Loan Guarantee] A guarantee by a party in interest of a loan by a plan to a third party constitutes an extension of credit between the plan and the party in interest. If such loan was made pursuant to a binding contract in effect on July 1, 1974, it may be exempt under Section 414(c)(1), even if the loan constitutes a nonqualifying security under Section 407. See DOL ERISA Regulation Section 2550.407a-1\(b\).
26. [Mutual Fund Conversion from Collective Investment Fund] The conversion of an ERISA collective investment fund would be a prohibited transaction in violation of Section 406. PTE 77-4 would not provide relief for such a conversion. See 1994 letter from DOL to OCC.
27. [Pooled Fund - Seed Money] The transfer by an insurance company of seed money invested by it in separate investment accounts back to the general account of the insurance company would not be treated as assets of a plan that have invested in the separate accounts and, therefore, the insurance company's redemption of its participation units in the separate accounts does not constitute a violation of the provisions of Sections 404\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\). AO 83-38A.
28. [Sale of Assets to Insider] The sale of certain parcels of real property by a profit-sharing plan to the majority shareholder of the employer maintaining the plan and to a corporation 50% or more of which is owned by such majority shareholder would constitute prohibited transactions pursuant to Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\) of the Code. In addition, if the majority shareholder has the power to appoint and remove the plan trustee, such sales may be prohibited transactions under Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\) of the Code. Proposed PTE I 492.

29. [Stock - Sponsor] The purchase of common stock of the employer maintaining the plan by the employer from the plan is a prohibited transaction (AO 79-23), even if the purchase is made pursuant to a public tender offer (AO 77-48.)
30. [Sweep] Scan and sweep services by a bank for plans for which it provides fiduciary services and for which it is paid a separate fee would be exempt from any of the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\) if the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(2\) are met. The question of what constitutes a reasonable service, a reasonable contract or arrangement, and reasonable compensation is inherently factual in nature, and not subject to opinion. A Section 408\(b\) violation would be involved if the bank, as fiduciary, exercised its authority, control or responsibility that makes it a fiduciary to cause the plan to enter into a transaction involving the provision of services when such fiduciary has an interest in the transaction that may affect the exercise of its judgment as a fiduciary. Therefore, to the extent the bank would direct the utilization of the scan and sweep services and receive any fee therefore, there would be a per se violation of Section 408(b). However, if the bank does not exercise such authority, but the decision is made by the plan sponsor, no violation would exist. AO 88-02A.

G. Court Decisions

1. [General] ERISA Section 406, which prohibits fiduciaries from causing a plan to engage in certain specified transactions, evinced the Congressional desire to prevent transactions that offer a high potential for loss of plan assets and for insider abuse; and to prevent a trustee from being put in a position where he has dual loyalties. McDougall v. Donovan 552 F.Supp. 1206, 3 EBC 2385 (N.D.Ill. 1982).
2. [General] The question of whether ERISA has been violated does not depend on whether any harm results from the transaction. Congress was concerned in ERISA to prevent transactions that offered a high potential for loss of plan assets or for insider abuse. The fact that a prohibited loan is or may be ultimately repaid does not render the loan lawful. Marshall v. Kelly, F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978); Cutaia v. Marshall, 590 F.2d 523 (3d Cir. 1979); Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F.Supp. 629, 1, EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
3. [General] ERISA Section 406\(a\) prohibits a fiduciary from causing a plan to enter into transactions with parties whom "he knows or should have known" are parties in interest to the plan. A fiduciary must act with prudence in investigating whether a party-in-interest relationship exists. In the case of a significant transaction, generally for the fiduciary to be prudent he must make a thorough investigation of the other party's relationship to the plan to determine if he is a party in interest. In the case of a normal and insubstantial day-to-day transaction, it may be sufficient to check the identity of the other party against a roster of parties in interest that is periodically updated. Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
4. [General] Congress did not intend to exclude from prohibitions under Section 406 transactions that have independent business purposes, just as it did not exclude transactions that are fair under some independent measure. Congressional intent to eliminate all transactions, with even the potential to bias the independent judgment of plan fiduciaries, must be followed. McDougall v. Donovan 552 F.Supp. 1206, 3 EBC 2385 (N.D.Ill. 1982).
5. [General] Section 406 of ERISA does not create a per se prohibition against plan fiduciaries with dual loyalties acting on behalf of the plan. Donovan v. Bierwirth, 538 F.Supp. 463, 2 EBC 2145 (E.D.N.Y. 1981).
6. [Effective Date] Actions by fiduciaries occurring after 1974 are not insulated from ERISA coverage merely because their roots can be traced to an event prior to the effective date of ERISA. Marshall v. Craft, 463 F.Supp. 493 (N.D.Ga. 1978).
7. [Compensation] The critical analysis under Section 406, regarding a transaction with a party in interest that is exempted under Section 408, is whether the party in interest receives more than reasonable compensation. Brock v. Robbins 830 F.2d 640, 8 EBC 2489 (7th Cir. 1987).
8. [Compensation] The payment by a multiemployer plan of rent for an aircraft leased from a party in interest in an amount in excess of the value received by the multiemployer plan in utilizing the aircraft allegedly constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
9. [ESOP] Under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\), one transaction normally prohibited is the lending of money or other extension of credit between the plan and a party in interest; however, loans to employee stock ownership plans are exempt from such prohibitions. Allen v. Katz Agency, Inc. Employee Stock Ownership Plan, 677 F.2d 193, 3 EBC 1352 (2d Cir. 1982).
10. [Ignorance] Where trustees did not inspect complete agreement as drafted by counsel, and thus were not aware that part of the plan would result in the use of plan assets to benefit a party in interest, they violated ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\). Dimond v. Retirement Plan, 582 F. Supp. 892, 4 EBC 1457 (W.D. Pa. 1983).
11. [Leases] The lease of an airplane by a multiemployer plan from a party in interest allegedly constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\). Usery v. Wilson, et al, No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
12. [Loans] Fiduciaries cannot act as both borrowers and lenders as these are parties whose interests are adverse; fiduciaries acting on both sides of a loan transaction cannot negotiate the best terms for either party. Davidson v. Cook, 567 F.Supp. 225, 4 EBC 1816 (E.D.Va. 1983), aff'd, 734 F.2d 10 (4th Cir.), cert. denied, 469 U.S. 899 (1984).
13. [Loans to Plan Sponsor] An employer's borrowing of money from the fund violates the prohibition under ERISA Section 406 regarding the lending of money between a plan and a party in interest. Dependahl v. Falstaff Brewing Corp., 491 F.Supp. 1188, 30 Fed. Rul. Serv.2d(Callahan) 564 (E.D.Miss. 1980), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 653 F.2d 1208 (8th Cir.), cert.
14. [Loans] The phrase "reasonable rate of interest" within the meaning of ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) does not equate to the term "prevailing or market rate of interest." Thus, if the other requirements of Section 406\(a\)\(1\) are met, a pension fund may charge interest rates lower than the prevailing rate on mortgage loans made to plan participants. Evidence that a pension fund had charged a lower interest rate was insufficient to establish that the loans did not "bear a reasonable rate of interest" and were accordingly not exempted from the prohibition of ERISA Section 406(a) against making loans to plan participants. Brock v. Walton, 794 F.2d 586, 7 EBC 1769 (11th Cir.), reh'g denied, 802 F.2d 1399 (11th Cir. 1986) (en banc).
15. [Loans] A loan of money by a multiemployer plan to a party in interest allegedly constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\). Usery v. Wilson, et al, No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).
16. [Loans] Dissolving the improper party-in-interest relationship prior to the execution of a loan did not preclude the transaction from being violative of ERISA Section 406 when the loan agreement already existed at the time of divestiture. M&R Investment Co., Inc. v. Fitzsimmons, 685 F.2d 283, 3 EBC 1835 (9th Cir. 1982).
17. [Loans] A loan by a multiemployer plan to a party in interest for the purpose of enabling the party in interest to remove preexisting liens on an aircraft that the party in interest wished to acquire free of encumbrances allegedly constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).

- 18. [Loans] Profit-sharing plan trustees violated ERISA's prohibited transactions provisions by maintaining pre-ERISA loans to employer-sponsor and to one of the trustees after law's effective date, where one loan was made without security with an oral promise to repay, since loans' terms were not at least as favorable to the plan as arm's length transaction would have been. Donovan v. Bryans, 566 F. Supp. 1258, 4 EBC 1816 (E.D.Pa. 1983).
- 19. [Mergers & Acquisitions] Fiduciaries of a trust, containing assets of corporate employee pension benefits plan, violated ERISA's prohibited transactions in Section 406 when they used the assets to finance another corporation's obligation under an acquisition agreement requiring the purchase of shares of stock held by the trust in another corporation. Sandoval v. Simmons 622 F.Supp. 1174, 6 EBC 2161 (D.C. Ill. 1985).
- 20. [Mergers & Acquisitions] ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) and \(b\)\(1\) should be read broadly as a gloss on the duty of loyalty required by Section 404 in light of the Congressional concern with protection of plan beneficiaries and should be read to cover action of trustee who buys shares in target corporation in order to assist either target's management or raider in its quest for corporate control or a control premium. Leigh v. Engle, 727 F.2d 113, 4 EBC 2702 (7th Cir. 1984).
- 21. [Provide Benefits] The payment of rent on behalf of the widow of a former plan trustee is a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) even though the payment was morally commendable and was not made for the personal gain of plan fiduciaries. Marshall v. Cuevas, 1 EBC 1580 (D.P.R. 1979).
- 22. [Successor Trustee] ERISA limits a fiduciary's liability for breach of duty to those breaches committed during his tenure; however, under Section 406 of ERISA a successor trustee has a duty to dispose of prior investments violative of ERISA upon assuming his responsibilities. McDougall v. Donovan 552 F.Supp. 1206, 3 EBC 2385 (N.D.Ill. 1982).
- 23. [Unions] As Section 406 of ERISA seeks to protect against influences exerted by all parties in interest, Congress intended to prohibit dealings between a plan and any union whose members are among the beneficiaries of the plan. McDougall v. Donovan 552 F.Supp. 1206, 3 EBC 2385 (N.D.Ill. 1982).

Except as provided in Section 408 [which contains the exemptions from the prohibited transaction restrictions]:
No fiduciary who has authority or discretion to control or manage the assets of a plan shall permit the plan to hold any employer security or real property if he knows or should know that holding such security or real property violates section 407(a) which contains the 10% limitation on the acquisition and holding of qualifying employer securities and real property.

A. Conference Report

The prohibited transaction provisions are discussed on pages 306-309 and 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report.

Section 406(b)(1)
A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not -
(1) Deal with the assets of the plan in his own interest or for his own account,

A. Conference Report

This prohibition is covered on page 309 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

No regulations have been issued yet. However, the regulations under Section 408\(b\)\(2\) amplify this prohibition.

- 1. This prohibition is imposed to deter fiduciaries from exercising the authority, control or responsibility that makes such persons fiduciaries when they have interests that may conflict with the interests of the plans for which they act. ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(e\)\(1\).
- 2. A fiduciary does not engage in an act described in Section 406\(b\)\(1\) if the fiduciary does not use any of the authority, control or responsibility that makes such person a fiduciary to cause the plan to pay additional fees for a service furnished by such fiduciary or by a person in which such fiduciary has an interest that may affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(e\)\(2\).
- 3. The regulation cited above contains several important examples. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(f\). Some of the examples, however, only deal with Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and not with Sections 406\(b\)\(2\) and 406\(b\)\(3\). Therefore, even if an example indicates that there is no Section 406(b)(1) prohibition, there may be a Section 406(b)(2) or (3) prohibition.
- 4. For a definition of plan assets, see DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-101.

C. Advisory Opinions

- 1. [General] A fiduciary does not engage in a violation of Section 406\(b\)\(1\) unless he uses his fiduciary authority to benefit himself or a related party. WSB 79-20; PLR 7826047; PLR 7826048; PLR 7826049; Proposed PTE I 492; Proposed Extension of Paragraph 1(a) of PTE C 75-1.
- 2. [General - Discretion Required] A fiduciary to a plan, by reason of rendering investment advice for a fee or other compensation, shall not be deemed to be a fiduciary regarding any plan assets to which such person does not have discretionary authority, discretionary control or discretionary responsibility, does not exercise any authority or control and does not render investment advice for a fee or other compensation. Thus, a sale of assets by the corporate trustee and investment manager, but of assets not under the control of that fiduciary, does not involve a possible prohibited transaction under Section 406\(b\). Also, where a factual analysis confirms that at the time of a transaction, the plan, as seller, and the purchaser had no party-in-interest relationship to one another, the sale cannot constitute a violation of Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\). AO 81-20A.
- 3. [General] If a fiduciary uses the authority, control and responsibility that makes him a fiduciary to cause the plan to enter a transaction involving the provision of services when such fiduciary has an interest in the transaction that may affect the exercise of his best judgment as a fiduciary, a transaction described in Section 406\(b\) would occur. That transaction would be deemed to be a separate transaction from the transaction involving the provision of services and would not be exempted under Section 408\(b\)\(2\). Also, questions of what constitutes a necessary service, a reasonable contract or arrangement, and reasonable compensation are inherently factual in nature and will not be the subject of advisory opinions.

Where a firm is an investment manager to individual employee benefit plans, the initial appointment of that firm as investment manager of a master trust and/or trustees of the master trust by independent plan fiduciaries would not cause the investment manager or trustees to violate Section 406\(b\)\(1\) or \(2\) as long as those persons exercise none of the authority, control or responsibility that makes them fiduciaries to cause the plan to make such appointments.

- [Collective Investment Funds] Also, Section 406\(a\)\(1\) does not apply to any transaction between a plan and a common or collective trust fund maintained by a bank or trust company supervised by a state or a federal agency if (a) the transaction is a sale or purchase of an interest in the fund, (b) the bank or trust company receives no more than reasonable compensation, and (c) the transaction is expressly permitted by the instrument under which the plan is maintained or by a fiduciary who has authority to manage and control the assets of the plan.
  - [Deposits] Section 408\(b\)\(4\) provides that the prohibitions of Section 406 shall not apply to the investment of all or a part of plan assets and deposits that bear a reasonable rate of interest in a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States of America or by a state if such bank or other institution is a fiduciary of the plan and if (a) the plan covers only employees of such bank or other institution or affiliates of such bank or institution or (b) such investment is expressly authorized by a provision of the plan or by a fiduciary who is expressly empowered by the plan to so instruct the trustee regarding such an investment.
  - [Loan to Provide Employment for Union Members] Finally, the Department of Labor, on its own, notes that one of the collective funds that was the subject of the request for opinion is designated as the union construction fund. The Department indicates that a decision to make an investment may not be influenced, for example, by a desire to stimulate the construction industry and generate employment unless the investment, when judged solely on the basis of the economic value to the plan, would be equal to or superior to alternate investments available to the fund. AO 82-51A.
4. [General] The inquiry concerning whether a fiduciary has violated ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\) is not limited to the initial decision by the plan regarding retention of the fiduciary to provide additional services. At all times, such fiduciary may make no decision on behalf of the plan (or in any way use his authority or control) to cause the plan to make a decision which would have the effect of personally benefiting himself or any other person in which such fiduciary has an interest.
- However, the potential for a prohibited act of self-dealing in violation of ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\) may be prospectively avoided through the careful application, in effect as well as in form, of Example (7) of ERISA Regulations Section 2550.408\(b\)-2\(f\) (for example, the trustee must physically absent himself from all consideration of the matter and cannot any of his authority or control to influence the plan's decision.) WSB 79-20.
5. [Bank Board Membership] Where an individual is a fiduciary to a plan and where the individual serves as a member of the board of directors of a bank that also serves as a fiduciary to the plan, decisions made by the bank's board of directors regarding plan investments do not necessarily constitute Section 406\(b\) violations by the individual/director if he absents himself from any arrangements, agreements or understanding; removes himself from all board consideration of these decisions; and does not otherwise exercise any authority, control or responsibility with regard thereto. Provided, however, that if the board itself has an interest in the transaction that could alter or affect its judgment, this would constitute a per se violation under Section 406\(b\). AO 86-11A.
6. [Bank Custodian - Board Membership] The investment of plan assets in securities of the bank that is custodian, at the direction of a trustee who is also a director of the bank, may be a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(b\)\(1\). AO 76-76.
7. [Bank Holding Company Affiliate Use] The appointment of a second tier subsidiary and/or a division of a corporation to perform a fiduciary or nonfiduciary service for a plan, for which the second tier subsidiary or division acts as a fiduciary, would not constitute an act of self-dealing by the fiduciary provided that the appointment is made by a fiduciary who is independent of and unrelated to the parent-subsidary group. PLR 7826047.
8. [Bank Holding Company Affiliate Use] A second tier subsidiary, acting in its capacity as plan trustee, retained a division of the parent of the first tier subsidiary to provide it with investment advice and related advisory services to the trust for which it was acting as trustee. The services performed by the division were clearly within the existing responsibilities of the second tier subsidiary. The second tier subsidiary did not delegate any of its responsibilities as trustee because it remained fully responsible for managing the plan's investments. The fees charged by the second tier subsidiary included payment for investment advice as well as for custodial services. The second tier subsidiary's fee was not affected by reason of its retaining the division. Rather, at its own expense, the second tier subsidiary compensated the division for the services rendered to it. The second tier subsidiary did not engage in an act of self-dealing under Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\) when it appointed the division to provide investment advice. PLR 7826048.
9. [Brokerage Services] If a plan fiduciary effects securities transactions on behalf of the plan and performs functions incidental to the effecting of such transactions, such transactions would be prohibited by ERISA and the Code unless, under the particular facts and circumstances surrounding the transactions, they do not constitute acts of self-dealing under ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\). Proposed Extension of Paragraph 1(a) of PTE C 75-1.
10. [Collective Investment Funds] Also refer to General Advisory Opinions above for AO 82-51A.
11. [Collective Investment Funds] It is a violation of Section 406\(b\) when a company maintaining a pension advisory and consulting service, dealing in establishing investment objectives, evaluation, recommending managers, and monitoring performance, makes recommendations with regard to investments in collective trust funds to which said party has a fiduciary role, if the recommendations are a primary basis for plan investments. AO 84-04A.
12. [Commissions] This advisory opinion involved transactions by a licensed stock brokerage firm, which was the plan sponsor and involved mutual fund investments made by the plan. The documentation between the plan sponsor and the plan provided that the sponsor would agree to receive and hold all commissions as agent for the trustee on behalf of the plan and to pay the commissions to the plan within 30 days after receipt thereof.
- The Department of Labor ruled that the receipt of brokerage commissions by a plan fiduciary from a transaction involving assets held by the fiduciary as agent for the plan would not constitute a violation of ERISA if the fiduciary had no right, title or interest in the proceeds passed to the fiduciary, the commissions were returned to the plan in the ordinary course of business, and the fiduciary does not benefit in any manner from the holding of the money. AO 81-90A.
13. [Compensation] The receipt of compensation by a fiduciary from a plan is a prohibited transaction if the fiduciary is already receiving full-time compensation from the employer maintaining the plan. AO 78-08.
14. [Compensation] The appointment by a plan trustee of his secretary as plan administrator may violate Section 406\(b\)\(1\). Plan fiduciaries are prohibited from dealing with plan assets in their own interest or for their own account. If the compensation paid by the plan for administrative services, in fact, serves to compensate the trustee's secretary for the time spent in the performance of her secretarial duties, a violation of Section 406\(b\)\(1\) might occur. AO 77-84.

- 15. [Deposits] Also refer to General Advisory Opinions above for AO 82-51A.
- 16. [Deposits] The investment of the assets of a plan covering employees of banks, in savings accounts and certificates of deposit of banks that are contributing employers, constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\) and may also be prohibited under Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) because members of the administrative board of the plan, which directs plan investments, are officers and employees of contributing employer/banks.
However, Section 408\(b\)\(4\) provides an exemption from Sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\) and 406\(b\)\(2\) for the investment of plan assets in the deposits or certificates of deposit of a bank that is a plan fiduciary or party in interest, if the requirements of ERISA Regulations Section 2550.408b-4 are met. One requirement of the regulation is that, for investments made after November 1, 1977, the plan specify the name(s) of the banks in which deposits may be made. The specifications may be made to the plan by amendment retroactive to November 1, 1977. AO 79-25.
- 17. [Fees, Incentive] Payment of an incentive fee pursuant to appropriate contractual relationship between an investment manager (fiduciary) and the plan would not, in and of itself, violate Section 406\(b\)\(1\). The amount of compensation that the manager earns depends solely on the changes in value of the securities in the individual accounts and, therefore, the manager would not be exercising any of its fiduciary authority or control to cause the plan to pay an additional fee.
Moreover, it does not appear that the manager would be acting on behalf of or representing a person whose interests are adverse to the plan merely because it enters into an incentive fee arrangement. However, the Department notes that incentive fee arrangements could, under certain facts and circumstances, violate both Sections 406\(a\) and 406\(b\), as well as Section 404\(a\). Thus, the plan fiduciary must act prudently in deciding to enter into an incentive compensation arrangement with an investment manager, as well as the negotiation of the specific formula under which the compensation will be paid. The Department's position is that the fiduciary, prior to a decision to enter into an incentive compensation arrangement, must fully understand the compensation formula and the risks associated with this manner of compensation and have all relevant information pertaining thereto available to it. Further, the plan fiduciary must be capable of periodically monitoring the actions taken by the manager in the performance of its investment duties. AO 86-20A; accord AO 86-21A.
- 18. [Float] The ancillary services exemptions (§ 408\(b\)\(2\) and 408\(b\)\(6\)) do not include the float earned by the fiduciary bank from a demand deposit account to the extent that it is reasonably possible to earn a return on such funds. Retention of float would be permissible if it was a part of the bank's overall compensation from the plan and if the bank had made appropriate disclosures regarding the use of float. Failure to comply would result in a violation of ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\). AO 93-24A.
- 19. [Leases to Sponsor] The leasing by a plan of improved real property to the employer maintaining the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\), \(C\), \(D\) and \(E\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(C\) and \(D\). In addition, since any property leased to an employer is employer real property as defined in ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(2\), if such property is not qualifying employer real property within the meaning of ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(4\), the holding of such property by the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Sections 406\(a\)\(2\) and 407\(a\)\(1\). Also, to the extent that the employer may be a fiduciary to the plan as defined in ERISA Section 3\(21\)\(A\) and Code Section 4975\(e\)\(3\), the lease arrangement may be a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\). Proposed PTE I 192.
- 20. [Loan by Construction Union Plan to Provide Employment for Union Members] Also refer to General Advisory Opinions above for AO 82-51A.
- 21. [Loans] If a loan is made by a plan to a person in order to encourage that person to do business with the employer, the transaction would be prohibited under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) and 406\(b\). WSB 79-63.
- 22. [Sale to Insider] The sale of certain parcels of real property by a profit-sharing plan to the majority shareholder of the employer maintaining the plan and to a corporation 50% or more of which is owned by such majority shareholder would constitute prohibited transactions pursuant to Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\) of the Code. In addition, if the majority shareholder has the power to appoint and remove the plan trustee, such sales may be prohibited transactions under Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of ERISA and Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\) of the Code. Proposed PTE I 492.
- 23. [Stock - Exchanges] An exchange of securities held by a stock bonus plan in connection with a reorganization is not a prohibited transaction. WSB 78-29.

D. Court Decisions

- 1. [General] ERISA Section 406\(b\) codifies the principle that ERISA fiduciaries owe the plan, its participants and its beneficiaries a duty of loyalty and cautions fiduciaries that they must either avoid certain types of transactions or not serve as fiduciaries. Section 406 is violated if fiduciaries invest plan assets in companies in which any fiduciary owns an equity interest or from which any fiduciary receives compensation for the investment. Lowen v. Tower Asset Management, Inc., 829 F.2d 1209, 8 EBC 2457 (2d Cir. 1987).
- 2. [General] Based on Congressional concern about protection of plan beneficiaries, ERISA Sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(D\) and \(b\)\(1\) should be read broadly as a gloss on the duty of loyalty required by Section 404 and should be read to cover action of trustee who buys shares in target corporation in order to assist either target's management or raider in its quest for corporate control or a control premium. Leigh v. Engle, 727 F.2d 113, 4 EBC 2702 (7th Cir. 1984).
- 3. [Compensation] The prohibition against fiduciaries acting in conflict of interest situations is violated where trustees authorize, for each other, monthly payment from plan's assets as compensation for their services as trustees while they are receiving full-time pay from participating employers or union and further authorize plans to make contributions on their behalf so as to make each other eligible for receipts of benefits from the plans. Donovan v. Daugherty, 550 F.Supp. 390, 3 EBC 2079 (S. D. Ala. 1982).
- 4. [Loans] Two trustees of a multiemployer plan who owned a large interest in a corporation and who caused the plan to make a loan commitment to the corporation so that the corporation could remove liens on an aircraft the corporation wished to acquire free of encumbrances allegedly violated Section 406\(b\)\(1\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order). See also Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F.Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).

A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not -
(2)	In his individual or in any other capacity act in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or represent a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries, . . .

B. Regulations

No regulations have been issued yet. However, the regulations under Section 408\(b\)\(2\) and two prohibited transaction class exemptions amplify this prohibition.

1. This prohibition is imposed to deter fiduciaries from exercising the authority, control or responsibility that makes such persons fiduciaries when they have interests that may conflict with the interests of the plans for which they act. ERISA Regulation § 2550.408b-2\(e\)\(1\).
2. A fiduciary may not use the authority, control or responsibility that makes such a person a fiduciary to cause the plan to pay an additional fee to such fiduciary (or to a person in which such person has an interest that may affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary). DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(e\)\(1\).
3. The regulation cited above contains several important examples. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(f\); however, not all of the examples deal with Section 406\(b\)\(2\).
4. The preambles to PTE C 76-1 and PTE 77-10 amplify the interrelationships between this prohibition and the other prohibitions.

C. Interpretive Bulletins

1. If a fiduciary, in addition to his duties for the plan, serves in a decision making capacity with another party, the mere fact that such fiduciary effects payments to such party of money to which a participant is entitled at the direction of the participant and in accordance with specific plan provisions does not contravene Section 406\(b\)\(2\). IB 78-1.

D. Advisory Opinions

1. [Bank Stock] The investment of plan assets in a bank of which a fiduciary is a director may be a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(b\)\(2\). AO 76-62.
2. [Bank Stock - Purchase/Retention/Sale of Fiduciary Bank/BHC Stock]

General Discretionary Rule - An ERISA plan may not invest in the stock of a fiduciary bank if the bank has discretion over the transaction. The discretionary retention of such stock would also be prohibited. Non-discretionary purchases, sales, and retentions are permitted.

DOL notes the duty of undivided loyalty owed under § 406\(b\), but the conflict of interest which may occur if a sale of bank stock would be in the best interests of a plan, but such a sale (or the news of such a sale) might lower the price of the bank's stock.

See 1980 letter from DOL to OCC.

3. [Custodians] The interests of the bank that performs the services of custodial agent for the plan and is a plan fiduciary are or could be deemed to be adverse to the interests of the plan. AO 76-76.
4. [Deposits] Investment of the assets of a noncollectively bargained multiple employer plan covering employees of banks, in savings accounts and certificates of deposit of banks that are contributing employers, constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\) and may also be prohibited under Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) because members of the administrative board of the plan, which directs plan investments, are officers and employees of contributing employer banks.

However, Section 408\(b\)\(4\) provides an exemption from Sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\) and 406\(b\)\(2\) for the investment of plan assets in the deposits or certificates of deposit of a bank that is a plan fiduciary or party in interest if the requirements of ERISA Regulations Section 2550.408b-4 are met. One requirement of the regulation is that, for investments made after November 1, 1977, the plan specify the name(s) of the banks in which deposits may be made. The specifications may be made to the plan by amendment retroactive to November 1, 1977. AO 79-25.

5. [Investment Manager Appointment] The involvement of a plan fiduciary in the appointment of a corporation of which such fiduciary is a director as an investment manager of the plan's assets may be a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(b\)\(2\). AO 76-15.
6. [Investment Management] The provision of investment management services by the plan manager to a fund would be exempt from Section 406\(a\) if the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(2\) are met. The question of what constitutes a necessary service, a reasonable contract or arrangement, or reasonable compensation is factual in nature and not subject to advisory opinions.

Further, the mere selection of the manager to provide investment management services to a plan where the payment of compensation for such services is to be made by the plan sponsor receiving such services would not constitute a per se violation of Section 406\(b\)\(1\), but such violation could occur in the course of the committee's deliberations to invest in the fund and the concomitant retention of the plan manager. Accordingly, a ruling that the arrangement is exempt from Section 406\(b\)\(1\) cannot be made.

Generally, a fiduciary's decision to retain an affiliate service provider whose fees will be paid by the plan sponsor will not involve an adversity of interest as contemplated by Section 406\(b\)\(2\) of the act. If, for example, a fiduciary of the plan, in negotiating a service contract on behalf of the plan, also acts on behalf of a person and causes that person to benefit from such a decision at the expense of any kind to the plan, the decision to retain the service provider would result in a violation of Section 406\(b\)\(2\). Accordingly, the decision to retain the manager to service the plan investments in the fund would not, in itself, constitute a violation of Section 406\(b\)\(2\); but because it is inherently factual in nature, no opinions can be rendered thereon. AO 83-44A.

7. [Leases to Sponsor] The leasing by a plan of improved real estate to the employer maintaining the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\), \(C\), \(D\) and \(E\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(C\) and \(D\). In addition, since any property leased to an employer is employer real property as defined in ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(2\), if such property is not qualifying employer real property within the meaning of ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(4\), the holding of such property by the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Sections 406\(a\)\(2\) and 407\(a\)\(1\). Also, to the extent that the employer may be a fiduciary to the plan as defined in ERISA Section 3\(21\)\(A\) and Code Section 4975\(e\)\(3\), the lease arrangement may be a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\). Proposed PTE I 192.
8. [Sale to Insider of Sponsor] The sale of certain parcels of real property by a profit-sharing plan to the majority shareholder of the employer maintaining the plan and to a corporation 50% or more of which is owned by such majority shareholder would constitute prohibited transactions pursuant to ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) and \(D\). In addition, if the majority shareholder has the power to appoint and remove the plan trustee, such sales may be prohibited transactions under ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\). Proposed PTE I 492.

E. Court Decisions

1. [General] ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(2\) is to be read as requiring a transaction between the plan and a party having an adverse interest for the prohibition to apply. Donovan v. Bierwirth, 680 F.2d 263, 3 EBC 1417 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1069 (1982).
2. [General] ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(2\) prohibits representation of parties who are adverse in the technical sense. A transaction does not have to exhibit fiduciary misconduct, reflecting harm to the beneficiaries, before ERISA Section 406(b)(2) is violated. When identical trustees of two plans whose participants and beneficiaries are not identical effect a loan between the plans without a statutory or administrative exemption, a per se violation of ERISA exists. ERISA Section 406(b) contains a blanket prohibition of certain transactions, no matter how fair. Cutaiar v. Marshall, 590 F.2d 523 (3d Cir. 1979).

3. [Loans] A party who is a borrower from a plan or who is claiming payment from a plan will, by definition, have interests adverse to the interests of the plan. Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978); Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F.Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).
4. [Loans] An employer trustee of a Taft-Hartley plan, who was also the director of the employer association, did not violate Section 406\(b\)\(2\) by either:
  - a. advising employers not to make contributions to the plan and to resist audits by the plan, or
  - b. bringing suit to block the plan's collection procedures that the trustee believed to be unauthorized.

The court noted that under Section 408\(c\)\(3\), a plan trustee can also serve as the director of an employer association and perform all of the duties required of a person holding each of these positions. The court also indicated that, where a trustee acts pursuant to Section 405(a)(3) to remedy a breach of fiduciary duty that such trustee believes to have been committed by another plan fiduciary, the trustee is not acting in violation of Section 406\(b\)\(2\) regardless of the trustee's motivation. Curren v. Freitag, 432 F.Supp. 668 (S.D.Ill. 1977). See also N.L.R.B. v. Construction and General Laborers Union Local 110, 577 F.2d 16 (8th Cir. 1978), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 1070 (1979) (union trustee and secretary-treasurer of union).

5. [Loans] The trustees of a multiemployer plan who agreed to cause the plan to: (a) pay rent to a corporation for the joint lease of an airplane (with a union) at a time when the plan held two notes from such corporation that were in default, or (b) make a loan commitment to the corporation so that the corporation could remove liens on an airplane it wished to acquire free of encumbrances, allegedly violated Section 406\(b\)\(2\). Usery v. Wilson, et al., No. 3-76-373 (E.D.Tenn., June 6, 1977) (consent order).

Section 406(b)(3)
A fiduciary with respect to a plan shall not -
(3)	Receive any consideration for his own personal account from any party dealing with such plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan.

A. Conference Report

The above section is explained on page 309 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

No regulations have been issued yet. However, the regulations under Section 408\(b\)\(2\) amplify this prohibition.

1. This prohibition is imposed to deter fiduciaries from exercising the authority, control or responsibility that makes such persons fiduciaries when they have interests that may conflict with the interests of the plans for which they act. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(e\)\(1\).
2. A fiduciary may not use the authority, control or responsibility that makes such a person a fiduciary to cause the plan to enter into a transaction involving plan assets whereby such fiduciary (or a person in which such fiduciary has an interest that may affect the exercise of such fiduciary best judgment as a fiduciary) will receive consideration from a third party in connection with such transaction. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(f\).
3. The regulation cited above contains several important examples. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(f\); however, not all of the examples deal with Section 406\(b\)\(3\).
4. For a definition of plan assets, see DOL ERISA Regulation 2510.3-101.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. [Compensation] The receipt of compensation by a fiduciary from a plan is a prohibited transaction if the fiduciary is already receiving full-time compensation from the employer maintaining the plan. AO 78-08.
2. [Estate Legacy] A violation of Section 406\(b\)\(3\) would not generally occur from the mere receipt of a distribution from an estate by a plan fiduciary as beneficiary of the estate in a transaction separate and apart from the plan's acquisition of qualifying employer securities from that estate. Under such circumstances, the distribution would not appear to be in connection with the transaction involving plan assets. AO 87-04A.
3. [Mutual Funds] No Section 406\(b\)\(2\) or (3) violations arise, per se, because fiduciaries to certain employee benefit plans are also sponsors of and advisers to certain mutual funds and the employee benefit plans purchase shares therein so long as these fiduciaries exercise none of the authority, control, or responsibility of the plans with regard to causing the plans to purchase units in the mutual funds. AO 82-31A.

D. Court Decisions

1. Fiduciary charged with violation of Section 406\(b\)\(3\) prohibiting receipt of consideration for fiduciary's own personal account from any party dealing with plan either must prove by a preponderance of evidence that the transaction in question fell within an exception, or must prove by clear and convincing evidence that compensation received was for services other than transactions involving plan assets. Lowen v. Tower Asset Management, Inc., 829 F.2d 1209, 8 EBC 2457 (2d Cir. 1987).
2. If charged with a violation of Section 406\(b\)\(3\) the fiduciary bears the burden of proving that the questionable transaction fell within a Section 408 or regulatory exemption to Section 406(b)(3) or that compensation was for services other than the questionable transaction. For purposes of deciding a motion for summary judgment, if the transaction at issue is not exempted from the prohibitions of Section 406, the evidence before the court must be sufficient to permit a jury to conclude, by clear and convincing evidence, that the compensation received by a fiduciary was not "in connection with" the questionable investment of plan assets. Lowen v. Tower Asset Management, Inc., 829 F.2d 1209, 8 EBC 2457 (2d Cir. 1987).

Section 406(c)

A transfer of real or personal property by a party in interest to a plan shall be treated as a sale or exchange if the property is subject to a mortgage or similar lien which the plan assumes or if it is subject to a mortgage or similar lien which a party-in-interest placed on the property within the 10-year ending on the date of the transfer.

10 Percent Limitation on employer securities and employer real property
ERISA Section 407
Section 407(a)(1)
Except as otherwise provided in this section and section 414, a plan may not acquire, or hold:
(A)	Any employer security which is not a qualifying employer security, or
(B)	Any employer real property which is not qualifying employer real property.

A. Conference Report

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explains the employer security and real property provisions.

B. Regulations

1. Refer to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.407a-1. A plan may hold or acquire only employer securities that are qualifying employer securities and employer real property that is qualifying employer real property. A plan may not hold employer securities and employer real property that are not qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property except in certain circumstances.
2. See DOL ERISA Regulation 404c-1, covering participant-directed plans (such as 401(k) and 403(b)), which contains authorization for investments in employer securities (404c-1\(b\)\(2\)\(B\)\(1\)\(vii\)), and special conditions when offering them as an "investment alternative" (see 404c-1\(d\)\(2\)\(ii\)\(E\)\(4\)\(vii\), \(viii\) and \(ix\)), as well as general 404c-1 requirements). In general, fiduciaries are exempted from certain ERISA fiduciary responsibility liability if plans meet certain conditions and participants direct their own investments.
3. Also refer to IRS Regulation 54.4975-12, which defines the term "Qualifying Employer Security".

C. Advisory Opinions

1. [Concentrations] The only language of ERISA that specifically limits the percentage amount of a particular asset that a plan may hold is found in Section 407, and this limitation refers to the holding or acquisition of qualifying employer securities or real property. Other than Section 407, the amount or percentage of plan assets that may be placed in a particular investment vehicle is governed by the general standards of fiduciary responsibility. AO 76-74.
2. [Limited Partnerships] Units in a limited partnership are not qualifying employer securities within the definition of ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(5\). The continued holding of such units may be a prohibited transaction under ERISA Sections 406\(a\)\(2\) and 407\(a\)\(1\). Proposed PTE I 038.
3. [Property - Leased] The leasing by a plan of improved real property to the employer maintaining the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\), \(C\), \(D\) and \(E\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(C\) and \(D\). In addition, since any property leased to an employer is "employer real property" as defined in ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(2\), if such property is not "qualifying employer real property" within the meaning of ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(4\), the holding of such property by the plan is a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Sections 406\(a\)\(2\) and 407\(a\)\(1\). Also, to the extent that the employer may be a fiduciary to the plan as defined in ERISA Section 3\(21\)\(A\) and Code Section 4975\(e\)\(3\), the lease arrangement may be a prohibited transaction pursuant to ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) and Code Section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\). Proposed PTE I 192.
4. [Stock] Stock of the parent in a controlled group corporation held by an employee benefit plan sponsored and maintained by a wholly owned subsidiary constitutes employer qualified securities under Section 407. AO 84-36A.

Section 407(a)(2)
Except as otherwise provided in this section and section 414, a plan may not acquire any qualifying employer security or qualifying employer real property, if immediately after such acquisition the aggregate fair market value of employer securities and employer real property held by the plan exceeds 10% of the fair market value of the assets of the plan.

A. Conference Report

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explains this employer security and real property provision.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. [Stock Exchanges] The exchange of stock between the employer maintaining the plan and the plan pursuant to a re-incorporation of the employer in another state is not an acquisition of employer stock by the plan. AO 75-100.
2. [Warrants] The acquisition of an employer's common stock by a plan through the exercise of warrants constitutes an acquisition by a plan of qualifying employer securities within the meaning of ERISA Section 407\(a\)\(2\). PLR 791005.

Section 407(a)(3)
Except as otherwise provided in this section and section 414:
(A)	After December 31, 1984, a plan may not hold any qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property (or both) to the extent that the aggregate fair market value of such securities and property determined on December 31, 1984 exceeds 10% or the greater of:
	(i) The fair market value of the assets of the plan, determined on December 31, 1984, or

	(ii)	The fair market value of the assets of the plan determined on January 1, 1975.
(B)	Subparagraph (A) of this paragraph shall not apply to any plan that on any date after December 31, 1974, and before January 1, 1985, did not hold employer securities or employer real property (or both) the aggregate fair market value of which determined on such date exceeded 10% of the greater of -

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explains the employer security and real property provisions.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. A plan will meet the requirements of Section 407\(a\)\(3\)\(B\) if it falls below the 10% limitation on any day prior to December 31, 1984. AO 79-27.

C. Court Decisions

1. Where a trustee invests less than 10% of a pension plan's assets complying with ERISA Section 407\(a\)\(3\), a trustee is not relieved of other fiduciary duties contained in ERISA. Donovan v. Bierwirth, 680 F.2d 263, 3 EBC 1417 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 459 U.S. 1069 (1982).

Section 407(a)(4)

Except as otherwise provided in this section and section 414:

(A)	After December 31, 1979, a plan may not hold any employer securities or employer real property in excess of the amount specified in regulations under subparagraph (B). This subparagraph shall not apply to a plan after the earliest date after December 31, 1974, on which it complies with such regulations.
(B)	Not later than December 31, 1976, the Secretary shall prescribe regulations which shall have the effect of requiring that a plan divest itself of 50% of the holdings of employer securities and employer real property which the plan would be required to divest before January 1, 1985, under paragraph (2) or subsection (c) (whichever is applicable).

A. Conference Report

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explain the employer security and real property provisions.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. [Bonds] A plan's holding of debentures issued by an employer may constitute a loan or extension of credit to the employer, which, if the conditions of Section 414(c)(1) are met, would be exempt until June 30, 1984 from the restrictions of Section 407(a). WSB 79-69.

Section 407(b)

(1)	Subsection (a) of this section shall not apply to any acquisition or holding of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property by an eligible individual account.

Section 407(c)

(1)	A plan which makes the election under paragraph (3) shall be treated as satisfying the requirements of section 407(a)(3) if -- and only if -- employer securities held on any date after December 31, 1974 and before January 1, 1985 have a fair market value, determined as of December 31, 1974, not in excess of 10% of the lesser of
(A)	The fair market value of the assets of the plan determined on such date (disregarding any portion of the fair market value of employer securities which is attributable to appreciation of such securities after December 31, 1974 but not less than the fair market value of plan assets on January 1, 1975), or
(B)	An amount equal to the sum of (i) the total amount of the contributions to the plan received after December 31, 1974, and prior to such date, plus (ii) the fair market value of the assets of the plan, determined on January 1, 1975.
(2)	For purposes of this subsection, in the case of an employer security held by a plan after January 1, 1975, the ownership of which is derived from ownership of employer securities held by the plan on January 1, 1975, or from the exercise of rights derived from such ownership, the value of such security held after January 1, 1975, shall be based on the value as of January 1, 1975, of the security from which ownership was derived. The Secretary shall prescribe regulations to carry out this paragraph.
(3)	An election under this paragraph may not be made after December 31, 1975. Such an election shall be made in accordance with regulations prescribed by the Secretary, and shall be irrevocable. A plan may make an election under this paragraph only if on January 1, 1975, the plan holds no employer real property.

After such election and before January 1, 1985, the plan may not acquire any employer real property.

A. Conference Report

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explain the employer security and real property provisions.

Section 407(d)(1)

For purposes of this section -

The term "employer security" means a security issued by an employer of employees covered by the plan, or by an affiliate of such employer. A contract to which section 408\(b\)\(5\) applies shall not be treated as a security for purposes of this section.

A. Conference Report

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explain the definition of the term employer security.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. [Bonds] Rights to certain debentures may be employer securities. AO 76-72.
2. [Loan Guarantees] The guarantee by an employer of loans made by the plan to a third party constitutes an employer, under Section 407\(d\)\(1\) but not a qualifying employer security under Sections 407\(d\)\(5\) and 407\(e\). WSB 79-51.

Section 407(d)(2)

For purposes of this section -

The term "employer real property" means real property (and related personal property) which is leased to an employer of employees covered by the plan, or to an affiliate of such employer. For purposes of determining the time at which a plan acquires employer real property, for purposes of this section, such property shall be deemed to be acquired by the plan on the date on which the plan acquires the property or the date on which the lease to the employer (or affiliate) is entered into, whichever is later.

A. Conference Report

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explain the definition of the term employer real property.

Section 407(d)(3)

(A)	The term "eligible individual account plan" means an individual account plan which is (i) a profit-sharing, stock bonus, thrift or savings plan; (ii) an employee stock ownership plan; or (iii) a money purchase plan which was in existence on the date of enactment of this Act and which on such date invested primarily in qualifying employer securities. Such term excludes an individual retirement account or annuity described in section 408 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954.
(B)	Notwithstanding subparagraph (A) a plan shall be treated as an eligible individual account plan with respect to the acquisition or holding of qualifying employer real property or qualifying employer securities only if such plan explicitly provides for acquisition and holding of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property (as the case may be). In the case of a plan in existence on the date of enactment of this Act, this subparagraph shall not take effect until January 1, 1976.

A. Conference Report

The term eligible individual account plan is covered at pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. [ESOPs] Section 407\(b\)\(1\) provides that the limitations on the acquisition and retention of qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property as contained in Section 407(a) do not apply to eligible individual account plans. Section 407\(d\)\(3\) defines the term eligible individual account plan to include an individual account plan that is an ESOP and that expressly provides for the acquisition and holding of employer securities. AO 81-67A.
2. An individual account plan is not an eligible individual account plan unless it explicitly provides for the acquisition and holding of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property. AO 78-25; WSB 79-86.
3. [Profit Sharing Plans] Where a plan is a profit-sharing plan and, therefore, meets the requirements of Section 407\(d\)\(3\)\(A\), it would constitute an eligible individual account plan for purposes of Section 407(d)(3) in connection with the sale of employer stock held by the plan, even though the plan does not expressly provide for the acquisition and holding of employer securities as required by Section 407\(d\)\(3\)\(B\). WSB 79-88.

C. Court Decisions

1. [Governing Documents] For purposes of determining whether a plan provides for the purchase of employer securities, both the plan and the trust agreement can be looked to as plan documents. Leonard v. Drug Fair, Inc., Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) 997,144 (D.D.C. 1979).
2. [Defined Contribution Plan] Where the board of directors amended a pension plan to allow up to 50% of the plan's assets to be used to purchase the employer's securities, the plan will not violate ERISA Section 407 if the plan is within the definition of an eligible individual account plan. District 65, U.A. W. v. Harper & Row Publishers, Inc., 576 F.Supp. 1468, 4 EBC 2586, F&L S&L L. Rep. (CCH) 999,608 (S.D.N.Y. 1983).
3. [ESOPs] If a pension plan that allows up to 50% of the plan's assets to be used to purchase the employer's securities is an ESOP, the plan must conform to Code Section 401 in order to be an eligible individual account plan under ERISA Section 407\(a\). District 65, U.A. W. v. Harper & Row Publishers, Inc., 576

F.Supp. 1468, 4 EBC 2586, F&L S&L L. Rep. (CCH) 999,608 (S.D.N.Y. 1983).

- [Bonds] In order for the purchase of debt securities by an eligible individual account plan to be exempt from the Section 407 limitations, the plan must specifically provide for the holding of marketable obligations of the type involved. Marshall v. Dekeyser, 485 F.Supp. 629, 1 EBC 1898 (W.D.Wis. 1979).

Section 407(d)(3)(C)

The term "eligible individual account plan" does not include any individual account plan the benefits of which are taken into account in determining the benefits pursuant to a participant under any defined benefit plan.

Section 407(d)(4)

For purposes of this section -

The term "qualifying employer real property" means parcels of employer real property-

- |     |  |
|-----|--|
| (A) | if a substantial number of the parcels are dispersed geographically;   |
| (B) | if each parcel of real property and the improvements thereon are suitable (or adaptable without excessive cost) for more than one use;   |
| (C) | even if all such real property, is leased to one lessee (which may be an employer, or an affiliate of an employer); and  |
| (D) | if the acquisition and retention of such property comply with the provisions of this part (other than section 404(a)(1)(B) to the extent it requires diversification, and sections 404(c)(1)(C) , 406 and 407(a) of this section). |

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explain the definition of the term qualifying employer real property.

B. Advisory Opinions

- To meet the substantial number requirement of Section 407\(d\)\(4\)\(A\), there must be more than one parcel. AO 84-20A.
- A single parcel of real property cannot be qualifying employer real property. Qualifying employer real property means parcels (plural) of employer real property. AO 76-14; AO 76-132; AO 77-16; Proposed PTE I 192, PLR 7847043.
- Whether a substantial number of parcels of employer real property are geographically dispersed so as to provide protection for a plan in the event of adverse economic conditions in any one area, and whether such parcels are suitable or adaptable without excessive cost for more than one use are both questions that are inherently factual in nature and will not be the subject of advisory opinions. AO 84-20A.
- Employer real property, is qualifying employer real property where there are six parcels of real property located in four different states; no two parcels are closer than 80 miles apart; five of the six parcels contain simple one-story structures and the machinery located therein could be removed at minimal costs without affecting the structure; and the sixth parcel contains a building with offices and open space for laboratories and machinery. AO 75-11.
- The definition of the term qualifying employer real property requires a determination regarding whether a particular acquisition or retention of employer real property complies with ERISA Section 404. The Department of Labor will not issue an advisory opinion under Section 407\(d\)\(4\)\(D\), as to whether particular employer real property is qualifying employer real property. The Department will, however, issue advisory opinions regarding the other substantive conditions of Section 407(d)(4). AO 77-01.
- The geographical dispersion requirement is satisfied where three parcels of property contain three restaurants that serve and draw from different fast food markets. AO 77-01.

Section 407(d)(5)

For purposes of this section -

The term "qualifying employer security" means an employer security which is (1) stock; (2) a marketable obligation (as defined in section (e)), or (3) an interest in a publicly traded partnership (as defined in section 7704(b) of the IRC of 1986), but only if such partnership is an existing partnership as defined in section 10211(c)(2) (A) of the Revenue Act of 1987 (Public Law 100-203). After December 17, 1987, in the case of a plan other than an eligible individual account plan, stock shall be considered a qualifying employer security only if such stock satisfies the requirements of subsection (f)(1).

A. Conference Report

Pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report explain the definition of the term qualifying employer security.

B. Regulations

DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.407d-5 merely restates the statutory provisions.

C. Advisory Opinions

- [Affiliate] A plan owns 100% of the stock of a corporation, but employees of that corporation do not participate in the plan. The stock of the corporation is not qualifying employer securities under Section 407\(d\)\(5\), since it has not been issued by an employer or an affiliate of an employer. AO 79-27.
- [Affiliate] In general, where the employees of two or more employers whether or not affiliated within the meaning of [Section 407\(d\)\(7\)] are covered by a single plan, the securities issued by each employer or by an affiliate thereof, as defined in Section 407(d)(7), would ordinarily constitute qualifying employer securities within the meaning of Section 407\(d\)\(5\) if the applicable requirements under that section are satisfied. Accordingly, if the plan is, in fact, a single plan and continues to be maintained as one plan by both employers for their respective employees, the common stocks of each and both employers would constitute qualifying employer securities for purposes of applying the provisions of Sections 404\(a\)\(2\) and 407. AO 81-5A.
- [Affiliate Stock] The common stock of a wholly owned subsidiary would be a qualifying employer security because it is a stock issued by an affiliate of an employer of employees covered by the plan. If the subsidiary has such employees, it would be stock issued by an employer of employees covered by the plan. If the subsidiary has employees covered by the plan, the subsidiary's stock will continue to be a qualifying employer security after the plan owns all of such stock. WSB 78-31. See also AO 77-30; WSB 78-26; WSB 79-86.

- 4. [Convertible Bonds] Debentures issued by an employer that are convertible into stock do not constitute stock for Purposes of Section 407(d)(5). AO 79-45.
- 5. [Loan Guarantees] The guarantee by an employer of loans made by the plan to a third party constitutes an employer security under Section 407\(d\)\(1\) but not a qualifying employer security under Sections 407\(d\)\(5\) and 407\(e\). WSB 79-51.
- 6. [Rights] Rights to certain debentures are not qualifying employer securities because they are neither stock nor marketable obligations. AO 76-72.
- 7. [Stock] Book value shares are qualifying employer securities. AO 77-35.
- 8. [Stock - Preferred] Preferred stock issued by an affiliate of an employer whose employees are covered by a plan is a qualifying employer security. AO 75-89.

Section 407(d)(6)

For purposes of this section -

The term "employee stock ownership plan" means an individual account plan -

(A)	Which is a stock bonus plan which is qualified, or a stock bonus plan and money purchase plan both of which are qualified, under section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, and which is designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities, and
(B)	Which meets such other requirements as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe by regulation.

A. Conference Report

The term ESOP is covered at pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

Refer to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.407d-6. These regulations contain several requirements relating to ESOPs.

An ESOP must also meet such other requirements as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe by regulation under Section 4975\(e\)\(7\) of the Internal Revenue Code.

C. Advisory Opinions

- 1. [ESOPs] Where a plan is organized and established as an employee stock ownership plan for the purpose of investing primarily in qualifying employer securities but where under the circumstances it would not be prudent or otherwise beneficial to plan participants for the ESOP to invest a large percentage of its assets in qualifying employer securities, even though plan documents generally provide for such investments. In that situation the potential liability for breach of fiduciary duty makes a fiduciary's decision to disregard a plan provision difficult. A plan provision that requires a plan to invest more than 50% of its assets in qualifying employer securities would normally be deemed to satisfy the requirement of Section 407\(d\)\(6\) that a plan must satisfy the primary requirement with regard to its primary investment objectives and vehicle. AO 83-6A.

D. Court Decisions

- 1. [ESOPs] Where a pension plan purchased common stock without voting rights, the plan can still qualify as an ESOP under ERISA Section 407\(d\)\(6\), since Code Section 401 does not require stock to have voting rights for tax qualified plans. However, the ESOP must obtain voting power equal to or in excess of the amount of voting power held in said stock by the employer. Schoenholtz v. Doniger 657 F.Supp. 899, 8 EBC 2031 (S.D.N.Y. 1987).

Section 407(d)(7)

For purposes of this section -

A corporation is an affiliate of an employer if it is a member of any controlled group of corporations (as defined in section 1563(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, except that "applicable percentage" shall be substituted for "80%" whenever the latter percentage appears in such section) of which the employer who maintains the plan is a member. For purposes of the preceding sentence, the term "applicable percentage" means 50%, or such lower percentage as the Secretary may prescribe by regulation. A person other than a corporation shall be treated as an affiliate of an employer to the extent provided in regulations of the Secretary. An employer which is a person other than a corporation shall be treated as affiliated with another person to the extent provided by regulations of the Secretary. Regulations under this paragraph shall be prescribed only after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury.

A. Conference Report

"Affiliate" is discussed on pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Advisory Opinions

- 1. A corporation must be an affiliate prior to the sale of its securities for its securities to be either employer securities or qualifying employer securities. AO 77-18.
- 2. [Affiliate] Where an employer owns 62% of the outstanding stock of a corporation, such corporation is an "affiliate" of the employer under Section 407\(d\)\(7\). AO 79-23.
- 3. [Affiliate] A plan owns 100% of the stock of a corporation, but employees of that corporation do not participate in the plan. The stock of the corporation is not qualifying employer securities under Section 407\(d\)\(5\), since it has not been issued by an employer or an affiliate of an employer. AO 79-27.
- 4. For the exemption provided by Section 408\(e\) to apply to any sale, the property being sold must be either qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property at the time such securities or property, are sold by the plan. If a corporation is not a member of a controlled group prior to the consummation of a sale, the corporation's securities will not be securities of an affiliate prior to the sale. AO 77-18.

Section 407(d)(8)

For purposes of this section -

The Secretary may prescribe regulations specifying the extent to which conversions, splits, the exercise of rights, and similar transactions are not treated as acquisitions.

A. Conference Report

The above provision is covered at pages 316-320 of the Congressional Conference Report.

Section 407(d)(9)

For purposes of this section, an arrangement which consists of a defined benefit plan and an individual account plan shall be treated as one plan if the benefits of such individual account plan are taken into account in determining the benefits payable under such defined benefit plan.

Section 407(e)

For purposes of subsection (d)(5), the term "marketable obligation" means a bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness (hereinafter in this subsection referred to as "obligation") if -

(1)	Such obligation is acquired -
	(A)	On the market, either
	(i)	At the price of the obligation prevailing on a national securities exchange which is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, or
	(ii)	If the obligation is not traded on such a national securities exchange, at a price not less favorable to the plan than the offering price for the obligation as established by current bid and asked prices quoted by persons independent of the issuer;
	(B)	From an underwriter, at a price
	(i)	Not in excess of the public offering price for the obligation as set forth in a prospectus or offering circular filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and
	(ii)	At which a substantial portion of the same issue is acquired by persons independent of the issuer; or
	(C)	Directly from the issuer, at a price not less favorable to the plan than the price paid currently for a substantial portion of the same issue by persons independent of the issuer;
(2)	Immediately following acquisition of such obligation -
	(A)	Not more than 25% of the aggregate amount of obligations issued in such issue and outstanding at the time of acquisition is held by the plan, and
	(B)	At least 50% of the aggregate amount referred to in subparagraph (A) is held by persons independent of the issuer; and
(3)	Immediately following acquisition of the obligation, not more than 25% of the assets of the plan is invested in obligations of the employer or an affiliate of the employer.

A. Conference Report

These employer security provisions are discussed at pages 316-320 the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

No regulations have been issued under Section 407\(e\), but regulations have been issued under Section 407\(d\)\(5\). ERISA Regulation 2550.407d-5.

C. Advisory Opinions

1. ["Independence"] A relative of an officer of the issuer is not "independent of the issuer." WSB 77-13; AO 78-25.
2. ["Independence"] A private foundation that was created by and may receive contributions from the issuer is not "independent of the issuer." AO 78-25.
3. [Loan Guarantees] The guarantee by an employer of loans made by the plan to a third party constitutes an employer security under Section 407(d)(1), but not a qualifying employer security under Sections 407\(d\)\(5\) and 407\(e\). WSB 79-51.
4. ["Marketable"] Debentures issued by a subsidiary of an employer constitute marketable obligations where they are purchased at the closing price on the New York Stock Exchange on the date of purchase, where they represent only 1.14% of the aggregate amount of debentures outstanding, where 50% of such aggregate amount is held by persons independent of the employer, and where the value of the debentures represents 22% of plan assets. AO 79-39.
5. [Mergers & Acquisitions] A trust will not be considered to have acquired certain debentures if, prior to the corporate merger pursuant to which the trust would have received the debentures, the trust sells or irrevocably assigns the rights to the debentures that it would have received in the merger. AO 76-72.
6. [Notes] A promissory note issued by an employer to a plan in lieu of a cash contribution to the plan will not constitute a marketable obligation if a substantial portion of the same issue of rates is not acquired by persons independent of the issuer for purposes of Section 407\(e\)\(1\) contemporaneously with the acquisition by the plan. PLR 7939009.

Section 407(f)

Stock satisfies the requirements of this subsection if immediately following the acquisition of such stock -

(1)	(A)	No more than 25% of the aggregate amount of stock of the same class issued and outstanding at the time of acquisition is held by the plan, and
	(B)	At least 50% of the aggregate amount referred to in subparagraph (A) is held by persons independent of the issuer.

(2)	Until January 1, 1993, a plan shall not be treated as violating subsection (A) solely by holding stock which fails to satisfy the requirements of paragraph (1) if such stock -
(A)	Has been held since December 17, 1987, or
(B)	Was acquired after December 17, 1987 pursuant to a legally binding contract in effect on December 17, 1987, and has been so held at all times after the acquisition.
(3)	After December 17, 1987, no plan may acquire stock which does not satisfy the requirements of paragraph (1) unless the acquisition is made pursuant to a legally binding contract in effect on such date.

Exemptions from prohibited transactions

ERISA Section 408

Section 408(a)

Exemption Procedures

The Secretary shall establish an exemption procedure for purposes of this subsection. Pursuant to such procedure, he may grant a conditional or unconditional exemption of any fiduciary or transaction, or class of fiduciaries or transactions, from all or part of the restrictions imposed by Sections 406 and 407(a). Action under this subsection shall be taken only after consultation and coordination with the Secretary of the Treasury. An exemption granted under this section shall not relieve a fiduciary from any other applicable provision of this Act. The Secretary may not grant an exemption under this subsection unless he finds that such exemption is -

(1)	Administratively feasible,
(2)	In the interests of the plan and of its participants and beneficiaries, and
(3)	Protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of such plan. Before granting an exemption under this subsection from section 406(a) or section 407(a), the Secretary shall publish notice in the Federal Register of the pendency of the exemption, shall require that adequate notice be given to interested persons, and shall afford interested persons an opportunity to present views. The Secretary may not grant an exemption under this subsection from section 406(b) unless he affords an opportunity for a hearing and makes a determination on the record with respect to the findings required by paragraphs (1), (2) and (3) of this subsection.

A. Conference Report.

The above exemption procedure is discussed on pages 309-311 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations.

See DOL ERISA Regulation 2570.30 through .52. The regulation covers who may file for an exemption, where applications must be filed, the information to be included with an application, rights and procedures to a conference, publication and notification of interested persons, and the effect of an exemption. See also Revenue Procedure 75-26.

C. Prohibited Transaction Class Exemptions (PTE)

- [Annuities] PTE C 77-8 covers the transfer of individual life insurance and annuity contracts from plans to a plan participant, the relative of a participant, the participant's employer or another plan. PTE C 77-7 covers transfers of the same assets to plans from plan participants or employers.
- [Brokerage Services] PTE 79-1 granted an exemption for securities transactions for employee benefit plans by broker-dealers who serve as fiduciaries to the plans.
- [Brokerage Services] In PTE 78-10, an exemption was granted for provision of securities by broker-dealers to plans for which they are fiduciaries.
- [Brokerage Services] Exemption is granted for the execution of certain securities transactions in PTE 86-128.
- [Collective Investment Funds] An exemption was granted for transactions between bank collective investment funds and parties in interest. PTE 80-51 (restated to PTE 91-38).
- [Court-Authorized Transactions] PTE C 79-15 covers certain transactions authorized or required by judicial order or judicially approved settlement decree.
- [Court-Directed Transactions] An exemption was granted for transactions authorized or permitted by a court. PTE 79-15.
- [Customer Notes] A class exemption is granted for the purchase of customer notes of a party-in-interest employer by an employee benefit plan in PTE 85-68.
- [Debt Retirement] PTE 80-83 provided an exemption for employee plans' purchase of securities used to retire indebtedness owed to parties in interest.
- [Interest-Free Loans] PTE 80-26 granted an exemption for certain interest free loans, such as overdrafts, between employee benefit plans and parties in interest.
- [Mortgages] An exemption was granted for employee benefit plans to provide mortgage financing to purchasers of certain residential construction in PTE 82-87.
- [Mortgage Pools] PTE 81-7 exempted certain transactions between employee benefit plans and parties in interest involving mortgage pool investment trusts.
- [Mutual Funds] PTE 77-4 covers the purchase and sale by a plan of mutual fund shares when a fiduciary to the plan is also the investment adviser for the mutual fund. Also see 1994 DOL letter to OCC.
- [Mutual Funds - Closed-End] In PTE 79-13, an exemption was granted for acquisitions of shares in closed-end investment companies by employee benefit plans.

15. [Mutual Funds - Own] PTE 77-3 covers the purchase and sale of in-house mutual fund shares by an employee benefit plan covering employees of the mutual fund, its investment adviser or principal underwriter, or an affiliate thereof.
16. [Mutual Funds - Own Closed-End] PTE 79-13 covers the acquisition and sale of shares of certain registered closed end investment companies by plans that cover employees of the company, its investment adviser or an affiliate thereof.
17. [Office Space] PTE 77-10 grants an exemption for sharing and leasing of office space and administrative goods by multiple employer plans.
18. [Overdrafts] PTE 80-26 granted an exemption for certain interest free loans, such as overdrafts, between employee benefit plans and parties in interest.
19. [QPAM] PTE 84-14 covers certain prohibited transactions involving plans whose assets are managed by a qualified professional asset manager (QPAM).
20. [Repurchase Agreements] PTE 81-8 deals with the exemption granted for certain short-term investments (including repurchase agreements) by employee benefit plans.
21. [Securities Lending] PTE 81-6 granted an exemption for the lending of securities by employee benefit plans to broker-dealers and banks that are parties in interest to the plan.
22. [Securities Lending - Fees] An exemption was granted for the provision of securities lending services by a fiduciary to an employee benefit plan in PTE 82-63.
23. [Short-Term Investments] PTE 81-8 deals with the exemption granted for certain short-term investments (including repurchase agreements) by employee benefit plans.
24. PTE 77-9 covers six classes of transactions involving insurance agents and brokers, pension consultants, insurance companies, investment companies, investment company principal underwriters, and employee benefit plans:
  - The fourth class covers the purchase with plan assets of an insurance or annuity contract from an insurance company.
  - The fifth and sixth classes of transactions cover the purchase with plan assets of insurance or annuity contracts or securities issued by an investment company in situations where the insurance company, investment company, or investment company principal underwriter is a fiduciary or service provider to the plan solely by reason of sponsorship of a master or prototype plan.
25. Exemptions from prohibitions respecting certain transactions in which multiemployer and multiple employer plans are involved. PTE 76-1 and PTE 77-10. These exemptions cover three classes of transactions: (1) delinquent employer contributions; (2) construction loans; and (3) office space, administrative services and goods.
26. Exemptions from prohibitions respecting certain classes of transactions involving employee benefit plans and certain broker-dealers, reporting dealers and banks. PTE 75-1, PTE 78-10, and PTE 79-1. These exemptions cover five classes of transactions: (1) agency transactions and services, (2) principal transactions, (3) under writings, (4) market making, and (5) extensions of credit.

D. Advisory Opinions

1. [Bonding of Fiduciaries] The bonding provisions of ERISA are contained in Section 412. It is unlawful under Section 412\(c\) for any Person to procure a required bond through an agent in whose business operation a party in interest has any control or significant financial interest. ERISA's exemption provisions regarding bonding are contained in Section 412\(e\). Accordingly, it is concluded that Sections 408 and 414\(c\)\(4\) are not applicable to transactions that are unlawful under Section 412\(c\). AO 76-92.
2. [Relatives] An agent or broker who is a cousin of a plan fiduciary may receive commissions as agent or broker on the sale of insurance to the plan. WSB 79-104.

E. Court Decisions

1. Even though the terms of a transaction may be fair to the plan, if it constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406, the transaction constitutes a per se violation of ERISA without a Section 408 exemption. Approval of the transaction by a Taft-Hartley umpire is not sufficient. Cutaiar v. Marshall, 590 F.2d 523 (3d Cir. 1979).

Section 408(b)(1)
Loans to Plan Participants
The prohibitions provided in Section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
Any loans made by the plan to parties in interest who are participants or beneficiaries of the plan if such loans:
(A)	Are available to all such participants and beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis,
(B)	Are not made available to highly compensated employees (within the meaning of Section 414(q) of Title 26) in an amount greater than the amount made available to other employees,
(C)	Are made in accordance with specific provisions regarding such loans set forth in the plan,
(D)	Bear a reasonable rate of interest, and
(E)	Are adequately secured.

A. Conference Report

Participant loans are discussed on pages 311-316 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Statutes

Also refer to Section 72\(p\) of the Internal Revenue Code, which imposes additional restrictions on loans to plan participants.

C. Regulations

1. Refer to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-1.
2. If plan makes more than 25 participant loans in a calendar year, it will be need to make the APR and Finance Charge (and other) disclosures required by the Truth in Lending Act and Federal Reserve Regulation Z. Refer to:
  - a. Footnote 3 of Regulation Z, concerning who meets the test of being a Creditor under Section 226.2(a)(17) of the Regulation; and
  - b. The Federal Reserve Board Official Staff Commentary on Regulation Z explanation of how Creditor applies to -
    - Individual trust accounts instead of the Trust Department as a whole [Item 7], and
    - "Employee savings plans" (401(k) and 403(b)-type plans) [Item 8].

D. Advisory Opinions

1. A transaction exempted by Section 408\(b\) from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\) is not exempted for that portion of the transaction which may constitute a violation of Section 406\(b\). AO 83-45A.
2. The analysis of a program of investment by an employee benefit plan in residential mortgage loans that may be available to the plan's participants involves consideration of three distinct questions:
  - a. Whether the program is prudent within the meaning of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\),
  - b. Whether the loans within such a program are prudent within the meaning of that section, and
  - c. Where a loan is to be made to a plan participant, whether the rate of interest charged on the loan is available within the meaning of Section 408\(b\)\(1\).

Note that the Department of Labor in December 1987 issued regulations under Section 408(b)(1) defining "reasonable rate of interest" consistent with prior decisions under [Section 404\(a\)\(2\)\(B\), for example, endorsing the market or prevailing rate of interest.] AO 81-12A.

3. [ESOPs] Section 408\(d\) makes Section 408\(b\)\(1\) unavailable for transactions that involve a loan of any part of the income or corpus of a plan to a shareholder-employee as defined in Code Section 1379(d) of the employer maintaining the plan. The applicability of Section 408(b)(1) depends, among other things, on whether the proposed recipient is such a shareholder-employee. The trustees of the plan are responsible for determining whether the provisions of Section 408(b)(1), or any other section of ERISA, are applicable to the plan. AO 75-105.
4. A transaction that constituted a prohibited transaction but that was subject to a statutory exemption under Section 408\(b\) when the transaction was entered into may, in the future, become prohibited while the transaction continues because of changes in the relationship, causing the loss of the statutory exemption protection for the transaction. Thus, a loan between a plan and a party in interest may be entitled to relief under Section 408\(b\)\(1\) when the loan was made. However, if the party in interest later becomes an owner-employee for purposes of Section 408\(d\), then the loan is a prohibited transaction for which no relief is available under Section 408(b)(1). AO 84-44A.

E. Court Decisions

1. If other participants are required to provide greater security for their loans from a plan than the participant was required to provide, the loans to the participant are not made on a reasonably equivalent basis to loans to other participants as required by ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(A\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
2. If a loan from a plan to a participant exceeds the total of all loans to all other participants, the loan does not meet the criteria of ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(B\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
3. A loan in an amount that exceeds the limits set forth in the plan document does not satisfy ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(C\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
4. A participant's vested interest in a plan may not constitute adequate security for a loan from the plan under Section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(E\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).

Section 408(b)(2)

Ancillary Services

The prohibitions provided in Section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:

Contracting or making reasonable arrangements with a party in interest for office space, or legal, accounting or other services necessary for the establishment or operation of the plan, if no more than reasonable compensation is paid therefore.

A. Conference Report

General ancillary services are covered on pages 311-316 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

Refer to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2.

1. Section 408\(b\)\(2\) does not contain an exemption from acts described in Section 406\(b\)\(1\) through \(3\). Such acts are separate transactions not described in Section 408(b)(2). DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(a\).

2. A service is necessary for the establishment or operation of a plan if the service is appropriate and helpful to the plan obtaining the service in carrying out the purposes for which the plan is established and maintained. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(b\).
3. No contract or arrangement is reasonable if it does not permit termination by the plan without penalty to the plan on reasonably short notice under the circumstances to prevent the plan from becoming locked into an arrangement that has become disadvantageous. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(c\).
4. The prohibitions of Section 406\(b\) supplement the other provisions of Section 406\(a\) by imposing on parties in interest who are fiduciaries a duty of undivided loyalty to the plans for which they act. The prohibitions are imposed upon fiduciaries to deter them from exercising the authority, control or responsibility that makes such persons fiduciaries when they have interests that may conflict with the interest of the plans for which they act. A fiduciary may not use the authority, control or responsibility that makes such person a fiduciary to cause a plan to pay an additional fee to a person in which such fiduciary has an interest that may affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary to provide a service. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(e\).
5. The regulations cited above contain several important examples. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(f\). Some of the examples, however, only deal with Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and not with Sections 406\(b\)\(2\) and 406\(b\)\(3\).
6. The provision of services by a multiemployer plan to a party in interest is the subject of PTE C 76-1 and PTE C 77-10.

C. Prohibited Transaction Class Exemptions (PTE)

1. [Bank - Securities Lending] A securities lending service offered by a bank fiduciary to plans would not be exempt under Section 408\(b\)\(2\) because the compensation arrangement, which was based on a percentage of the value of the securities loan, might involve self-dealing. AO 79-11. However, see PTE 81-6 and PTE 82-63.
2. [Brokerage Services] A broker-dealer who provides investment advice to a plan and is therefore a fiduciary may, under certain circumstances, be able to effect brokerage transactions to a plan provided that he obtains prior authorization from another plan fiduciary before effecting any such transaction. Final PTE C 78-10.
3. [Brokerage Services at Cost or Free] Broker-dealers may perform brokerage services for plans that they sponsor when such services are undertaken to recapture commissions, when such services are provided in accordance with the provisions of Section 408\(b\)\(2\), or when such services are performed at no charge to a plan. Final PTE C 79-1.
4. [Indirect Expenses] Under ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(2\) and Code Section 4975\(d\)\(2\), a fiduciary may perform services for a plan and be reimbursed for certain direct expenses incurred in connection with those services. However, the allocation of overhead costs to the plan may not be covered by this exemption. Final PTE C 79-1.
5. [Office Space] The furnishing of office space or administrative services to a plan by a participating employee organization, employer or employee association, or by another multiemployer plan or multiple employer plan that is a party in interest or disqualified person to the plan, will generally be exempt from the prohibited transaction provisions if the conditions of ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(2\) and Code Section 4975\(d\)\(2\) are met. Final PTE C 76-1.

D. Advisory Opinions

1. [General] The Department will not rule on what constitutes a "necessary" service, a "reasonable" contract or arrangement, or what constitutes "reasonable" compensation since each issue is inherently factual in nature. Further, although Section 408\(b\)\(2\) generally permits the performance of multiple services for the same plan, it does not exempt an act of self-dealing by a fiduciary under the provisions of Section 406\(b\)\(1\). AO 82-26A.
2. [Administrative Services] A law firm may provide both legal and administrative services to a plan if the arrangement for all such services meets all of the requirements of Section 408\(b\)\(2\) and \(c\)\(2\) and Regulations Sections 2550.408b-2 and 2550.408c-2 and does not contravene the requirements of Section 406\(b\). WSB 78-18.
3. [Administrative Services] A welfare plan may retain a participating union to provide administrative services to the plan for a fee if those plan trustees who are officers of the union physically absent themselves from all consideration of the matter and do not use any of their authority or control to influence the plan's decision to hire the union). See Example 7 of DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-2\(f\). WSB 79-41.
4. [Bank - Own-Bank Trustee] A bank is not prohibited from serving as trustee for a plan maintained for the bank's employees where it receives no compensation from the plan for its trustee services (Emphasis added). AO 79-49.
5. [Bank - Brokerage Service] The provision of brokerage services by a bank to employee benefit plans maintained by it for which the bank also serves as custodian and/or investment manager would be exempt from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\) if the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(2\) are met. Whether the conditions are met in each case involves questions that are inherently factual in nature and on which the Department of Labor will issue no rulings. AO 85-15; accord AO 85-16.
6. [Bank - CIF Investment Manager] The provision of investment management services by a wholly owned bank subsidiary would be exempt from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\)\(1\) of ERISA in connection with the maintenance of a common or collective trust fund if the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(2\) are specifically met. AO 82-22A.
7. [Bank - CIF Investment Manager] The supplying of investment management and advisory services by a registered advisor/investment manager to a common trust fund of a bank, both of which are part of a single controlled group, would be exempt from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\) if the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(2\) are met. The exemption granted by Section 408\(b\)\(2\) is limited to Section 406\(a\) prohibited transactions and does not cover the situations described in Section 406\(b\). Thus, a decision with regard to the manager's retention by the common trust fiduciaries could constitute a violation of Section 406\(b\). Further, compensation paid by a service provider to its employees may be a properly reimbursable expense under Regulations Section 2550.408c-2\(b\)\(3\) if the expense would not, in fact, have been sustained had the services not been provided and if it can be properly allocated to the particular services provided. What constitutes a direct expense in a particular case; however, is a factual matter to be resolved, taking into account the relevant facts and circumstances, and will not be the subject of an advisory opinion. AO 83-20A.
8. [Bank - CIF/STIF] The provision of trustee services by a bank to employee benefit plans and the investment of plan funds in the bank's commingled short term investment fund would be exempt from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\) if the conditions of Sections 408\(b\)\(2\) and 408\(b\)\(8\) are met. Also, the mere selection of the bank to provide trustee services to the plans would not in itself constitute a violation of Section 406\(b\)\(1\). However, self-dealing in violation of Section 406\(b\)\(1\) could occur in the case of a committee's deliberations regarding the retention of the bank as trustee, and no opinion can be rendered on that potential circumstance. AO 82-62A.
9. [Bank - Loan Participations] Under Section 408\(b\)\(2\), a bank trustee for a plan may also provide services to a plan under a loan participation agreement, even if the plan can terminate such services only by selling its participation. WSB 79-48.
10. [Brokerage/Investment Management at No Cost] A brokerage firm which proposes to provide investment management and brokerage services to employee benefit plans, to be paid for directly by the plan sponsor, would be exempt from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\)\(1\) if the conditions contained in Section 408\(b\)\(2\) are met (Emphasis added). AO 82-26A.

- 11. [Custodian] Under the facts of the request, where a brokerage firm acts as custodian of custodial accounts established under a prototype plan for self-employed persons (a Keogh plan) or a simplified employee pension plan (SEP) but possesses no discretionary authority over the investments over the accounts nor any other aspect of the business administration of the custodial accounts, the firm would not be treated as a trustee for purposes of PTE 79-4. AO 82-12A.
- 12. [Direct Expenses] Where the employer plan sponsor provides administrative services to the plan for charges based upon its actual cost for labor and material in connection therewith, the provision of administrative services would be exempt from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\), assuming that, in fact and in operation, the plan service provider has met the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(2\). In addition, it is the Department's view that compensation paid to a service provider to its employees may be a properly reimbursable expense under DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2\(b\)\(3\) if the expense would not have been sustained had the services not been provided, if it can be properly allocated to the particular services provided and the expense does not represent an allocable portion of overhead cost. AO 82-01A.
- 13. [Float] The ancillary services exemptions (including 408\(b\)\(6\)) do not include the float earned by the fiduciary bank from a demand deposit account to the extent that it is reasonably possible to earn a return on such funds. Retention of float would be permissible if it was a part of the bank's overall compensation from the plan and if the bank had made appropriate disclosures regarding the use of float. Failure to comply would result in a violation of ERISA Section 406\(b\)\(1\). AO 93-24A.
- 14. [Related Expenses] A plan may reimburse its attorney for expenses incurred in attending an educational seminar if, under the facts and circumstances, attendance at such seminar was deemed to be relevant to the needs of the plan. WSB 79-85.
- 15. The provision of services, including construction or repair services, to an apprenticeship plan by a contributing employer or the leasing of office space by an apprenticeship plan from a contributing employer are covered by the statutory exemption under ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(2\). Proposed PTE C 78-5. AO 79-72.

E. Court Decisions

- 1. [Written Contract Required] The Section 408\(b\)\(2\) exemption is only available where there is a contract or arrangement for services. Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
- 2. [Partial Exemption Only] ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(2\) provides no exemption from the provisions of ERISA Section 406\(b\). Although the language of ERISA Section 408(b)(2) appears to provide an exemption from all of the prohibitions of Section 406, the court concluded, based on the legislative history of Section 408(b)(2), that it should not be construed to provide an exemption from the prohibitions of ERISA Section 406(b). The decision explicitly supports ERISA Regulations Section 2550.408b-2\(a\) and \(e\). Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1 EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).
- 3. [Reasonable Compensation] Transactions between trustees of a pension, health and welfare fund and a claims processing company for the rendering of services necessary for the operation of the plan are exempted under Section 408 unless the company receives more than reasonable compensation. Brock v. Robbins 830 F.2d 64, 8 EBC 2489 (7th Cir. 1987).

Section 408(b)(3)
Loans to ESOPs
The prohibitions provided in Section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
A loan to an employee stock ownership plan (as defined in section 407(d)(6) ), if -
(A)	Such loan is primarily for the benefit of participants and beneficiaries of the plan, and
(B)	Such loan is at an interest rate which is not in excess of a reasonable rate.
If the plan gives collateral to a party in interest for such loan, such collateral may consist only of qualifying employer securities (as defined in Section 407(d)(5) ).

A. Conference Report

ESOP loans are covered in pages 311-316 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

Regulations have been issued under Section 408\(b\)\(3\). See DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-3.

- 1. Section 408(b)(3) provides an exemption from the prohibited transaction provisions of Sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\), and 406\(b\)\(2\). Section 408(b)(3) does not provide an exemption from the prohibitions of Section 406\(b\)\(3\). DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-3\(b\)\(1\).
- 2. The exemption under Section 408\(b\)\(3\) includes within its scope certain transactions in which the potential for self-dealing by fiduciaries exists and in which the interests of fiduciaries may conflict with the interests of beneficiaries. To guard against these potential abuses, the Department of Labor will subject these transactions to special scrutiny to ensure that they are primarily for the benefit of participants and beneficiaries. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-3\(b\)\(2\).
- 3. These regulations contain several requirements relating to these loans. See also Treasury Department Regulation 54.4975-7(b).

Section 408(b)(4)
Deposits With Fiduciary Banks and Thrifts
The prohibitions provided in Section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
The investment of all or part of a plan's assets in deposits which bear a reasonable interest rate in a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States or a State, if such bank or other institution is a fiduciary of such plan and if -

(A)	The plan covers only employees of such bank or other institution, and employees of affiliates of such bank or other institution, or
(B)	Such investment is expressly authorized by a provision of the plan or by a fiduciary (other than such bank or such institution or affiliate thereof) who is expressly empowered by the plan to so instruct the trustees with respect to such investment.

A. Conference Report

Deposits with fiduciaries are discussed on pages 311-316 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

Refer to DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-4.

- Section 408\(b\)\(4\) provides an exemption from Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and 406\(b\)\(2\), as well as Section 406\(a\)\(1\) because Section 408(b)(4) contemplates a bank or similar financial institution causing a plan for which it acts as a fiduciary to invest plan assets in its own deposits or certificates of deposit, if the requirements of Section 408(b)(4) are met. However, it does not provide an exemption from Section 406\(b\)\(3\). The receipt of such consideration is a separate transaction not described in the statutory exemption. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-4\(a\).
- Such investment may be made if the investment is expressly authorized by a provision of the plan or trust agreement or if the investment is expressly authorized (or made) by a fiduciary of the plan who has authority to make such investments and who has no interest in the transaction that may affect the exercise of such authorizing fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary so as to cause such authorization to constitute an act described in Section 406\(b\). DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-4.
- If the requirements of Section 408\(b\)\(4\) are met, a defined benefit plan maintained by a bank employer may invest in certificates of deposit issued by the bank in excess of the 10% limitation of Section 407\(a\) of ERISA. AO 79-76.

C. Advisory Opinions

- [Banks] The investment of plan assets of a noncollectively bargained multiple employer plan covering employees of banks, in savings accounts and certificates of deposit of banks that are contributing employers, constitutes a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\) and may also be prohibited under Section 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) because members of the administrative board of the plan, which directs plan investments, are officers and employees of contributing employer/banks.

However, Section 408\(b\)\(4\) provides an exemption from Sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\) and 406\(b\)\(2\) for the investment of plan assets in the deposits or certificates of deposit of a bank that is a plan fiduciary or party in interest, if the requirements of DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-4 are met. One requirement of the regulation is that, for investments made after November 1, 1977, the plan specify the name(s) of the bank(s) in which deposits may be made. The specifications may be made in the plan by amendment retroactive to November 1, 1977. AO 79-25.
- [Naming of Depository] A prototype plan used by a bank contained authorization "to invest in any type of deposit of the Trustee." The prototype plan defined the Trustee as the person who executed an adoption agreement. The bank adopted the prototype by executing an adoption agreement. A question arose as to whether such an indirect designation of the fiduciary bank was satisfactory.

In response to an FDIC telephone inquiry, the DOL Office of (ERISA) Regulations and Interpretations staff indicated informally that the arrangement was deemed to comply with Section 408\(b\)\(4\) of the Act, DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-4, and AO 79-25. The DOL staff indicated DOL would take a rather liberal view of the various documentation that would constitute the plan document(s). [10-27-94.]
- [Substantial Penalty] The payment by an employee benefit plan to an issuer bank of a penalty upon the early redemption of certificates of deposit is subject to the exemption set forth in Section 408\(b\)\(4\) to the extent the exemption was available to the certificates of deposit. AO 81-42A.
- [Non-bank Bank] A company engaged in the business of issuing face amount certificates for sale to employee benefit plans, among others, is a bank or similar financial institution within the meaning of Section 408\(b\)\(4\) based upon the facts set forth in the ruling request. AO 83-18A.
- [Non-bank Bank] An industrial loan company may qualify as a bank or similar financial institution for purposes of meeting the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(4\), exempting transactions from the prohibitions of Section 406. Thus, investment of assets of employee benefit plans in the industrial loan entity's saving instruments would be permitted under Section 408(b)(4). AO 82-64A.
- [Deposits - Insured/Uninsured] The diversification requirement of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(C\) generally will not be violated if all plan assets in an individual account plan are invested in a federally insured savings account, so long as the account is fully insured. Where the account balance exceeds the amount covered by federal insurance, compliance with Section 404(a)(1)(C) is determined by whether the bank invests its assets in a diversified manner. AO 77-46.

Section 408(b)(5)
Insurance Company Fiduciaries
The prohibitions provided in Section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
Any contract for life insurance, health insurance, or annuities with one or more insurers which are qualified to do business in a State, if the plan pays no more than adequate consideration, and if each such insurer or insurers is -
(A)	The employer maintaining the plan, or
(B)	A party in interest which is wholly owned (directly or indirectly) by the employer maintaining the plan, or by any person which is a party in interest with respect to the plan, but only if the total premiums and annuity considerations written by such insurers for life insurance, health insurance or annuities for all plans (and their employers) with respect to which such insurers are parties in interest (not including premiums or annuity considerations written by the employer maintaining the plan) do not exceed 5% of the total premiums and annuity considerations written for all lines of insurance in that year by such insurers (not including premiums or annuity considerations written by the employer maintaining the plan).

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report explains this statutory exemption at pages 311-316.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. [Pooled Fund Use] Where the assets of an insurance company's own plan are maintained in a single customer separate account pursuant to a group annuity contract, the transfer of such assets in kind to a pooled separate account maintained by the company in return for the acquisition of units in such pooled account by the plan, together with a change in the contract to permit plan investment in the pooled account, is exempt under Section 408\(b\)\(5\). AO 79-79.
2. Stop-loss policies of insurance are deemed to be included in the term "life insurance, health insurance and annuity contracts" as that term is used in PTE C 79-41 in connection with sale of stop-loss insurance by an affiliate of a bank holding company to plan sponsor by the holding company for its employees or employees of its affiliates. AO 83-19A.

Section 408(b)(6)
Ancillary Services by Depository Fiduciaries
The prohibitions provided in section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
the providing of any ancillary service by a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States or a State, if such bank or other institution is a fiduciary of such plan, and if:
(A)	Such bank or similar financial institution has adopted adequate internal safeguards which assure that the providing of such ancillary service is consistent with sound banking and financial practice, as determined by Federal or State supervisory authority, and
(B)	The extent to which such ancillary service is provided is subject to specific guidelines issued by such bank or similar financial institution (as determined by the Secretary after consultation with Federal and State supervisory authority), and adherence to such guidelines would reasonably preclude such bank or similar financial institution from providing such ancillary service -
(i)	In an excessive or unreasonable manner, and
(ii)	In a manner that would be inconsistent with the best interests of participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans.
Such ancillary services shall not be provided at more than reasonable compensation.

A. Conference Report

Bank ancillary services are discussed on pages 311-316 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Regulations

Regulations have been issued under Section 408\(b\)\(6\). DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-6.

1. The Section 408\(b\)\(6\) exemption exempts ancillary services that do not meet the requirements of Section 408\(b\)\(2\) because the provision of such services involves self-dealing described in Section 406\(b\)\(1\) by the fiduciary bank or similar financial institution or a conflict of interest described in Section 406\(b\)\(2\). Section 408\(b\)\(6\) provides an exemption from Sections 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) because Section 408\(b\)\(6\) contemplates the provision of such ancillary services without the approval of a second fiduciary. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-6\(a\).
2. Plan assets held by a fiduciary bank that are reasonably expected to be needed to satisfy current plan expenses may be placed by the bank in a non-interest bearing checking account in the bank if the conditions of this regulation are met notwithstanding the provisions of Section 408\(b\)\(4\), which required the payment of a reasonable rate of interest on bank deposits. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550-408b-4\(a\).
3. Section 408\(b\)\(6\) does not provide an exemption for the receipt of compensation described in Section 406\(b\)\(3\). The receipt of such consideration is a separate transaction not described in Section 408\(b\)\(6\). DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408b-4\(a\).

C. Prohibited Transaction Class Exemptions (PTE)

1. [Securities Lending] Securities lending is an authorized ancillary service which may be offered by a bank to an ERISA plan. PTE 81-6 permits securities lending and PTE 82-63 permits the bank to receive a fee for providing such services.

D. Advisory Opinions

1. [Bank Loan to Plan] Section 408\(b\)\(6\) does not provide an exemption for a loan to a plan by a bank trustee, even if authorized by the plan instruments, in order to aid the plan in paying the purchase price for an asset being purchased by the plan at the direction of the plan's administrative committee. AO 79-73.

Section 408(b)(7)
Conversion of Securities
The prohibitions provided in section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
The exercise of a privilege to convert securities, to the extent provided in regulations of the Secretary, but only if the plan receives no less than adequate consideration pursuant to such conversion.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report explains this statutory exemption at pages 311-316.

Section 408(b)(8) Collective Investment Funds
The prohibitions provided in Section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
Any transaction between a plan and -
(i)	A common or collective trust fund or pooled investment fund maintained by a party in interest which is a bank or trust company supervised by a State or Federal agency or
(ii)	A pooled investment fund of an insurance company qualified to do business in a State, if:
(A)	The transaction is a sale or purchase of an interest in the fund;
(B)	The bank, trust company, or insurance company receives not more than reasonable compensation; and
(C)	Such transaction is expressly permitted by the instrument under which the plan is maintained, or by a fiduciary (other than the bank, trust company, or insurance company, or an affiliate thereof) who has authority to manage and control the assets of the plan.

A. Conference Report

The use of a fiduciary's collective investment funds is covered in pages 311-316 of the Congressional Conference Report.

B. Advisory Opinions

- [Annual Reports to Plan Administrators] CIFs are required to provide an annual report, covering certain material, to plan administrators of participating ERISA plans. See DOL ERISA Regulation 2520.103-5.
- [CIF Investments in Another CIF] Fund-to-fund investments by affiliates of a multibank holding company, by bank pooled funds in corresponding pooled funds of other affiliates of the holding company, and fund-to-fund investments by a pooled fund of the controlled group in another pooled fund of the controlled group are transactions involving the sale or purchase of all interest in a fund by an employee benefit plan and would be exempt from the prohibitions of Section 406\(a\)\(1\) if the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(8\) are met. AO 82-41A.
- [Trust Company CIFs] A wholly owned subsidiary corporation of an investment manager established as a trust company and subject to the supervision and examination by the superintendent of banks in the state of its domicile shall be deemed to constitute a bank for purposes of PTE C 80-51, and its common or collective trust fund may be utilized for investment by employee benefit plans managed by the parent-investment manager so long as the conditions of Section 408\(b\)\(8\) are satisfied. AO 83-12.

Section 408(b)(9) Distributions of Plan Assets
The prohibitions provided in section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
The making by a fiduciary of a distribution of the assets of the plan in accordance with the terms of the plan if such assets are distributed in the same manner as provided under section 4044 of this Act (relating to allocation of assets).

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report explains this statutory exemption at pages 311-316.

Section 408(b)(10) and (11)
The prohibitions provided in section 406 shall not apply to any of the following transactions:
(10)	Any transaction required or permitted under part 1 of subtitle E of title IV.
(11)	A merger of multiemployer plans, or the transfer of assets or liabilities between multiemployer plans, determined by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation to meet the requirements of section 4231.

Section 408(c)(1)
Nothing in section 406 shall be construed to prohibit any fiduciary from receiving any benefit to which he may be entitled as a participant or a beneficiary in the plan, so long as the benefit is computed and paid on a basis which is consistent with the terms of the plan as applied to all other participants and beneficiaries.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report does not explain Section 408\(c\)\(1\).

B. Court Decisions

- Profit-sharing plan trustees improperly refused to pay benefits to a former executive on the ground that it would breach his fiduciary duties to receive plan benefits, as he was still a plan trustee when the request was made, since Section 408\(c\) permits a fiduciary to receive benefits to which he may be entitled as a plan participant so long as benefits are computed and paid in the same manner as they are for other participants. Kann v. Keystone Resources, Inc. Profit Sharing Plan, 575 F.Supp. 1084, 5 EBC 1233 (W.D. Pa. 1983).
- Where, as a result of termination of employment, an employee is vested in only a portion of his account balance under a profit-sharing plan, the remaining portion being reallocated under the terms of the plan to other accounts of other participants, the fact that participants who are also plan fiduciaries benefited from such reallocation does not constitute self-dealing by virtue of ERISA Section 408\(c\)\(1\). Shaw v. Kruidenier, 470 F.Supp. 1375 (S.D.Iowa 1979), aff'd,

Section 408(c)(2)*Fiduciary Fees and Expenses

Nothing in section 406 shall be construed to prohibit any fiduciary from receiving any reasonable compensation for services rendered, or for the reimbursement of expenses properly and actually incurred, in the performance of his duties with the plan; except that no person so serving who already receives full-time pay from an employer or an association of employers, whose employees are participants in the plan, or from an employee organization whose members are participants in such plan shall receive compensation from such plan, except for reimbursement of expenses properly and actually incurred.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report does not explain this interpretation.

B. Regulations

Regulations have been issued under Section 408\(c\)\(2\). DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2.

- Section 408\(b\)\(2\) refers to the payment of reasonable compensation by a plan to a party in interest for services rendered to the plan. Section 408\(c\)\(2\) clarifies what constitutes reasonable compensation for such services. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2\(a\).
- Generally, whether compensation is reasonable under Sections 408\(b\)\(2\) and 408\(c\)\(2\) depends on the particular facts and circumstances of each case. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2\(b\)\(1\).
- The term "reasonable compensation" does not include any compensation to a fiduciary who is already receiving full-time pay from an employer or association of employers or from an employer organization, except for the reimbursement of direct expenses properly and actually incurred and not otherwise reimbursed. These restrictions do not apply to a party in interest who is not a fiduciary. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2\(b\)\(2\).
- An expense is not a direct expense to the extent it would have been sustained had the service not been provided or if it represents an applicable portion of overhead costs. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2\(b\)\(3\).
- The term "reasonable compensation", as applied to a fiduciary or an employee of a plan, includes an advance to such a fiduciary or employee by the plan to cover direct expenses to be properly and actually incurred by such person in the performance of such person's duties with the plan if certain conditions are satisfied. DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2\(b\)\(4\).

C. Interpretive Bulletins

IB 75-6, relating to Section 408\(c\)\(2\), has been superseded by the regulation cited above.

D. Advisory Opinions

- [General] Section 408\(c\)\(2\) was inserted in ERISA as an exemption from the Section 406 prohibited transaction rules to enable certain services to be provided to a plan. The clause in Section 408\(c\)\(2\) relating to full-time employee receiving solely reimbursement for expenses is a limitation within an exemption from Section 406. AO 75-21.
- [General] A fiduciary who receives full-time pay from an employer association acting on behalf of a group of employers as a sponsor of an employee benefit plan where employees of the contributing employers are participants in this plan would be precluded under Section 408\(b\)\(2\) from receiving compensation from the plan for his services as a trustee. This is consistent with the legislative history of Section 408\(c\)\(2\) wherein Congress expressed an intent to prevent double payment when the sponsoring association, which is supported solely by the contributing employers, already pays the trustee full-time pay. AO 85-19A.
- [Form of Compensation] Section 408\(c\)\(2\) and the regulations thereunder do not proscribe the payment of compensation to fiduciaries in a form other than cash (e.g. purchase of life insurance), provided the amount of total compensation paid in all forms is reasonable. WSB 78-34.
- [Compensation] The manner in which a union, an employer, and an employer association characterize the payments that they make to trustees is not dispositive of the issue of whether those payments constitute full-time pay. WSB 78-36.
- [Compensation] When two union trustees are full-time paid union officers, no compensation is permissible under Section 408\(c\)\(2\). AO 76-57.
- [Compensation] The receipt of compensation by a fiduciary from a plan is a prohibited transaction if the fiduciary is already receiving full-time compensation from the employer maintaining the plan. AO 78-08.
- [Compensation] A trustee or fiduciary who is paid by his employer on an hourly basis and who loses wages for time spent in connection with his plan duties will not be deemed to be receiving full-time pay from his employer during those periods of time that he is performing his duties as plan trustee or fiduciary; and he may, therefore, receive compensation from the plan for services rendered in the performance of his duties with the plan. AO 76-03; WSB 79-92; WSB 79-97
- [Compensation - Owner] A management representative/trustee who is the owner of a business that is an employer whose employees are participants in the plan may not receive compensation from the plan for services rendered in the performance of his duties with the plan. The trustee's regular full-time pay or compensation will not be diminished for his time spent on plan duties. AO 76-03; WSB 79-92; WSB 79-97.
- [Indemnification of Trustee] Reimbursement or payment by the fund, pursuant to certain indemnification provisions, of expenses properly and actually incurred (including reimbursement or payment of expenses properly and actually incurred in settlement of pending or threatened litigation) is not a prohibited transaction under Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) or \(D\) to the extent the reimbursement or payment does not exceed amounts allowed under Section 408\(c\)\(2\). AO 77-66/67.
- [Expenses] Section 408\(c\)\(2\) expressly does not preclude reimbursement for expenses properly and actually incurred by any plan fiduciary. AO 75-145.
- [Legal Expenses] Reimbursement of a legal defense expenses of Taft-Hartley plan trustees is permitted under certain circumstances. However, a plan provision authorizing reimbursement of legal fees in the event of any legal action that may arise from the performance of a trustee's fiduciary duties is too broad and would be prohibited under Section 408\(c\)\(2\). Where a fiduciary is found in legal proceedings to have violated his fiduciary duties, reimbursement of legal fees by the plan would not be permitted (Emphasis added). AO 78-29.

E. Court Decisions

1. [Legal Expenses] Absent any finding of breach of fiduciary duty, the reimbursement of litigation expenses incurred by a fiduciary defending against allegations of breach of fiduciary duty is not prohibited by Section 410\(a\) and, by virtue of Section 408\(c\)\(2\), is not a prohibited transaction. Central States Pension Fund v. American National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, No. 77 C 4335, slip op. (N.D.Ill., Oct. 26, 1979).
2. [Commissions] The investment of plan assets in companies in exchange for commissions, equity, or other compensation does not qualify as a Section 408 exempted transaction and, as such, is prohibited by Section 406. Lowen v. Tower Asset Management, Inc., 829 F.2d 1209, 8 EBC 2457 (2d Cir. 1987).
3. [Commissions] The payment of a sales commission to a fiduciary on the sale of plan real property is not exempt under Section 408\(c\)\(2\) as the fiduciary received full-time pay from the employer. If the commission is characterized as compensation for "extraordinary services", it is not exempt under Section 408(c)(2), since that section exempts only compensation for the performance of fiduciary duties. Marshall v. Kelly, 465 F.Supp. 341, 1EBC 1850 (W.D.Okla. 1978).

Section 408(c)(3)

Nothing in Section 406 shall be construed to prohibit any fiduciary from serving as a fiduciary in addition to being an officer, employee, agent, or other representative of a party in interest.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report does not explain this interpretation.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. [General] Section 408\(c\)\(3\) has no bearing on the applicability of the fiduciary duties set forth in Section 404\(a\)\(1\). The Section also does not deal with possible prohibited transactions that might occur under Section 406\(b\), depending on the factual situation, when a fiduciary is a director of an investment manager of the plan's assets. AO 76-15.
2. [Own-Bank Plans] A bank is not prohibited from serving as trustee for a plan maintained for the bank's employees where it receives no compensation from the plan for its trustee services [Emphasis added]. AO 79-49.
3. [Bank Director] An individual who is a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan because he has authority to appointment the investment manager is not subject to liability under Section 406 merely because he continues to serve as the director of a trust company that has been appointed as an investment manager to manage assets of such plan. AO 76-15.
4. [Director] A person serving as a director of a fiduciary or a service provider is a representative of a party in interest. As such, he will not be subject to liability under Section 406 merely because he serves as a trustee of a plan while at the same time serving as a director of a bank service provider. AO 77-45.

C. Court Decisions

1. The appointment of an officer or employee of the plan sponsor as plan trustee is not improper merely because of the trustee's relationship to the sponsor. Blackmar v. Lichtenstein, 468 F.Supp. 370 (E.D.Mo.), aff'd, 603 F.2d 1306, 1 EBC 1679 (8th Cir. 1979).

Section 408(d)

Section 407\(b\) and subsections (b), (c) and (e) of this section shall not apply to any transaction in which a plan directly or indirectly -

(1)	Lends any part of the corpus or income of the plan to;
(2)	Pays any compensation for personal services rendered to the plan to; or
(3)	Acquires for the plan any property from or sells any property to;

any person who is with respect to the plan an owner-employee (as defined in section 401(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954), a member of the family (as defined in section 267(c)(4) of such Code) of my such owner-employee, or a corporation controlled by any such owner-employee through the ownership, directly or indirectly, of 50% or more of the combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or 50% or more of the total value of shares of all classes of stock of the corporation.

For purposes of this subsection a shareholder employee (as defined in section 1379 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Subchapter S Revision Act of 1982) and a participant or beneficiary of an individual retirement annuity, or an individual retirement bond (as defined in section 408 or section 409 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) and an employer or association of employers which establishes such an account or annuity under section 408(c) of such Code shall be deemed to be an owner-employee.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report does not explain this exception to the scope of the exemptions.

B. Advisory Opinions

1. Section 408\(d\) makes Section 408\(b\) unavailable for transactions between a plan and a shareholder-employee (as defined in Section 1379(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954) of the plan. The trustees of the plan are, of course, responsible for determining whether the provisions of Section 408(b), or any other section of ERISA, are applicable to the plan. AO 75-105.

Section 408(e)

Sections 406 and 407 shall not apply to the acquisition or sale by a plan of qualifying employer securities (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(5\)) or acquisition, sale, or lease by a plan of qualifying employer real property (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(4\)) -

(1)	If such acquisition, sale, or lease is for adequate consideration (or in the case of a marketable obligation, at a price not less favorable to the plan than the price determined under section 407(e)(1) ),
(2)	If no commission is charged with respect thereto, and

(3)	If -
(A)	The plan is an eligible individual account plan (as defined in section 407(d)(3) ), or
(B)	In the case of an acquisition or lease of qualifying employer real property by a plan which is not an eligible individual account plan, or of an acquisition of qualifying employer securities by such a plan, the lease or acquisition is not prohibited by section 407(a) .

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report explains this employer security and real property exemption at pages 316-320.

B. Regulations

See DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408e.

C. Advisory Opinions

- [General] For the exemption provided by Section 408\(e\) to apply to any sale, the property being sold must be either qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property at the time such securities or property are sold by the plan. If a corporation is not a member of a controlled group prior to the consummation of a sale, the corporation's securities will not be securities of an affiliate prior to the sale (Emphasis added). AO 77-18.
- [Employer Real Estate] Section 408\(e\) is not applicable where the property is not "qualifying employer real property" (Emphasis added). AO 76-14.
- [Individual Account Plan] An exchange of employer common stock by an eligible individual account plan for stock of a new parent company is covered by Section 408\(e\). AO 78-22.
- [Individual Account Plan] The exemption provided in Section 408\(e\) is available to an eligible individual account plan only if the conditions set forth in that section are met. AO 79-13 and AO 79-23. The exemption is not affected by the exercise of control by a participant or beneficiary over the assets in his individual account. AO 75-89.
- [Employer Securities] The prohibited transaction restrictions of Section 406 of ERISA do not apply to a company's repurchase of its stock from its employee benefit plan, provided that the three conditions of Section 408\(e\) are met. However, the Department will not opine as to whether a particular transaction is for adequate compensation. AO 81-46A.
- [Employer Securities] The acquisition by the plan of preferred stock of the plan sponsor in payment of a debt owned by the plan sponsor corporation to the plan, and the further acquisition by the plan of the plan sponsor's preferred stock in exchange for the plan sponsor's common stock held by the plan, constitute acquisitions within the meaning of Section 408\(e\). AO 81-33A.
- [Valuation - Employer Securities] ERISA Section 3\(18\) defines the term "adequate consideration", in the case of a security for which there is no generally recognized market, as the fair value of the security determined in good faith by the trustee or named fiduciary to a plan pursuant to the terms of the plan and in accordance with regulations promulgated by the Department of Labor. The Department of Labor has not yet issued such regulations and does not, at the present time, contemplate making advance determinations as to adequate consideration in the case of individual purchases and sales of stock. Guidelines to be issued will be general guidelines in the form of regulations under Section 3(18). In view of the fact that no regulations have been issued under Section 3(18), the plan advisory committee should make a good faith determination of the fair market value of the common stock of the employer maintaining the plan, utilizing recognized methods of determining the value of stock of closely held corporations. AO 75-141.
- [Valuation - Employer Securities] In view of the fact that no regulations have been issued under Section 3\(18\), the trustee should make a good faith determination of the fair market value of the book value shares, utilizing recognized methods of determining the value of such shares. The ruling received by the trustee from the Internal Revenue Service as to where the method of determining fair market value of the book value shares was a reasonable one for purposes of Section 1.421-7(e)(2) of the Income Tax Regulations would be considered as evidence that the trustee determining of fair market value was made in good faith. AO 77-35.

Section 408(f)

Section 406\(b\)\(2\) shall not apply to any merger or transfer described in subsection \(b\)\(11\).

Exculpatory Provisions: Insurance

ERISA Section 410

Section 410\(a\)

Exculpatory Provisions

Except as provided in sections 405\(b\)\(1\) and 405\(d\), any provision in an agreement or instrument which purports to relieve a fiduciary from responsibility or liability for any responsibility, obligation, or duty under this part shall be void as against public policy.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report discusses the exculpatory provision prohibition.

B. Interpretive Bulletins

- Indemnification agreements are not prohibited if the fiduciary who may be indemnified under the agreement remains responsible and liable for his acts or omissions with the indemnifying party merely satisfying the fiduciary liability. For example, an employer or union may agree to indemnify a plan fiduciary under Section 410\(a\). Also, a fiduciary can agree to indemnify his employees who perform fiduciary functions for a plan. However, a plan cannot agree to indemnify a fiduciary for a breach of fiduciary duty. IB 75-4.

C. Advisory Opinions

- [Exculpatory Clauses] An exculpatory clause that appears in a plan instrument is void even if the plan is not amended to remove the clause. AO 75-122.

2. [Exculpatory Clauses] Any provision in a plan instrument purporting to relieve the trustees of the duty to collect contributions is void under Section 410\(a\). AO 78-28.
3. [Indemnification] Indemnification by a multiemployer plan of an investment manager's defense costs and settlement payment is permitted in a lawsuit alleging a breach of fiduciary duty by the investment manager, provided that (1) no court decision was rendered that the investment manager had breached his fiduciary duties; (2) the defense costs indemnified did not exceed a reasonable amount and (3) an opinion is obtained from independent legal counsel that the acts in question did not involve a breach of fiduciary duty by the investment manager. AO 77-66/67.
4. [Indemnification] An advance or reimbursement by a plan of expenses incurred by a plan fiduciary in defending a lawsuit alleging a breach of fiduciary duty is not a prohibited transaction, provided (1) no reimbursement is made or any advances repaid if a court rules that a breach has occurred; and (2) the advance or reimbursement is for expenses properly and actually incurred (see DOL ERISA Regulation 2550.408c-2). AO 77-66/67.
5. [Indemnification] Reimbursement of the legal defense expenses of Taft-Hartley plan trustees is permitted under certain circumstances. However, a plan provision authorizing reimbursement of legal fees in the event of any legal action that may arise from the performance of a trustee's fiduciary duties is too broad and would be prohibited under Section 410\(a\). Where a fiduciary is found in a legal proceeding to have violated his fiduciary duties, reimbursement of legal fees by the plan would not be permitted. AO 78-29.

D. Court Decisions

1. Absent any finding of breach of fiduciary duty, the reimbursement of litigation expenses incurred by a fiduciary in defending against allegations of breach of fiduciary duty is not prohibited by Section 410\(a\) and, by virtue of Section 408\(c\)\(2\), is not a prohibited transaction. Central States Pension Fund v. American National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, No. 77 C 4335, slip op. (N.D.Ill., Oct. 26, 1979).
2. Where a pension plan contains a provision to indemnify members of the board of directors, plan administrative committee, trustee and any other person to whom fiduciary responsibility was allocated from liability for a breach of fiduciary duty, except for liabilities and claims arising from willful misconduct, the indemnity agreement is void under ERISA Section 410\(a\). Donovan v. Cunningham, 541 F.Supp. 276, 3 EBC 1641 (S.D.Tex. 1982), aff'd in part, rev'd in part, 716 F.2d 1455, 4 EBC 2329 (5th Cir. 1983), cert. denied, 467 U.S. 1251 (1984).
3. A successor trustee cannot be exonerated by the provisions of a trust agreement from his duty to liquidate prior improper investments upon assuming his responsibilities. Marshall v. Craft, 463 F.Supp. 493 (N.D.Ga. 1978).
4. Even though a plan trustee has no authority for investment decisions, it cannot disavow itself of a responsibility for such decision since it is still a fiduciary. However, under the allocation provisions of Section 405\(c\)\(1\) the trustee may not, in fact, be liable for such decisions. Leonard v. Drug Fair, Inc., Fed. Sec. L. Rep. (CCH) Para 97,144 (D.D.C. 1979).
5. Where a pension plan was challenged under ERISA Section 410\(a\) because the summary plan descriptions contained disclaimers, the widow of a deceased employee could not maintain a private action since she was not a beneficiary as defined in ERISA. Trembly v. Marshall, 502 F.Supp. 29, 2 EBC 2500 (D.D.C. 1980).

Section 410(b)
Insurance
Nothing in this subpart shall preclude -
(1)	A plan from purchasing insurance for its fiduciaries or for itself to cover liability or losses occurring by reason of the act or omission of a fiduciary, if such insurance permits recourse by the insurer against the fiduciary in the case of a breach of a fiduciary obligation by such fiduciary;
(2)	A fiduciary from purchasing insurance to cover liability under this part from and for his own account; or
(3)	An employer or an employee organization from purchasing insurance to cover potential liability of one or more persons who serve in a fiduciary capacity with regard to an employee benefit plan.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report discusses the fiduciary insurance provisions of Section 410\(b\) at pages 320-321.

B. Regulations

No regulations have been issued interpreting Section 410\(b\). However, in a news release issued on March 4, 1975, the Department of Labor stated that fiduciary insurance purchased by a plan that provides for recourse by the insurer against the fiduciary but that also permits the fiduciary to pay an additional premium to obtain coverage against the insurer's recourse is not prohibited under Section 410\(b\).

C. Advisory Opinions

1. Section 410\(b\) does not require plans to maintain fiduciary insurance. AO 76-03.

Bonding of Fiduciaries
ERISA Section 412
Section 412
(a)	Every fiduciary of an employee benefit plan and every person who handles funds or other property of such plan (hereinafter in this section referred to as "plan official") shall be bonded as provided in this section; except that-
(1)	Where such plan is one under which the only assets from which benefits are paid are the general assets of a union or of an employer, the administrator, officers, and employees of such plan shall be exempt from the bonding requirements of this section, and
(2)	No bond shall be required of a fiduciary (or of any director, officer, or employee of such fiduciary) if such fiduciary -
(A)	Is a corporation organized and doing business under the laws of the United States or any State;

	(B)	Is authorized under such laws to exercise trust powers or to conduct an insurance business;
	(C)	Is subject to supervision or examination by Federal or State authority; and
	(D)	Has at all times a combined capital and surplus in excess of such a minimum amount as may be established by regulations issued by the Secretary, which amount shall be at least $1,000,000. Paragraph (2) shall apply to a bank or other financial institution which is authorized to exercise trust powers and the deposits of which are not insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, only if such bank or institution meets bonding or similar requirements under State law which the Secretary determines are at least equivalent to those imposed on banks by Federal law. The amount of such bond shall be fixed at the beginning of each fiscal year of the plan. Such amount shall not be less than 10 per centum of the amount of funds handled. In no case shall such bond be less than $1,000 nor more than $500,000, except that the Secretary, after due notice and opportunity for hearing to all interested parties, and after consideration of the record, may prescribe an amount in excess of $500,000, subject to the 10 per centum limitation of the preceding sentence.
		For purposes of fixing the amount of such bond, the amount of funds handled shall be determined by the funds handled by the person, group, or class to be covered by such bond and by their predecessor or predecessors, if any, during the preceding reporting year, or if the plan has no preceding reporting year, the amount of funds to be handled during the current reporting year by such person, group, or class, estimated as provided in regulations of the Secretary. Such bond shall provide protection to the plan against loss by reason of acts of fraud or dishonesty on the part of the plan official, directly or through connivance with others. Any bond shall have as surety thereon a corporate surety company which is an acceptable surety on Federal bonds under authority granted by the Secretary of the Treasury pursuant to sections 9304-9308 of title 31. Any bond shall be in a form or of a type approved by the Secretary, including individual bonds or schedule of blanket forms of bonds which cover a group or class.
(b)		It shall be unlawful for any plan official to whom subsection (a) applies, to receive, handle, disburse, or otherwise exercise custody of any of the funds or other property of any employees benefit plan, without being bonded as required by subsection (a) and it shall be unlawful for any plan official of such plan, or any other person having authority to direct the performance of such functions, to permit such functions, or any, of them, to be performed by any plan official, with respect to whom the requirements of subsection (a) have not been met.
(c)		It shall be unlawful for any person to procure any bond required by subsection (a) from any surety or other company or through any agent or broker in whose business operations such plan or any party in interest in such plan has any control or significant financial interest, direct or indirect.
(d)		Nothing in any other provision of law, shall make any person, required to be bonded as provided in subsection (a) because he handles funds or other property of an employee benefit plan, to be bonded insofar as the handling by such person of the funds or other property of such plan is concerned.
(e)		The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this section including exempting a plan from the requirements of this section where he finds that (1) other bonding arrangements or (2) the overall financial condition of the plan would be adequate to protect the interests of the beneficiaries and participants. When, in the opinion of the Secretary, the administrator of a plan offers adequate evidence of the financial responsibility of the plan, or that other bonding arrangements would provide adequate protection of the beneficiaries and participants, he may exempt such plan from the requirements of this section.

A. Conference Report

The Congressional Conference Report discusses the bonding requirements of ERISA.

B. Regulations

1. The temporary regulations generally incorporated by reference the bonding regulations issued under Section 13 of the Welfare and Pension Plans Disclosure Act (WPPDA). ERISA Regs. 2550.412-1. WPPDA Regulation Section 464 (29 C.F.R. 464).
2. Section 464.5 of the WPPDA regulations provides that the term "funds or other property" see [ERISA 412\(a\)] includes all property that is to be used by a plan as a source for paying benefits; however, it does not include, among other things, fixed assets used in the operation of a plan (e.g., a building used as office space by a plan).
3. Section 464.6 of the WPPDA regulations provides that in the case of multiemployer plans, employer contributions become plan funds when they are actually received by the plan.
4. Section 464.7 of the WPPDA regulations indicates the following regarding persons who handle funds or other property:
  - a. Generally, a person handles plan funds or other property, when he has a relationship to funds or property that can rise to risk of loss through fraud or dishonesty. DOL WPPDA Regulation 464.7(a)(1).
  - b. However, a person is not deemed to be handling where the risk of loss is negligible (e.g., where the person is handling checks, securities or title papers that he cannot negotiate). DOL WPPDA Regulation 464.7(a)(2).
  - c. The power to withdraw funds from a bank account generally constitutes handling, regardless of whether the power is authorized. DOL WPPDA Regulation 464.7(b)(2).
  - d. Having the authority to transfer ownership of plan assets to others constitutes handling. DOL WPPDA Regulation 464.7(b)(3).
  - e. Persons who disburse plan funds or sign plan checks are handling plan funds. DOL WPPDA Regulation 464.7(b)(4).
  - f. In the case of fully insured plans, there is generally no handling of plan funds or other assets, unless benefit payments, dividends, etc., are paid to the plan by the insurance company. DOL WPPDA Regulation 464.7(b)(7).

C. Interpretive Bulletins

1. A person who provides investment advice to a plan but does not handle plan funds or other property is not required to be bonded under Section 412. IB 75-5,

Question FR-8.

2. A plan can purchase a bond covering plan officials, but the bond must be solely for the protection of the plan. IB 75-5, Question FR-9.
3. Even though a person is not a plan fiduciary, he may be subject to the bonding requirements of Section 412 if he handles plan funds or other property. IB 75-8, Question D-2.

D. Advisory Opinions

1. The Labor Department cannot postpone the applicability of the bonding requirements to any plan. AO 75-120.
2. There is no provision in Section 412 exempting plans with a minimum number of participants from the bonding requirements. AO 75-117.
3. Section 412\(a\) requires coverage only against fraud or dishonesty; it does not require errors and omissions coverage. AO 75-124.
4. A plan official is not required to be bonded unless he handles funds or other property. Handling occurs whenever the duties or activities of a plan official are such that there is a risk that such funds or other property could be lost in the event of fraud or dishonesty on the part of such person, acting either alone or in collusion with others. The authorization of disbursements may constitute handling, depending on the facts in a particular case. The factors that are considered include the closeness and continuity of supervision; who is, in fact, charged with or actually exercises final responsibility for determining whether specific disbursements or benefit claims are bona fide, regular and made in accordance with the applicable trust instrument or other documents; and who has the final responsibility for determining the propriety of any specific expenditure. AO 77-84.
5. An impartial chairman of a joint board of trustees who is only given full trustee voting authority to resolve disputes between trustees is handling plan funds or other property. AO 75-119.
6. Plan assets deposited in a savings account are not required to be bonded under Section 412. AO 77-11 and AO 79-10.
7. A person who (a) receives insurance policies from the plan trustees or participants for transmissions to the insurance company and (b) handles premium checks made out to the insurance carrier or receives checks made out to the plan trustees from the insurance company (but has no authority to negotiate these checks) is not handling plan funds or other property. AO 76-47.
8. The sale of a group insurance policy to an employer to fund a plan does not alone make the insurance company a party in interest to the plan. Therefore, the insurance company is not prohibited under Section 12(c) from selling a bond to the plan. AO 76-36.
9. The administrator of a plan cannot sell a bond to the plan under Section 412\(c\). The exemptions provided in Sections 408 and 414(c) apply only to prohibited transactions, not to the bonding restrictions. AO 76-92.

E. Court Decisions

1. A fiduciary who is not bonded is legally disqualified from serving as a fiduciary. Lane v. Marshall, Civ. A. No. 79-0868 (N.D.Cal., April 28, 1979).
2. Posting of government obligations in lieu of corporate surety bond does not fulfill ERISA Section 412 bonding requirement. Musso v. Baker, 834 F.2d 78, 9 EBC 1145 (3d Cir. 1987), cert. denied, 101 L.Ed.2d 884, 1988 U.S. LEXIS 2840, 108 S.Ct. 2846, 56 U.S.L.W. 3864, 9 EBC 2304 (U.S. 1988) (where fund trustees deposited fund-owned federal government obligations).

Appendix E — Employee Benefit Law

ESOP Requirements

Originally issued September 2, 1977 (42 FR 44393)

As revised through January 9, 1979 (44 FR 1978)

a. In general -

1. Type of plan. To be an "ESOP" (employee stock ownership plan), a plan described in section 4975\(e\)\(7\)\(A\) must meet the requirements of this section. See section 4975\(e\)\(7\)\(B\).
2. Designation as ESOP. To be an ESOP, a plan must be formally designated as such in the plan document.
3. Continuing loan provisions under plan -
  - i. Creation of protections and rights. The terms of an ESOP must formally provide participants with certain protections and rights with respect to plan assets acquired with the proceeds of an exempt loan. These protections and rights are those referred to in the third sentence of 54.4975-7(b)(4), relating to put, call, or other options and to buy-sell or similar arrangements, and in 54.4975-7(b)(10), (11), and (12), relating to put options.
  - ii. "Nonterminable" protections and rights. The terms of an ESOP must also formally provide that these protections and rights are nonterminable. Thus, if a plan holds or has distributed securities acquired with the proceeds of an exempt loan and either the loan is repaid or the plan ceases to be an ESOP, these protections and rights must continue to exist under the terms of the plan. However, the protections and rights will not fail to be nonterminable merely because they are not exercisable under 54.4975-7(b)(11) and (12)(ii). For example, if, after a plan ceases to be an ESOP, securities acquired with the proceeds of an exempt loan cease to be publicly traded, the 15-month period prescribed by 54.4975-7(b)(11) includes the time when the securities are publicly traded.
  - iii. No incorporation by reference of protections and rights. The formal requirements of paragraph (a)(3)(i) and (ii) of this section must be set forth in the plan. Mere reference to the third sentence of 54.4975-7(b)(4) and to the provisions of 54.4975-7(b)(10), (11), and (12) is not sufficient.
  - iv. Certain remedial amendments. Notwithstanding the limits under paragraph (a)(4) and (10) of this section on the retroactive effect of plan amendments, a remedial plan amendment adopted before December 31, 1979, to meet the requirements of paragraph (a)(3)(i) and (ii) of this section is retroactively effective as of the later of the date on which the plan was designated as an ESOP or November 1, 1977.
4. Retroactive amendment. A plan meets the requirements of this section as of the date that it is designated as an ESOP if it is amended retroactively to meet, and in fact does meet, such requirements at any of the following times:
  - i. 12 months after the date on which the plan is designated as an ESOP;
  - ii. 90 days after a determination letter is issued with respect to the qualification of the plan as an ESOP under this section, but only if the determination is requested by the time in paragraph (a)(4)(i) of this section; or
  - iii. A later date approved by the district director.
5. Addition to other plan. An ESOP may form a portion of a plan the balance of which includes a qualified pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan which is not an ESOP. A reference to an ESOP includes an ESOP that forms a portion of another plan.
6. Conversion of existing plan to an ESOP. If an existing pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan is converted into an ESOP, the requirements of section 404 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) (88 Stat. 877), relating to fiduciary duties, and section 401(a) of the Code, relating to requirements for plans established for the exclusive benefit of employees, apply to such conversion. A conversion may constitute a termination of an existing plan. For definition of a termination, see the regulations under section 411(d)(3) of the Code and section 4041(f) of ERISA.
7. Certain arrangements barred -
  - i. Buy-sell agreements. An arrangement involving an ESOP that creates a put option must not provide for the issuance of put options other than as provided under 54.4975-7 (b)(10), (11), and (12). Also, an ESOP must not otherwise obligate itself to acquire securities from a particular security holder at an indefinite time determined upon the happening of an event such as the death of the holder.
  - ii. Integrated plans. A plan designated as an ESOP after November 1, 1977, must not be integrated directly or indirectly with contributions or benefits under Title II of the Social Security Act or any other State or Federal law. ESOPs established and integrated before such date may remain integrated. However, such plans must not be amended to increase the integration level or the integration percentage. Such plans may in operation continue to increase the level of integration if under the plan such increase is limited by reference to a criterion existing apart from the plan.

8. Effect of certain ESOP Provisions on section 401(a) status -

- i. Exempt loan requirements. An ESOP will not fail to meet the requirements of section 401(a)(2) merely because it gives plan assets as collateral for an exempt loan under 54.4975-7(b)(5) or uses plan assets under 54.4975-7(b)(6) to repay an exempt loan in the event of default.
- ii. Individual annual contribution limitation. An ESOP will not fail to meet the requirements of section 401(a)(16) merely because annual additions under section 415(c) are calculated with respect to employer contributions used to repay an exempt loan rather than with respect to securities allocated to participants.
- iii. Income pass-through. An ESOP will not fail to meet the requirements of section 401(a) merely because it provides for the current payment of income under paragraph (f)(3) of this section.

9. Transitional rules for ESOPs established before November 1, 1977. A plan established before November 1, 1977, that otherwise satisfies the provisions of this section constitutes an ESOP if it is amended by December 31, 1977, to comply from November 1, 1977, with this section even though before November 1, 1977, the plan did not satisfy paragraphs (c) and (d)(2), (4), and (5) of this section.

10. Additional transitional rules. Notwithstanding paragraph (a)(9) of this section, a plan established before November 1, 1977, that otherwise satisfies the provisions of this section constitutes an ESOP if by December 31, 1977, it is amended to comply from November 1, 1977, with this section even though before such date the plan did not satisfy the following provisions of this section:

- i. Paragraph (a)(3) and (8)(iii);
- ii. The last sentence of paragraph (d)(3), and
- iii. Paragraph (f)(3). [Amended by T. D. 7571 on November 16, 1978, 43 FR 53718.]

b. Plan designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities. A plan constitutes an ESOP only if the plan specifically states that it is designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities. Thus, a stock bonus plan or a money purchase pension plan constituting an ESOP may invest part of its assets in other than qualifying employer securities. Such plan will be treated the same as other stock bonus plans or money purchase pension plans qualified under section 401(a) with respect to those investments.

c. Suspense Account. All assets acquired by an ESOP with the proceeds of an exempt loan under section 4975\(d\)\(3\) must be added to and maintained in a suspense account. They are to be withdrawn from the suspense account by applying 54.4975-7(b)(8) and (15) as if all securities in the suspense account were encumbered. Such assets acquired before November 1, 1977, must be withdrawn by applying 54.4975-7(b)(8) or the provision of the loan that controls release from encumbrance. Assets in such suspense accounts are assets of the ESOP. Thus, for example, such assets are subject to section 401(a)(2).

d. Allocations to accounts of participants -

1. In general. Except as provided in this section, amounts contributed to an ESOP must be allocated as provided under 1.401-1(b)(ii) and (iii) of this chapter, and securities acquired by an ESOP must be accounted for as provided under 1.402(a)-1(b)(2)(ii) of this chapter.
2. Assets withdrawn from suspense account. As of the end of each plan year, the ESOP must consistently allocate to the participants' accounts non-monetary units representing participants' interests in assets withdrawn from the suspense account.
3. Income. Income with respect to securities acquired with the proceeds of an exempt loan must be allocated as income of the plan except to the extent that the ESOP provides for the use of income from such securities to repay the loan. Certain income may be distributed currently under paragraph (f)(3) of this section.
4. Forfeitures. If a portion of a participant's account is forfeited, qualifying employer securities allocated under paragraph (d)(2) of this section must be forfeited only after other assets. If interests in more than one class of qualifying employer securities have been allocated to the participant's account, the participant must be treated as forfeiting the same proportion of each such class.
5. Valuation. For purposes of 54.4975-7(b)(9) and (12) and this section, valuations must be made in good faith and based on all relevant factors for determining the fair market value of securities. In the case of a transaction between a plan and a disqualified person, value must be determined as of the date of the transaction. For all other purposes under this subparagraph (5), value must be determined as of the most recent valuation date under the plan. An independent appraisal will not in itself be a good faith determination of value in the case of a transaction between a plan and a disqualified person. However, in other cases, a determination of fair market value based on at least an annual appraisal independently arrived at by a person who customarily makes such appraisals and who is independent of any party to a transaction under 54.4975-7(b)(9) and (12) will be deemed to be a good faith determination of value. [Amended by T.D. 7571 on November 16, 1978, 43 FR 53718.]

e. Multiple plans -

1. General rule. An ESOP may not be considered together with another plan for purposes of applying section 401(a)(4) and (5) or section 410(b) unless-
  - i. The ESOP and such other plan exist on November 1, 1977; or
  - ii. Paragraph (e)(2) of this section is satisfied.
2. Special rule for combined ESOPs. Two or more ESOPs, one or more of which does not exist on November 1, 1977, may be considered together for purposes of applying section 401(a)(4) and (5) or section 410(b) only if the proportion of qualifying employer securities to total plan assets is substantially the same for each ESOP and-
  - i. The qualifying employer securities held by all ESOPs are all of the same class; or

ii. The ratios of each class held to all such securities held is substantially the same for each plan.

3. Amended coverage, contribution, or benefit structure. For purposes of paragraph (e)(1)(i) of this section, if the coverage, contribution, or benefit structure of a plan that exists on November 1, 1977, is amended after that date, as of the effective date of the amendment, the plan is no longer considered to be a plan that exists on November 1, 1977. [Amended by T.D. 7571 on November 16, 1978, 43 FR 53718.]

f. Distribution -

1. In general. Except as provided in paragraph (f)(2) and (3) of this section, with respect to distributions, a portion of an ESOP consisting of a stock bonus plan or a money purchase pension plan is not to be distinguished from other such plans under section 401(a). Thus, for example, benefits distributable from the portion of an ESOP consisting of a stock bonus plan are distributable only in stock of the employer. Also, benefits distributable from the money-purchase portion of the ESOP may be, but are not required to be, distributable in qualifying employer securities.
2. Exempt loan proceeds. If securities acquired with the proceeds of an exempt loan available for distribution consist of more than one class, a distributee must receive substantially the same proportion of each such class. However, as indicated in paragraph (f)(1) of this section, benefits distributable from the portion of an ESOP consisting of a stock bonus plan are distributable only in stock of the employer.
3. Income. Income paid with respect to qualifying employer securities acquired by an ESOP in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1974, may be distributed at any time after receipt by the plan to participants on whose behalf such securities have been allocated. However, under an ESOP that is a stock bonus plan, income held by the plan for a 2-year period or longer must be distributed under the general rules described in paragraph (f)(1) of this section. (See the last sentence of section 803(h), Tax Reform Act of 1976.) [Reg 54.4975-11 added by T. D. 7506 on August 30, 1977; amended by T. D. 7571 on November 16, 1978, 43 FR 53718.]

Qualifying Employer Security Defined

Originally Issued September 2, 1977 (42 FR 44394)

- a. In general. For purposes of section 4975\(e\)\(8\) and this section, the term "qualifying employer security" means an employer security which is -
  1. Stock or otherwise an equity security, or
  2. A bond, debenture, note, or certificate or other evidence of indebtedness which is described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 503(e).
- b. Special rule. In determining whether a bond, debenture, note, or certificate or other evidence of indebtedness is described in paragraphs (1), (2), and (3) of section 503(e), any organization described in section 401(a) shall be treated as an organization subject to the provisions of section 503. #### "Plan Assets" Defined

Subsection (e) amended for a technical correction December 31, 1986 (51 FR 47226)

- a. In General.
  1. This section describes what constitute assets of a plan with respect to a plan's investment in another entity for purposes of Subtitle A, and Parts 1 and 4 of Subtitle 3, of Title I of the Act and section 4975 of the Internal Revenue Code. Paragraph (a)(2) contains a general rule relating to plan investments. Paragraphs (b) through (f) define certain terms that are used in the application of the general rule. Paragraph (g) describes how the rules in this section are to be applied when a plan owns property jointly with others or where it acquires an equity interest whose value relates solely to identified assets of an issuer. Paragraph (h) contains special rules relating to particular kinds of plan investments. Paragraph (i) describes the assets that a plan acquires when it purchases certain guaranteed mortgage certificates. Paragraph (j) contains examples illustrating the operation of this section. The effective date of this section is set forth in paragraph (k).
  2. Generally, when a plan invests in another entity, the plan's assets include its investment, but do not, solely by reason of such investment, include any of the underlying assets of the entity. However, in the case of a plan's investment in an equity interest of an entity that is neither a publicly-offered security nor a security issued by an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 its assets include both the equity interest and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity, unless it is established that -
    - i. the entity is an operating company, or
    - ii. equity participation in the entity by benefit plan investors is not significant.

Therefore, any person who exercises authority or control respecting the management or disposition of such underlying assets, and any person who provides investment advice with respect to such assets for a fee (direct or indirect), is a fiduciary of the investing plan.

b. "Equity Interests" and "Publicly-Offered Securities".

1. The term "equity interest" means any interest in an entity other than an instrument that is treated as indebtedness under applicable local law and which has no substantial equity features. A profits interest in a partnership, an undivided ownership interest in property and a beneficial interest in a trust are equity interests.

2. A "publicly-offered security" is a security that is freely transferable, part of a class of securities that is widely held and either
  - i. Part of a class of securities registered under section 12(b) or 12(g) of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or
  - ii. Sold to the plan as part of an offering of securities to the public pursuant to an effective registration statement under the Securities Act of 1933 and the class of securities of which such security is a part is registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 within 120 days (or such later time as may be allowed by the Securities and Exchange Commission) after the end of the fiscal year of the issuer during which the offering of such securities to the public occurred.
3. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2), a class of securities is "widely-held" only if it is a class of securities that is owned by 100 or more investors independent of the issuer and of one another. A class of securities will not fail to be widely-held solely because subsequent to the initial offering the number of independent investors falls below 100 as a result of events beyond the control of the issuer.
4. For purposes of paragraph (b)(2), whether a security is "freely transferable" is a factual question to be determined on the basis of all relevant facts and circumstances. If a security is part of an offering in which the minimum investment is $10,000 or less, however, the following factors ordinarily will not, alone or in combination, affect a finding that such securities are freely transferable -
  - i. Any requirement that not less than a minimum number of shares or units of such security be transferred or assigned by any investor, provided that such requirement does not prevent transfer of all of the then remaining shares or units held by an investor;
  - ii. Any prohibition against transfer or assignment of such security or rights in respect thereof to an ineligible or unsuitable investor;
  - iii. Any restriction on, or prohibition against, any transfer or assignment which would either result in a termination or reclassification of the entity for federal or state tax purposes or which would violate any state or federal statute, regulation, court order, judicial decree, or rule of law;
  - iv. Any requirement that reasonable transfer or administrative fees be paid in connection with a transfer or assignment;
  - v. Any requirement that advance notice of a transfer or assignment be given to the entity and any requirement regarding execution of documentation evidencing such transfer or assignment (including documentation setting forth representations from either or both of the transferor or transferee as to compliance with any restriction or requirement described in this paragraph (b)(4) or requiring compliance with the entity's governing instruments);
  - vi. Any restriction on substitution of an assignee as a limited partner of a partnership, including a general partner consent requirement, provided that the economic benefits of ownership of the assignor may be transferred or assigned without regard to such restriction or consent (other than compliance with any other restriction described in this paragraph (b)(4));
  - vii. Any administrative procedure which establishes an effective date, or an event, such as the completion of the offering, prior to which a transfer or assignment will not be effective; and
  - viii. Any limitation or restriction on transfer or assignment which is not created or imposed by the issuer or any person acting for or on behalf of such issuer.

c. "Operating Company".

1. An "operating company" is not an entity that is primarily engaged, directly or through a majority owned subsidiary or subsidiaries, in the production or sale of a product or service other than the investment of capital. The term "operating company" includes an entity which is not described in the preceding sentence, but which is a "venture capital operating company" described in paragraph (d) or a "real estate operating company" described in paragraph (e).

[Editorial Note: There is no subsection (c)(2).]

d. "Venture Capital Operating Company".

1. An entity is a "venture capital operating company" for the period beginning on an initial valuation date described in paragraph (d)(5)(i) and ending on the last day of the first "annual valuation period" described in paragraph (d)(5)(ii) (in the case of an entity that is not a venture capital operating company immediately before the determination) or for the 12-month period following the expiration of an "annual valuation period" described in paragraph (d)(5)(ii) (in the case of an entity that is a venture capital operating company immediately before the determination) if -
  - i. On such initial valuation date, or at any time within such annual valuation period, at least 50 percent of its assets (other than short-term investments pending long-term commitment or distribution to investors), valued at cost, are invested in venture capital investments described in paragraph (d)(3)(i) or derivative investments described in paragraph (d)(4); and
  - ii. During such 12-month period (or during the period beginning on the initial valuation date and ending on the last day of the first annual valuation period), the entity, in the ordinary course of its business, actually exercises management rights of the kind described in paragraph (d)(3)(ii) with respect to one or more of the operating companies in which it invests.
2. (i) A venture capital operating company described in paragraph (d)(1) shall continue to be treated as a venture capital operating company during the "distribution period" described in paragraph (d)(2)(ii). An entity shall not be treated as a venture capital operating company at any time after the end of the distribution period.
  - ii. The "distribution period" referred to in paragraph (d)(2)(i) begins on a date established by a venture capital operating company that occurs after the first date on which the venture capital operating company has distributed to investors the proceeds of at least 50 percent of the highest amount of its investments (other than short-term investments made pending long-term commitment or distribution to investors) outstanding at any time from the date it commenced business (determined on the basis of the cost of such investments) and ends on the earlier of -
    - A. The date on which the company makes a "new portfolio investment", or

A. The date on which the company makes a "new portfolio investment", or

B. The expiration of 10 years from the beginning of the distribution period.

iii. For purposes of paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(A), a "new portfolio investment" is an investment other than -

A. An investment in an entity in which the venture capital operating company had an outstanding venture capital investment at the beginning of the distribution period which has continued to be outstanding at all times during the distribution period, or

B. A short-term investment pending long-term commitment or distribution to investors.

3. (i) For purposes of this paragraph (d) a "venture capital investment" is an investment in a operating company (other than a venture capital operating company) as to which the investor has or obtains management rights.

ii. The term "management rights" means contractual rights directly between the investor and an operating company to substantially participate in, or substantially influence the conduct of, the management of the operating company.

4. (l) An investment is a "derivative investment" for purposes of this paragraph (d) if it is -

A. A venture capital investment as to which the investor's management rights have ceased in connection with a public offering of securities of the operating company to which the investment relates, or

B. An investment that is acquired by a venture capital operating company in the ordinary course of its business in exchange for an existing venture capital investment in connection with:

1. A public offering of securities of the operating company to which the existing venture capital investment relates, or

2. A merger or reorganization of the operating company to which the existing venture capital investment relates, provided that such merger or reorganization is made for independent business reasons unrelated to extinguishing management rights.

ii. An investment ceases to be a derivative investment on the later of:

A. 10 years from the date of the acquisition of the original venture capital investment to which the derivative investment relates, or

B. 30 months from the date on which the investment becomes a derivative investment.

5. For purposes of this paragraph (d) and paragraph (e) -

i. An "initial valuation date" is the later of -

A. Any date designated by the company within the 12-month period ending with the effective date of this section, or

B. The first date on which an entity makes an investment that is not a short-term investment of funds pending long-term commitment.

ii. An "annual valuation period" is a pre-established annual period, not exceeding 90 days in duration, which begins no later than the anniversary of an entity's initial valuation date. An annual valuation period, once established may not be changed except for good cause unrelated to a determination under this paragraph (d) or paragraph (e).

e. "Real Estate Operating Company". An entity is a "real estate operating company" for the period beginning on an initial valuation date described in paragraph (d)(5)(i) and ending on the last day of the first "annual valuation period" described in paragraph (d)(5)(ii) (in the case of an entity that is not a real estate operating company immediately before the determination) or for the 12-month period following the expiration of an annual valuation period described in paragraph (d)(5)(ii) (in the case of an entity that is a real estate operating company immediately before the determination) if:

1. On such initial valuation date, or on any date within such annual valuation period, at least 50 percent of its assets, valued at cost (other than short-term investments pending long-term commitment or distribution to investors), are invested in real estate which is managed or developed and with respect to which such entity has the right to substantially participate directly in the management or development activities; and

2. During such 12-month period (or during the period beginning on the initial valuation date and ending on the last day of the first annual valuation period) such entity in the ordinary course of its business is engaged directly in real estate management or development activities.

f. Participation by Benefit Plan Investors.

1. Equity participation in an entity by benefit plan investors is "significant" on any date if, immediately after the most recent acquisition of any equity interest in the entity, 25 percent or more of the value of any class of equity interests in the entity is held by benefit plan investors (as defined in paragraph (f)(2)). For purposes of determinations pursuant to this paragraph (f), the value of any equity interests held by a person (other than a benefit plan investor) who has discretionary authority or control with respect to the assets of the entity or any person who provides investment advice for a fee (direct or indirect) with respect to such assets, or any affiliate of such a person, shall be disregarded.

2. A "benefit plan investor" is any of the following -

i. Any employee benefit plan (as defined in section 3\(3\) of the Act), whether or not it is subject to the provisions of Title I of the Act, ii. Any plan described in section 4975\(e\)\(1\) of the Internal Rev. Code, iii. Any entity whose underlying assets include plan assets by reason of a plan's investment in the entity.

3. An "affiliate" of a person includes any person, directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the person. For purposes of this paragraph (f)(3), "control", with respect to a person other than an individual, means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of such person.

g. Joint Ownership. For purposes of this section, where a plan jointly owns property with others, or where the value of a plan's equity interest in an entity relates solely to identified property of the entity, such property shall be treated as the sole property of a separate entity.

h. Specific Rules Relating to Plan Investment. Notwithstanding any other provision of this section-

1. Except where the entity is an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, when a plan acquires or holds an interest in any of the following entities its assets include its investment and an undivided interest in each of the underlying assets of the entity:

- i. A group trust which is exempt from taxation under section 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code pursuant to the principles of Rev. Rul. 81-100, 1981-1 C.B. 326,
- ii. A common or collective trust fund of a bank,
- iii. A separate account of an insurance company, other than a separate account that is maintained solely in connection with fixed contractual obligations of the insurance company under which the amounts payable, or credited, to the plan and to any participant or beneficiary of the plan (including an annuitant) are not affected in any manner by the investment performance of the separate account.

2. When a plan acquires or holds an interest in any entity (other than an insurance company licensed to do business in a State) which is established or maintained for the purpose of offering or providing any benefit described in section 3\(1\) or section 3\(2\) of the Act to participants or beneficiaries of the investing plan, its assets will include its investment and an undivided interest in the underlying assets of that entity.

3. When a plan or a related group of plans owns all of the outstanding equity interests (other than director's qualifying shares) in an entity, its assets include those equity interests and all of the underlying assets of the entity. This paragraph (h)(3) does not apply, however, where all of the outstanding equity interests in an entity are qualifying employer securities described in section 407\(d\)\(5\) of the Act, owned by one or more eligible individual account plan(s) (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(3\) of the Act) maintained by the same employer, provided that substantially all of the participants in the plan(s) are, or have been, employed by the issuer of such securities or by members of a group of affiliated corporations (as determined under section 407\(d\)\(7\) of the Act) of which the issuer is a member.

4. For purposes of paragraph (h)(3), a "related group" of employee benefit plans consists of every group of two or more employee benefit plans

- i. Each of which receives 10 percent or more of its aggregate contributions from the same employer or from members of the same controlled group of corporations (as determined under section 1563(a) of the Internal Revenue Code, without regard to section 1563(a)(4) thereof); or
- ii. Each of which is either maintained by, or maintained pursuant to a collective bargaining agreement negotiated by, the same employee organization or affiliated employee organizations. For purposes of this paragraph, an "affiliate" of an employee organization means any person controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such organization, and includes any organization chartered by the same parent body, or governed by the same constitution and bylaws, or having the relation of parent and subordinate.

i. Governmental Mortgage Pools.

1. Where a plan acquires a guaranteed governmental mortgage pool certificate, as defined in paragraph (i)(2), the plan's assets include the certificate and all of its rights with respect to such certificate under applicable law, but do not, solely by reason of the plan's holding of such certificate, include any of the mortgages underlying such certificate.

2. A "guaranteed governmental mortgage pool certificate" is a certificate backed by, or evidencing an interest in, specified mortgages or participation interests therein and with respect to which interest and principal payable pursuant to the certificate is guaranteed by the United States or an agency or instrumentality thereof. The term "guaranteed governmental mortgage pool certificate" includes a mortgage pool certificate with respect to which interest and principal payable pursuant to the certificate is guaranteed by:

- i. The Government National Mortgage Association;
- ii. The Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation; or
- iii. The Federal National Mortgage Association.

j. Examples. [NOTE: Subsection (j) of the regulation is omitted.]

k. Effective Date and Transitional Rules.

1. In general, this section is effective for purposes of identifying the assets of a plan or after March 13, 1987. Except as a defense, this section shall not apply to investments in an entity in existence on March 13, 1987, if no plan subject to Title I of the Act or plan described in section 4975\(e\)\(1\) of the Code (other than a plan described in section 4975\(g\)\(2\) or 4975\(g\)\(3\)) acquires an interest in the entity from an issuer or underwriter at any time on or after March 13, 1987 except pursuant to a contract binding on the plan in effect on March 13, 1987 with an issuer or underwriter to acquire an interest in the entity.

2. Notwithstanding paragraph (k)(1), this section shall not, except as a defense, apply to a real estate entity described in section 11018(a) of Pub. L. 99-272.

Regulation 2520.103-5

29 C.F.R. 2520.103-5

Transmittal and certification of information to plan administrator for annual reporting purposes

(Collective Investment Fund Reporting to Plan Administrators)

Originally issued September 10, 1978 (43 FR 10140)

- a. General. In accordance with section 103(a)(2) of the Act, an insurance carrier or other organization which provides benefits under the plan or holds plan assets, a bank or similar institution which holds plan assets, or a plan sponsor, shall transmit and certify such information as needed by the administrator to file the annual report under section 104(a)(1)(A) of the Act and 2520.104a-5 or 2520.104a-6:
  1. Within 9 months after the close of the plan year which begins in 1975 or September 30, 1976, whichever is later, and
  2. Within 120 days after the close of any plan year which begins after December 31, 1975.
- b. Application. This requirement applies with respect to -
  1. An insurance carrier or other organization which:
    - i. Provides from its general asset accounting funds for the payment of benefits under a plan, or
    - ii. Holds assets of a plan in a separate account;
  2. A bank, trust company, or similar institution which holds assets of a plan in a common or collective trust, separate trust, or custodial account; and
  3. A plan sponsor as defined in section 3\(16\)\(B\) of the Act.
- c. Contents. The information required to be provided to the administrator shall include -
  1. In the case of an insurance carrier or other organization which -
    - i. Provides funds from its general asset account for the payment of benefits under a plan, upon request of the plan administrator, such information as is contained within the ordinary business records of the insurance carrier or other organization and is needed by the plan administrator to comply with the requirements of section 104(a)(1)(A) of the Act and 2520.104a-5 or 2520.104a-6;
    - ii. Holds assets of a plan in a pooled separate account which is exempted from certain reporting requirements under 2520.103-4, a copy of the annual statement of assets and liabilities of the separate account for the fiscal year of such account that ends with or within the plan year for which the annual report is made, and a statement of the value of the plan's units of participation in the separate account;
    - iii. Holds assets of a plan in a separate account which is not exempted from certain reporting requirements under 2520.103-4, a listing of all transactions of the separate account and, upon request of the plan administrator, such information as is contained within the ordinary business records of the insurance carrier and is needed by the plan administrator to comply with the requirements of section 104(a)(1)(A) of the Act and 2520.104a-5 or 2520.104a-6.
  2. In the case of a bank, trust company, or similar institution holding assets of a plan -
    - i. In a common or collective trust which is exempted from certain reporting requirements under 2520.103-3, a copy of the annual statement of assets and liabilities of the common or collective trust for the fiscal year of such trust that ends with or within the plan year for which the annual report is made, and a statement of the value of the plan's units of participation in the common or collective trust.
    - ii. In a trust which is not exempted from certain reporting requirements under 2520.103-3, a listing of all transactions of the separate trust and, upon request of the plan administrator, such information as is contained within the ordinary business records of the bank, trust company, or similar institution and is needed by the plan administrator to comply with the requirements of section 104(a)(1)(A) of the Act and 2520.104a-5.
    - iii. In a custodial account, upon request of the plan administrator, such information as is contained within the ordinary business records of the bank, trust company, or similar institution and is needed by the plan administrator to comply with the requirements of section 104(a)(1)(A) of the Act and 2520.104a-5 or 2520.104a-6.
  3. In the case of a plan sponsor, a listing of all transactions directly or indirectly involving plan assets engaged in by the plan sponsor and such information as is needed by the plan administrator to comply with the requirements of section 104(a)(1)(A) of the Act and 2520.104a-5 or 2520.104a-6.
- d. Certification.
  1. An insurance carrier or other organization a bank, trust company, or similar institution, or plan sponsor, as described in paragraph (b) of this section, shall certify to the accuracy and completeness of the information described in paragraph (c) of this section by a written declaration which is signed by a person authorized to represent the insurance carrier, bank, or plan sponsor. Such certification will serve as a written assurance of the truth of the facts stated therein.
  2. Example of Certification. The XYZ Bank (Insurance Carrier) hereby certifies that the foregoing statement furnished pursuant to 20 C.F.R. 2520.103-5(c) is complete and accurate.

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Final regulation.

Summary: This document contains a final regulation relating to the investment duties of a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act). The regulation is relevant to the investment of assets of employee benefit plans for which fiduciaries have investment duties, and, therefore, it affects participants, beneficiaries and fiduciaries of all such plans.

Effective Date: July 23, 1979.

Final Regulation

- a. In General. Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) provides, in part, that a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to a plan with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims.
- b. Investment Duties.
  1. With regard to an investment or investment course of action taken by a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan pursuant to his investment duties, the requirements of Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act set forth in subsection (a) of this section are satisfied if the fiduciary (A) has given appropriate consideration to those facts and circumstances that, given the scope of such fiduciary's investment duties, the fiduciary knows or should know are relevant to the particular investment or investment course of action involved, including the role the investment or investment course of action plays in that portion of the plan's investment portfolio with respect to which the fiduciary has investment duties; and (B) has acted accordingly.
  2. For purpose of paragraph (1) of this subsection, "appropriate consideration" shall include, but is not necessarily limited to:
    - A. A determination by the fiduciary that the particular investment course of action is reasonably designed, as part of the portfolio (or, where applicable, that portion of the plan portfolio with respect to which the fiduciary has investment duties), to further the purposes of the plan, taking into consideration the risk of loss and the opportunity for gain (or other return) associated with the investment or investment course of action, and
    - B. Consideration of the following factors as they relate to such portion of the portfolio:
      - i. The composition of the portfolio with regard to diversification;
      - ii. The liquidity and current rates of return of the portfolio relative to the anticipated cash flow requirements of the plan, and
      - iii. The projected return of the portfolio relative to the funding objectives of the plan.
  3. An investment manager appointed, pursuant to the provisions of Section 402\(c\)\(3\) of the Act, to manage all or part of the assets of a plan, may, for purposes of compliance with the provisions of paragraphs (1) and (2) of this subsection, rely on, and act upon the basis of, information pertaining to the plan provided by or at the direction of the appointing fiduciary, if -
    - A. Such information is provided for the stated purpose of assisting the manager in the performance of his investment duties, and
    - B. The manager does not know and has no reason to know that the information is incorrect.

c. Definitions.

For purposes of this section:

1. The term "investment duties" means any duties imposed upon, or assumed or undertaken by, a person in connection with the investment of plan assets which make or will make such person a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan or which are performed by such person as a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan as defined in Section 3\(21\)\(A\)\(i\) or \(ii\) of the Act.
2. The term "investment course of action" means any series or program of investments or actions related to a fiduciary's performance of his investment duties.
3. The term "plan" means an employee benefit plan to which Title I of the Act applies.

Supplementary information: On April 25, 1978, notice was published in the Federal Register (43 FR 17480)<sup>1</sup> that the Department had under consideration a proposal to adopt a regulation, 29 C.F.R. 2550.404a-1, under section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act, relating to the investment duties of a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan. Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act provides, in part, that a fiduciary shall discharge his duties with respect to an employee benefit plan with the care, skill, prudence, and diligence under the circumstances then prevailing that a prudent man acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would use in the conduct of an enterprise of a like character and with like aims (the "Prudence" rule).<sup>2</sup>

Public comments were received, in response to the proposal, that generally supported the tentative views of the Department reflected therein, although many suggestions for specific revisions were offered. A few comments opposed the adoption of the proposed or of any, regulation concerning these matters. Among the reasons given in opposition to the adoption of the proposed regulation were: (1) that the courts, rather than the Department, should determine how the "prudence" rule is to be interpreted, (2) that the Department's views regarding the requirements of the "Prudence" rule, as reflected in the proposed regulation, are incorrect, (3) that it is impractical to attempt to define "prudence" by regulation; and (4) that the proposal did not accomplish its stated objectives. The Department has considered the comments opposing adoption of the regulation, but has not been persuaded that the interpretation of the requirements of the "prudence" rule set forth below is incorrect. It believes, moreover, that adoption of a regulation concerning the investment duties of fiduciaries under the "prudence" rule is appropriate because such a regulation would provide guidance for many plan fiduciaries in an important area of their responsibilities under the Act.

Counsel for one group of interested persons, while supporting the proposed regulation in principle, asked that they be given an opportunity to express their views at a public hearing on the proposed regulation. They also suggested that the regulation should, in any event, be republished to give interested persons additional opportunity for comment. The Department has considered these requests, but has determined that neither a public hearing nor republication of a proposed regulation is necessary or appropriate.

Accordingly, after consideration of all the written comments received, the Department has determined to adopt the proposed regulation as modified and set forth below.

Discussion of the regulation

The legislative history of the Act indicates that the common law of trusts, which forms the basis for and is federalized and codified in part 4 of Title I of the Act, should, nevertheless, not be mechanically applied to employee benefit plans.<sup>3</sup> The "prudence" rule in the Act sets forth a standard built upon, but that should and does depart from, traditional trust law in certain respects.

The Department is of the opinion that (1) generally, the relative riskiness of a specific investment or investment course of action does not render such investment or investment course of action either per se prudent or per se imprudent, and (2) the prudence of an investment decision should not be judged without regard to the role that the proposed investment or investment course of action plays with the overall plan portfolio. Thus, although securities issued by a small or new company may be a riskier investment than securities issued by a "blue chip" company, the investment in the former company may be entirely proper under the Act's prudence" rule.

Accordingly, paragraph (b)(1) of the regulation, as adopted, provides generally that, with respect to an investment or investment course of action taken pursuant to a fiduciary's investment duties, the requirements of the "prudence" rule have been satisfied if the fiduciary has acted in a manner consistent with appropriate consideration of the facts and circumstances that the fiduciary knows or should know are relevant, including the role that the investment or investment course of action plays in that portion of the plan's investment portfolio with respect to which the fiduciary has investment duties. Paragraph (b), as adopted, has been modified in response to certain comments received on the regulation as originally proposed.

As a general observation, the comments received by the Department indicated that many commentators were uncertain of the scope of the proposed regulation. In particular, some commentators appear to have viewed the various factors and conditions set forth in the proposal as a statement of requirements that must necessarily be met in order to satisfy the requirements of the "Prudence" rule. In this regard, it should be noted that the regulation reflects the views of the Department as to a manner of satisfying the requirements of the "prudence" rule, and does not purport to impose any additional requirements or constraints upon plan fiduciaries. It should also be noted that the Department does not view compliance with the provisions of the regulation as necessarily constituting the exclusive method for satisfying the requirements of the "prudence" rule. Rather, the regulation is in the nature of a "safe harbor" provision; it is the opinion of the Department that fiduciaries who comply with the provisions of the regulation will have satisfied the requirements of the "prudence" rule, but no opinion is expressed in the regulation as to the status of activities undertaken or performed that do not so comply.

With regard to more particular matters, a number of comments suggested that one condition of the proposal - that a fiduciary give appropriate consideration to "all" relevant facts and circumstance - could be read as establishing an impossible standard, especially for fiduciaries of small plans, because (1) no fiduciary has unlimited resources to develop all the information that one might deem to be relevant to a particular investment decision, and (2) no fiduciary can be expected to consider all the relevant facts and circumstances, whether or not of material significance.

Because section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act provides that it is the fiduciary's duties with respect to the plan which must be discharged in accordance with the "prudence" rule, it appears to the Department that the scope of those duties will determine, in part, the factors which should be considered by a plan fiduciary in a given case. The nature of those duties will, of course, depend on the facts and circumstances of the case, including the nature of the arrangement between the fiduciary and the plan. For that reason, the regulation, as adopted, does not distinguish among classes of fiduciaries with respect to what particular duties may be involved. The Department recognizes, however, that a fiduciary should be required neither to expend unreasonable effort in discharging his duties, nor to consider matters outside the scope of those duties. Accordingly, the regulation has been modified to provide that consideration be given to those facts and circumstances which take into account the scope of his investment duties, the fiduciary knows or should know are relevant to the particular investment decision involved. The scope of the fiduciary's inquiry in this respect, therefore, is limited to those facts and circumstances that a prudent person having similar duties and familiar with such matters would consider relevant.

Several commentators asserted that the regulation, in recognition of the Act's provisions permitting delegation of investment duties to, and allocation among, several fiduciaries, should permit a fiduciary who is responsible for the management of plan assets to rely on information supplied by appropriate other plan fiduciaries, and to act in accordance with policies and instructions supplied by those persons in making decisions on the investment of plan assets. Those comments, generally, addressed the situation where several investment managers are involved in managing the assets of a plan, each being responsible for a portion of the plan's investment portfolio.<sup>4</sup> Under those circumstances, it would not, in the view of the commentators, be appropriate to require a fiduciary who is responsible for only a portion of the plan's portfolio to take into consideration facts and circumstances relating to the balance of the portfolio in making an investment decision. The Department agrees, in part, with those comments. Accordingly, paragraph (b)(1) of the regulation as adopted also provides that such a fiduciary need give appropriate consideration to the role the proposed investment or investment course of action plays in that portion only, of the plan's investment portfolio, with respect to which the fiduciary has investment duties.

However, the Department cannot state that, under the foregoing circumstances, a fiduciary is entitled blindly to rely upon instructions or policies established by other plan fiduciaries. Similarly, the regulation does not provide, as requested by one commentator, that the assets of a pooled investment fund may be invested in accordance with its published investment objectives and policies without requiring that consideration be given to the particular needs of any individual plan that has an interest in the fund. It would appear that where authority to manage part (or all) of the assets of a plan has been delegated to one or more investment managers pursuant to section 402\(c\)\(3\) of the Act, the primary responsibility for determining that the delegation is appropriate rests with the named fiduciary or fiduciaries effecting the delegation. Nevertheless, the Department considers that each such manager's investment duties, under section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act, includes (among other things) a duty not to act in accordance with a delegation of plan investment duties to the extent that the manager either knows or should know that the delegation involves a breach of fiduciary responsibility.<sup>5</sup> Once the manager has considered factors otherwise necessary to assure himself that the delegation of investment authority and related specific instructions are appropriate, he may, in exercising such authority and carrying out such instructions, rely upon information provided to him in accordance with the provisions of new paragraph (b)(3) of the regulation. That paragraph provides that an investment manager responsible for the management of all or part of a plan's assets pursuant to an appointment described in section 402\(c\)\(3\) of the Act may, for purposes of complying with the provisions of the regulation, rely upon certain information supplied to him by or at the direction of the appointing fiduciary, provided that the manager neither knows or should know that the information is incorrect.

Paragraph (b)(1) of the proposed regulation also been revised in order to make clear that the fiduciary's acts do not satisfy the "prudence" rule solely because the fiduciary had previously given consideration to relevant facts and circumstances. Some comments questioned whether, under the regulation as originally proposed, a fiduciary might be deemed to be "immunized" once he had given such consideration, notwithstanding the nature of his subsequent acts. The regulation, as adopted, provides that it is the "investment" or "investment course of action" in question that will satisfy the requirements of the prudence rule if the criteria set forth in the regulation are met.

Paragraph (b)(2) of the regulation sets forth factors that are to be included, to the extent applicable, in an evaluation of an investment or investment course of action if a fiduciary wishes to rely on the provisions of the regulation. They are: (1) the composition of the portfolio with regard to diversification; (2) the liquidity and current return of the portfolio relative to the anticipated cash flow requirements of the plan; and (3) the projected return of the portfolio relative to the objectives of the plan. These factors are adopted substantially as proposed, except that the first factor has been revised, in response to questions raised by some of the comments, to make clear that the word "diversification" is to be given its customary meaning as a mechanism for reducing the risk of large losses; that factor, as originally proposed, referred to "diversification of risk." The second factor has also been modified in order to make clear that its principal subject matter is all anticipated cash requirements of the plan, and not solely those arising by reason of payment of benefits. A fourth factor set forth in the proposal which related to the "volatility" of the portfolio, has been eliminated as a factor specifically to be considered because, although paragraph (b)(2) as adopted sets forth factors which must be considered in all cases in order to comply with the provisions of the regulation<sup>6</sup>, the reference to volatility may be read, according to some comments, as suggesting that only certain portfolio management techniques are appropriate. Moreover, as discussed more fully below, the subject of risk and opportunity for gain - which subsumes consideration of "volatility" in some respects - is now addressed in subparagraph (A) of paragraph (b)(2). A former fifth factor, which read "the prevailing and projected economic conditions of the entities in which the plan has invested and proposes to invest," is also dealt with in that subparagraph.

Several commentators suggested that inclusion of that fifth factor in the regulation would be contrary to the intent of the proposal because it focuses attention on the individual investment, rather than on the aggregate plan portfolio. Others objected to its inclusion on the ground that it is antithetical to the theory of operation of certain "passive" investment media (such as "index" funds) that acquire portfolios designed to match the performance of various investment indices and that, accordingly, have little or no discretion in altering the composition of their portfolios.<sup>7</sup>

The regulation, however, is not intended to suggest either that any relevant or material attributes of a contemplated investment may properly be ignored or disregarded, or that a particular plan investment should be deemed to be prudent solely by reason of the propriety of the aggregate risk/return characteristics of the plan's portfolio. Rather, it is the Department's view that an investment reasonably designed - as a part of the portfolio - to further the purposes of the plan, and that is made upon appropriate consideration of the surrounding facts and circumstances, should not be deemed to be imprudent merely because the investment, standing alone, would have, for example, a relatively high degree of risk. The Department also believes that appropriate consideration of an investment to further the purposes of the plan must include consideration of the characteristics of the investment itself. Accordingly, paragraph (b)(2) of the regulation provides that, for purposes of paragraph (b)(1), "appropriate consideration" shall include a determination by the fiduciary that the particular investment or investment course of action is reasonably designed, as part of the portfolio for which the fiduciary is responsible, to further the purposes of the plan, taking into account the risk of loss and the opportunity for gain (or other return) associated with the investment or investment course of action.<sup>8</sup>

In the case of "passive" investment funds, referred to above, it would seem that, to the extent the fund manager is managing plan assets,<sup>9</sup> the investments made by the fund, as well as the plan's investment in the fund, must meet the requirements of the "prudence" rule. However, to the extent that an index fund, including the screen or filter process described above at note 7, is reasonably designed to fulfill the fund manager's fiduciary obligations with respect to a plan whose assets are managed therein, such manager, acting in accordance with the fund's objective and its filter or screen process, generally would be in compliance with the provisions of the "prudence" rule, as described in the regulation, with respect to that plan.

The terms "investment duties" and "investment course of action" are defined in paragraphs (c)(1) and (2) of the regulation. No comments were received regarding these definitions, and they have been adopted substantially in the form proposed. New paragraph (c)(3) has been added, defining the term "plan" to mean an employee benefit plan to which Title I of the Act applies.

Discussion of certain other comments

Counsel for one group of commentators characterized the factors set forth in paragraph (b)(2) as relating solely to the "investment merit" of a particular investment or investment course of action. Because, in the view of those commentators, the prudence of the acquisition or retention of a contract issued by an insurance company may involve factors besides "investment merit", they suggested that the regulation should contain a separate provision that would set forth two factors to be considered by a fiduciary, in evaluating the prudence of the acquisition or retention of such a contract: the risks assumed, and the services provided, by the insurance company. The Department is unable to concur with the commentators' view that the regulation as proposed dealt only with matters of "investment merit" as narrowly perceived in the comment. The Department agrees that such factors as the risk to be assumed and the services to be provided under a contract are pertinent to any investment decision involving such contract. The regulation as adopted specifically provides that, in order to come within the scope of the regulation, a fiduciary shall consider the facts and circumstances the fiduciary knows or should know are relevant to the investment decision, and that the factors set forth in paragraph (b)(2) are not intended to be exclusive. Accordingly, the Department believes that it is unnecessary to set forth additional factors with respect to insurance contracts or other specific types of investment.

Two commentators suggested that the Department clarify that the adoption of the regulation would not result in fiduciaries being required to invest in expensive systems or analyses to make investment decisions. Under the "prudence" rule, the standard to which a fiduciary is held in the proper discharge of his investment duties is defined, in part, by what a prudent person acting in a like capacity and familiar with such matters would do. Thus, for example, it would not seem necessary for a fiduciary of a plan with assets of $50,000 to employ, in all respects, the same investment management techniques as would a fiduciary of a plan with assets of $50,000,000.

Numerous comments were received with respect to the factors set forth in paragraph (b)(2). Several persons requested that the Department clarify or define terms such as "diversification of risk", "risk", "volatility" and "liquidity." For example, some persons asked what specific measurements of volatility, risk and liquidity should be utilized by fiduciaries in making investment decisions for a plan. The Department believes that, in view of the modifications (discussed above) made in the regulation as adopted, it is neither necessary nor appropriate for the regulation to contain such definitions. Several commentators asserted that certain specific types of investments such as, for example, investment in small or recently formed companies, or nonincome producing investments that are not securities (such as, for example, certain precious metals and objects of art) have not been viewed with favor, traditionally, as trust investments. Those comments urged that the regulation specify the extent to which such investments are permissible under the "prudence" rule. Other commentators made reference to the traditional principle that trust investments should be income producing, and suggested that the appropriate measure of investment "return" should be defined to mean "total return" - that is, an aggregate return computed without regard to whether a contributing factor thereto consists of income or capital items. Although the Department considers that defining "return" would be beyond the appropriate scope of this regulation, it believes that the "prudence" rule does not require that every plan investment produce current income under all circumstances. As indicated above and in the preamble to the proposed regulation, the Department believes that the universe of investments permissible under the "prudence" rule is not necessarily limited to those permitted at common law.

However, the Department does not consider it appropriate to include in the regulation any list of investments, classes of investment, or investment techniques that might be permissible under the "prudence" rule. No such list could be complete; moreover, the Department does not intend to create or suggest a "legal list" of investments for plan fiduciaries.

The preamble to the proposed regulation stated (as does this preamble) that the risk level of an investment does not alone make the investment per se prudent or per se imprudent. Comments were received which asserted that such proposition is inappropriate and would promote irresponsibility on the part of plan fiduciaries. Other commentators not only agreed with the proposition, but also suggested that it should be incorporated in the regulation. The Department believes that both of these concerns are addressed by the modifications, discussed above, made to paragraph (b)(2) of the regulation as adopted.

The Department has determined that this regulation is not a "significant regulation" as defined in the Department's guidelines (44 FR 5570, January 26, 1979) implementing Executive Order 12044.

Statutory Authority

The regulation set forth below is adopted pursuant to the authority contained in section 505 of the Act (Pub. L. 93-406, 88 Stat. 894 (29 USC 1135)). Although the regulation is an "interpretative rule" within the meaning of 5 USC 553(d), the effective date of the regulation is July 23, 1979, consistent with the statement of the Department, in connection with the regulation as proposed, that such regulation would be effective 30 days after its adoption.

Final Regulation

Accordingly, Part 2550 of Chapter XXV of Title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations is amended by inserting in the appropriate place to read 2550.404a-1.

Signed at Washington, D.C, this 20th day of June 1979.

1. See also 43 FR 27208 (June 23, 1978), in which notice was given of an extension of the original comment period.
2. The regulation pertains only to the investment duties of a fiduciary of an employee benefit plan. Section 404\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act, however, requires that a fiduciary discharge all of his duties in accordance with the "prudence" rule.
3. It should also be noted that although the proposed regulation made reference to an additional requirement of section 404\(a\)\(1\) - that the fiduciary discharge his duties solely in the interest of plan participants and beneficiaries - that reference has been deleted from the regulation as adopted. This was done to avoid suggesting that satisfaction of the "prudence" rule with respect to an investment or investment course of action necessarily implies satisfaction of that additional requirement.
4. See, e.g., H.R. Rep. No. 1280, 93d Cong., 2d Sess. 302 (1974).
5. See sections 403\(a\)\(2\) and 402\(c\)\(3\) of the Act.
6. Further, section 405\(a\) of the Act provides, in part, that a plan fiduciary shall be liable for a breach of fiduciary liability of another fiduciary with respect to the same plan if, among other things, he has knowledge of such a breach and does not make reasonable efforts to remedy it, or he has enabled such other fiduciary to commit a breach by his failure to comply with the requirements of section 404\(a\)\(1\) of the Act in the administration of his specific responsibilities which give rise to his status as a fiduciary.
7. Paragraph (b)(2) of the regulation, as proposed, stated that the factors which should be considered may include those listed. In order to reduce uncertainty, reflected in the comments, regarding the application of the regulation, and in view of the fact that the regulation is in the nature of a "safe harbor" provision, paragraph (b)(2) has been restructured so as to indicate the factors which should under all circumstances be considered by any fiduciary who wishes to rely on the provisions of the rule.
8. It should be noted that index funds typically include a screen or filter process by which portfolio investments for any such fund may be changed to reflect significant adverse financial developments affecting any potential or existing portfolio company, notwithstanding the continued inclusion of the company in the index against which the fund is measured.
9. The term "risk" is used here in its ordinary sense, and refers to any and all types of risk applicable to a particular investment or investment course of action.

Indicia of Ownership

Originally issued October 4, 1977 (42 FR 54124)

Amended January 6, 1981 (46 FR 1267)

ERISA 404\(b\) requires that plan assets be maintained within the jurisdiction of US District Courts. With the advent of international investments, this is often impractical. This regulation provides a means to keep investments at certain types of non-US custodians. A special provision deals with Canada.

a. No fiduciary may maintain the indicia of ownership of any assets of a plan outside the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States, unless:

1. Such assets are:

- i. Securities issued by a person, as defined in section 3\(9\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (Act) (other than an individual), which is not organized under the laws of the United States or a State and does not have its principal place of business within the United States,
  - ii. Securities issued by a government other than the government of the United States or of a State, or any political subdivision, agency or instrumentality of such a government,
  - iii. Securities issued by a person, as defined in section 3\(9\) of the Act (other than an individual), the principal trading market for which securities is outside the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States, or
  - iv. Currency issued by a government other than the government of the United States if such currency is maintained outside the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States solely as an incident to the purchase, sale or maintenance of securities described in paragraph (a)(1) of this section; and
2. (i) Such assets are under the management and control of a fiduciary which is a corporation or partnership organized under the laws of the United States or a State, which fiduciary has its principal place of business within the United States and which is -
- A. A bank as defined in section 202(a)(2) of the Investment Advisors Act of 1940 that has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, equity capital in excess of $1,000,000;
  - B. An insurance company which is qualified under the laws of more than one State to manage, acquire, or dispose of any asset of a plan, which company has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, net worth in excess of $1,000,000 and which is subject to supervision and examination by the State authority having supervision over insurance companies; or
  - C. An investment adviser registered under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 that has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, total client assets under its management and control in excess $50,000,000 and either
    1. Shareholders' or partners' equity in excess of $750,000 or
    2. All of its obligations and liabilities assumed or guaranteed by a person described in paragraph (a)(2)(i)(A), (B), or (C)(1) or (a)(2)(ii)(A)(2) of this section; or
- ii. Such indicia or ownership are either:
- A. In the physical possession of, or, as a result of normal business operations, are in transit to the physical possession of, a person which is organized under the laws of the United States or a State, which person has its principal place of business in the United States and which is -
    1. A bank as defined in section 202(a)(2) of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 that has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, equity capital in excess of $1,000,000;
    2. A broker or dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 that has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, net worth in excess of $750,000; or
    3. A broker or dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 that has all of its obligations and liabilities assumed or guaranteed by a person described in paragraph (a)(2)(i)(A), (B), or (C)(1) or (a)(2)(ii)(A)(2) of this section; or
  - B. Maintained by a broker or dealer, described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(A)(2) or (3) of this section, in the custody of an entity designated by the Securities and Exchange Commission as a "satisfactory control location" with respect to such broker or dealer pursuant to Rule 15c3-3 under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 provided that:
    1. Such entity holds the indicia of ownership as agent for the broker or dealer, and
    2. Such broker or dealer is liable to the plan to the same extent it would be if it retained the physical possession of the indicia of ownership pursuant to paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(A) of this section.
  - C. Maintained by a bank described in paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(A)(1), in the custody of an entity that is a foreign securities depository, foreign clearing agency which acts as a securities depository, or foreign bank which entity is supervised or regulated by a government agency or regulatory authority in the foreign jurisdiction having authority over such depositories, clearing agencies or banks, provided that:
    1. The foreign entity holds the indicia of ownership as agent for the bank;
    2. The bank is liable to the plan to the same extent it would be if it retained the physical possession of the indicia of ownership within the U.S.
    3. The indicia of ownership are not subject to any right, charge, security interest, lien or claim of any kind in favor of the foreign entity except for their safe custody or administration;
    4. Beneficial ownership of the assets represented by the indicia of ownership is freely transferable without the payment of money or value other than for safe custody or administration; and
    5. Upon request by the plan fiduciary who is responsible for the selection and retention of the bank, the bank identifies to such fiduciary the name, address and principal place of business of the foreign entity which acts as custodian for the plan pursuant to this paragraph (a)(2)(ii)(C), and the name and address of the governmental agency or other regulatory authority that supervises or regulates that foreign entity.

- b. Notwithstanding any requirement of paragraph (a) of this section, a fiduciary, with respect to a plan may maintain in Canada the indicia of ownership of plan assets which are attributable to a contribution made on behalf of a plan participant who is a citizen or resident of Canada, if such indicia of ownership must remain in Canada in order for the plan to qualify for and maintain tax exempt status under the laws of Canada or to comply with other applicable laws of Canada or any Province of Canada.
- c. For purposes of this regulation:
  1. The term "management and control" means the power to direct the acquisition or disposition through purchase, sale, pledging, or other means; and
  2. The term "depository" means any company, or agency or instrumentality of government, that acts as a custodian of securities in connection with a system for the central handling of securities whereby all securities of a particular class or series or any issuer deposited within the system are treated as fungible and may be transferred, loaned, or pledged by bookkeeping entry without physical delivery of securities certificates.

ERISA Section 404(c) Plans

Originally issued October 4, 1977 (42 FR 54124)

Amended January 26, 1981 (46 FR 1267)

a. In General.

1. Section 404\(c\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA or the Act) provides that if a pension plan that provides for individual accounts permits a participant or beneficiary to exercise control over assets in his account and that participant or beneficiary in fact exercises control over assets in his account, then the participant or beneficiary shall not be deemed to be a fiduciary by reason of his exercise of control and no person who is otherwise a fiduciary shall be liable for any loss, or by reason of any breach, which results from such exercise of control. This section describes the kinds of plans that are "ERISA section 404(c) plans," the circumstances in which a participant or beneficiary is considered to have exercised independent control over the assets in his account as contemplated by section 404(c), and the consequences of a participant's or beneficiary's exercise of control.
2. The standards set forth in this section are applicable solely for the purpose of determining whether a plan is an ERISA section 404\(c\) plan and whether a particular transaction engaged in by a participant or beneficiary of such plan is afforded relief by section 404(c). Such standards, therefore, are not intended to be applied in determining whether, or to what extent, a plan which does not meet the requirements for an ERISA section 404(c) plan or a fiduciary with respect to such a plan satisfies the fiduciary responsibility or other provisions of title I of the Act.

b. ERISA section 404(c) plans -

1. In general. An "ERISA section 404\(c\) plan" is an individual account plan described in section 3\(34\) of the Act that:
  - i. Provides an opportunity for a participant or beneficiary to exercise control over assets in his individual account (see paragraph (b)(2) of this section); and
  - ii. Provides a participant or beneficiary an opportunity to choose, from a broad range of investment alternatives, the manner in which some or all of the assets in his account are invested (see paragraph (b)(3) of this section).
2. Opportunity to exercise control.
  - i. A plan provides a participant or beneficiary an opportunity to exercise control over assets in his account only if -
    - A. Under the terms of the plan, the participant or beneficiary has a reasonable opportunity to give investment instructions (in writing or otherwise, with opportunity to obtain written confirmation of such instructions) to an identified plan fiduciary who is obligated to comply with such instructions except as otherwise provided in paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(B) and (d)(2)(ii) of this section; and
    - B. The participant or beneficiary is provided or has the opportunity to obtain sufficient information to make informed decisions with regard to investment alternatives available under the plan, and incidents of ownership appurtenant to such investments. For purposes of this subparagraph, a participant or beneficiary will not be considered to have sufficient investment information unless -
      1. The participant or beneficiary is provided by an identified plan fiduciary (or a person or persons designated by the plan fiduciary to act on his behalf):
        - i. An explanation that the plan is intended to constitute a plan described in section 404\(c\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act, and title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations Section 2550.440c-1, and that the fiduciaries of the plan may be relieved of liability for any losses which are the direct and necessary result of investment instructions given by such participant or beneficiary;
        - ii. A description of the investment alternatives available under the plan and, with respect to each designated investment alternative, a general description of the investment objectives and risk and return characteristics of each such alternative, including information relating to the type and diversification of assets comprising the portfolio of the designated investment alternative;
        - iii. Identification of any designated investment managers;
        - iv. An explanation of the circumstances under which participants and beneficiaries may give investment instructions and explanation of any specified limitations on such instructions under the terms of the plan, including any restrictions on transfer to or from a designated investment alternative and any restrictions on the exercise of voting, tender and similar rights appurtenant to a participant's or beneficiary's investment in an investment alternative;

- v. A description of any transaction fees and expenses which affect the participant's or beneficiary's account balance in connection with purchases or sales of interests in investment alternatives (e.g., commissions, sales load, deferred sales charges, redemption or exchange fees);
- vi. The name, address, and phone number of the plan fiduciary (and, if applicable, the person or persons designated by the plan fiduciary to act on his behalf) responsible for providing the information described in paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(2) upon request of a participant or beneficiary and a description of the information described in paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(2) which may be obtained on request;
- vii. In the case of plans which offer an investment alternative which is designed to permit a participant or beneficiary to directly or indirectly acquire or sell any employer security (employer security alternative), a description of the procedures established to provide for the confidentiality of information relating to the purchase, holding and sale of employer securities, and the exercise of voting, tender and similar rights, by participants and beneficiaries, and the name, address and phone number of the plan fiduciary, responsible for monitoring compliance with the procedures (see paragraphs (d)(2)(ii)(E)(4)(vii), (viii) and (ix) of this section); and
- viii. In the case of an investment alternative which is subject to the Securities Act of 1933, and in which the participant or beneficiary has no assets invested, immediately following the participant's or beneficiary's initial investment, a copy of the most recent prospectus provided to the plan. This condition will be deemed satisfied if the participant or beneficiary has been provided with a copy of such most recent prospectus immediately prior to the participant's or beneficiary's initial investment in such alternative;
- ix. Subsequent to an investment in a investment alternative, any materials provided to the plan relating to the exercise of voting, tender or similar rights which are incidental to the holding in the account of the participant or beneficiary of an ownership interest in such alternative to the extent that such rights are passed through to participants and beneficiaries under the terms of the plan, as well as a description of or reference to plan provisions relating to the exercise of voting, tender or similar rights.

2. The participants or beneficiary is provided by the identified plan fiduciary (or a person or persons designated by the plan fiduciary to act on his behalf), either directly or upon request, the following information, which shall be based on the latest information available to the plan:

- i. A description of the annual operating expenses of each designated investment alternative (e.g., investment management fees, administrative fees, transaction costs) which reduce the rate of return to participants and beneficiaries, and the aggregate amount of such expenses expressed as a percentage of average net assets of the designated investment alternative;
- ii. Copies of any prospectuses, financial statements and reports, and of any other materials relating to the investment alternatives available under the plan, to the extent such information is provided to the plan;
- iii. A list of the assets comprising the portfolio of each designated investment alternative which constitute plan assets within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-101, the value of each such asset (or the proportion of the investment alternative which it comprises), and, with respect to each such asset which is a fixed rate investment contract issued by a bank, savings and loan association or insurance company, the name of the issuer of the contract, the term of the contract and the rate of return on the contract;
- iv. Information concerning the value of shares or units in designated investment alternatives available to participants and beneficiaries under the plan, as well as the past and current investment performance of such alternatives, determined net of expenses, on a reasonable and consistent basis; and
- v. Information concerning the value of shares or units in designated investment alternatives held in the accounts of the participant or beneficiary.

ii. A plan does not fail to provide an opportunity for a participant or beneficiary to exercise control over his individual account merely because it -

- A. Imposes charges for reasonable expenses. A plan may charge participants' and beneficiaries' accounts for the reasonable expenses of carrying out investment instructions, provided that procedures are established under the plan to periodically inform such participants and beneficiaries of actual expenses incurred with respect to their respective individual accounts;
- B. Permits a fiduciary to decline to implement investment instructions by participants and beneficiaries. A fiduciary may decline to implement participant and beneficiary instructions which are described at paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, as well as instructions specified in the plan, including instructions -

- 1. Which would result in a prohibited transaction described in ERISA section 406 or section 4975 of the Internal Revenue Code, and
- 2. Which would generate income that would be taxable to the plan;

- C. Imposes reasonable restrictions on frequency of investment instructions. A plan may impose reasonable restrictions on the frequency with which participants and beneficiaries may give investment instructions. In no event however, is such a restriction reasonable unless, with respect to each investment alternative made available by the plan, it permits participants and beneficiaries to give investment instructions with a frequency which is appropriate in light of the market volatility to which the investment alternative may reasonably be expected to be subject, provided that -
1. At least three of the investment alternatives made available pursuant to the requirements of paragraph (b)(3)(i)(B) of this section, which constitute a broad range of investment alternatives, permit participants and beneficiaries to give investment instructions no less frequently than once within any three month period; and
  2. (i) At least one of the investment alternatives meeting the requirements of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(C)(1) of this section permits participants and beneficiaries to give investment instructions with regard to transfers into the investment alternative as frequently as participants and beneficiaries are permitted to give investment instructions with respect to any investment alternative made available by the plan which permits participants and beneficiaries to give investment instructions more frequently than once within any three month period; or
    - i. With respect to each investment alternative which permits participants and beneficiaries to give investment instructions more frequently than once within any three month period, participants and beneficiaries are permitted to direct their investments from such alternative into an income producing, low risk, liquid fund, subfund, or account as frequently as their are permitted to give investment instructions with respect to each such alternative and, with respect to such fund, subfund or account, participants and beneficiaries are permitted to direct investments from the fund, subfund or account to an investment alternative meeting the requirements of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(C)(1) as frequently as they are permitted to give investment instructions with respect to that investment alternative; and
  3. With respect to transfers from an investment alternative which is designed to permit a participant or beneficiary to directly or indirectly acquire or sell any employer security (employer security alternative) either:
    - i. All of the investment alternatives meeting the requirements of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(C)(1) of this section must permit participants and beneficiaries to give investment instructions with regard to transfers into each of the investment alternatives as frequently as participants and beneficiaries are permitted to give investment instructions with respect to the employer security alternative; or
    - ii. Participants and beneficiaries are permitted to direct their investments from each employer security alternative into an income producing, low risk, liquid, fund, subfund, or account as frequently as they are permitted to give investment instructions with respect to such employer security alternative and, with respect to such fund, subfund, or account, participants and beneficiaries are permitted to direct investments from the fund, subfund or account to each investment alternative meeting the requirements of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(C)(1) as frequently as they are permitted to give investment instructions with respect to each such investment alternative.
    - iii. Paragraph (c) of this section describes the circumstances under which a participant or beneficiary will be considered to have exercised independent control with respect to a particular transaction.
3. Broad range of investment alternatives.
- i. A plan offers a broad range of investment alternatives only if the available investment alternatives are sufficient to provide the participant or beneficiary with a reasonable opportunity to:
    - A. Materially affect the potential return on amounts in his individual account with respect to which he is permitted to exercise control and the degree of risk to which such amounts are subject;
    - B. Choose from at least three investment alternatives:
      1. Each of which is diversified;
      2. Each of which has materially different risk and return characteristics;
      3. Which in the aggregate enable the participant or beneficiary by choosing among them to achieve a portfolio with aggregate risk and return characteristics at any point within the range normally appropriate for the participant or beneficiary; and
      4. Each of which when combined with investments in the other alternatives tends to minimize through diversification the overall risk of a participant's or beneficiary's portfolio;
    - C. Diversify the investment of that portion of his individual account with respect to which he is permitted to exercise control so as to minimize the risk of large losses, taking into account the nature of the plan and the size of participants' or beneficiaries' accounts. In determining whether a plan provides the participant or beneficiary with a reasonable opportunity to diversify his investments, the nature of the investment alternatives offered by the plan and the size of the portion of the individual's account over which he is permitted to exercise control must be considered. Where such portion of the account of any participant or beneficiary is so limited in size that the opportunity to invest in look-through investment vehicles is the only prudent means to assure an opportunity to achieve appropriate diversification, a plan may satisfy the requirements of this paragraph only by offering look-through investment vehicles.

- ii. Diversification and look-through investment vehicles. Where look-through investment vehicles are available as investment alternatives to participants and beneficiaries, the underlying investments of the look-through investment shall be considered in determining whether the plan satisfies the requirements of subparagraphs (b)(3)(i)(B) and (b)(3)(i)(C).

c. Exercise of control.

1. In general. -

- i. Sections 404\(c\)\(1\) and 404\(c\)\(2\) of the Act and paragraphs (a) and (d) of this section apply only with respect to a transaction where a participant or beneficiary has exercised independent control in fact with respect to the investment of assets in his individual account under an ERISA section 404(c) plan.
- ii. For purposes of sections 404\(c\)\(1\) and 4040(c)(2) [sic] of the Act and paragraphs (a) and (d) of this section, a participant or beneficiary will be deemed to have exercised control with respect to the exercise of voting, tender and similar rights appurtenant to the participant's or beneficiary's ownership interest in an investment alternative, provided that the participant's or beneficiary's investment in the investment alternative was itself the result of an exercise of control, the participant or beneficiary was provided a reasonable opportunity to give instruction with respect to such incidents of ownership, including the provision of the information described in paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(1)(ix) of this section, and the participant or beneficiary has not failed to exercise control by reason of the circumstances described in Paragraph (c)(2) with respect to such incidents of ownership.

2. Independent control. Whether a participant or beneficiary has exercised independent control in fact with respect to a transaction depends on the facts and circumstances of the particular case. However, a participant's or beneficiary's exercise of control is not independent in fact if:

- i. The participant or beneficiary is subjected to improper influence by a plan fiduciary or the plan sponsor with respect to the transaction;
- ii. A plan fiduciary has concealed material non-public facts regarding the investment from the participant or beneficiary, unless the disclosure of such information by the plan fiduciary to the participant or beneficiary would violate any provision of federal law or any provision of state law which is not preempted by the Act; or
- iii. The participant or beneficiary is legally incompetent and the responsible plan fiduciary accepts the instructions of the participant or beneficiary knowing him to be legally incompetent.

3. Transactions involving a fiduciary. In the case of a sale, exchange or leasing of property (other than a transaction described in paragraph (d)(2)(ii)(E) of this section) between an ERISA section 404\(c\) plan and a plan fiduciary or an affiliate of such a fiduciary, or a loan to a plan fiduciary or an affiliate of such a fiduciary, the participant or beneficiary will not be deemed to have exercised independent control unless the transaction is fair and reasonable to him. For purposes of this paragraph (c)(3), a transaction will be deemed to be fair and reasonable to a participant or beneficiary if he pays no more than, or receives no less than, adequate consideration (as defined in section 3\(18\) of the Act) in connection with the transaction.

4. No obligation to advise. A fiduciary has no obligation under part 4 of Title I of this Act to provide investment advice to a participant or beneficiary under an ERISA section 404\(c\) plan.

d. Effect of independent exercise of control.

1. Participant or beneficiary not a fiduciary. If a participant or beneficiary of an ERISA section 404\(c\) plan exercises independent control over assets in his individual account in the manner described in paragraph (c), then such participant or beneficiary is not a fiduciary of the plan by reason of such exercise of control.

2. Limitation on liability of plan fiduciaries -

- i. If a participant or beneficiary of an ERISA section 404\(c\) plan exercises independent control over assets in his individual account in the manner described in paragraph (c), then no other person who is a fiduciary with respect to such plan shall be liable for any loss, or with respect to any breach of part 4 of Title I of the Act that is the direct and necessary result of that participant's or beneficiary's exercise of control.

ii. Paragraph (d)(2)(i) does not apply with respect to any instruction, which if implemented -

- A. Would not be in accordance with the documents and instruments governing the plan insofar as such documents and instruments are consistent with the provisions of Title I of ERISA;
- B. Would cause a fiduciary to maintain the indicia of ownership of any assets of the plan outside the jurisdiction of the district courts of the United States other than as permitted by section 404\(b\) of the Act and 29 C.F.R. 2550.404b-1;
- C. Would jeopardize the plan's tax qualified status under the Internal Revenue Code;
- D. Could result in a loss in excess of a participant's or beneficiary's account balance; or
- E. Would result in a direct or indirect:
  - 1. Sale, exchange or lease of property between a plan sponsor or any affiliate of the sponsor and the plan except for the acquisition or disposition of any interest in a fund, subfund or portfolio managed by a plan sponsor or an affiliate of the sponsor, or the purchase or sale of any qualifying employer security (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(5\) of the Act) which meets the conditions of section 408\(e\) of ERISA and section (d)(2)(ii)(E)(4) below;
  - 2. Loan to a plan sponsor or any affiliate of the sponsor;
  - 3. Acquisition or sale of any employer real property (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(2\) of the Act); or

4. Acquisition or sale of any employer security except to the extent that:

- i. Such securities are qualifying employer securities (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(5\) of the Act);
- ii. Such securities are stock or an equity interest in a publicly traded partnership (as defined in section 7704(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986), but only if such partnership is an existing partnership as defined in section 10211(c)(2)(A) of the Revenue Act of 1987 (Public Law 100-203);
- iii. Such securities are publicly traded on a national exchange or other generally recognized market;
- iv. Such securities are traded with sufficient frequency and in sufficient volume to assure that participant and beneficiary directions to buy or sell the security may be acted upon promptly and efficiently;
- v. Information provided to shareholders of such securities is provided to participants and beneficiaries with accounts holding such securities;
- vi. Voting, tender and similar rights with respect to such securities are passed through to participants and beneficiaries with accounts holding such securities;
- vii. Information relating to the purchase, holding, and sale of securities, and the, exercise of voting, tender, and similar rights with respect to such securities by participants and beneficiaries, is maintained in accordance with procedures which are designed to safeguard the confidentiality of such information, except to the extent necessary to comply with Federal laws or state laws not preempted by the Act;
- viii. The plan designates a fiduciary who is responsible for ensuring that: The procedures required under subparagraph (d)(2)(ii)(E)(4)(vii) are sufficient to safeguard the confidentiality of the information described in that subparagraph, such procedures are being followed, and the independent fiduciary required by subparagraph (d)(2)(ii)(E)(4)(ix) is appointed; and
- ix. An independent fiduciary is appointed to carry out activities relating to any situations which the fiduciary designated by the plan for purposes of subparagraph (d)(2)(ii)(E)(4)(viii) determines involve a potential for undue employer influence upon participants and beneficiaries, with regard to the direct or indirect exercise of shareholder rights. For purposes of this subparagraph, a fiduciary is not independent if the fiduciary is affiliated with any sponsor of the plan.

iii. The individual investment decisions of an investment manager who is designated directly by a participant or beneficiary or who manages a look-through investment vehicle in which a participant or beneficiary has invested are not direct and necessary results of the designation of the investment manager or of investment in the look-through investment vehicle. However, this paragraph (d)(2)(iii) shall not be construed to result in liability under section 405 of ERISA with respect to a fiduciary (other than the investment manager) who would otherwise be relieved of liability by reason of section 404\(c\)\(2\) of the Act and paragraph (d) of this section.

3. Prohibited Transactions. The relief provided by section 404\(c\) of the Act and this section applies only to the provisions of part 4 of title I of the Act. Therefore, nothing in this section relieves a disqualified person from the taxes imposed by sections 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to the transactions prohibited by section 4975\(c\)\(1\) of the Code.

e. Definitions. For purposes of this section:

1. Look-through investment vehicle means:

- i. An investment company described in section 3(a) of the Investment Company Act of 1940, or a series investment company described in section 18(f) of the 1940 Act or any of the segregated portfolios of such company;
- ii. A common or collective trust fund or a pooled investment fund maintained by a bank or similar institution, a deposit in a bank or similar institution, or a fixed rate investment contract of a bank or similar institution;
- iii. A pooled separate account or a fixed rate investment contract of an insurance company qualified to do business in a State; or
- iv. Any entity whose assets include plan assets by reason of a plan's investment in the entity;

2. Adequate consideration has the meaning given it in section 3\(18\) of the Act and in any regulations under this title;

3. An affiliate of a person includes the following:

- i. Any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the person;
- ii. Any officer, director, partner, or employee, an employee of an affiliated employer, relative (as defined in section 3\(15\) of ERISA), brother, sister, or spouse of a brother or sister, of the person; and
- iii. Any corporation or partnership of which the person is an officer director or partner.

For purposes of this paragraph (e)(3), the term "control" means, with respect to a person other than an individual, the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of such person.

4. A designated investment alternative is a specific investment identified by a plan fiduciary as an available investment alternative under the plan.

f. Examples. The provisions of this section are illustrated by the following examples. Examples (5) through (11) assume that the participant has exercised independent control with respect to his individual account under an ERISA section 404\(c\) plan described in paragraph (b) and has not directed a transaction described in paragraph (d)(2)(ii).

1. Plan A is an individual account plan described in section 3\(34\) of the Act. The plan states that a plan participant or beneficiary may direct the plan administrator to invest any portion of his individual account in a particular diversified equity fund managed by an entity which is not affiliated with the plan sponsor, or any other asset administratively feasible for the plan to hold. However, the plan provides that the plan administrator will not implement certain listed instructions for which plan fiduciaries would not be relieved of liability under section 404\(c\) (see paragraph (d)(2)(ii)).

Plan participants and beneficiaries are permitted to give investment instructions during the first week of each month with respect to the equity fund and at any time with respect to other investments. The plan provides for the pass-through of voting, tender and similar rights incidental to the holding in the account of a participant or beneficiary of an ownership interest in the equity fund or any other investment alternative available under the plan.

- The plan administrator of plan A provides each participant and beneficiary with the information described in subparagraphs (i), (ii), (iii), (iv), (v), (vi) and (vii) of paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(1) upon their entry into the plan, and provides updated information in the event of any material change in the information provided.
- Immediately following an investment by a participant or beneficiary in the equity fund, the plan administrator provides a copy of the most recent prospectus received from the fund to the investing participant or beneficiary.
- Immediately following any investment by a participant or beneficiary in any other investment alternative which is subject to the Securities Act of 1933, the plan administrator provides the participant or beneficiary with the most recent prospectus received from that investment alternative (see paragraph (b)(2)(1)(B)(i)(viii)).
- Finally, subsequent to any investment by a participant or beneficiary, the plan administrator forwards to the investing participant or beneficiary any materials provided to the plan relating to the exercise of voting, tender or similar rights attendant to ownership of an interest in such investment (see paragraph (b)(2)(1)(B)(i)(ix)).
- Upon request, the plan administrator provides each participant or beneficiary with copies of any prospectuses, financial statements and reports, and any other materials relating to the investment alternatives available under the plan which are received by the plan (see paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(2)(ii)).
- Also upon request, the plan administrator provides each participant and beneficiary with the other information required by paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(2) with respect to the equity fund, which is a designated investment alternative, including information concerning the latest available value of the participant's or beneficiary's interest in the equity fund (see paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(2)(v)).

Plan A meets the requirements of paragraphs (b)(2)(i)(B)(1) and (2) of this section regarding the provision of investment information.

Note: The regulation imposes no additional obligation on the administrator to furnish or make available materials relating to the companies in which the equity fund invests (e.g., prospectuses, proxies, etc.).

2. Plan C is an individual account plan described in section 3\(34\) of the Act under which participants and beneficiaries may choose among three investment alternatives which otherwise meet the requirements of paragraph (b) of this section. The plan permits investment instruction with respect to each investment alternative only on the first 10 days of each calendar quarter, i.e., January 1-10, April 1-10, July 1-10 and October 1-10. Plan C satisfies the condition of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(C)(1) that instruction be permitted not less frequently than once within any three month period, since there is not any three month period during which control could not be exercised.
3. Assume the same facts as in paragraph (f)(2), except that investment instruction may only be given on January 1, April 1, July 1 and October 1. Plan C is not an ERISA section 404\(c\) plan because it does not satisfy the condition of paragraph (b)(2)(ii)(C)(1) that instruction be permitted not less frequently than once within any three month period. Under these facts, there is a three month period, e.g., January 2 through April 1, during which control could not be exercised by participants and beneficiaries.
4. Plan D is an individual account plan described in section 3\(34\) of the Act under which participants and beneficiaries may choose among three diversified investment alternatives which constitute a broad range of investment alternatives. The plan also permits investment instruction with respect to an employer securities alternative but provides that a participant or beneficiary can invest no more than 25% of his account balance in this alternative. This restriction does not affect the availability of relief under section 404\(c\) inasmuch as it does not relate to the three diversified investment alternatives and, therefore, does not cause the plan to fail to provide an opportunity to choose from a broad range of investment alternatives.
5. A participant, P, independently exercises control over assets in his individual account plan by directing a plan fiduciary, F, to invest 100% of his account balance in a single stock. P is not a fiduciary with respect to the plan by reason of his exercise of control and F will not be liable for any losses that necessarily result from P's investment instruction.
6. Assume the same facts as in paragraph (f)(5), except that P directs F to purchase the stock from B, who is a party in interest with respect to the plan. Neither P nor F has engaged in a transaction prohibited under section 406 of the Act: P because he is not a fiduciary with respect to the plan by reason of his exercise of control and F because he is not liable for any breach of part 4 of Title I that is the direct and necessary consequence of P's exercise of control. However, a prohibited transaction under section 4975\(c\) of the Internal Revenue Code may have occurred, and, in the absence of an exemption, tax liability may be imposed pursuant to sections 495(a) and (b) of the Code.
7. Assume the same facts as in paragraph (f)(5), except that P does not specify that the stock be purchased from B, and F chooses to purchase the stock from B. In the absence of an exemption, F has engaged in a prohibited transaction described in 406\(a\) of ERISA because the decision to purchase the stock from B is not a direct or necessary result of P's exercise or control.
8. Pursuant to the terms of the plan, plan fiduciary F designates three reputable investment managers whom participants may appoint to manage assets in their individual accounts. Participant P selects M, one of the designated managers, to manage the assets in his account. M prudently manages P's account for 6 months after which he incurs losses in managing the account through his imprudence. M has engaged in a breach of fiduciary duty because M's imprudent management of P's account is not a direct or necessary result of P's exercise of control (the choice of M as manager). F has no fiduciary liability for M's imprudence because he has no affirmative duty to advise P (see paragraph (c)(4)) and because F is relieved of co-fiduciary liability by reason of section 404\(c\)\(2\) (see paragraph (d)(2)(iii)). F does have a duty to monitor M's performance to determine the suitability of continuing M as an investment manager, however, and M's imprudence would be a factor which F must consider in periodically reevaluating its decision to designate M.

9. Participant P instructs plan fiduciary F to appoint G as his investment manager pursuant to the terms of the plan which provide P total discretion in choosing an investment manager. Through G's imprudence, G incurs losses in managing P's account. G has engaged in a breach of fiduciary duty because G's imprudent management of P's account is not a direct or necessary result of P's exercise of control (the choice of G as manager). Plan fiduciary F has no fiduciary liability for G's imprudence because F has no obligation to advise P (see paragraph (c)(4)) and because F is relieved of co-fiduciary liability for G's actions by reason of section 402\(c\)\(2\) (see paragraph (d)(2)(iii)). In addition, F also has no duty to determine the suitability of G as an investment manager because the plan does not designate G as an investment manager.
10. Participant P directs a plan fiduciary, F, a bank, to invest all of the assets in his individual account in a collective trust fund managed by F that is designed to be invested solely in a diversified portfolio of common stocks. Due to economic conditions, the value of the common stocks in the bank collective trust fund declines while the value of publicly-offered fixed income obligations remains relatively stable. F is not liable for any losses incurred by P solely because his individual account was not diversified to include fixed income obligations. Such losses are the direct result of P's exercise of control; moreover, under paragraph (c)(4) of this section F has no obligation to advise P regarding his investment decisions.
11. Assume the same facts as in paragraph (f)(10) except that F, in managing the collective trust fund, invests the assets of the fund solely in a few highly speculative stocks. F is liable for losses resulting from its imprudent investment in the speculative stocks and for its failure to diversify the assets of the account. This conduct involves a separate breach of F's fiduciary duty that is not a direct or necessary result of P's exercise of control (see paragraph (d)(2)(iii)).

g. Effective date.

1. In general. Except as provided in paragraph (g)(2), this section is effective with respect to transactions occurring on or after the first day of the second plan year beginning on or after October 13, 1992.
2. This section is effective with respect to transactions occurring under a plan maintained pursuant to one or more collective bargaining agreements between employee representatives and one or more employers ratified before October 13, 1992 after the later of the date determined under paragraph (g)(1) or the date on which the last collective bargaining agreement terminates. For purposes of this paragraph (g)(2), any extension or renegotiation of a collective bargaining agreement which is ratified on or after October 13, 1992 is to be disregarded in determining the date on which the agreement terminates.
3. Transactions occurring before the date determined under subparagraph (g)(1) or (2) of this section, as applicable, are governed by section 404(c) of the Act without regard to the regulation.

Department of Labor

Delinquent Filer Voluntary Compliance Program

April 27, 1995 (60 FR 20874)

Recap

Permits delinquent plan administrators to comply with annual reporting obligations under Title I of the ERISA with reduced civil penalties.

Agency: Department of Labor, Employee Benefits Security Administration

Action: Grant of Class Exemption

Effective Date: March 28, 2002

Program

Section 1--Delinquent Filer Voluntary Compliance (DFVC) Program

The DFVC Program is intended to afford eligible plan administrators (described in Section 2 of this Notice) the opportunity to avoid the assessment of civil penalties otherwise applicable to administrators who fail to file timely annual reports for plan years beginning on or after January 1, 1988. Eligible administrators may avail themselves of the DFVC Program by complying with the filing requirements and paying the civil penalties specified in Section 3 or Section 4, as appropriate, of this Notice.

Section 2--Scope, Eligibility and Effective Date

- .01 Scope. The DFVC Program described in this Notice provides relief from assessment of civil penalties otherwise applicable to plan administrators who fail or refuse to file timely annual reports. Relief under this Program does not extend to penalties that may be assessed for annual reports that are determined by the Department to be incomplete or otherwise deficient.
- .02 Eligibility. The DFVC Program is available only to a plan administrator that complies with the requirements of Section 3 or Section 4, as appropriate, of this Notice prior to the date on which the administrator is notified in writing by the Department of a failure to file a timely annual report under Title I of ERISA.
- .03 Effective date. The DFVC Program described herein shall be effective March 28, 2002. The Department intends that this DFVC Program to be of indefinite duration; however, the Program may be modified from time to time or terminated in the sole discretion of the Department upon publication of notice in the Federal Register.

Section 3--Plan Administrators Filing Annual Reports

- .01 General. A plan administrator electing to file a late annual report (Form 5500 Series Annual Return/Report) under this DFVC Program must comply with the requirements of this Section 3.
- .02 Filing a Complete Annual Report.

(a) The plan administrator must file a complete Form 5500 Series Annual Return/Report, including all required schedules and attachments, for each plan year for which the plan administrator is seeking relief under the Program. This filing shall be sent to PWBA at the appropriate EFAST address listed in the instructions for the most current Form 5500 Annual Return/Report, or electronically in accordance with the EFAST electronic filing requirements. See the EFAST Internet site at www.efast.dol.gov to view forms and instructions.

Note: Do not forward the applicable penalty amount described in Section 3.03 to the EFAST addresses listed above.

(b) For purposes of subparagraph (a), the plan administrator shall file either: (1) The Form 5500 Series Annual Return/Report form (but not a Form 5500-R) issued for each plan year for which the relief is sought, or (2) the most current Form 5500 Annual Return/Report form issued (and, if necessary, indicate in the appropriate space on the first page of the Form 5500 the plan year for which the annual return/report is being filed). Forms may be obtained from the IRS by calling 1-800-TAX-FORM (1-800-829-3676). Forms for certain pre-1999 plan years also are available through the Internet sites for PWBA and the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) (www.dol.gov/dol/pwba, www.irs.gov). For further information on EFAST filing requirements, see the EFAST Internet site (www.efast.dol.gov) and the instructions for the most current Form 5500.

.03 Payment of Applicable Penalty Amount.

(a) The plan administrator shall pay the applicable penalty amount by submitting to the DFVC Program the information described in subparagraph (b) along with a check made payable to the "U.S. Department of Labor" for the applicable penalty amount determined in accordance with subparagraph (c). This separate submission shall be made by mail to: DFVC Program, PWBA, P.O. Box 530292, Atlanta, GA 30353-0292. The annual returns/reports for multiple plans may not be included in a single DFVC Program submission. A separate submission to the DFVC Program (including a separate check for the applicable penalty amount) must be made for each plan.

Note: Personal or private delivery service cannot be made to this address.

(b)

(1) The administrator shall submit to the DFVC Program, with the applicable penalty amount, a paper copy of the Form 5500 Annual Return/Report filed as described in paragraph .02(a), without schedules and attachments. In the event that the plan administrator files as described in paragraph .02(a) using a 1998 or prior plan year form, a paper copy of only the first page of the Form 5500 or Form 5500-C, as applicable, should be submitted to the DFVC Program.

(2) In the case of a plan sponsored by a Code section 501(c)(3) organization described in paragraph .03(c)(4), the administrator shall clearly note "501(c)(3) Plan" in the upper-right hand corner of the first page of the Form 5500 Annual Return/Report submitted to the DFVC Program (in Atlanta, Georgia). This notation should not be included on the annual report filed with PWBA pursuant to paragraph .02 (in Lawrence, Kansas) because it may interfere with the proper processing of the required report.

(c) The applicable penalty amount shall be determined as follows:

(1) In the case of a plan with fewer than 100 participants at the beginning of the plan year (or a plan that would be treated as such a plan under the "80-120" participant rule described in 29 CFR 2520.103-1(d) for the subject plan year) (hereinafter "small plan"), the applicable penalty amount is $10 per day for each day the annual report is filed after the date on which the annual report was due (without regard to any extensions), not to exceed the greater of: $750 per annual report or, in the case of a DFVC submission relating to more than one delinquent annual report filing for the plan, $1,500 per plan.

(2) In the case of a plan with 100 or more participants at the beginning of the plan year (other than a plan that is eligible to use and uses the "80-120" participant rule) (hereinafter "large plan"), the applicable penalty amount is $10 per day for each day the annual report is filed after the date on which the annual report was due (without regard to any extensions), not to exceed the greater of: $2,000 per annual report or, in the case of a DFVC submission relating to more than one delinquent annual report filing for the plan, $4,000 per plan.

(3) In the case of a DFVC submission relating to more than one delinquent annual report filing for a plan, the applicable penalty amount shall be determined by reference to paragraph (c)(2) if for any plan year for which the submission is made the plan was a "large plan."

(4) In the case of a plan administrator filing an annual report for a "small plan" that is sponsored by a Code section 501(c)(3) organization (including a Code section 403(b) plan), the applicable penalty amount is $10 per day for each day the annual report is filed after the date on which the annual report was due (without regard to any extensions), not to exceed $750 per DFVC submission, including DFVC submissions that relate to more than one delinquent annual report filing for the plan. This paragraph (c)(4) shall not apply if, as of the date the plan files pursuant to this DFVC Program, there is a delinquent or late annual report due for a plan year for which the plan was a "large plan." See paragraph .03(b)(2) for special instructions pertaining to small plans sponsored by Code section 501(c)(3) organizations.

.04 Liability for Applicability Amount.

The plan administrator is personally liable for the payment of civil penalties assessed under section 502(c)(2) of ERISA, therefore, civil penalties, including amounts paid under this DFVC Program, shall not be paid from the assets of an employee benefit plan.

Section 4--Plan Administrators Filing Notices for Apprenticeship and Training Plans and Statements for "Top Hat" Plans

.01 General. Administrators of apprenticeship and training plans, described in 29 CFR 2520.104-22, and administrators of pension plans for a select group of management or highly compensated employees, described in 29 CFR 2520.104-23(a) ("top hat plans"), who elect to file the applicable notice and statement described in sections 2520.104-22 and 2520.104-23, respectively, as a condition of relief from the annual reporting requirements may, in lieu of filing any past due annual report and paying otherwise applicable civil penalties, comply with the requirements of this Section 4. Administrators who have complied with the requirements of this Section 4 shall be considered as having elected compliance with the exemption(s) and/or alternative method of compliance prescribed in Secs. 2520.104-22, or 2520.104-23, as appropriate, for all subsequent plan years.

.02 Filing Applicable Notice or Statement with the U.S. Department of Labor.

The plan administrator must prepare and file a notice or statement meeting the requirements of Secs. 2520.104-22, or 2520.104-23, as appropriate.

The apprenticeship and training plan notice described in Sec. 2520.104-22 shall be sent by mail or by private delivery service to: Apprenticeship and Training Plan Exemption, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Room N-1513, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, DC 20210.

The "top hat" plan statement described in Sec. 2520.104-23 shall be sent by mail or by private delivery service to: Top Hat Plan Exemption, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Room N-1513, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue NW., Washington, DC 20210.

Note: A plan sponsor maintaining more than one "top hat" plan is not required to file a separate statement for each such plan. See Sec. 2520.104-23(b).

.03 Payment of Applicable Penalty Amount.

(a) The plan administrator shall pay the applicable penalty amount by submitting to the DFVC Program the information described in subparagraph (b) along with a check made payable to the "U.S. Department of Labor" for the applicable penalty amount determined in accordance with subparagraph (c). This submission shall be made by mail to: DFVC Program, PWBA, P.O. Box 530292, Atlanta, GA 30353-0292.

Note: Personal or private delivery service cannot be made to this address.

(b) The administrator shall submit to the DFVC Program with the applicable penalty amount the most current Form 5500 Annual Return/Report (without schedules and attachments). For purposes of this requirement, the plan administrators must complete Form 5500 line items 1a-1b, 2a-2c, 3a-3c, and use plan number 888 for all "top hat" plans and plan number 999 for all apprenticeship and training plans. In the case of plan sponsors maintaining more than one "top hat" plan and plan sponsors maintaining more than one apprenticeship and training plan described in Sec. 2520.104-22, the plan administrator shall clearly identify each such plan on the Form 5500 filed with the Department of Labor or on an attachment thereto. The plan administrator also must sign and date the Form 5500.

(c) The applicable penalty amount is $750 for each DFVC submission, without regard to the number of plans maintained by the same plan sponsor for which notices and statements are filed pursuant to Section 4 and without regard to the number of plan participants covered under such plan or plans.

.04 Liability for Applicability Amount.

The plan administrator is personally liable for the payment of civil penalties assessed under section 502(c)(2) of ERISA, therefore, civil penalties, including amounts paid under this DFVC Program, shall not be paid from the assets of an employee benefit plan.

Section 5--Waiver of Right to Notice, Abatement of Assessment and Plan Status

.01 Payment of a penalty under the terms of this DFVC Program constitutes, with regard to the filings submitted under the Program, a waiver of an administrator's right both to receive notices of intent to assess a penalty under Sec. 2560.502c-2 from the Department and to contest the Department's assessment of the penalty amount.

.02 Although this Notice does not provide relief from late filing penalties under the Code, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) has provided the Department with the following information. The Code and the regulations thereunder require information to be filed on the Form 5500 Series Annual Return/Report and provide the IRS with authority to impose or assess penalties for failing to timely file. The IRS has agreed to provide certain penalty relief under the Code for delinquent Form 5500 Annual Returns/Reports filed for Title I plans where the conditions of this DFVC Program have been satisfied. See IRS Notice 2002-23.

.03 Although this Notice does not provide relief from late filing penalties under Title IV of ERISA, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC) has provided the Department with the following information. Title IV of ERISA and the regulations thereunder require information to be filed on the Form 5500 Series Annual Return/Report and provide the PBGC with authority to assess penalties against a plan administrator under ERISA Sec. 4071 for late filing of the Form 5500 Series Annual Return/Report. The PBGC has agreed that it will not assess a penalty against a plan administrator under ERISA Sec. 4071 for late filing of a Form 5500 Series Annual Return/Report filed for a Title I plan where the conditions of this DFVC Program have been satisfied.

.04 Acceptance by the Department of a filing and penalty payment made pursuant to this DFVC Program does not represent a determination by the Department of Labor as to the status of the arrangement as a plan, the particular type of plan under Title I or ERISA, the status of the plan sponsor under the Code, or a determination by the Department of Labor that the provisions of Secs. 2520.104-22 or 2520.104-23 have been satisfied.

Signed at Washington, DC, this 25th day of March, 2002.

Ann L. Combs,

Assistant Secretary, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor.

Appendix E — Employee Benefit Law

Employer Securities and Real Property - General

Originally issued September 20, 1977 (42 FR 47201)

- a. In General. Section 407\(a\)\(1\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) states that except as otherwise provided in section 407 and section 414 of the Act, a plan may not acquire or hold any employer security which is not a qualifying employer security or any employer real property which is not qualifying employer real property. Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(E\) prohibits a fiduciary from knowingly causing a plan to engage in a transaction which constitutes a direct or indirect acquisition, on behalf of a plan, of any employer security or employer real property in violation of section 407(a), and section 406\(a\)\(2\) prohibits a fiduciary who has authority or discretion to control or manage assets of a plan to permit the plan to hold any employer security or employer real property if he knows or should know that holding such security or real property violates section 407\(a\).
- b. Requirements applicable to all plans. A plan may hold or acquire only employer securities which are qualifying employer securities and employer real property which is qualifying employer real property. A plan may not hold employer securities and employer real property which are not qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property, except to the extent that:
  1. The employer security is held by a plan which has made an election under section 407\(c\)\(3\) of the Act; or
  2. The employer security is a loan or other extension of credit which satisfies the requirements of section 414(c)(1) of the Act or the employer real property is leased to the employer pursuant to a lease which satisfies the requirements of section 414(c)(2) of the Act.

Regulation published in Federal Register September 20, 1977 (42 FR 47201) and amended November 22, 1977 (42 FR 59842).

Employer Securities and Real Property - Acquisition

Originally issued September 20, 1977 (42 FR 47201)

- a. In General. Section 407\(a\)\(2\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) provides that a plan may not acquire any qualifying employer security or qualifying employer real property, if immediately after such acquisition the aggregate fair market value of qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property held by the plan exceeds 10 percent of the fair market value of the assets of the plan.
- b. Acquisitions. For purposes of section 407\(a\) of the Act, an acquisition by a plan of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property shall include, but not be limited to, an acquisition by purchase, by the exchange of plan assets, by the exercise of warrants or rights, by the conversion of a security (except any acquisition pursuant to a conversion exempt under section 408\(b\)\(7\) of the Act), by default of a loan where the qualifying employer security or qualifying employer real property was security for the loan, or by the contribution of such securities or real property to the plan. However, an acquisition of a security shall not be deemed to have occurred if a plan acquires the security as a result of a stock dividend or stock split.
- c. Fair Market Value - Indebtedness incurred in connection with the acquisition of a plan asset. In determining whether a plan is in compliance with the limitation on the acquisition of qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property in section 407\(a\)\(2\), the limitation on the holding of qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property in section 407\(a\)\(3\) and the requirement regarding the disposition of employer securities and employer real property in section 407\(a\)\(4\) thereunder, the fair market value of total plan assets shall be the fair market value of such assets less the unpaid amount of:
  1. Any indebtedness incurred by the plan in acquiring such assets;
  2. Any indebtedness incurred before the acquisition of such assets if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition; and
  3. Any indebtedness incurred after the acquisition of such assets if such indebtedness would not have been incurred but for such acquisition and the incurrence of such indebtedness was reasonably foreseeable at the time of such acquisition. However, the fair market value of qualifying employer securities and qualifying employer real property shall be the fair market value of such assets without any reduction for the unpaid amount of any indebtedness incurred by the plan in connection with the acquisition of such employer securities and employer real property.
- d. Examples.
  1. Plan assets have a fair market value of $100,000. The plan has no liabilities other than liabilities for vested benefits of participants and does not own any employer securities or employer real property. The plan proposes to acquire qualifying employer securities with a fair market value of $10,000 by paying $1,000 in cash and borrowing $9,000. The fair market value of plan assets would be $100,000 ($100,000 of plan assets less $1,000 cash payment plus $10,000 of employer securities less $9,000 indebtedness), the fair market value of the qualifying employer securities would be $10,000, which is 10 percent of the fair market value of plan assets. Accordingly, the acquisition would not contravene section 407\(a\).

2. Plan assets have a fair market value of $100,000. The plan has liabilities of $20,000 which were incurred in connection with the acquisition of those assets, and does not own any employer securities or employer real property. The plan proposes to pay cash for qualifying employer securities with a fair market value of $10,000. The fair market value of plan assets would be $80,000 ($100,000 of plan assets less $10,000 cash payment plus $10,000 of employer securities less $20,000 indebtedness), the fair market value of the qualifying employer securities would be $10,000, which is 12.5 percent of the fair market value of plan assets. Accordingly, the acquisition would contravene section 407\(a\).

"Qualifying" Employer Security - Defined

Originally issued September 2, 1977 (42 FR 44388)

- a. In General. For purposes of this section and section 407\(d\)\(5\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act), the term "qualifying employer security" means an employer security which is:
1. Stock; or
  2. A marketable obligation, as defined in paragraph (b) of this section and section 407\(e\) of the Act.
- b. For purposes of paragraph (a)(2) of this section and section 407\(d\)\(5\) of the Act, the term "marketable obligation" means a bond, debenture, note, or certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness (hereinafter in this paragraph referred to as "obligation") if:
1. Such obligation is acquired -
    - i. On the market, either
      - A. At the price of the obligation prevailing on a national securities exchange which is registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, or
      - B. If the obligation is not traded on such a national securities exchange, at a price not less favorable to the plan than the offering price for the obligation as established by current bid and asked prices quoted by persons independent of the issuer;
    - ii. From an underwriter, at a price -
      - A. Not in excess of the public offering price for the obligation as set forth in a prospectus or offering circular filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, and
      - B. At which a substantial portion of the same issue is acquired by persons independent of the issuer; or
    - iii. Directly from the issuer at a price not less favorable to the plan than the price paid currently for a substantial portion of the same issue by persons independent of the issuer;
  2. Immediately following acquisition of such obligation,
    - i. Not more than 25 percent of the aggregate amount of obligations issued in such issue and outstanding at the time of acquisition is held by the plan, and
    - ii. At least 50 percent of the aggregate amount referred to in paragraph (A) is held by persons independent of the issuer; and
  3. Immediately following acquisition, of the obligation, not more than 25 percent of the assets of the plan is invested in obligations of the employer or an affiliate of the employer.

"Employee Stock Ownership Plan" - Defined

Originally issued September 2, 1977 (42 FR 44388)

- a. In General. -
1. Type of plan. To be an "ESOP" (employee stock ownership plan), a plan described in section 407\(d\)\(6\)\(A\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) must meet the requirements of this section. See section 407\(d\)\(6\)\(B\).
  2. Designation as ESOP. To be an ESOP, plan must be formally designated as such in the plan document.
  3. Retroactive amendment. A plan meets the requirements of this section as of the date that it is designated as an ESOP if it is amended retroactively to meet, and in fact does meet, such requirements at any of the following times:
    - i. 12 months after the date on which the plan is designated as an ESOP;
    - ii. 90 days after a determination letter is issued with respect to the qualification of the plan as an ESOP under this section, but only if the determination is requested by the date in paragraph (a)(3)(i) of this section; or

iii. A later date approved by the Internal Revenue Service district director.

4. Addition to other plan. An ESOP may form a portion of a plan the balance of which includes a qualified pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan which is not an ESOP. A reference to an ESOP includes an ESOP that forms a portion of another plan.
  5. Conversion of existing plan to an ESOP. If an existing pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan is converted into an ESOP, the requirements of section 404 of the Act, relating to fiduciary duties, and section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code (the Code), relating to requirements for plans established for the exclusive benefit of employees, apply to such conversion. A conversion may constitute a termination of an existing plan. For definition of a termination, see the regulations under section 411(d)(3) of the Code and section 4041(f) of the Act.
  6. Certain arrangements barred. (i) buy-sell agreements. An arrangement involving an ESOP that creates a put option must not provide for the issuance of put options other than as provided under Section 2550.408b-3\(j\), \(k\) and \(l\). Also, an ESOP must not otherwise obligate itself to acquire securities from a particular security holder at an indefinite time determined upon the happening of an event such as the death of the holder.
- b. Plan designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities. A plan constitutes an ESOP only if the plan specifically states that it is designed to invest primarily in qualifying employer securities. Thus, a stock bonus plan or a money purchase pension plan constituting an ESOP may invest part of its assets in other than qualifying employer securities. Such plan will be treated the same as other stock bonus plans or money purchase pension plans qualified under section 401(a) of the Code with respect to those investments.
  - c. Regulations of the secretary of the treasury. A plan constitutes an ESOP for a plan year only if it meets such other requirements as the Secretary of the Treasury may prescribe by regulation under section 4975\(e\)\(7\) of the Code. See 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11.

Loans to Plan Participants and Beneficiaries

Originally issued July 20, 1989 (54 FR 30520)

- a. (1) In General. Section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act of ERISA) exempts from the prohibitions of section 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\), and 406\(b\)\(2\) loans by a plan to parties in interest who are participants or beneficiaries of the plan, provided that such loans:
  - i. Are available to all such participants and beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis;
  - ii. Are not made available to highly compensated employees, officers or shareholders in an amount greater than the amount made available to other employees;
  - iii. Are made in accordance with specific provisions regarding such loans set forth in the plan;
  - iv. Bear a reasonable rate of interest; and
  - v. Are adequately secured.

The Internal Revenue Code (the Code) contains parallel provisions to section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. Effective, December 31, 1978, section 102 of Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (43 FR 47713, October 17, 1978) transferred the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to promulgate regulations of the type published herein to the Secretary of Labor. Therefore, all references herein to section 408(b)(1) of the Act should be read to include reference to the parallel provisions of section 4975\(d\)\(1\) of the Code.

Section 1114(b)(15)(B) of the Tax Reform Act of 1986 amended section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) of ERISA by deleting the phrase "highly compensated employees, officers or shareholders" and substituting the phrase "highly compensated employees (within the meaning of section 414(q) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986)." Thus, for plans with participant loan programs which are subject to the amended section 408(b)(1)(B), the requirements of this regulation should be read to conform with the amendment.

2. Scope. Section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act does not contain an exemption from acts described in section 406\(b\)\(3\) of the Act (prohibiting fiduciaries from receiving consideration for their own personal account from any party dealing with a plan in connection with a transaction involving plan assets). If a loan from a plan to a participant who is a party in interest with respect to that plan involves an act described in section 406\(b\)\(3\), such an act constitutes a separate transaction which is not exempt under section 408(b)(1) of the Act. The provisions of section 408(b)(1) are further limited by section 408\(d\) of the Act (relating to transactions with owner-employees and related persons).
3. Loans.
  - i. Section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act provides relief from the prohibitions of section 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\) and 406\(b\)\(2\) for the making of a participant loan. The term "participant loan" refers to a loan which is arranged and approved by the fiduciary administering the loan program primarily in the interest of the participant and which otherwise satisfies the criteria set forth in section 408(b)(1) of the Act. The existence of a participant loan or participant loan program will be determined upon consideration of all relevant facts and circumstances. Thus, for example, the mere presence of a loan document appearing to satisfy the requirements of section 408(b)(1) will not be dispositive of whether a participant loan exists where the subsequent administration of the loan indicates that the parties to the loan agreement did not intend the loan to be repaid. Moreover, a loan program containing a precondition designed to benefit a party in interest (other than the participant) is not afforded relief by section 408(b)(1) or this regulation. In this regard, section 408(b)(1) recognizes that a program of participant loans, like other plans investments, must be prudently established and administered for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and beneficiaries of the plan.
  - ii. For the purpose of this regulation, the term "loan" will include any renewal or modification of an existing loan agreement, provided that, at the time of each such renewal or modification, the requirements of section 408\(b\)\(1\) and this regulation are met.
4. Examples. The following examples illustrate the provisions of section 2550.408b-1\(a\).

Example (1): T, a trustee of plan P, has exclusive discretion over the management and disposition of plan assets. As a result, T is a fiduciary with respect to P under section 3\(21\)\(A\) of the Act and a party in interest with respect to P pursuant to section 3\(14\)\(A\) of the Act. T is also a participant in P. Among T's duties as fiduciary is the administration of a participant loan program which meets the requirements of section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. Pursuant to strict objective criteria stated under the program, T, who participates in all loan decisions, receives a loan on the same terms as other participants. Although the exercise of T's discretion on behalf of himself may constitute an act of self-dealing described in section 406\(b\)\(1\), section 408(b)(1) provides an exemption from section 406(b)(1). As a result, the loan from P to T would be exempt under section 408\(b\)\(1\), provided the conditions of that section are otherwise satisfied.

Example (2): P is a plan covering all the employees of E, the employer who established and maintained P. F is a fiduciary with respect to P and an officer of E. The plan documents governing P give F the authority to establish a participant loan program in accordance with section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. Pursuant to an arrangement with E, F establishes such a program but limits the use of loan funds to investments in a limited partnership which is established and maintained by E as general partner. Under these facts, the loan program and any loans made pursuant to this program are outside the scope of relief provided by section 408(b)(1) because the loan program is designed to operate for the benefit of E. Under the circumstance described, the diversion of plan assets for E's benefit would also violate sections 403\(c\)\(1\) and 404\(a\) of the Act.

Example (3): Assume the same facts as in Example 2, above, except that F does not limit the use of loan funds. However, E pressures his employees to borrow funds under P's participant loan program and then reloan the loan proceeds to E. F, unaware of E's activities, arranges and approves the loans. If the loans meet all the conditions of section 408\(b\)\(1\), such loans will be exempt under that section. However, E's activities would cause the entire transaction to be viewed as an indirect transfer of plan assets between P and E, who is a party in interest with respect to P, but not the participant borrowing from P. By coercing the employees to engage in loan transactions for its benefit, E has engaged in separate transactions that are not exempt under section 408(b)(1). Accordingly, E would be liable for the payment of excise taxes under section 4975 of the Code.

Example (4): Assume the same facts as in Example 2, above, except that, in return for structuring and administering the loan program as indicated, E agrees to pay F an amount equal to 10 percent of the funds loaned under the program. Such a payment would result in a separate transaction not covered by section 408\(b\)\(1\). This transaction would be prohibited under section 406\(b\)\(3\) since F would be receiving consideration from a party in connection with a transaction involving plan assets.

Example (5): F is a fiduciary with respect to plan P. D is a party in interest with respect to plan P. Section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act would prohibit F from causing P to lend money to D. However, F enters into an agreement with Z, a plan participant, whereby F will cause P to make a participant loan to Z with the express understanding that Z will subsequently lend the loan proceeds to D. An examination of Z's credit standing indicates that he is not creditworthy and would not, under normal circumstances, receive a loan under the conditions established by the participant loan program. F's decision to approve the participant loan to Z on the basis of Z's prior agreement to lend the money to D violates the exclusive purposes requirements of sections 403\(c\) and 404\(a\). In effect, the entire transaction is viewed as an indirect transfer of plan assets between P and D, and not a loan to a participant exempt under section 408\(b\)\(1\). Z's lack of credit standing would also cause the transaction to fail under section 408(b)(1)(A) of the Act.

Example (6): F is a fiduciary with respect to Plan P. Z is a plan participant. Z and D are both parties in interest with respect to P. F approves a participant loan to Z in accordance with the conditions established under the participant loan program. Upon receipt of the loan, Z intends to lend the money to D. If F has approved this loan solely upon consideration of those factors which would be considered in a normal commercial setting by an entity in the business of making comparable loans, Z's subsequent use of the loan proceeds will not affect the determination of whether loans under P's program satisfy the conditions of section 408\(b\)\(1\).

Example (7): A is the trustee of a small individual account plan. D, the president of the plan sponsor, is also a participant in the plan. Pursuant to a participant loan program meeting the requirements of section 408\(b\)\(1\), D applies for a loan to be secured by a parcel of real property. D does not intend to repay the loan; rather, upon eventual default, he will permit the property to be foreclosed upon and transferred to the plan in discharge of his legal obligation to repay the loan. A, aware of D's intention, approves the loan. D fails to make two consecutive quarterly payments of principal and interest under the note evidencing the loan thereby placing the loan in default. The plan then acquires the real property upon foreclosure. Such facts and circumstances indicate that the payment of money from the plan to D was not a participant loan eligible for the relief afforded by section 408(b)(1). In effect, this transaction is a prohibited sale or exchange of property between a plan and a party in interest from the time D receives the money.

Example (8): Plan P establishes a participant loan program. All loans are subject to the condition that the borrowed funds must be used to finance home purchases. Interest rates on the loans are the same as those charged by a local savings and loan association under similar circumstances. A loan by P to a participant to finance a home purchase would be subject to the relief provided by section 408\(b\)\(1\) provided that the conditions of 408(b)(1) are met. A participant loan program which is established to make loans for certain stated purposes (e.g., hardship, college tuition, home purchases, etc.) but which is not otherwise designed to benefit parties in interest (other than plan participants) would not, in itself, cause such program to be ineligible for the relief provided by section 408(b)(1). However, fiduciaries are cautioned that operation of a loan program with limitations may result in loans not being made available to all participants and beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis.

b. Reasonably Equivalent Basis.

1. Loans will not be considered to have been made available to participants and beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis unless:
  - i. Such loans are available to all plan participants and beneficiaries without regard to any individual's race, color, religion, sex, age or national origin;
  - ii. In making such loans, consideration has been given only to those factors which would be considered in a normal commercial setting by an entity in the business of making similar types of loans. Such factors may include the applicant's creditworthiness and financial need; and
  - iii. An evaluation of all relevant facts and circumstances indicates that, in actual practice, loans are not unreasonably withheld from any applicant.
2. A participant loan program will not fail the requirement of paragraph (b)(1) of this section or section 2550.408b-1\(c\) if the program establishes a minimum loan amount of up to $1,000, provided that the loans granted meet the requirements of section 2550.408b-1\(f\).
3. Examples. The following examples illustrate the provisions of section 2550.408b-1\(b\)\(1\):

Example (1): T, a trustee of plan P, has exclusive discretion over the management and disposition of plan assets. T's duties include the administration of a participant loan program which meets the requirements of section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. T receives a participant loan at a lower interest rate than the rate made available to other plan participants of similar financial condition or creditworthiness with similar security. The loan by P to T would not be covered by the relief provided by section 408(b)(1) because loans under P's program are not available to all plan participants on a reasonably equivalent basis.

Example (2): Same facts as in example 1 except that T is a member of a committee of trustees responsible for approving participant loans. T pressures the committee to refuse loans to other qualified participants in order to assure that the assets allocated to the participants loan program would be available for a loan by P to T. The loan by P to T would not be covered by the relief provided by section 408\(b\)\(1\) since participant loans have not been made available to all participants and beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis.

Example (3): T is the trustee of plan P, which covers the employees of E. A, B and C are employees of E, participants in P, and friends of T. The documents governing P provide that T, in his discretion, may establish a participant loan program meeting certain specified criteria. T institutes such a program and tells A, B and C of his decision. Before T is able to notify P's other participants and beneficiaries of the loan program, A, B, and C file loan applications which, if approved, will use up substantially all of the funds set aside for the loan program. Approval of these applications by T would represent facts and circumstances showing that loans under P's program are not available to all participants and beneficiaries on a reasonably equivalent basis.

c. Highly Compensated Employees.

1. Loans will not be considered to be made available to highly compensated employees, officers or shareholders in an amount greater than the amount made available to other employees if, upon consideration of all relevant facts and circumstances, the program does not operate to exclude large numbers of plan participants from receiving loans under the program.
2. A participant loan program will not fail to meet the requirement in paragraph (c)(1), of this section, merely because the plan documents specifically governing such loans set forth either (i) a maximum dollar limitation, or (ii) a maximum percentage of vested accrued benefit which no loan may exceed.
3. If the second alternative in paragraph (c)(2) of this section (maximum percentage of vested accrued benefit) is chosen, a loan program will not fail to meet this requirement solely because maximum loan amounts will vary directly with the size of the participant's accrued benefit.
4. Examples. The following examples illustrate the provisions of section 2550.408b-1\(c\).

Example (1): The documents governing plan P provide for the establishment of a participant loan program in which the amount of any loan under the program (when added to the outstanding balance of any other loans under the program to the same participant) does not exceed the lesser of (i) $50,000, or (ii) one-half of the present value of that participant's vested accrued benefit under the plan (but not less than $10,000). P's participant loan program does not fail to meet the requirement in section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act, and would be covered by the relief provided by section 408(b)(1) if the other conditions of that section are met.

Example (2): The documents governing plan T provide for the establishment of a participant loan program in which the minimum loan amount would be $25,000. The documents also require that the only security acceptable under the program would be the participant's vested accrued benefit. A, the plan fiduciary administering the loan program, finds that because of the restrictions in the plan documents only 20 percent of the plan participants, all of whom earn in excess of $75,000 a year, would meet the threshold qualifications for a loan. Most of these participants are high-level supervisors or corporate officers. Based on these facts, it appears that loans under the program would be made available to highly compensated employees in an amount greater than the amount made available to other employees. As a result, the loan program would fail to meet the requirements in section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(B\) of the Act and would not be covered by the relief provided in section 408(b)(1).

d. Specific Plan Provisions. For the purpose of section 408\(b\)\(1\) and this regulation, the Department will consider that participant loans granted or renewed at any time prior to the last day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1989, are made in accordance with specific provisions regarding such loans set forth in the plan if:

1. The plan provisions regarding such loans contain (at a minimum) an explicit authorization for the plan fiduciary responsible for investing plan assets to establish a participant loan program; and
2. For participant loans granted or renewed on or after the last day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1989, the participant loan program which is contained in the plan or in a written document forming part of the plan includes, but need not be limited to, the following:
  - i. The identify of the person or positions authorized to administer the participant loan program;
  - ii. A procedure for applying for loans;
  - iii. The basis on which loans will be approved or denied;
  - iv. Limitations (if any) on the types and amount of loans offered;
  - v. The procedure under the program for determining a reasonable rate of interest;
  - vi. The types of collateral which may secure a participant loan; and
  - vii. The events constituting default and the steps that will be taken to preserve plan assets in the event of such default.

Example (1): Plan P authorizes the trustee to establish a participant loan program in accordance with section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. Pursuant to this explicit authority, the trustee establishes a written program which contains all of the information required by section 2550.408b-1\(d\)\(2\). Loans made pursuant to this authorization and the written loan program will not fail under section 408(b)(1)(C) of the Act merely because the specific provisions regarding such loans are contained in a separate document forming part of the plan. The specific provisions describing the loan program whether contained in the plan or in a written document forming part of a plan, do affect the rights and obligations of the participants and beneficiaries under the plan and, therefore, must in accordance with section 102(a)(1) of the Act, be disclosed in the plan's summary plan description.

e. Reasonable Rate of Interest. A loan will be considered to bear a reasonable rate of interest if such loan provides the plan with a return commensurate with the rates of charged by persons in the business of lending money for loans which would be made under similar circumstances.

Example (1): Plan P makes a participant loan to A at the fixed interest rate of 8% for 5 years. The trustees, prior to making the loan, contacted two local banks to determine under what terms the banks would make a similar loan taking into account A's creditworthiness and the collateral offered. One bank would charge a variable rate of 10% adjusted monthly for a similar loan. The other bank would charge a fixed rate of 12% under similar circumstances. Under these facts, the loan to A would not bear a reasonable rate of interest because the loan did not provide P with a return commensurate with interest rates charged by persons in the business of lending money for loans which would be made under similar circumstances. As a result, the loan would fail to meet the requirement of section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(D\) and would not be covered by the relief provided by section 408(b)(1) if the Act.

Example (2): Pursuant to the provisions of plan P's participant loan program, T, the trustee of P, approves a loan to M, a participant and party in interest with respect to P. At the time of execution, the loan meets all of the requirements of section 408\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. The loan agreement provides that at the end of two years M must pay the remaining balance in full or the parties may renew for an additional two year period. At the end of the initial two year period, the parties agree to renew the loan for an additional two years. At the time of renewal, however, A fails to adjust the interest rate charged on the loan in order to reflect current economic conditions. As a result, the interest rate on the renewal fails to provide a "reasonable rate of interest" as required by section 408\(b\)\(1\)\(D\) of the Act. Under such circumstance, the loan would not be exempt under section 408(b)(1) of the Act from the time of renewal.

Example (3): The documents governing plan P's participant loan program provide that loans must bear an interest rate no higher than the maximum interest rate permitted under State X's usury law. Pursuant to the loan program, P makes a participant loan to A, a plan participant, at a time when the interest rates charged by financial institutions in the community (not subject to the usury limit) for similar loans are higher than the usury limit. Under these circumstances, the loan would not bear a reasonable rate of interest because the loan does not provide P with a return commensurate with the interest rates charged by persons in the business of lending money under similar circumstances. In addition, participant loans that are artificially limited to the maximum usury ceiling then prevailing call into question the status of such loans under sections 403\(c\) and 404\(a\) where higher yielding comparable investment opportunities are available to the plan.

f. Adequate Security.

1. A loan will be considered to be adequately secured if the security posed for such loan is something in addition to and supporting a promise to pay, which is so pledged to the plan that it may be sold, foreclosed upon, or otherwise disposed of upon default of repayment of the loan, the value and liquidity of which security is such that it may reasonably be anticipated that loss of principal or interest will not result from the loan. The adequacy of such security will be determined in light of the type and amount of security which would be required in the case of an otherwise identical transaction in a normal commercial setting between unrelated parties on arms'-length terms. A participant's vested accrued benefit under a plan may be used as security for a participant loan to the extent of the plan's ability to satisfy the participant's outstanding obligation in the event of default.
2. For purposes of this paragraph -
  - i. no more than 50% of the present value of a participant's vested accrued benefit may be considered by a plan as security for the outstanding balance of all plan loans made to that participant;
  - ii. a plan will be in compliance with paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section if, with respect to any participant, it meets the provisions of paragraph (f)(2)(i) of this section immediately after the origination of each participant loan secured in whole in part by that participant's vested accrued benefit; and
  - iii. any loan secured in whole or in part by a portion of a participant's vested accrued benefit must also meet the requirements of paragraph (f)(1) of this section.

- g. Effective date. This section is effective for all participant loans granted or renewed after October 18, 1989, except with respect to paragraph (d)(2) of this section relating to specific plan provisions. Paragraph (d)(2) of this section is effective for participant loans granted or renewed on or after the last day of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 1989.

Regulation 2550.408b-2

29 C.F.R. 2550.408b-2

Services or Office Space Class Exemption

Originally issued June 24, 1977 (42 FR 32390)

- a. In General. Section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) exempts from the prohibitions of section 406\(a\) of the Act payment by a plan to a party in interest, including a fiduciary, for office space or any service (or a combination of services) if (1) such office space or service is necessary for the establishment or operation of the plan (2) such office space or service is furnished under a contract or arrangement which is reasonable and (3) no more than reasonable compensation is paid for such office space or service. However, section 408(b)(2) does not contain an exemption from acts described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries dealing with the assets of plans in their own interest or for their own account), section 406\(b\)\(2\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries in their individual or in any other capacity acting in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or representing a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries) or section 406\(b\)\(3\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries receiving consideration for their own personal account from any party dealing with a plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan). Such acts are separate transactions not described in section 408\(b\)\(2\). See 2550.408b-2\(e\) and \(f\) for guidance as to whether transactions relating to the furnishing of office space or services by fiduciaries to plans involve acts described in section 406(b)(1) of the Act. Section 408(b)(2) of the Act does not contain an exemption from other provisions of the Act, such as section 404, or other provisions of law which may impose requirements or restrictions relating to the transactions which are exempt under section 408(b)(2). See, for example, section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The provisions of section 408(b)(2) of the Act are further limited by section 408\(d\) of the Act (relating to transactions with owner-employees and related persons).
- b. Necessary service. A service is necessary for the establishment or operation of a plan within the meaning of section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Act and 2550.408b-2(a)(1) if the service is appropriate and helpful to the plan obtaining the service in carrying out the purposes for which the plan is established or maintained. A person providing such a service to a plan (or a person who is a party in interest solely by reason of a relationship to such a service provider described in section 3\(14\)\(F\), \(G\), \(H\), or \(I\) of the Act) may furnish goods which are necessary for the establishment or operation of the plan in the course of, and incidental to, the furnishing of such service to the plan.
- c. Reasonable contract or arrangement. No contract or arrangement is reasonable within the meaning of section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Act and 2550.408b-2(a)(2) if it does not permit termination by the plan without penalty to the plan on reasonably short notice under the circumstances to prevent the plan from becoming locked into an arrangement that has become disadvantageous. A long-term lease which may be terminated prior to its expiration (without penalty to the plan) on reasonably short notice under the circumstances is not generally an unreasonable arrangement merely because of its long term. A provision in a contract or other arrangement which reasonably compensates the service provider or lessor for loss upon early termination of the contract, arrangement or lease is not a penalty. For example, a minimal fee in a service contract which is charged to allow recoupment of reasonable start-up costs is not a penalty. Similarly, a provision in a lease for a termination fee that covers reasonably foreseeable expenses related to the vacancy and reletting of the office space upon early termination of the lease is not a penalty. Such a provision does not reasonably compensate for loss if it provides for payment in excess of actual loss or if it fails to require mitigation of damages.

- d. Reasonable compensation. Section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Act and 2550.408b-2(a)(3) permit a plan to pay a party in interest reasonable compensation for the provision of office space or services described in section 408\(b\)\(2\). Section 2550.408c-2 of these regulations contains provisions relating to what constitutes reasonable compensation for the provision of services.
- e. Transactions with fiduciaries.
1. In General. If the furnishing of office space or a service involves an act described in section 406\(b\) of the Act (relating to acts involving conflicts of interest by fiduciaries), such an act constitutes a separate transaction which is not exempt under section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Act. The prohibitions of section 406\(b\) supplement the other prohibitions of section 406\(a\) of the Act by imposing on parties in interest who are fiduciaries a duty of undivided loyalty to the plans for which they act. These prohibitions are imposed upon fiduciaries to deter them from exercising the authority, control, or responsibility which makes such persons fiduciaries when they have interests which may conflict with the interests of the plans for which they act. In such cases, the fiduciaries have interests in the transactions which may affect the exercise of their best judgment as fiduciaries. Thus, a fiduciary may not use the authority, control, or responsibility which makes such person a fiduciary to cause a plan to pay an additional fee to such fiduciary (or to a person in which such fiduciary has an interest which may affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary) to provide a service. Nor may a fiduciary use such authority, control, or responsibility to cause a plan to enter into a transaction involving plan assets whereby such fiduciary (or a person in which such fiduciary has an interest which may affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary) will receive consideration from a third party in connection with such transaction. A person in which a fiduciary has an interest which may affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary includes, for example, a person who is a party in interest by reason of a relationship to such fiduciary described in section 3\(14\)\(E\), \(F\), \(G\), \(H\), or \(I\).
  2. Transactions not described in Section 406\(b\)\(1\). A fiduciary does not engage in an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act if the fiduciary does not use any of the authority, control or responsibility which makes such person a fiduciary to cause a plan to pay additional fees for a service furnished by such fiduciary or to pay a fee for a service furnished by a person in which such fiduciary has an interest which may affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary. This may occur, for example, when one fiduciary is retained on behalf of a plan by a second fiduciary to provide a service for an additional fee. However, because the authority, control or responsibility which makes a person a fiduciary may be exercised "in effect" as well as in form, mere approval of the transaction by a second fiduciary does not mean that the first fiduciary has not used any of the authority, control or responsibility which makes such person a fiduciary to cause the plan to pay the first fiduciary an additional fee for a service. See paragraph (f) below.
  3. Services without compensation. If a fiduciary provides services to a plan without the receipt of compensation or other consideration other than reimbursement of direct expenses properly and actually incurred in the performance of such services within the meaning of [2550.408c-2\(b\)\(3\)], the provision of such services does not, in and of itself, constitute an act described in section 406\(b\) of the Act. The allowance of a deduction to an employer under section 162 or 12 of the Code for the expense incurred in furnishing office space or services to a plan established or maintained by such employer does not constitute compensation or other consideration.
- f. Examples. The provisions of 2550.408b-2\(e\) may be illustrated by the following examples.

Example (1). E, an employer whose employees are covered by plan P, is a fiduciary of P. I is a professional investment adviser in which E has no interest which may affect the exercise of E's best judgment as a fiduciary. E causes P to retain I to provide certain kinds of investment advisory services of a type which causes I to be a fiduciary of P under section 3\(21\)\(A\)\(ii\) of the Act. Thereafter, I proposes to perform for additional fees portfolio evaluation services in addition to the services currently provided. The provision of such services is arranged by I and approved on behalf of the plan by E. I has not engaged in an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act, because I did not use any of the authority, control or responsibility which makes I a fiduciary (the provision of investment advisory services) to cause the plan to pay I additional fees for the provision of the portfolio evaluation services. E has not engaged in an act which is described in section 406\(b\)\(1\). E, as the fiduciary who has the responsibility to be prudent in this selection and retention of I and the other investment advisers of the plan, has an interest in the purchase by the plan of portfolio evaluation services. However, such an interest is not an interest which may affect the exercise of E's best judgment as a fiduciary.

Example (2). D, a trustee of plan P with discretion over the management and disposition of plan assets, relies on the advice of C, a consultant to P, as to the investment of plan assets, thereby making C a fiduciary of the plan. On January 1, 1978, C recommends to D that the plan purchase an insurance policy from U, an insurance company which is not a party in interest with respect to P. C thoroughly explains the reasons for the recommendation and makes a full disclosure concerning the fact that C will receive a commission from U upon the purchase of the policy by P. D considers the recommendation and approves the purchase of the policy by P. C receives a commission. Under such circumstances, C has engaged in an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act (as well as sections 406\(b\)\(2\) and \(3\) of the Act) because C is in fact exercising the authority, control or responsibility which makes C a fiduciary to cause the plan to purchase the policy. However, the transaction is exempt from the prohibited transaction provisions of section 406 of the Act, if the requirements of Prohibited Transaction Exemption 77-9 are met.

Example (3). Assume the same facts as in Example (2) except that the nature of C's relationship with the plan is not such that C is a fiduciary of P. The purchase of the insurance policy does not involve an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act (or sections 406\(b\)\(2\) or \(3\) of the Act) because such sections only apply to acts by fiduciaries.

Example (4). E, an employer whose employees are covered by plan P, is a fiduciary with respect to P. A, who is not a party in interest with respect to P, persuades E that the plan needs the services of a professional investment adviser and that A should be hired to provide the investment advice. Accordingly, E causes P to hire A to provide investment advice of the type which makes A a fiduciary under 2510.3-21\(c\)\(1\)\(ii\)\(B\). Prior to the expiration of A's first contract with P, A persuades E to cause P to renew A's contract with P to provide the same services for additional fees in view of the increased costs in providing such services. During the period of A's second contract, A provides additional investment advice services for which no additional charge is made. Prior to the expiration of A's second contract, A persuades E to cause P to renew his contract for additional fees in view of the additional services A is providing. A has not engaged in an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act, because A has not used any of the authority, control or responsibility which makes A a fiduciary (the provision of investment advice) to cause the plan to pay additional fees for A's services.

Example (5). F, a trustee of plan P with discretion over the management and disposition of plan assets, retains C to provide administrative services to P of the type which makes C a fiduciary under section 3\(21\)\(A\)\(iii\). Thereafter, C retains F to provide for additional fees actuarial and various kinds of administrative services in addition to the services F is currently providing to P. Both F and C have engaged in an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. F, regardless of any intent which he may have had at the time he retained C, has engaged in such an act because F has, in effect, exercised the authority, control or responsibility which makes F a fiduciary to cause the plan to pay F additional fees for the services. C, whose continued employment by P depends on F, has also engaged in such an act, because C has an interest in the transaction which might affect the exercise of C's best judgment as a fiduciary. As a result, C has dealt with plan assets in his own interest under section 406\(b\)\(1\).

Example (6). F, a fiduciary of plan P with discretionary authority respecting the management of P, retains S, the son of F, to provide for a fee various kinds of administrative services necessary for the operation of the plan. F has engaged in an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act because S is a person in whom F has an interest which may affect the exercise of F's best judgment as a fiduciary. Such act is not exempt under section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Act.

Act irrespective of whether the provision of the services by S is exempt.

Example (7). T, one of the trustees of plan P, is president of bank B. The bank proposes to provide administrative services to P for a fee. T physically absents himself from all consideration of B's proposal and does not otherwise exercise any of the authority, control or responsibility which makes T a fiduciary to cause the plan to retain B. The other trustees decide to retain B. T has not engaged in an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act. Further, the other trustees have not engaged in an act described in section 406(b)(1) merely because T is on the board of trustees of P. This fact alone would not make them have an interest in the transaction which might affect the exercise of their best judgment as fiduciaries.

Loans to Employee Stock Ownership Plans

Originally issued September 2, 1977 (42 FR 44385)

Technical corrections September 13, 1977 (42 FR 45907)

Amended April 30, 1984 (49 FR 18295)

a. Definitions. When used in this section, the terms listed below have the following meanings:

1. ESOP. The term "ESOP" refers to an employee stock ownership plan that meets the requirements of section 407\(d\)\(6\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and 29 C.F.R. 2550.407d-6. It is not synonymous with "stock bonus plan." A stock bonus plan must, however, be an ESOP to engage in an exempt loan. The qualification of an ESOP under section 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code (the Code) and 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11 will not be adversely affected merely because it engages in a non-exempt loan.
2. Loan. The term "loan" refers to a loan made to an ESOP by a party in interest or a loan to an ESOP which is guaranteed by a party in interest. It includes a direct loan of cash, a purchase-money transaction, and an assumption of the obligation of the ESOP. "Guarantee" includes an unsecured guarantee and the use of assets of a party in interest as collateral for a loan, even though the use of assets may not be a guarantee under applicable state law. An amendment of a loan in order to qualify as an exempt loan is not a refinancing of the loan or the making of another loan.
3. Exempt Loan. The term "exempt loan" refers to a loan that satisfies the provisions of this section. A "non-exempt loan" is one that fails to satisfy such provisions.
4. Publicly traded. The term "publicly traded" refers to a security that is listed on a national securities exchange registered under section 6 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78f) or that is quoted on a system sponsored by a national securities association registered under section 15A(b) of the Securities Exchange Act (15 U.S.C. 78o).
5. Qualifying Employer Security. The term "qualifying employer security" refers to a security described in 29 C.F.R. 2550.407d-5.

b. Statutory Exemption -

1. Scope. Section 408\(b\)\(3\) of the Act provides an exemption from the prohibited transaction provisions of sections 406\(a\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries dealing with the assets of plans in their own interest or for their own account) and 406\(b\)\(2\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries in their individual or in any other capacity acting in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or representing a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries). Section 408(b)(3) does not provide an exemption from the prohibitions of section 406\(b\)\(3\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries receiving consideration for their own personal account from any party dealing with a plan in connection with a transaction involving the income or assets of the plan).
2. Special scrutiny of transaction. The exemption under section 408\(b\)\(3\) includes within its scope certain transactions in which the potential for self-dealing by fiduciaries exists and in which the interests of fiduciaries may conflict with the interests of participants. To guard against these potential abuses, the Department of Labor will subject these transactions to special scrutiny to ensure that they are primarily for the benefit of participants and their beneficiaries. Although the transactions need not be arranged and approved by an independent fiduciary, fiduciaries are cautioned to scrupulously exercise their discretion in approving them. For example, fiduciaries should be prepared to demonstrate compliance with the net effect test and the arm's-length standard under paragraphs (c)(2) and (3) of this section. Also, fiduciaries should determine that the transaction is truly arranged primarily in the interest of participants and their beneficiaries rather than, for example, in the interest of certain selling shareholders.

c. Primary benefit requirement --

1. In General. An exempt loan must be primarily for the benefit of the ESOP participants and their beneficiaries. All the surrounding facts and circumstances, including those described in paragraphs (c)(2) and (3) of this section, will be considered in determining whether such loan satisfies this requirement. However, no loan will satisfy such requirement unless it satisfies the requirements of paragraphs (d), (e) and (f) of this section.
2. Net effect on plan assets. At the time that a loan is made, the interest rate for the loan and the price of securities to be acquired with the loan proceeds should not be such that plan assets might be drained off (Emphasis added).
3. Arm's-length standard. The terms of a loan, whether or not between independent parties, must, at the time the loan is made, be at least as favorable to the ESOP as the terms of a comparable loan resulting from arm's-length negotiations between independent parties.

d. Use of loan proceeds. The proceeds of an exempt loan must be used, within a reasonable time after their receipt, by the borrowing ESOP only for any or all of the following purposes:

1. To acquire qualifying employer securities.
2. To repay such loan.
3. To repay a prior exempt loan. A new loan, the proceeds of which are so used, must satisfy the provisions of this section. Except as provided in paragraphs (i) and (j) of this section or as otherwise required by applicable law, no security acquired with the proceeds of an exempt loan may be subject to a put, call, or other option, or buy-sell or similar arrangement while held by and when distributed from a plan, whether or not the plan is then an ESOP.

e. Liability and collateral of ESOP for loan. An exempt loan must be without recourse against the ESOP. Furthermore, the only assets of the ESOP that may be given as collateral on an exempt loan are qualifying employer securities of two classes: those acquired with the proceeds of the exempt loan and those that were used as collateral on a prior exempt loan repaid with the proceeds of the current exempt loan. No person entitled to payment under the exempt loan shall have any right to assets of the ESOP other than:

1. Collateral given for the loan,
2. Contributions (other than contributions of employer securities) that are made under an ESOP to meet its obligations under the loan, and
3. Earnings attributable to such collateral and the investment of such contributions.

The payments made with respect to an exempt loan by the ESOP during a plan year must not exceed an amount equal to the sum of such contributions and earnings received during or prior to the year less such payments in prior years. Such contributions and earnings must be accounted for separately in the books of account of the ESOP until the loan is repaid.

- f. Default. In the event of default upon an exempt loan, the value of plan assets transferred in satisfaction of the loan must not exceed the amount of default. If the lender is a party in interest, a loan must provide for a transfer of plan assets upon default only upon and to the extent of the failure of the plan to meet the payment schedule of the loan. For purposes of this paragraph, the making of a guarantee does not make a person a lender.
- g. Reasonable rate of interest. The interest rate of a loan must not be in excess of a reasonable rate of interest. All relevant factors will be considered in determining a reasonable rate of interest, including the amount and duration of the loan, the security and guarantee (if any) involved, the credit standing of the ESOP and the guarantor (if any), and the interest rate prevailing for comparable loans. When these factors are considered, a variable interest rate may be reasonable.
- h. Release from encumbrance --
  1. General rule. In general, an exempt loan must provide for the release from encumbrance of plan assets used as collateral for the loan under this paragraph. For each plan year during the duration of the loan, the number of securities released must equal the number of encumbered securities held immediately before release for the current plan year multiplied by a fraction. The numerator of the fraction is the amount of principal and interest paid for the year. The denominator of the fraction is the sum of the numerator plus the principal and interest to be paid for all future years. See Section 2550.408b-3(h)(4). The number of future years under the loan must be definitely ascertainable and must be determined without taking into account any possible extensions or renewal periods. If the interest rate under the loan is variable, the interest to be paid in future years must be computed by using the interest rate applicable as of the end of the plan year. If collateral includes more than one class of securities, the number of securities of each class to be released for a plan year must be determined by applying the same fraction to each class.
  2. Special rule. A loan will not fail to be exempt merely because the number of securities to be released from encumbrance is determined solely with reference to principal payments. However, if release is determined with reference to principal payments only, the following three additional rules apply. The first rule is that the loan must provide for annual payments of principal and interest at a cumulative rate that is not less rapid at any time than level annual payments of such amounts for 10 years. The second rule is that interest included in any payment is disregarded only to the extent that it would be determined to be interest under standard loan amortization tables. The third rule is that subdivision (2) is not applicable from the time that, by reason of a renewal, extension, or refinancing, the sum of the expired duration of the exempt loan, the renewal period, the extension period, and the duration of a new exempt loan exceeds 10 years.
  3. Caution against plan disqualification. Under an exempt loan, the number of securities released from encumbrance may vary from year to year. The release of securities depends upon certain employer contributions and earnings under the ESOP. Under 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11\(d\)\(2\), actual allocations to participants' accounts are based upon assets withdrawn from the suspense account. Nevertheless, for purposes of applying the limitations under section 415 of the Code to these allocations, under 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11\(a\)\(8\)\(iii\) contributions used by the ESOP to pay the loan are treated as annual additions to participants' accounts. Therefore, particular caution must be exercised to avoid exceeding the maximum annual additions under section 415 of the Code. At the same time, release from encumbrance in annually varying numbers may reflect a failure on the part of the employer to make substantial and recurring contributions to the ESOP which will lead to loss of qualification under section 401(a) of the Code. The Internal Revenue Service will observe closely the operation of ESOPs that release encumbered securities in varying annual amounts, particularly those that provide for the deferral of loan payments or for balloon payments. See 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-7\(b\)\(8\)\(iii\).
  4. Illustration. The general rule under paragraph (h)(1) of this section operates as illustrated in the following example:

Example. Corporation X establishes an ESOP that borrows $750,000 from a bank. X guarantees the loan which is for 15 years at 5% interest and is payable in level annual amounts of $72,256.72. Total payments on the loan are $1,083,850.80. The ESOP uses the entire proceeds of the loan to acquire 15,000 shares of X stock which is used as collateral for the loan. The number of securities to be released for the first year is 1,000 shares, i.e.,  $15,000 \text{ shares} \times $72,256.72 / $1,083,850.80 = 15,000 \text{ shares} \times 1/15$ . The number of securities to be released for the second year is 1,000 shares, i.e.,  $14,000 \text{ shares} \times $72,256.72 / $1,011,594.08 = 14,000 \text{ shares} \times 1/14$ . If all loan payments are made as originally scheduled, the number of securities released in each succeeding year of the loan will also be 1,000.

- i. Right of first refusal. Qualifying employer securities acquired with proceeds of an exempt loan may, but need not, be subject to a right of first refusal. However, any such right must meet the requirements of this paragraph. Securities subject to such right must be stock or an equity security, or a debt security convertible into stock or an equity security. Also, they must not be publicly traded at the time the right may be exercised. The right of first refusal must be in favor of the employer, the ESOP, or both in any order of priority. The selling price and other terms under the right must not be less favorable to the seller than the greater of the value of the security determined under 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11\(d\)\(5\), or the purchase price and other terms offered by a buyer, other than the employer or the ESOP, making a good faith offer to purchase the security. The right of first refusal must lapse no later than 14 days after the security holder gives written notice to the holder of the right that an offer by a third party to purchase the security has been received.
- j. Put option. A qualifying employer security acquired with the proceeds of an exempt loan by an ESOP after September 30, 1976, must be subject to a put option if it is not publicly traded when distributed or if it is subject to a trading limitation when distributed. For purposes of this paragraph, a "trading limitation" on a security is a restriction under any Federal or State securities law or any regulation thereunder, or an agreement (not prohibited by this section) affecting the security which would make the security not as freely tradable as one not subject to such restriction. The put option must be exercisable only by a participant, by the participant's donee(s), or by a person (including an estate or its distributees) to whom the security passes by reason of a participant's death. (Under this paragraph "participant" means a participant and the beneficiaries of the participant under the ESOP.) The put option must permit a participant to put the security to the employer. Under no circumstances may the put option bind the ESOP. However, it may grant the ESOP an option to assume the rights and obligations of the employer at the time that the put option is exercised. If it is known at the time a loan is made that Federal or state law will be violated by the employer's honoring such option, the put option must permit the security to be put, in a manner consistent with such law, to a third party (e.g., an affiliate of the employer or a shareholder other than the ESOP) that has substantial net worth at the time the loan is made and whose net worth is reasonably expected to remain substantial.

k. Duration of put option. --

1. General rule. A put option must be exercisable at least during a 15-month period which begins the date the security subject to the put option is distributed by the ESOP.
2. Special rule. In the case of a security that is publicly traded without restriction when distributed but ceases to be so traded within 15 months after distribution, the employer must notify each security holder in writing on or before the tenth day after the date the security ceases to be so traded that for the remainder of the 15-month period the security is subject to a put option. The number of days between the tenth day and the date on which notice is actually given, if later than the tenth day, must be added to the duration of the put option. The notice must inform distributee(s) of the terms of the put options that they are to hold. The terms must satisfy the requirements of paragraphs (j) through (i) of this section.

l. Other put option provisions. --

1. Manner of exercise. A put option is exercised by the holder notifying the employer in writing that the put option is being exercised.
2. Time excluded from duration of put option. The period during which a put option is exercisable does not include any time when a distributee is unable to exercise it because the party bound by the put option is prohibited from honoring it by applicable Federal or state law.
3. Price. The price at which a put option must be exercisable is the value of the security, determined in accordance with paragraph \(d\)\(5\) of 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11.
4. Payment terms. The provisions for payment under a put option must be reasonable. The deferral of payment is reasonable if adequate security and a reasonable interest rate are provided for any credit extended and if the cumulative payments at any time are no less than the aggregate of reasonable periodic payments as of such time. Periodic payments are reasonable if annual installments, beginning with 30 days after the date the put option is exercised, are substantially equal. Generally, the payment period may not end more than 5 years after the date the put option is exercised. However, it may be extended to a date no later than the earlier of 10 years from the date the put option is exercised or the date the proceeds of the loan used by the ESOP to acquire the security subject to such put option are entirely repaid.
5. Payment restrictions. Payment under a put option may be restricted by the terms of a loan, including one used to acquire a security subject to a put option, made before November 1, 1977. Otherwise, payment under a put option must not be restricted by the provisions of a loan or any other arrangement, including the terms of the employer's articles of incorporation, unless so required by applicable state law.

m. Other terms of loan. An exempt loan must be for a specific term. Such loan may not be payable at the demand of any person, except in the case of default.

n. Status of plan as ESOP. To be exempt, a loan must be made to a plan that is an ESOP at the time of such loan. However, a loan to a plan formally designated as an ESOP at the time of the loan that fails to be an ESOP because it does not comply with section 401 (a) of the Code or 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11 will be exempt as of the time of such loan if the plan is amended retroactively under section 401(b) of the Code or 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-11\(a\)\(4\).

o. Special rules for certain loans. --

1. Loans made before January 1, 1976. A loan made before January 1, 1976, or made afterwards under a binding agreement in effect on January 1, 1976 (or under renewals permitted by the terms of such an agreement on that date) is exempt for the entire period of such loan if it otherwise satisfies the provisions of this section for such period, even though it does not satisfy the following provisions of this section:

- i. The last sentence of paragraph (d);
- ii. Paragraphs (e), (f), and (h)(1) and (2); and
- iii. Paragraphs (i) through (m), inclusive.

2. Loans made after December 31, 1975, BUT BEFORE November 1, 1977. A loan made after December 31, 1975, but before November 1, 1977, or made afterwards under a binding agreement in effect on November 1, 1977, (or under renewals permitted by the terms of such an agreement on that date) is exempt for the entire period of such loan if it otherwise satisfies the provisions of this section for such period even though it does not satisfy the following provisions of this section:

- i. Paragraph (f);
- ii. The three provisions of paragraph (h)(2): and
- iii. Paragraph (i).

3. Release rule. Notwithstanding paragraphs (o)(1) and (2) of this section, if the proceeds of a loan are used to acquire securities after November 1, 1977, the loan must comply by such date with the provisions of paragraph (h) of this section.

4. Default rule. Notwithstanding paragraphs (o)(1) and (2) of this section, a loan by a party in interest other than a guarantor must satisfy the requirements of paragraph (f) of this section. A loan will satisfy these requirements if it is retroactively amended before November 1, 1977, to satisfy these requirements.

5. Put option rule. With respect to a security distributed before November 1, 1977, the put option provisions of paragraphs (j), (k), and (l) of this section will be deemed satisfied as of the date the security is distributed if by December 31, 1977, the security is subject to a put option satisfying such provisions. For purposes of satisfying such provisions, the security will be deemed distributed on the date the put option is issued. However, the put option provisions need not be satisfied with respect to a security that is not owned on November 1, 1977, by a person in whose hands a put option must be exercisable.

Department of Labor

Regulation 2550.408b-4

29 C.F.R. 2550.408b-4

Investment in Own-Bank Interest-Bearing Deposits

Originally issued June 24, 1977 (42 FR 32392)

a. In General.

Section 408\(b\)\(4\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) exempts from the prohibition of Section 406 of the Act the investment of all or a part of a plan's assets in deposits bearing a reasonable rate of interest in a bank or similar financial institution supervised by the United States or a State, even though such bank or similar financial institution is a fiduciary or other party in interest with respect to the plan, if the conditions of either Part 2550.408b-4\(b\)\(1\) or Part 2550.408b-4\(b\)\(2\) are met.

Section 408(b)(4) provides an exemption from Section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries dealing with the assets of plans in their own interest or for their own account) and 406\(b\)\(2\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries in their individual or in any other capacity acting in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party -- or representing a party -- whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries), as well as Section 406\(a\)\(1\), because Section 408(b)(4) contemplates a bank or similar financial institution causing a plan for which it acts as a fiduciary to invest plan assets in its own deposits if the requirements of Section 408(b)(4) are met.

However, it does not provide an exemption from Section 406\(b\)\(3\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries receiving consideration for their own personal account from any part dealing with a plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan). The receipt of such consideration is a separate transaction not described in the statutory exemption. Section 408\(b\)\(4\) does not contain an exemption from other provisions of the Act, such as Section 404, or other provisions of law which may impose requirements or restrictions relating to the transactions which are exempt under Section 408(b)(4) of the Act. See, for example, Section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code). The provisions of Section 408(b)(4) of the Act are further limited by Section 408(d) of the Act (relating to transactions with owner-employees and related persons).

b. (1) Plan Covering Own Employees.

Such investment may be made if the plan is one which covers only the employees of the bank or similar financial institution, the employees of any of its affiliates, or the employees of both.

(2) Other Plans.

Such investment may be made if -

- The investment is expressly authorized by a provision of the plan or trust instrument, or
- The investment is expressly authorized (or made) by a fiduciary of the plan (other than the bank or similar financial institution or any of its affiliates) who has authority to make such investments, or to instruct the trustee or other fiduciary with respect to investments, and who has no interest in the transaction which may affect the exercise of such authorizing fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary so as to cause such authorization to constitute an act described in Section 406\(b\) of the Act.

Any authorization to make investments contained in a plan or trust instrument will satisfy the requirement of express authorization for investments made prior to November 1, 1977.

Effective November 1, 1977, in the case of a bank or similar financial institution that invests plan assets in deposits in itself or its affiliates under an authorization contained in a plan or trust instrument, such authorization -

- Must name such bank or similar financial institution, and
- Must state that such bank or similar financial institution may make investments in deposits which bear a reasonable rate of interest in itself (or in an affiliate).

(3) Example.

B, a bank, is the trustee of plan P's assets. The trust instruments give the trustees the right to invest plan assets in its discretion. B invests in the certificates of deposit of bank C, which is a fiduciary of the plan by virtue of performing certain custodial and administrative services. The authorization is sufficient for the plan to make such an investment under Section 408\(b\)\(4\). Further, such authorization would suffice to allow B to make investments in deposits in itself prior to November 1, 1977. However subsequent to October 31, 1977, B may not invest in deposits in itself, unless the plan or trust instrument authorizes it to invest in deposits of B.

c. Definitions.

1. The term "bank or similar financial institutions" . . . includes a bank (as defined in Section 581 of the Code), a domestic building and loan association (as defined in Section 7701(a)(19) of the Code) . . .
2. A person is an "affiliate" of a bank or similar financial institution if such person and such bank or similar financial institution would be treated as members of the same controlled group of corporations or as members of two or more trades or businesses under common control within the meaning of Section 414(b) or (c) of the Code and regulations thereunder.
3. The term "deposits" includes any account, temporary or otherwise, upon which a reasonable rate of interest is paid, including a certificate of deposit issued by a bank or similar financial institution.

Note: Also refer to ERISA Section 408\(b\)\(4\), "Investment in Own-Bank Interest-Bearing Deposits".

Regulation 2550.408b-6

29 C.F.R. 2550.408b-6

Ancillary Services by Banks or Similar Financial Institutions

Originally issued June 24, 1977 (42 FR 32392)

Technical corrections of July 18, 1977 (42 FR 36823)

did not contain any changes to this regulation

- a. In General. Section 408\(b\)\(6\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) exempts from the prohibitions of section 406 of the Act the provision of certain ancillary services by a bank or similar financial institution (as defined in 2550.408b-4\(c\)\(1\)) supervised by the United States or a State to a plan for which it acts as a fiduciary if the conditions of 2550.408b-6\(b\) are met. Such ancillary services include services which do not meet the requirements of section 408(b)(2) of the Act because the provision of such services involves an act described in section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries dealing with the assets of plans in their own interest or for their own account) by the fiduciary bank or similar financial institution or an act described in section 406\(b\)\(2\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries in their individual or in any other capacity acting in any transaction involving the plan on behalf of a party (or representing a party) whose interests are adverse to the interests of the plan or the interests of its participants or beneficiaries). Section 408(b)(6) provides an exemption from sections 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) because section 408(b)(6) contemplates the provision of such ancillary services without the approval of a second fiduciary (as described in 2550.408b-2\(e\)\(2\)) if the conditions of 2550.408b-6(b) are met. Thus, for example, plan assets held by a fiduciary bank which are reasonably expected to be needed to satisfy current plan expenses may be placed by the bank in a non-interest-bearing checking account in the bank if the conditions of 2550.408b-6(b) are met, notwithstanding the provisions of section 408\(b\)\(4\) of the Act (relating to investments in bank deposits). However, section 408(b)(6) does not provide an exemption for an act described in section 406\(b\)\(3\) of the Act (relating to fiduciaries receiving consideration for their own personal account from any party dealing with a plan in connection with a transaction involving the assets of the plan). The receipt of such consideration is a separate transaction not described in section 408(b)(6). Section 408(b)(6) does not contain an exemption from other provisions of the Act, such as section 404, or other provisions of law which may impose requirements or restrictions relating to the transactions which are exempt under section 408(b)(6) of the Act. See, for example, section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954. The provisions of section 408(b)(6) of the Act are further limited by section 408\(d\) of the Act (relating to transactions with owner-employees and related persons).
- b. Conditions. Such service must be provided -
  1. At not more than reasonable compensation;
  2. Under adequate internal safeguards which assure that the provision of such service is consistent with sound banking and financial practice, as determined by Federal or State supervisory authority; and
  3. Only to the extent that such service is subject to specific guidelines issued by the bank or similar financial institution which meet the requirements of 2550.408b-6(c).
- c. Specific guidelines. (Reserved)

Compensation for Services

Originally issued June 24, 1977 (42 FR 32393)

- a. In General. Section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) refers to the payment of reasonable compensation by a plan to a party in interest for services rendered to the plan. Section 408\(c\)\(2\) of the Act and Section 2550.408c-2(b)(1) through 2550.408c-2(b)(4) clarify what constitutes reasonable compensation for such services.
- b. (1) General Rule. Generally, whether compensation is "reasonable" under sections 408\(b\)\(2\) and 408\(c\)\(2\) of the Act depends on the particular facts and circumstances of each case.
  1. Payments to certain fiduciaries. Under sections 408\(b\)\(2\) and 408\(c\)\(2\) of the Act, the term "reasonable compensation" does not include any compensation to a fiduciary who is already receiving full-time pay from an employer or association of employers (any of whose employees are participants in the plan) or from an employee organization (any or whose members are participants in the plan), except for the reimbursement of direct expenses properly and actually incurred and not otherwise reimbursed. The restrictions of this paragraph (b)(2) do not apply to a party in interest who is not a fiduciary.
  2. Certain expenses not direct expenses. An expense is not a direct expense to the extent it would have been sustained had the service not been provided or if it represents an allocable portion of overhead costs.
  3. Expense advances. Under sections 408\(b\)\(2\) and 408\(c\)\(2\) of the Act, the term "reasonable compensation", as applied to a fiduciary or an employee of a plan, includes an advance to such a fiduciary or employee by the plan to cover direct expenses to be properly and actually incurred by such person in the performance of such person's duties with the plan if:
    - i. The amount of such advance is reasonable with respect to the amount of the direct expense which is likely to be properly and actually incurred in the immediate future (such as during the next month) and
    - ii. The fiduciary or employee accounts to the plan at the end of the period covered by the advance for the expenses properly and actually incurred.
  4. Excessive compensation. Under sections 408\(b\)\(2\) and 408\(c\)\(2\) of the Act, any compensation which would be considered excessive under 26 C.F.R. 1.162-7 (Income Tax Regulations relating to compensation for personal services which constitutes an ordinary and necessary trade or business expense) will not be "reasonable compensation". Depending upon the facts and circumstances of the particular situation, compensation which is not excessive under 26 C.F.R. 1.162-7 may, nevertheless, not be "reasonable compensation" within the meaning of sections 408(b)(2) and 408(c)(2) of the Act.

Qualifying Employer Securities and Real Estate

Acquisition or Sale of Qualifying Employer Securities

Acquisition/Sale/Lease of Qualifying Employer Real Estate

Originally issued August 1, 1980 (45 FR 51197)

- a. In General. Section 408\(e\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) exempts from the prohibitions of section 406\(a\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of the Act any acquisition or sale by a plan of qualifying employer securities (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(5\) of the Act), or any acquisition, sale or lease by a plan of qualifying employer real property (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(4\) of the Act) if certain conditions are met. The conditions are that:
1. The acquisition, sale or lease must be for adequate consideration (which is defined in paragraph (d) of this section);
  2. No commission may be charged directly or indirectly to the plan with respect to the transaction; and
  3. In the case of an acquisition or lease of qualifying employer real property, or an acquisition of qualifying the securities, by a plan other than an eligible individual account plan (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(3\) of the Act), the acquisition or lease must comply with the requirements of section 407\(a\) of the Act.
- b. Acquisition. For purposes of section 408\(e\) and this section, an acquisition by a plan of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property shall include, but not be limited to, an acquisition by purchase, by the exchange of plan assets, by the exercise of warrants or rights, by the conversion of a security, by default of a loan where the qualifying employer security or qualifying employer real property was security for the loan, or in connection with the contribution of such securities or real property to the plan. However, an acquisition of a security shall not be deemed to have occurred if a plan acquires the security as a result of a stock dividend or stock split.
- c. Sale. For purposes of section 408\(e\) and this section, a sale of qualifying employer real property or qualifying employer securities shall include any disposition for value.
- d. Adequate consideration. For purposes of section 408\(e\) and this section, adequate consideration means:
1. In the case of a marketable obligation, a price not less favorable to the plan than the price determined under section 407\(e\)\(1\) of the Act and
  2. In all other cases, a price not less favorable to the plan than the price determined under section 3\(18\) of the Act.
- e. Commission. For purposes of section 408\(e\) and this section, the term "commission" includes any fee, commission or similar charge paid in connection with a transaction, except that the term "commission" does not include a charge incurred for the purpose of enabling the appropriate plan fiduciaries to evaluate the desirability of entering into a transaction to which this section would apply, such as an appraisal or investment advisory fee.

Individual and Class Prohibited Transaction Exemption Requests \(Replaces ERISA Procedure 75-1\)

Originally issued August 10, 1990 (55 FR 32847)

§ .35 Amended through April 12, 1991 (56 FR 14861)

Agency: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Labor.

Action: Final regulation and removal of interim final regulation.

Summary: This document contains a final regulation that describes the procedures for filing and processing applications for exemptions from the prohibited transaction provisions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code), and the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986 (FERSA). At this time, the Department is also removing an interim regulation which describes the exemption procedures under FERSA because such regulation is superseded by the final regulation contained herein. The Secretary of Labor is authorized to grant exemptions from the prohibited transaction provisions of ERISA, the Code, and FERSA and to establish an exemption procedure to provide for such exemptions. The final regulation updates the description of the Department of Labor's procedures to reflect changes in the Department's exemption authority and to clarify the procedures by providing a more comprehensive description of the prohibited transaction exemption process.

Note

In 1995, the Labor Department also issued a booklet, Exemption Procedures Under Federal Pension Law, explaining how to obtain ERISA exemptions. The text of the exemption request procedure is included in the booklet. The free booklet is available from the Division of Public Affairs; Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration; U.S. Department of Labor; 200 Constitution Avenue, NW; Washington, DC 20210; phone 202/219-8921.

Effective Date: This regulation is effective September 10, 1990, and applies to all exemption applications filed at any time on or after that date.

Supplementary information: Public reporting burden for this collection of information is estimated to average 28.5 hours per response, including the time for reviewing the instructions, searching existing data sources, gathering and maintaining the data needed, and completing and reviewing the collection of information. Send comments regarding this burden estimate or any other aspect of this collection of information, including suggestions for reducing the burden, to Director, Office of Information Management, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue NW., Room N-1301, Washington, DC 20210; and to the Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Attn: OMB Desk Officer for PWBA, Office of Management and Budget, Room 3001, Washington, DC 20503.

Section 406 of ERISA prohibits certain transactions between employee benefit plans and "Parties in interest" (as defined in section 3(14) of ERISA). In addition, sections 406 and 407(a) of ERISA impose restrictions on plan investments in "employer securities" (as defined in section 407(d)(1) of ERISA) and "employer real property" (as defined in section 407(d)(2) of ERISA). Most of the transactions prohibited by section 406 of ERISA are likewise prohibited by section 4975 of the Code, which imposes an excise tax on those transactions to be paid by each "disqualified person" (defined in section 4975(e)(2) of the Code in virtually the same manner as the term "party in interest") who participates in the transactions.

Both ERISA and the Code contain various statutory exemptions from the prohibited transaction rules. In addition, section 408(a) of ERISA authorizes the Secretary of Labor to grant administrative exemptions from the restrictions of ERISA sections 406 and 407(a) while section 4975(c)(2) of the Code authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury or his delegate to grant exemptions from the prohibitions of Code section 4975(c)(1). Sections 408(a) of ERISA and 4975(c)(2) of the Code direct the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of the Treasury, respectively, to establish procedures to carry out the purposes of these sections.

Under section 3003(b) of ERISA, the Secretary of Labor and the Secretary of the Treasury are directed to consult and coordinate with each other with respect to the establishment of rules applicable to the granting of exemptions from the Prohibited transaction restrictions of ERISA and the Code. Under section 3004 of ERISA, moreover, the Secretaries are authorized to develop jointly rules appropriate for the efficient administration of ERISA. Pursuant to these provisions, the Secretaries jointly issued an exemption procedure on April 28, 1975 (ERISA Proc. 75-1, 40 FR 18471, also issued as Rev. Proc. 75-26, 1975-1 C.B. 722). Under these procedures, a person seeking an exemption under both section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code was obliged to file an exemption application with the Rules and Regulations of the Internal Revenue Service as well as with the Department of Labor.

Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (43 FR 47713, October 17, 1978, effective on December 31, 1978), transferred the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue exemptions under section 4975 of the Code, with certain enumerated exceptions, to the Secretary, of Labor. As a result, the Secretary of Labor now possesses authority under section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, as well as under section 408(a) of ERISA, to issue individual and class exemptions from the prohibited transaction rules of ERISA and the Code. The Secretary has delegated this authority, along with most of his other responsibilities under ERISA, to the Assistant Secretary for Pension and Welfare Benefits. See Secretary of Labor's Order 1-87, 52 FR 13139 (April 21, 1987).

FERSA also contains prohibited transaction rules that are applicable to parties in interest with respect to the Federal Thrift Savings Fund established by ERISA, and the Secretary of Labor is directed to prescribe, by regulation, a procedure for granting administrative exemptions from certain of those prohibited transactions. See 5 USC 8477(c)(3).

On June 28, 1988, the Department published a proposed rule in the Federal Register (53 FR 24422) updating ERISA Procedure 75-1 to reflect the changes made by Reorganization Plan No. 4 and extending the procedure to applications for exemptions from the FERSA prohibited transaction rules. In addition, the proposed regulation codified various procedures developed by PWBA since the adoption of ERISA Proc. 75-1. Formal adoption of those procedures will facilitate review of exemption applications. These new procedures also fill in some of the gaps left in ERISA Proc. 75-1, thereby providing a more detailed description both of the steps to be taken by applicants in applying for exemptions and the steps normally taken by the Department in processing such applications. Finally, the proposed regulation modified some of the procedures described in ERISA Proc. 75-1 to better serve the needs of the administrative exemption program as demonstrated by the Department's experience with the program over the previous fourteen years. These amendments were intended to promote the prompt and fair consideration of all exemption applications.

The notice of proposed rulemaking gave interested persons an opportunity to comment on the proposal. In response, the Department received three letters of comment regarding several aspects of the proposed regulation. The following discussion summarizes the proposed regulation and the issues raised by the commentators and explains the Department's reasons for adopting the provisions of the final regulation.

The Scope of the Regulation

As explained in the notice of proposed rulemaking, the regulation establishes new procedures to replace ERISA Proc. 75-1. These new procedures reflect changes in the Department of Labor's exemption authority effected by Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978. Thus, the procedures apply to all applications for exemption which the Department has authority to issue under section 408(a) of ERISA, or, as a result of Reorganization Plan No. 4, under section 4975(c)(2) of the Code. The procedures reflect current practice under which the Department generally treats any exemption application filed solely under section 408(a) of ERISA or solely under section 4275(c)(2) of the Code as an application for exemption filed under both of these sections if the application relates to a transaction prohibited under corresponding provisions of both ERISA and the Code. The grant of an exemption by the Department in such instances protects disqualified persons covered by the exemption from the excise taxes otherwise assessable under section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code.

However, the procedures do not apply to applications for exemption reserved to the jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Treasury by Reorganization Plan No. 4. To ascertain the correct procedures for filing and processing applications for these exemptions, applicants should consult the Internal Revenue Service.

The Department has also concluded that it is appropriate to apply the procedures provided here to exemption applications filed under FERSA, as well as those filed under ERISA or the Code, as provided by proposed § 2570.30, which has been adopted without change in the final regulation. Although the prohibited transaction provisions of FERSA and the scope of the Department's exemptive authority under FERSA differ somewhat from that under ERISA and the Code, administrative exemption matters under FERSA are likely to involve many of the issues as are presented by similar matters involving private plans. Thus, adopting uniform procedures should help assure uniform administration of the exemption programs.

Applications for Exemption under FERSA

On December 29, 1988, the Department published an interim regulation in the Federal Register (29 C.F.R. part 2585, 53 FR 52088) describing the procedures for filing and processing applications for exemptions from the prohibited transaction provisions of FERSA. For such applications, the interim regulation adopted the procedures then currently followed (pursuant to ERISA Proc. 75-1) by applicants for exemptions from the prohibited transaction provisions of ERISA and the Code. The interim final regulation was effective commencing December 29, 1988 until the effective date of the final regulation contained herein for all prohibited transaction exemption applications (under ERISA, the Code and FERSA).<sup>1</sup>

Section 2585.12 of the interim regulation provides that this regulation shall expire on the effective date of the revised prohibited transaction exemption procedure, published in proposed form on June 28, 1988, 53 FR 24422, and that the Department will publish a document removing these interim regulations when it adopts final regulations based on the published proposal. Accordingly, this notice of final rulemaking removes the interim regulations, as of September 10, 1990, the effective date of the final regulation contained herein.

In regard to FERSA exemption applications, the Department received a comment relating to the adoption of ERISA class exemptions for FERSA purposes. This comment suggested that the final regulation clarify that the Department will follow the procedure authorized under section 8477(c)(3)(E) of FERSA, which permits the Secretary of Labor to determine that an exemption granted for any class of fiduciaries or transactions under section 408(a) of ERISA shall constitute an exemption for FERSA purposes upon publication of notice in the Federal Register without affording interested parties opportunities to present their views (in writing or at a hearing).

The procedures described in the preceding paragraph was not used in conjunction with the Department's adoption for FERSA purposes of a number of specific class exemptions under ERISA (for example, Prohibited Transaction Exemptions (PTE) 75-1, 78-19, 80-26, 80-51, 82-63 and 86-128). In that instance, the Department published in the Federal Register both a notice of proposed adoption of class exemptions under ERISA (53 FR 38105, September 29, 1988), which invited the public to submit written comments or requests for a hearing on the proposed adoption, and also a notice of final adoption of these class exemptions (PTE T88-1, 53 FR 52838, December 29, 1988). In this regard, the Department notes that, with respect to ERISA class exemptions which may be proposed in the future and which may also be relevant under FERSA, the Department will solicit the views of the Executive Director of the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board in advance of the publication of the proposed exemption to determine whether such exemption should also be proposed for FERSA purposes.

Also regarding FERSA exemption applications, the Department received another comment requesting clarification that the mere existence of routine audit activity conducted by the Department pursuant to the requirements of section 8477(g) of FERSA<sup>2</sup> will not provide a basis for denial of, or failure to consider, an application for exemption under FERSA. It is the view of the Department that those audits conducted by the Department in carrying out its responsibilities in connection with its regular program of compliance audits under FERSA section 8477(g) would not constitute an "investigation" for purposes of § 2570.33(a)(2) and 2570.37(b) of the regulation<sup>3</sup> or an "examination" for purposes of § 2570.35(a)(7).<sup>4</sup> The Department would not, however, be precluded from denying, or failing to consider, an application based on an investigation prompted by information arising as a result of such a routine audit.

Definitions

Section 2570.31 of the proposed regulation defined the following terms for purposes of the exemption procedures: affiliate, class exemption, Department, exemption transaction, individual exemption, and party in interest. No comments were received regarding these definitions which are adopted in the final regulation as proposed. However, the Department has added to this section a definition of the term "pooled fund" in response to a comment requesting that a special rule be added to the final regulation regarding information to be furnished in exemption applications relating to plans affected by an exemption transaction undertaken by a pooled investment vehicle. (This comment is discussed in more detail below.)

Who May Apply for Exemptions

Section 2570.32(a) of the proposed regulation provided that exemption proceedings may be initiated by the Department either on its own motion or upon the application of: (1) Any party in interest to a plan which is or may be a party to the exemption transaction, (2) any plan which is a party to the exemption transaction, or (3) an association or organization representing parties in interest who may be parties to an exemption transaction covering a class of parties in interest or a class of transactions.

One of the comments received recommended modifying this paragraph of the regulation to permit an exemption application to be filed by any fiduciary or prospective fiduciary with respect to plan assets under such fiduciary's management or control, regardless of whether such fiduciary either represents a specific plan with respect to the exemption application or would be a party to the exemption transaction. The commentator clarified his comment by explaining that he intended this category of applicants to cover prospective fiduciaries, such as persons creating and/or managing a new investment vehicle in which plans are expected to participate if the requested exemption is granted, but in which no plans participate at the time the exemption application is filed. The commentator noted that in the past the Department has granted individual exemptions to institutional investment managers in connection with their investment management of individual plans' investment accounts or pooled investment funds in which several unidentified plans may participate.

In the Department's view, the reference in proposed § 2570.32(a)(1) to "any party in interest to a plan who is or may be a party to the exemption transaction" includes the prospective fiduciaries mentioned by the commentator. Therefore, § 2570.32(a) is adopted in the final regulation without change.

Section 2570.32(b) and (c) of the proposed regulation set forth simplified rules relating to representation of applicants by third parties. No comments were received regarding these paragraphs, which are adopted in the final regulation without change.

Applications the Department Will Not Ordinarily Consider

Section 2570.33(a) of the proposed regulation described the circumstances under which the Department will not ordinarily consider the merits of an exemption application. Thus, this paragraph provided that the Department will not ordinarily consider an incomplete application. In this regard, the Department emphasizes that applicants should not file exemption applications until they have compiled all the information required by § 2570.34 and, if applicable, § 2570.35, and can submit this information in an organized and comprehensive fashion together with all necessary supporting documents and statements. In addition, the proposal made it clear that the Department ordinarily will not consider applications that involve a transaction, or a party in interest with respect to such transaction, that is the subject of an ERISA enforcement action or investigation. In certain cases, however, the Department may exercise its discretion to consider exemption applications in these categories where, for example, deficiencies in the exemption application are merely technical, or where an enforcement matter is clearly unrelated to the exemption transaction.

One comment was received specifically regarding investigations, and it is discussed above under the heading "Applications for Exemption under FERSA." In addition, the Department has amended § 2570.33(a)(2) (relating to certain investigations and enforcement actions) to conform to a similar revision to § 2570.35(a)(7) (discussed below) made in response to two other comments received regarding the proposed requirement to include information in an application concerning certain investigations, examinations, litigation, or continuing controversy involving specified Federal agencies with respect to any plan or party in interest involved in the exemption transaction. The effect of these amendments is to expand the proposed regulation in order to broaden the scope of exemption applications which the Department will ordinarily consider.

No comments were received on paragraphs (b) and (c) of proposed § 2570.33, which are adopted without change in the final regulation. These paragraphs relate to the Department's written explanation to an applicant whose exemption application the Department has decided not to consider, and to applications for individual exemption relating to transaction(s) covered by a class exemption under consideration by the Department.

Exemption Application Contents - General Information

As previously noted in the proposed regulation, the Department's experience to date with the administrative exemption program suggests that the program's efficiency could be increased and applicants can receive more timely treatment of their applications for exemption if the quality of exemption applications filed were improved. In the past, applications have been incomplete, have omitted or misstated facts or legal analyses needed to justify requests for exemptive relief, and in some cases have been so poorly drafted that the details of the transactions for which exemptive relief is sought ("exemption transactions") are unclear. The time and effort required to deal with such deficient applications and to obtain accurate and complete information about exemption transactions have contributed to processing delays. Moreover, in many exemption applications, the discussion of the substantive basis for the exemption does not take adequate account of positions adopted by the Department with respect to other similar applications.

The proposed regulation attempted to address these problems in a number of ways. First, the proposal required that applicants provide more complete information in their applications about exemption transactions and about the plans and the parties in interest involved in those transactions. The Department's experience suggests that this additional information is very helpful, and often essential, for a complete understanding of the exemption transaction and of the context surrounding it, and that the omission of such additional information in exemption applications will delay review of these applications on their merits.

For the same reason the proposed regulation required filing with the exemption copies of the relevant portions of documents. By filing comprehensive applications with necessary supporting documentation, applicants can do much to facilitate the Department's review of requested exemptions and to expedite the exemption process as a whole.

To further expedite the exemption process, the proposed regulation required that an applicant include with his application a statement explaining why the requested exemption satisfies requirements set forth in sections 408(a) of ERISA and 4975(c)(2) of the Code and 5 USC 84711(c)(3)(C) that an exemption be:

1. Administratively feasible;
2. In the interests of the plan and of its participants and beneficiaries; and
3. Protective of the rights of the plan's participants and beneficiaries.

This requirement is not new. Under ERISA Proc. 75-1, applicants have been required to include with their applications statements explaining why a requested exemption satisfies the statutory prerequisites for an exemption. Too often, however, applicants have attempted to satisfy this requirement with generalizations and perfunctory assurances about the benefits to be reaped by plans and their participants and beneficiaries from the proposed exemption.

The Department will not seek out reasons to grant an exemption that has not been adequately justified by an applicant. Indeed, the Department considers that it is the responsibility of applicants to demonstrate clearly that exemptions they are requesting meet statutory criteria. Accordingly, under both the proposed and the final regulation, applicants are expected to review the statutory criteria for granting administrative exemptions and explain with as much specificity as possible why a requested exemption would pose no administrative problems, what benefits affected plans and their participants and beneficiaries can expect to receive from it, and what conditions would be attached to protect the rights of participants and beneficiaries of affected plans.<sup>5</sup>

Under ERISA Proc. 75-1, applicants have been given the option, but have not been required, to submit a draft of the proposed exemption. Both the proposed and the final regulation preserve this option. However, while not requiring the submission of a draft of the proposed exemption, the Department recommends that applicants include in their exemption applications draft language which defines the scope of the requested exemption, including the specific conditions under which the proposed exemption would apply. A draft which explains the exemption requested in a clear and concise manner and focuses on what the applicant considers to be the essential features of the exemption transaction and the critical safeguards supporting the requested relief is likely to facilitate the process of review. Obviously, the degree of detail necessary to describe the proposed exemption adequately will vary depending on the complexity of the transaction and the kind of relief requested.

Section 2570.34 of the proposed regulation listed the information that is required in every exemption application, whether it be an application for individual or class exemption. In addition, the information specified in § 2570.35 of the regulation must be included in applications for individual exemptions. Some specific items of information are described below.

Shared Representation

Section 2570.34(a)(3) of the proposed regulation required each exemption application to disclose whether the same person will represent both the plan and the parties in interest involved in an exemption transaction in matters relating to the application. The proposal noted that such shared representation may raise questions under the exclusive purpose and prudence requirements of sections 403(b) and 404(a) of ERISA and under the prohibited transaction provisions of section 406 of ERISA and section 4975(c)(1) of the Code. No comments have been received regarding this subparagraph, which is adopted as proposed.

Third-Party Declarations

Section 2570.34(b)(5)(iii) of the proposed regulation required a declaration under penalty of perjury to accompany specialized statements from third-party experts submitted to support an exemption application, such as appraisals, analyses of market conditions, or opinions of independent fiduciaries. Specifically, the proposal required a declaration under penalty of perjury that to the best of the expert's knowledge and belief, the representations made in the specialized statement are true and correct. This declaration was to be dated and signed by the expert who prepared the statement.

One of the commenters urged deletion of this requirement and expressed concern that it would cause additional expense to applicants because new third-party statements would be required once the appraiser, engineer, financial specialist, or other expert became aware of their intended use as part of an exemption application. The commentator advised subsequently that such experts either may be reluctant to provide any sort of attestation because of unknown liabilities which may arise by using the expert's report as part of an exemption application, or may seek an additional, and perhaps substantial, fee for furnishing an attestation due to the unknown liabilities.

In this regard the Department notes that, with respect to any matter within the jurisdiction of any department or agency of the United States, it is a crime, punishable by a fine of up to $10,000 and/or imprisonment of up to five years, for anyone knowingly and willfully to falsify, conceal or cover up by any trick, scheme or device a material fact; to make any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statements or representations; or to make or use any false writing or document knowing the same contains any false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry (18 USC 1001). It is the view of the Department that this provision applies to applicants for exemptions under ERISA, the Code, or FERSA, to fiduciaries (independent or otherwise) representing the plan in an exemption, transaction, and to third-party experts who prepare statements or reports that such experts know will be included in exemption applications.

Nevertheless, the Department recognizes that third-party experts, such as appraisers, bankers, financial analysts, and other specialized consultants usually do not function as fiduciaries with respect to a plan if such experts' authority, responsibility, or contact with respect to the plan is limited to providing an opinion which may be included in an exemption application, and which will be considered by plan fiduciaries who will decide what, if any, action they will take on behalf of the plan based upon such opinion. The Department believes that such experts need not be held to the same degree of accountability regarding exemption applications covering transactions where a plan fiduciary has the authority and responsibility to make decisions on behalf of a plan. Thus, the Department has decided to modify proposed § 2570.34(b)(5)(iii) to provide that a statement of consent, rather than a declaration under penalty of perjury, is required from each such expert which acknowledges that his or her statement is being submitted to the Department as part of an exemption application. The Department believes that such a consent statement from a third-party expert will not require an applicant to obtain a new report from the expert because the expert's consent statement may refer to his or her previously issued report. (However, the Department may require an updated report in any case if the substantive information contained in a report submitted with an exemption application is out of date.)

Conversely, where an independent fiduciary represents the plan in an exemption transaction, that fiduciary is subject to all of the responsibilities imposed by part 4 of subtitle B of title A of ERISA. None of the comments received questioned the need for such a fiduciary to provide the declaration under penalty of perjury required under the proposed regulation, and the Department has decided to retain this proposed requirement for such plan fiduciaries in the final regulation. As a result, the Department has modified § 2570.34(b)(5)(ii) and has added § 2570.34(b)(5)(iv) to clarify that a declaration is required for such plan fiduciaries,

Pooled Funds

One comment suggested that § 2570.35 of the proposed regulation be modified to provide a special rule regarding information to be included in an application for an individual exemption involving a pooled investment fund, such as a pooled separate account maintained by an insurance company or a collective investment fund maintained by another financial institution. The commentator pointed out that, as proposed, § 2570.35 would require information to be submitted regarding each plan participating in a pooled investment fund, resulting in the submission of an overwhelming volume of information unrelated to the exemption transaction. However, the commentator recognized that information regarding certain plans may be relevant to the exemption application in view of the potential for conflicts of interest involving such plans. Such plans would include any plan maintained for employees of the sponsor or other fiduciary of the pooled investment fund, and a plan whose participation in the pooled fund exceeded a specified percentage of the total fund assets.

The Department agrees with this comment and, accordingly, has added a new paragraph (c) to § 2570.35, which contains a special rule for applications for individual exemptions involving pooled funds [as defined in § 2570.31(g)]. Subparagraph (1) of § 2570.35(c) excepts such applications from including certain information otherwise required relating to among other things: reportable events under section 4043 of ERISA, notice of intent to terminate a plan (section 4041 of ERISA), the number of participants and beneficiaries of each plan participating in the pooled fund, and the percentage of each such plan's assets involved in the exemption transaction.

Subparagraph (2) of the special rule provides that certain information otherwise required by § 2570.35(a) and (b) of the regulation must be furnished by reference to the pooled fund rather than the plans participating in such fund. This information pertains to: Identifying information; any prior violations of the Code's exclusive benefit rule or of the prohibited transaction provisions of the Code, ERISA or FERSA, any prior applications for exemption from such prohibited transaction provisions; any lawsuits or criminal actions regarding conduct with respect to any employee plan; any criminal convictions described in section 411 of ERISA; any investigation or continuing controversy with specified Federal agencies regarding compliance with ERISA, Code provisions relating to employee plans, or FERSA provisions relating to the Federal Thrift Savings Fund; whether the exemption transaction has been consummated and, if so, certain related information regarding correction of the prohibited transaction and payment of excise taxes; the identification of persons with investment discretion over any assets involved in the exemption transaction and each such person's relationship to the parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction; investments involving certain parties in interest, the fair market value of the pooled fund; the identity of the person who will pay the costs of the exemption application, notifying interested persons, and the fee of any independent fiduciary involved in the exemption transaction; and an analysis of the facts relevant to the exemption transaction as reflected in documents submitted with the application. The pooled fund, rather than participating plans, must also furnish copies of all relevant documents, including, for example, the most recent financial statements of the pooled fund.

Subparagraph (3) of the special rule requires information to be furnished with pooled fund exemption applications with respect to: the aggregate number of plans expected to participate in the pooled fund, and the limits (if any) imposed by the pooled fund on the amount or percentage of each participating plan's assets that may be invested in the pooled fund.

Subparagraph (4) of § 2570.35(c) contains additional requirements for applications for individual exemptions involving pooled funds. These requirements apply to plans whose investments in the pooled fund represent more than 20% of the pooled fund's total assets<sup>9</sup> and those plans covering employees of the pooled fund's sponsor, and other fiduciaries with discretion over pooled fund assets. The Department believes that additional information is warranted in those situations where the potential for decision making that may inure to the benefit of a fiduciary or other party in interest is increased. For each of these plans, the additional requirements provide for the furnishing of certain individual plan information described in 2570.35(a), in addition to the information required under § 2570.35(c)(2) and (c)(3). The Department believes this information is necessary for its determination as to whether sufficient protections are incorporated into the exemption transaction.

The Department further notes that the decision by the fiduciaries of certain plans to invest in a pooled fund may involve a separate prohibited transaction, apart from any prohibited transaction which may be entered into by the pooled fund itself. In this regard, the Department notes that the information required to be submitted on behalf of such plans is to be provided in accordance with the general rule contained in § 2570.35, rather than the special rule for pooled funds.

Finally, the Department believes that the special rule for pooled funds is less burdensome to applicants than the rules set forth in the proposed regulation. As noted by a commentator, the proposed regulation would have required the submission of voluminous amounts of material, as information would have to be submitted on behalf of each plan investing in a pooled fund. The final regulation limits the amount of material to be submitted since it requires only information relating to the pooled fund and, where applicable, certain plans investing in the pooled fund. In addition, the Department believes that its ability to analyze and process applications for exemption involving pooled funds will be enhanced by this special rule. In this regard, the Department believes that the final regulation eliminates a significant amount of material that otherwise would have been required.

Lawsuits, Certain Criminal Convictions, Investigations, Examinations, Continuing Controversies, etc.

Sections 2570.35(a)(5), (6), and (7) of the proposed regulation required exemption applications to disclose information regarding whether the applicant or any of the parties to the exemption transaction is or has been, within a specified number of years past, a defendant in any lawsuit or criminal action concerning conduct as a fiduciary or other party in interest with respect to any employee benefit plan (§ 2570.35(a)(5)(b) convicted of a crime described in section 411 of ERISA (§ 2570.35(a)(6)), or under investigation or examination or engaged in litigation or a continuing controversy with certain Federal agencies (§ 2570.35(a)(7)). Proposed § 2570.35(a)(7) also required disclosure of whether any plan affected by the exemption transaction has been under such investigation, examination, litigation, or any controversy, and further required the applicant to submit copies of all correspondence with the specified Federal agencies regarding substantive issues involved in such investigation, etc.

Two of the comments urged deletion of the disclosure requirements of proposed § 2570.35(a)(5) and (7) on the basis that such disclosure is difficult, costly, and almost always irrelevant to the exemption transaction.

The Department continues to believe that the proposed disclosure is relevant to the exemption transaction. With regard to § 2570.35(a)(5) (relating to lawsuits or certain criminal actions), the Department views the disclosure required as directly concerning the conduct of the applicant and other parties in interest participating in the exemption transaction. The Department believes that such information is necessary in evaluating the credibility and integrity of such parties, some of whom may possess substantial discretion regarding the exemption transaction or may make representations upon which the Department must rely in determining whether the statutory criteria for an exemption have been satisfied. In addition, the proposed disclosure assists the Department in ensuring that the exemption contains appropriate safeguards.

Further, the Department does not agree that the disclosure required by § 2570.35(a)(5) imposes any "significant" burdens on applicants. The Department believes that prudent fiduciaries would in the normal course of carrying out their responsibilities, ascertain such information about the parties they intend to deal with in investment and other plan transactions. However, the Department has determined that it would be appropriate to modify proposed § 2570.35(a)(5) in the final regulation to limit disclosure to the applicant or any of the parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction.

Regarding the disclosure required by proposed § 2570.35(a)(7) (relating to, investigations, examinations, litigation, and continuing controversy by or with the specified Federal agencies), the Department believes that such information is necessary to ensure that the Department's exemption activities do not compromise its enforcement efforts. Although the Department is most interested in information involving investigations, etc. that are directly related to the subject exemption transactions and the participating parties, the Department believes, nevertheless, that its exemption staff, and not the applicants, should determine which investigations, examinations, etc., are relevant.

One of the comments further suggested that it is inappropriate to require applicants to disclose matters which have resulted in no formal allegations of violations of law. The Department notes, however, that the affected parties may include, as part of their disclosure, any qualification or explanations they deem appropriate for consideration by the Department, including information on the final disposition of any matter;

Another commentator suggested that disclosure under § 2570.35(a)(7) be limited to a reference to the investigation or litigation without requiring submission of copies of "all correspondence" involved in the investigation. In this regard, the Department notes that the proposed regulation did not require submission of copies of all correspondence, but only of correspondence relating to the, substantive issues involved in the investigation, examination, litigation, or controversy. Specifically, the Department intended to require submission of copies of correspondence containing only that information directly relevant to determining whether or not the requested exemption should be granted. After considering the comment, the Department has modified § 2570.35(a)(7) to clarify that the phrase "substantive issues" refers to issues related to compliance with the provisions of parts 1 and 4 of subtitle B of title I of ERISA (reporting and disclosure (part 1) and fiduciary responsibility (part 4)), section 4975 of the Code, or sections 8477 or 8478 of FERSA (fiduciary responsibilities, liability and penalties (section 8477) and bonding (section 8478)). Copies of correspondence relating to any of these substantive issues is necessary in order for the Department to determine the effect the requested exemption may have on the Department's enforcement activities in each case under investigation, examination, etc.

One of the comments noted that proposed § 2570.35(a)(5), (6) and (7) required the disclosure of information regarding any parties to the exemption transaction and suggested limiting the disclosure to fiduciaries authorizing the transaction and any parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction. This comment pointed out that investment transactions may involve multiple parties, many of whom are neither plan fiduciaries nor parties in interest. After due consideration, the Department agrees with this suggestion and, accordingly, has modified § 2570.35(a)(5), (6) and (7) to limit the required disclosure to any parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction. The Department rates that this group includes, among others, the fiduciary authorizing the exemption transaction.

See the heading "Applications for Exemption under FERSA," above, regarding modification to proposed § 2570.35(a)(7) as applicable to the Federal Thrift Savings Plan established by FERSA.

Party-in-Interest Investments

Proposed § 2570.35(a)(16) required an application for individual exemption to disclose information regarding any plan investments in loans to, property leased to, or securities issued by, any party in interest involved in the exemption transaction. One of the comments suggested deletion of this requirement due to the difficulty of identifying such investments in view of the "look-through" rule contained in the Department's plan asset regulation (29 C.F.R. 2510.101). This comment suggested that the proposed disclosure may invoke many transactions, by an entity whose underlying assets include "plan assets," which are totally unrelated to the exemption transaction. The comment further indicated that this disclosure would be burdensome for exemption transactions involving numerous parties in interest, such as those involving pooled funds.

The Department agrees that, for exemption applications involving pooled funds, furnishing the proposed disclosure could be burdensome inasmuch as such applications generally do not relate to specific plans. Accordingly, the Department has adopted a special rule for applications for individual exemption involving pooled funds, discussed above (under the heading "Pooled Funds"), which limits this type of disclosure to the pooled fund and to certain plans participating therein.

Regarding exemption applications involving specific individual plans, it appears to the Department that the information to be disclosed under proposed § 2570.35(a)(16) must be maintained, in any event, to satisfy the annual reporting requirements of section 103 of ERISA, as well as the recordkeeping requirements of section 107. Therefore, the Department believes that this disclosure requirement should not impose any additional burdens on the applicant. The information to be disclosed will enable the Department to determine whether the exemption transaction, in conjunction with other plan investments involving parties in interest, would unduly concentrate the plan's assets in such investments so as to raise questions under the fiduciary responsibility provisions of section 404 of ERISA. For these reasons, the Department has decided to adopt § 2570.35(a)(16) as proposed, subject to the special rule for applications for individual exemption involving pooled funds in § 2570.35(c).

Costs Related to the Exemption Application

Proposed § 2570.35(a)(18) and (19) required the exemption application to identify the person who will bear the costs of the exemption application, of notifying interested persons, and of the fee charged by any independent fiduciary involved in the exemption transaction. The preamble to the proposed regulation noted that a plan's payment of the expenses associated with the filing or processing of an exemption application raises questions under the fiduciary responsibility and the prohibited transaction restrictions to the extent that any party in interest benefits from the transaction for which an exemption is sought (see section 406(a)(1)(D) of ERISA).

One of the commentators requested that the Department provide a more specific discussion of when it believes such questions will be raised. The comment states that, in many cases, it is appropriate for the plan to pay the expenses attributable to obtaining an exemption, and that an independent fiduciary's fees are generally paid by the plan receiving such fiduciary's services in order to ensure that such fiduciary conducts its activities in a totally independent manner and without any potential influence from persons other than the plan paying such fees.

The proposed disclosure of who pays the fees for an exemption application is intended to enable the Department to review the appropriateness of such payment by a plan in the context of a specific exemption request. Such disclosure is also intended to aid the exemption staff in evaluating whether the economic merits of the transaction, taking into account the costs attributable to the exemption application, support a finding that the proposed transaction is in the interests of the plan and its participants and beneficiaries. While the Department agrees that there may be certain instances in which it would be appropriate for a plan to pay all or part of the costs attendant with obtaining an exemption, such as where it is necessary to ensure the independence of an independent fiduciary or third-party expert, the Department believes that the propriety of such payments by a plan is an inherently factual determination which can be made only on a case-by-case basis.

In this regard, the Department notes that, when evaluating the propriety of the payment by a plan of certain expenses, plan fiduciaries must first consider the general fiduciary responsibility provisions of sections 403 and 404 of ERISA. Section 403(c)(1) provides, in part, that the assets of an employee benefit plan shall never inure to the benefit of any employer and shall be held for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and beneficiaries and defraying reasonable expenses of administering the plan. Similarly, section 404(a)(1)(A) requires, in part, that a fiduciary of a plan discharge his duties for the exclusive purpose of providing benefits to participants and their beneficiaries and defraying reasonable expenses of administering the plan. Thus, a payment that is not a distribution of benefits to participants or beneficiaries of a plan would not be consistent with the requirements of sections 403(c)(1) and 404(a)(1)(A) unless it was used to defray a reasonable expense of administering the plan.

In addition, section 406(a)(1)(D) of ERISA prohibits a fiduciary with respect to a plan from causing the plan to engage in a transaction if he knows or should know that such transaction constitutes a direct or indirect transfer to, or use by or for the benefit of, a party in interest of any assets of the plan. It is the responsibility of appropriate plan fiduciaries to determine whether a particular expense is a reasonable administrative expense under sections 403(c)(1) and 404(a)(1)(A) of ERISA or whether plan payment of an expense would constitute a prohibited use of plan assets for the benefit of a party in interest under section 406(a)(1)(D) of ERISA.

Copies of Documents

Section 2570.35(b)(1) of the proposed regulation required each application for individual exemption to include true copies of all documents bearing on the exemption transaction, such as contracts, deeds, agreements, instruments, and relevant portions of plan documents, including trust agreements.

One comment objected to this requirement on the grounds that having to assemble the required documents is time consuming, costly, and unnecessary if the exemption application properly describes all pertinent plan provisions and other documents in sufficient detail to allow the Department to evaluate the merits of the exemption transaction. In this regard, the Department notes that the documents with respect to which copies are requested are all documents which would be readily available to the parties to the exemption transaction. Accordingly, the Department does not believe that there would be a significant burden in either compiling the documents or in transmitting copies to the Department. Further, the Department notes that it is not uncommon for representations contained in an exemption application to be inconsistent with the provisions of the governing documents or for the latter to contain provisions with respect to which clarifications or other representations are needed in order for the requested exemption to be proposed. On the basis of the Department's experience with exemptions, scrutiny of the relevant documents is, in the large majority of cases, a necessary prerequisite to a complete understanding of the exemption transaction and the implications for affected plans and parties in interest. Moreover, in the Department's experience, the inclusion of copies of the requested documents, as part of the exemption application, has expedited the processing of the requested exemption.

For these reasons, the final regulation adopts proposed § 2570.35(b)(1) without change. However, the Department wishes to clarify three points regarding this requirement. -

- First, for exemption transactions in which identical documents will be executed by more than one party, the submission of only one specimen document will satisfy the requirements of this paragraph.
- Second, in the case of exemption transactions which are proposed, copies of the documents relating to the proposed transaction need not be executed or dated when they are submitted with the exemption application if the documents are complete in every other respect. In this regard, the Department strongly encourages requesting an administrative exemption before entering into a prohibited transaction because of the ability to incorporate all of the necessary safeguards into the transaction. By contrast, such safeguards cannot be put into place after a prohibited transaction has occurred.
- Third, only copies of documents need be submitted. The Department may not be able to return original documents and, therefore, urges that only true copies of documents be submitted.

Where To File an Application

Although no comments were received regarding this section, which is adopted as proposed, the Department wishes to advise applicants that including the room number of the Division of Exemptions in the address will generally expedite its delivery. The current room number of the Division of Exemptions, Room N-5671, is not included in the regulation to avoid the need to amend the regulation every time the room, number of the Division changes.

Duty To Amend and Supplement Information

The proposed regulation contained the requirement established in ERISA Proc. 75-1 that an applicant promptly notify the Division of Exemptions if he discovers that any material fact or representation contained in his application, or in any supporting documents or testimony, was inaccurate or if any such fact or representation changes. However, the proposed regulation added the requirement that an applicant notify the Division of Exemptions when anything occurs that may affect the continuing accuracy of such facts or representations.

Two comments received indicated confusion as to the expiration date of the duty to update information submitted as part of an exemption application. Accordingly, the final Regulation clarifies § 2570.37(a) and (b) to indicate that such duty applies only during the pendency of the exemption application and expires after the exemption is granted. The Department also wishes to clarify that, in § 2570.37(a), the phrase "continuing accuracy of any such fact or representation" refers to future events or changes known before the exemption is granted that will render inaccurate facts stated or representations made before such grant. The Department wishes to note that exemptions are granted only to transactions as described. Therefore, if an exemption is granted and the transaction is not as described in some material aspect, the exemption does not take effect or protect parties in interest from liability for the transaction. See § 2570.49 of the regulation.

Tentative Denial Letters

Although ERISA Proc. 75-1 established no procedures to be followed by the Department in denying exemption applications or by applicants in responding to such denials, the Department has developed procedures over the years to notify applicants first to the tentative and, later, of the final denial of their applications. In large part, the proposed regulation codified these procedures.

Under the proposed regulation, the Department may decide to deny an exemption request at any of a number of stages in the review process. For example, it may decide after its initial review of an application that the requested exemption does not satisfy the statutory criteria set forth in sections 408(a) of ERISA and 4975(c)(2) of the Code. In that event, the Department will send a tentative denial letter to the applicant pursuant to § 2570.38 of the regulation. That letter will inform the applicant of the Department's tentative decision to deny the application and of the reasons therefore. Under § 2570.38, an applicant has 20 days from the date of this letter to request a conference with the Department and/or to notify the Department of his intent to submit additional information in writing to support the application. If the Department receives no request for a conference and no notice of intent to submit additional information within that time, it will send the applicant a final denial letter pursuant to § 2570.41 of the regulation.

One of the comments received suggested that: (1) The final regulation should clarify that the Department's exemption staff may request applicants to provide additional information before a tentative denial letter is issued, and (2) rather than a "short statement" of the reasons for a tentative denial, the tentative denial letter should provide a detailed explanation of the basis for the Department's decision. Regarding the first suggestion, the comment indicates that it is unreasonable to expect an applicant to anticipate, when the exemption application is filed, all of the material which the Department may find pertinent to its consideration of an exemption application.

As stated above (under the heading "Exemption Application Contents - General Information"), the Department's view is that the applicant bears the responsibility to demonstrate clearly that the requested exemption meets the statutory criteria. While nothing in the proposed regulation would preclude the Department's exemption staff from exercising its discretion and contacting an applicant for a clarification or additional information, the Department anticipates that such contact will be limited to exemption applications which, upon initial review, meet the essential requirements of the regulation. It is not administratively feasible to expect the Department's exemption staff to solicit information in every case. Moreover, such a procedure would, in effect, shift the burden of developing the exemption application from the applicant to the exemption staff.

Similarly, the imposition of a requirement that tentative denial letters detail all the reasons for the denial would, in effect, shift the analytical burden from the applicant to the Department. As with the circumstances under which additional information is solicited from applicants, the Department believes that the degree of detail required for a tentative denial letter should be left to the discretion of the exemption staff. The Department believes that a general statement of the reasons for a tentative denial is sufficient inasmuch as the issuance of a tentative denial letter does not terminate the exemption proceedings. Rather, the tentative denial letter offers the applicant the opportunity to have a conference and/or to submit additional information for consideration. In addition, a requirement to issue a comprehensive and detailed tentative denial letter in most cases would significantly increase the time required to conclude a final action.

For these reasons, the Department has decided to adopt proposed § 2570.38 without change.

Opportunities To Submit Additional Information

Section 2570.39 of the proposed regulation provided that if an applicant wishes to submit additional information in support of a tentatively denied exemption application, he may notify the Department of his intention to do so within the prescribed 20-day period either by telephone or by letter. After issuing such a notice, an applicant has 30 days from the date of the notice to furnish additional information to the Department. If an applicant notifies the Department of his intent to submit additional information but requests no conference, and subsequently fails to submit the promised information within the prescribed 30-day period, the Department will issue the applicant a final denial letter pursuant to § 2570.41 of the regulation. However, an applicant who realizes that he will be unable to submit his additional information within the allotted time may avoid receiving a final denial letter by withdrawing his application before the end of the 30-day period pursuant to § 2570.44.

As an alternative to withdrawing his application, an applicant who, for reasons beyond his control, is unable to meet the 30-day deadline may request an extension of time for filing additional information, pursuant to § 2570.39 of the regulation. However, the Department will grant such extensions of time only in unusual circumstances.

No comments were received on this section of the proposed regulation which is adopted without change in the final regulation.

Conferences

Section 2570.40 of the proposed regulation described the procedures regarding conferences on exemption applications which the Department has tentatively decided to deny. Under this proposed section, an applicant is entitled to only one conference with respect to any exemption application, and is also given 20 days after the date of any conference to submit to the Department in writing any additional data or arguments discussed at the conference but not previously or adequately presented in writing. Under the proposal, an applicant is deemed to have waived his right to a conference if he fails, without good cause, to appear for a scheduled conference or to schedule a conference for any of the times proposed by the Department within the 45-day period following the receipt of his request for a conference.

Proposed § 2570.40 is adopted without change in the final regulation. The only comment received regarding this proposed section suggested that the Department continue its practice of informally consulting with applicants on exemption applications in addition to holding conferences. In this regard, the Department will continue to informally contact applicants as it deems appropriate.

Final Denial Letters

Proposed § 2570.41 is adopted without change in the final regulation. No comments were received on this section which specifies the circumstances in which the Department may issue a final denial letter denying a requested exemption. In most cases, the same procedure will also be followed in denying exemptions that the Department has already proposed through publication of a notice of proposed exemption in the Federal Register. However, in cases where the Department holds a hearing on an exemption, § 2570.41(a)(3) of the proposed regulation allowed the Department to issue a final denial letter without first issuing a tentative denial letter and without providing the applicant with the opportunity for a conference. In the Department's view, where a hearing on a proposed exemption is conducted, the applicant and other proponents of the exemption have adequate opportunity to present their views and other evidence in support of the exemption.

Notice of Proposed Exemption

The proposed regulation did not significantly alter the procedures established by ERISA Proc. 75-1 for granting an exemption. Under § 2570.42 of the regulation, the Department will publish a notice of proposed exemption in the Federal Register if, after reviewing an exemption application and any additional information submitted by an applicant, the Department tentatively concludes that the requested exemption satisfies the statutory criteria for the granting of an exemption and that the requested exemption is otherwise appropriate. This proposed section also described the contents of the notice of proposed exemption.

No comments were received on proposed § 2570.42, which is adopted without change in the final regulation.

Notifying Interested Persons

Like ERISA Proc. 75-1, the proposed regulation required applicants to provide notice to interested persons in the event that the Department decides to propose the exemption. Section 2570.34 of the proposal required an applicant to submit with his application a description of the interested persons to whom notice will be provided and a description of the manner in which the applicant proposed to provide notice. That section also required an applicant to provide an estimate of the time he will need to furnish notice to interested persons following publication of a notice of proposed exemption.

Section 2570.43 of the proposed regulation provided guidance on methods an applicant may use to notify interested persons of a proposed exemption and indicated what must be included in the notice. In addition to the Notice of Proposed Exemption published in the Federal Register, the applicant must include in the notification to interested persons a supplemental statement. Section 2570.43 also stated that, once the Department has published a notice of proposed exemption, the applicant must notify the interested persons described in his application in the manner indicated in the application unless the Department has informed the applicant beforehand that it considers the method of notification described in the application to be inadequate. Where the Department has so informed an applicant, it will also secure from the applicant an agreement to provide notice in the time and manner and to the persons designated by the Department. After furnishing notification, an applicant must provide the Department with a declaration under penalty of perjury certifying that notice was given to the persons and in the manner and time specified in his application or the superseding agreement with the Department.

One of the comments received concerning notification requested clarification that, in the case of a pooled fund, the notification requirement would be satisfied if the notice to interested persons is furnished to the appropriate fiduciary of each of the plans participating in the pooled fund, but not to all participants and beneficiaries of such plans.

In the Department's view, the individuals or organizations that will constitute "interested persons" depends on the nature of the exemption being requested. For this reason, the proposed regulation did not attempt to delineate the term "interested persons" for purposes of the notification requirements of § 2570.43. As previously noted, the applicant is required to include, as part of the exemption application, a description of the interested persons to whom the applicant intends to provide notice (§ 2570.34(b)(2)(i)). If the Department finds that either the method of providing notice or the persons to whom the applicant proposes to provide notice is inadequate, the Department will, pursuant to § 2570.43, secure an agreement from the applicant on the appropriate method of providing the notice and/or the scope of the notice to be provided. The Department believes that this approach provides the flexibility necessary to accommodate the varied types of exemption applications, as well as circumstances unique to a particular applicant.<sup>7</sup>

Accordingly, the Department has decided to adopt § 2570.43 as proposed. However, subparagraph (b)(2) of this section has been modified to insert references to the Code and FERSA and to reflect the current room number of the Division of Exemptions in a footnote to that section. Paragraph (d), of this section has also been modified to clarify that the declaration accompanying the statement to be furnished to the Department regarding the notice to, interested persons must be made under penalty of perjury, as stated in the preamble to the proposed regulation (53 FR 24422, at 24425, June 28, 1988).

Withdrawal and Reinstatement of Exemption Applications

Section 2570.44 of the proposed regulation permitted an applicant to withdraw his application at any time and to reinstate the application later. Reinstatement may be requested without resubmitting any information or materials previously furnished if no more than two years has elapsed from the withdrawal date. The request for reinstatement must be accompanied by any additional information that was outstanding at the time of withdrawal.

No comments were received on the proposed section, which is adopted in the final regulation without change.

Requests for Reconsideration of Final Denials

Under § 2570.45 of the proposed regulation, after the Department has issued a final denial letter on an exemption, it will not reconsider an application covering the same transaction unless the applicant presents significant new facts or arguments in support of the exemption which, for good reason, the applicant could not have submitted for consideration during the Department's initial review of the exemption. An applicant must present the significant new facts or arguments in a request for reconsideration within 180 days after the issuance of the final denial letter.

Proposed § 2570.45 also stated that only one request for reconsideration of any finally denied application will be considered by the Department. Although no comments were received on this section of the proposed regulation, the Department has modified this section in the final regulation to clarify that the Department will not limit the number of requests for reconsideration of final denials based solely on the applicant's failure to respond timely to a tentative denial letter or to furnish additional information timely (i.e., within the time frames provided under § 2570.38(b) or 2570.39(e), respectively).

The Department has also clarified in the final regulation that the declaration required under § 2570.45(c) must be made under penalty of perjury. This clarification is consistent with the requirement of § 2570.34(b)(5) that every original exemption application must be accompanied by a similar declaration under penalty of perjury. The Department intends that the same type of declaration should accompany both an original exemption application and request for reconsideration of a final denial based on the merits of such an application.

Hearings

Section 408(a) of ERISA precludes the Department from granting an exemption from the fiduciary self-dealing prohibitions of section 406(b) unless the Department affords an opportunity for a hearing and makes a determination on the record with respect to the three statutory criteria established for granting an exemption.<sup>8</sup> Because these provisions specify that an opportunity for a hearing must be given before an exemption from these prohibitions is granted, but not before such an exemption is denied, the Department interprets these provisions to mean that only opponents of such an exemption must be given an opportunity for a hearing. Moreover, the Department has concluded that it must provide a hearing on the record to opponents of such a proposed exemption only where it appears that there are material factual issues relating to the proposed exemption that cannot be fully explored without such a hearing. Indeed, in the Department's experience, such hearings are not useful where the only issues to be decided are matters of law or where material factual issues can be adequately explored by less costly and more expeditious means, such as written submissions. Accordingly, under § 2570.46 of the proposed regulation, the Department requires that persons who may be adversely affected by the grant of an exemption from the fiduciary self-dealing prohibitions offer some evidence of the existence of issues that can be fully examined only at a hearing before it will grant a request for a hearing. Where persuasive evidence of the existence of such issues is offered, however, the Department will grant the requested hearing.

Under § 2570.47 of the proposed regulation, the Department may schedule a hearing on its own motion if it determines that a hearing would be useful in exploring issues relevant to the requested exemption. Under the proposed procedures, if the Department decides to conduct a hearing on an exemption under either § 2570.46 or § 2570.47, the applicant must notify interested persons of the hearing in the manner prescribed by the Department. Ordinarily, such notice may be provided by furnishing interested persons with a copy of the notice of hearing published by the Department in the Federal Register within 10 days of its publication. After furnishing notice, the applicant must submit to the Department a declaration under penalty of perjury certifying that notice has been provided in the manner prescribed.

Any testimony or other evidence offered at a hearing held under either § 2570.46 or § 2570.47 becomes part of the administrative record to be used by the Department in making its final decision on an exemption application.

No comments were received on proposed § 2570.46 and 2570.47, which are adopted without change in the final regulation.

Grant of Exemption

Section 2570.48 of the proposed regulation provided that if, after considering all of an applicant's submissions, together with any comments received from interested persons and the record of any hearing held in connection with a requested exemption, the Department determines that the exemption should be granted, it will publish a notice in the Federal Register granting the exemption. This proposed section also described the contents of the grant notice.

No comments were received on proposed § 2570.48, which is adopted without change in the final regulation.

Limits on the Effect of Exemptions

Notwithstanding the duty to amend and supplement exemption applications provided under § 2570.37, the Department expressly conditions every exemption on the accuracy and completeness of the facts and representations provided by an applicant in support of the exemption. Therefore, as indicated under § 2570.49 of the proposed regulation, an exemption does not take effect or protect parties in interest from liability unless the material facts and representations contained in the application or in any other materials, documents, or testimony submitted by the applicant in support of the application were true and complete. Thus, for example, in the case of a continuing exemption transaction such as a loan or a lease, if any of the material facts described in the application were to change after the exemption is granted, the exemption would cease to apply as of the date of such change even though, pursuant to § 2570.37, the applicant would not be obligated to notify the Department of such change. In the event of any such change, the parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction may apply for a new exemption to protect themselves from liability on or after the date of such change. Such an application should be submitted before such change occurs (see the discussion of prospective, versus retroactive, exemptions under the heading "Copies of Documents," above).

No comments were received on proposed § 2570.49, which is adopted without change in the final regulation.

Revocation or Modification of Exemptions

Section 2570.50 of the proposed regulation described the circumstances under which the Department may revoke or modify a previously granted exemption and the rights afforded to the applicant and to other interested persons in the event such revocation or modification is proposed. This section also provided that ordinarily such revocation or modification will be prospective only. Under this proposed section, one of the circumstances permitting the Department to modify or revoke an exemption was a change in policy which calls into question the continuing validity of the Department's original conclusions regarding the granted exemption.

Two of the comments objected to permitting a change in policy as grounds for revoking or modifying a granted exemption. The commentators argued that disturbing transactions already reviewed and approved by the Department would inject an unneeded element of uncertainty into the exemption process. Moreover, concern was expressed that the revocation of an exemption could severely disrupt an applicant's business and impose great financial hardship. A commentator suggested that the final regulation include a prohibition against revocation of an exemption until the affected party in interest is given both written notice of the facts or conduct which may warrant the revocation and an opportunity to demonstrate compliance with the requirements of the exemption.<sup>9</sup>

Proposed § 2570.50 is intended to provide the Department with the flexibility to undertake appropriate action in those cases where, subsequent to the grant of an exemption, potentially abusive practices or changes in the regulatory environment of an industry are identified which would cause the Department to reconsider its policy with respect to whether the exemption transactions continue to satisfy the statutory criteria under section 408(a) of ERISA.

With regard to the procedural issues raised by one of the comments, the Department notes that paragraph (b) of proposed § 2570.50 provides for notice to interested persons by publication in the Federal Register, notice to the applicant of the proposed revocation or modification, and an opportunity for the interested persons and the applicant to submit comments on the proposed revocation or modification.

After careful consideration of the comments, the Department has decided to adopt § 2570.50 as proposed. However the Department has clarified paragraph (b) to provide that the notice of proposed revocation or modification given to the applicant must be in writing.

Public Inspection and Copies

Section 2570.51 of the proposed regulation provided that the public may examine and copy any exemption application and all correspondence and documents submitted in regard thereto and may receive photocopies of all or any portion of such administrative record for a specified charge per page. For this reason, the Department cannot honor requests to keep confidential any information submitted regarding an exemption application. Therefore, none of the information submitted in regard to a requested exemption should be material that the applicant or other sender does not wish to disclose to the public.

No comments were received on proposed § 2570.51, which is adopted without change in the final regulation.

Executive Order 12291 Statement

The Department has determined that this regulatory action would not constitute a "major rule" as that term is used in Executive Order 12291 because the action would not result in: an annual effect on the economy of $100 million; a major increase in costs or prices for consumers, individual industries, government agencies, or geographical regions; or significant adverse effects on competition, employment, investment, productivity, innovation, or on the ability of United States-based enterprises to compete with foreign-based enterprises in the domestic or export markets.

Regulatory Flexibility Act Statement

The Department has determined that this regulation would not have a significant economic impact on small plans or other small entities. As stated previously, this regulation would do little more than describe procedures that reflect practices already in place for filing and processing applications for exemptions from the prohibited transaction provisions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, and the Federal Employee Retirement System Act of 1986.

Paperwork Reduction Act

This regulation modifies current collection of information requirements. It does so largely by codifying requests for facts and opinions that are routinely addressed to applicants for exemptions under current procedures. Accordingly, the regulation will not increase the paperwork burden for applicants. The regulation has been approved by the Office of Management and Budget under the provisions of the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980 (Pub. L. 96-511). The final regulation is assigned control number 1210-0060.

Authority

The final regulation set forth herein is issued pursuant to the authority granted in sections 408(a) (Pub. L. 93-406, 88 Stat. 883, 29 USC 1108(a)) and 505 (Pub. L. 93-406, 88 Stat. 894, 29 USC 1135) of ERISA, under Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (43 FR 47713, October 17, 1978), under 5 USC 8477(c)(3), and under Secretary of Labor's Order No. 187 (52 FR 13139, April 21, 1987).

Final Regulation

For the reasons set out in the preamble, parts 2570 and 2585 of chapter XXV of title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations are amended as follows:

Part 2570-[Amended]

1. The authority for part 2570 is revised to read as follows:

Authority: 29 USC 1108(a), 1135; Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978; 5 USC 8477(c)(3); Secretary of Labor's Order No. 187.

Subpart A is also issued under 29 USC 1132(i).

2. By adding in the appropriate place the following new subpart B to part 2570.

Subpart B - Procedures for Filing and Processing Prohibited Transaction Exemption Applications

§ 2570.30 Scope of rules.

- a. (1)The rules of procedure set forth in this subpart apply to all applications for exemption which the Department has authority to issue under:
  - i. Section 408(a) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA);
  - ii. Section 4975(c)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) (see Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978); or
  - iii. The Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986 (FERSA) (5 USC 8477(c)(3)).
- b. The Department will generally treat any exemption application which is filed solely under section 408(a) of ERISA or solely under section 4975(c)(2) of the Code as an exemption filed under both section 408(a) and section 4975(c)(2) if it relates to a transaction that would be prohibited by ERISA and by the corresponding provisions of the Code.
- c. The procedures set forth in this subpart represent the exclusive means by which the Department will issue administrative exemptions. The Department will not issue exemptions upon oral request alone. Likewise, the Department will not grant exemptions orally. An applicant for an administrative exemption may request and receive oral advice from Department employees in preparing an exemption application. However, such advice does not constitute part of the administrative record and is not binding on the Department in its processing of an exemption application or in its examination or audit of a plan.

§ 2570.31 Definitions.

For purposes of these procedures, the following definitions apply:

- a. An affiliate of a person means -
  1. Any person directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the person;
  2. Any director of, relative of, or partner in, any such person;
  3. Any corporation, partnership, trust, or unincorporated enterprise of which such person is an officer, director, or a 5 percent or more partner or owner; and
  4. Any employee or officer of the person who -
    - i. Is highly compensated (as defined in section 4975(e)(2)(H) of the Code), or
    - ii. Has direct or indirect authority, responsibility, or control regarding the custody, management, or disposition of plan assets.
- b. A class exemption is an administrative exemption, granted under section 408(a) of ERISA, section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and/or 5 USC 8477(c)(3), which applies to any parties in interest within the class of parties in interest specified in the exemption who meet the conditions of the exemption.
- c. Department means the U.S. Department of Labor and includes the Secretary of Labor or his delegate exercising authority with respect to prohibited transaction exemptions to which this subpart applies.
- d. Exemption transaction means the transaction or transactions for which an exemption is requested.
- e. An individual exemption is an administrative exemption, granted under section 408(a) of ERISA, section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and/or 5 USC 8477(c)(3), which applies only to the specific parties in interest named or otherwise defined in the exemption.
- f. A party in interest means a person described in section 3(14) of ERISA or 5 USC 8477(a)(4) and includes a disqualified person, as defined in section 4975(e)(2) of the Code.
- g. Pooled fund means an account or fund for the collective investment of the assets of two or more unrelated plans, including (but not limited to) a pooled separate account maintained by an insurance company and a common or collective trust fund maintained by a bank or similar financial institution.

§ 2570.32 Persons who may apply for exemptions.

- a. The Department may initiate exemption proceedings on its own motion. In addition, the Department will initiate exemption proceedings upon the application of -
  1. Any party in interest to a plan who is or may be a party to the exemption transaction;
  2. Any plan which is a party to the exemption transaction; or
  3. In the case of an application for an exemption covering a class of parties in interest or a class of transactions, in addition to any person described in paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this section, an association or organization representing parties in interest who may be parties to the exemption transaction.
- b. An application by or for a person described in paragraph (a) of this section, may be submitted by the applicant or by his authorized representatives. If the application is submitted by a representative of the applicant, the representative must submit proof of his authority in the form of
  1. A power of attorney; or
  2. A written certification from the applicant that the representation is authorized.
- c. If the authorized representative of an applicant submits an application for an exemption to the Department together with proof of his authority for file the application as required by paragraph (b) of this section, the Department will direct all correspondence and inquiries concerning the application to the representative unless requested to do otherwise by the applicant.

§ 2570.33 Applications the Department will not ordinarily consider -

- a. The Department will not ordinarily consider:
  1. An application that fails to include all the information required by § 2570.34 and 2570.35, or otherwise fails to conform to the requirements of these procedures; or
  2. An application for exemption involving a transaction or transactions which are the subject of an investigation for possible violations of part 1 or 4 of subtitle B of title I of ERISA or section 8477 or 8478 of FERSA or an application for an exemption involving a party in interest who is the subject of such an investigation or who is a defendant in an action by the Department or the Internal Revenue Service to enforce the above-mentioned provisions of ERISA or FERSA.
- b. If for any reason the Department decides not to consider an exemption application, it will inform the applicant of that decision in writing and of the reasons therefore.
- c. An application for an individual exemption relating to a specific transaction or transactions will ordinarily not be considered separately if the Department is considering a class exemption relating to the same type of transaction or transactions.

§ 2570.34 Information to be included in every exemption application.

- a. All applications for exemptions must contain the following information:
  1. The name(s) of the applicant(s);
  2. A detailed description of the exemption transaction and the parties in interest for whom an exemption is requested, including a description of any larger integrated transaction of which the exemption transaction is a part;
  3. Whether the affected plan(s) and any parties in interest will be represented by the same person with regard to the exemption application;
  4. Reasons a plan would have for entering into the exemption transaction;
  5. The prohibited transaction provisions from which exemptive relief is requested and the reason why the transaction would violate each such provision;
  6. Whether the exemption transaction is customary for the industry or class involved;
  7. Whether the exemption transaction is or has been the subject of an investigation or enforcement action by the Department or by the Internal Revenue Service; and
  8. The hardship or economic loss, if any, which would result to the person or persons on behalf of whom the exemption is sought, to affected plans and to their participants and beneficiaries from denial of the exemption.
- b. All applications for exemption must also contain the following:
  1. A statement explaining why the requested exemption would be -
    - i. Administratively feasible;
    - ii. In the interests of affected plans and their participants and beneficiaries; and
    - iii. Protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of affected plans.
  2. With respect to the notification of interested persons required by § 2570.43:
    - i. A description of the interested person(s) to whom the applicant intends to provide notice;
    - ii. The manner in which the applicant will provide such notice; and
    - iii. An estimate of the time the applicant will need to furnish notice to all interested persons following publication of a notice of the proposed exemption in the Federal Register.
  3. If an advisory opinion has been requested with respect to any issue relating to the exemption transaction -
    - i. A copy of the letter concluding the Department's action on the advisory opinion request; or
    - ii. If the Department has not yet concluded its action on the request:
      - A. A copy of the request or the date on which it was submitted together with the Department's correspondence control number as indicated in the acknowledgment letter; and
      - B. An explanation of the effect of a favorable advisory opinion upon the exemption transaction.
  4. If the application is to be signed by anyone other than an individual party in interest seeking exemptive relief on his own behalf, a statement which -
    - i. Identifies the individual, who will be signing the application and his position with the applicant; and
    - ii. Explain briefly the basis of his familiarity with the matters discussed in the application.
  5. (i) A declaration in the following form: Under penalty of perjury, I declare that I am familiar with the matters discussed in this application and to the best of my knowledge and belief, the representations made in this application are true and correct.

(ii) This declaration must be dated and signed by:

- A. The applicant himself in the case of an individual party in interest seeking exemptive relief on his own behalf;
- B. A corporate officer or partner where the applicant is a corporation or partnership;
- C. A designated officer or official where the applicant is an association, organization or other unincorporated enterprise;
- D. The plan fiduciary who has the authority, responsibility, and control with respect to the exemption transaction where the applicant is a plan.

(iii) Specialized statements from third party experts, such as appraisals or analyses of market conditions, submitted to support an application for exemption must also be accompanied by a statement of consent from such expert acknowledging that he or she knows that his or her statement is being submitted to the Department as part of an application for exemption.

(iv) For those applications requiring an independent fiduciary to represent the plan in the exemption transaction, each statement submitted by said independent fiduciary must contain a signed and dated declaration under penalty of perjury that, to the best of said fiduciary's knowledge and belief the representations made in such statement are true and correct.

- c. An application for exemption may also include a draft of the requested exemption which defines the transaction and parties in interest for which exemptive relief is sought and the specific conditions under which the exemption would apply.

§ 2570.35 Information to be included in applications for Individual exemptions only.

- a. Except as provided in paragraph (c) of this section, every application for an individual exemption must include, in addition to the information specified in § 2570.34, the following information:
  - 1. The name, address, telephone number, and type of plan or plans to which the requested exemption applies;
  - 2. The Employer Identification Number (EIN) and the plan number (PN) used by such plan or plans in all reporting and disclosure required by the Department;
  - 3. Whether any plan or trust affected by the requested exemption has ever been found by the Department, the Internal Revenue Service, or by a court to have violated the exclusive benefit rule of section 401(a) of the Code, or to have engaged in a prohibited transaction under section 503(b) of the Code or corresponding provisions of prior law, section 4975(c)(1) of the Code, section 406 or 407(a) of ERISA, or 5 USC 8477(c)(3);
  - 4. Whether any relief under section 408(a) of ERISA, section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, or 5 USC 8477(c)(3) has been requested by, or provided to, the applicant or any of the parties on behalf of whom the exemption is sought and, if so, the exemption application number or the prohibited transaction exemption number;
  - 5. Whether the applicant or any of the parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction is currently, or has been within the last five years, a defendant in any lawsuit or criminal action concerning such person's conduct as a fiduciary or party in interest with respect to any plan;
  - 6. Whether the applicant or any of the parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction has within the last 13 years, been convicted of any crime described in section 411 of ERISA.
  - 7. Whether, within the last five years, any plan affected by the exemption transaction or any party in interest involved in the exemption transaction has been under investigation or examination by, or has been engaged in litigation or a continuing controversy with, the Department, the Internal Revenue Service, the Justice Department, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, or the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board involving compliance with provisions of FERSA, provisions of the Code relating to employee benefit plans, or provisions of FERSA relating to the Federal Thrift Savings Fund. If so, the applicant must submit copies of all correspondence with the Department, the Internal Revenue Service, the Justice Department, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, or the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board regarding the substantive issues involved in the investigation, examination, litigation, or controversy which relate to compliance with the provisions of part 1 or 4 of subtitle B of title I of ERISA, section 4975 of the Code, or section 8477 or 8478 of FERSA. For this purpose, the term "examination" does not include routine audits conducted by the Department pursuant to section 8477(g) of FERSA;
  - 8. Whether any plan affected by the requested exemption has experienced a reportable event under section 4043 of ERISA;
  - 9. Whether a notice of intent to terminate has been filed under section 4041 of ERISA respecting any plan affected by the requested exemption;
  - 10. Names, addresses, and taxpayer identifying numbers of all parties in interest involved in the subject transaction;
  - 11. The estimated number of participants and beneficiaries in each plan affected by the requested exemption as of the date of the application;
  - 12. The percentage of the fair market value of the total assets of each affected plan that is involved in the exemption transaction;
  - 13. Whether the exemption transaction has been consummated or will be consummated only if the exemption is granted;
  - 14. If the exemption transaction has already been consummated:
    - i. The circumstances which resulted in plan fiduciaries causing the plan to engage in the subject transaction before obtaining an exemption from the Department;
    - ii. Whether the transaction has been terminated;
    - iii. Whether the transaction has been corrected as defined in Code section 4975(f)(5);
    - iv. Whether Form 5330, Return of Excise Taxes Related to Employee Benefit Plans, has been filed with the Internal Revenue Service with respect to the transaction; and
    - v. Whether any excise taxes due under section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code by reason of the transaction have been paid.
  - 15. The name of every person who has investment discretion over any assets involved in the exemption transaction and the relationship of each such person to the parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction and the affiliates of such parties in interest;
  - 16. Whether or not the assets of the affected plan(s) are invested in loans to any party in interest involved in the exemption transaction, in property leased to any such party in interest, or in securities issued by any such party in interest, and, if such investments exist, a statement for each of these three types of investments which indicates:

- i. The type of investment to which the statement pertains;
  - ii. The aggregate fair market value of all investments of this type as reflected in the plan's most recent annual report;
  - iii. The approximate percentage of the fair market value of the plan's total assets as shown in such annual report that is represented by all investments of this type; and
  - iv. The statutory or administrative exemption covering these investments, if any.
17. The approximate aggregate fair market value of the total assets of each affected plan;
18. The person(s) who will bear the costs of the exemption application and of notifying interested persons; and
19. Whether an independent fiduciary is or will be involved in the exemption transaction and, if so, the names of the persons who will bear the cost of the fee payable to such fiduciary.
- b. Each application for an individual exemption must also include:
1. True copies of all contracts, deeds, agreements, and instruments, as well as relevant portions of plan documents, trust agreements, and any other documents bearing on the exemption transaction;
  2. A discussion of the facts relevant to the exemption transaction that are reflected in these documents and an analysis of their bearing on the requested exemption; and
  3. A copy of the most recent financial statements of each plan affected by the requested exemption.
- c. Special rule for applications for individual exemption involving pooled funds:
1. The information required by paragraphs (a)(8) through (12) of this section is not required to be furnished in an application for individual exemption involving one or more pooled funds;
  2. The information required by paragraphs (a)(1) through (7) and (a)(13) through (19) of this section and by paragraphs (b)(1) through (3) of this section must be furnished by reference to the pooled fund, rather than to the plans participating therein. (For purposes of this paragraph, the information required by paragraph (a)(16) of this section relates solely to other pooled fund transactions with, and investments in, parties in interest involved in the exemption transaction which are also sponsors of plans which invest in the pooled fund.);
  3. The following information must also be furnished -
    - i. The estimated number of plans that are participating (or will participate) in the pooled fund; and
    - ii. The minimum and maximum limits imposed by the pooled fund (if any) on the portion of the total assets of each Plan that may be invested in the pooled fund.
  4. Additional requirements for applications for individual exemption involving pooled funds in which certain plans participate.
    - i. This paragraph applies to any application for individual exemption involving one or more pooled funds in which any plan participating therein -
      - A. Invests an amount which exceeds 20% of the total assets of the pooled fund, or
      - B. Covers employees of -
        - I. The party sponsoring or maintaining the pooled fund, or any affiliate of such party, or
        - II. Any fiduciary with investment discretion over the pooled fund's assets, or any affiliate of such fiduciary.
    - ii. The exemption application must include, with respect to each plan described in paragraph (c)(4)(i) of this section, the information required by paragraphs (a)(1) through (3), (a)(5) through (7), (a)(10), (a)(12) through (16), and (a)(18) and (19) of this section. The information required by this paragraph must be furnished by reference to the plan's investment in the pooled fund (e.g., the names, addresses and taxpayer identifying numbers of all fiduciaries responsible for the plan's investment in the pooled fund (§ 2570.35(a)(10), the percentage of the assets of the plan invested in the pooled fund [§ 2570.35(a)(12)], whether the plan's investment in the pooled fund has been consummated or will be consummated only if the exemption is granted [§ 2570.35(a)(13), etc.]).
    - iii. The information required by paragraph (c)(4) of this section is in addition to the information required by paragraphs (c)(2) and (3) of this section relating to information furnished by reference to the pooled fund.
  5. The special rule and the additional requirements described in paragraphs (c)(1) through (4) of this section do not apply to an individual exemption request solely for the investment by a plan in a pooled fund. Such an application must provide the information required by paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section.

§ 2570.36 Where to file an application.

The Department's prohibited transaction exemption program is administered by the Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration (PWBA). Any exemption application governed by these procedures should be mailed or otherwise delivered to: Exemption Application, PWBA, Office of Exemption Determinations, Division of Exemptions, US Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20210.

§ 2570.37 Duty to amend and supplement exemption applications.

- a. During the pendency of his exemption application, an applicant must promptly notify the Division of Exemptions in writing, if he discovers that any material fact or representation contained in his application or any documents or testimony provided in support of the application is inaccurate, if any such fact or representation changes during this period, or if, during the pendency of the application, anything occurs that may affect the continuing accuracy of any such fact or representation.

- b. If, at any time during the pendency of his exemption application, an applicant or any other party in interest who would participate in the exemption transaction becomes the subject of an investigation or enforcement action by the Department, the Internal Revenue Service, the Justice Department, the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation, or the Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board involving compliance with provisions of ERISA, provisions of the Code relating to employee benefit plans, or provisions of FERSA relating to the Federal Thrift Savings Fund, the applicant must promptly notify the Division of Exemptions.
- c. The Department may require an applicant provide documentation it considers necessary to verify any statements contained in the application or in supporting materials or documents.

§ 2570.38 Tentative denial letters.

- a. If, after reviewing an exemption file, the Department concludes that it will not grant the exemption. It will notify the applicant in writing of its tentative denial of the exemption application. At the same time, the Department will provide a short statement of the reasons for its tentative denial.
- b. An applicant will have 20 days from the date of a tentative denial letter to request a conference under § 2570.40 of these procedures and/or to notify the Department of its intent to submit additional information in writing, under § 2570.39 of these procedures. If the Department does not receive a request for a conference or a notification of intent to submit additional information within that time, it will issue a final denial letter pursuant to § 2570.41.
- c. The Department need not issue a tentative denial letter to an applicant before issuing a final denial letter where the Department has conducted a hearing on the exemption pursuant to either § 2570.46 or § 2570.47 of these procedures.

§ 2570.39 Opportunities to submit additional information.

- a. An applicant may notify the Department of its intent to submit additional information supporting an exemption application either by telephone or by letter sent to the address, furnished in, the applicant's tentative denial letter. At the same time, the applicant should indicate generally the type of information that he will submit.
- b. An applicant will have 30 days from the date of the notification discussed in paragraph (a) of this section to submit in writing all of the additional information he intends to provide in support of his application. All such information must be accompanied by a declaration under penalty of perjury attesting to the truth and correctness of the information provided, which is dated and signed by a person qualified under § 2570.34(b)(5) of these procedures to sign such a declaration.
- c. If, for reasons beyond his control, an applicant is unable to submit in writing all the additional information he intends to provide in support of his application within the 30-day period described in paragraph (b) of this section, he may request an extension of time to furnish the information. Such requests must be made before the expiration of the 30-day period and will be granted only in unusual circumstances and for limited periods of time.
- d. If an applicant is unable to submit all of the additional information he intends to provide in support of his exemption application within the 30-day period specified in paragraph (b) of this section or within any additional period of time granted to him pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section, the applicant may withdraw the exemption application before expiration of the applicable time period and reinstate it later pursuant to § 2570.44 of these procedures.
- e. The Department will issue without further notice the final denial letter, denying the requested exemption pursuant to § 2570.41 of these procedures where -
  1. The Department has not received the additional information that the applicant indicated he would submit within the 30-day period described in paragraph (b) of this section, or within any additional period of time granted pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section;
  2. The applicant did not request a conference pursuant to § 2570.38(b) of these procedures; and
  3. The applicant has not withdrawn his application as permitted by paragraph (d) of this section.

§ 2570.40 Conferences.

- a. Any conference between the Department and an applicant pertaining to a requested exemption will be held in Washington, DC, except that a telephone conference will be held at the applicant's request.
- b. An applicant is entitled to only one conference with respect to any exemption application. An applicant will not be entitled to a conference, however, where the Department has held a hearing on the exemption under either § 2570.46 or § 2570.47 of these procedures.
- c. Insofar as possible, conferences will be scheduled as joint conferences with all applicants present where:
  1. More than one applicant has requested an exemption with respect to the same or similar types of transactions;
  2. The Department is considering the applications together as a request for a class exemption;
  3. The Department contemplates not granting the exemption; and
  4. More than one applicant has requested a conference.
- d. The Department will attempt to schedule a conference under this section for a mutually convenient time during the 45-day period following the later of -
  1. The date the Department receives the applicant's request for a conference, or
  2. The date the Department notifies the applicant, after reviewing additional information submitted pursuant to § 2570.39, that it is still not prepared to propose the requested exemption. If the applicant is unable to attend a conference at any of the times proposed by the Department during this 45-day period or if the applicant fails to appear for a scheduled conference, he will be deemed to have waived his right to a conference unless circumstances beyond his control prevent him from scheduling a conference or attending a scheduled conference within this period.
- e. Within 20 days after the date of any conference held under this section, the applicant may submit to the Department a written record of any additional data, arguments, or precedents discussed at the conference but not previously or adequately presented in writing.

§ 2570.41 Final denial letters.

- a. The Department will issue a final denial letter denying a requested exemption where:
  1. The conditions for issuing a final denial letter specified in § 2570.38(b) or § 2570.39(e) of these procedures are satisfied;
  2. After issuing a tentative denial letter under § 2570.38 of this part and considering the entire record in the case, including all written information submitted pursuant to § 2570.39 and § 2570.40(e) of these procedures, the Department decides not to propose an exemption or to withdraw an exemption already proposed; or

3. After proposing an exemption and conducting a hearing on the exemption under either § 2570.46 or § 2570.47 of this part and after considering the entire record in the case, including the record of the hearing, the Department decides to withdraw the proposed exemption.

§ 2570.42 Notice of proposed exemption.

If the Department tentatively decides, based on all the information submitted by an applicant, that the exemption should be granted, it will publish a notice of proposed exemption in the Federal Register. The notice will:

- a. Explain the exemption transaction and summarize the information received by the Department in support of the exemption;
- b. Specify any conditions under which the exemption is proposed;
- c. Inform interested persons of their right to submit comments in writing to the Department relating to the proposed exemption and establish a deadline for receipt of such comments;
- d. If the proposed exemption includes relief from the prohibitions of section 406(b) of ERISA, section 4975(c)(1)(E) or (F) of the Code, or section 8477(c)(2) of FERSA, inform interested persons of their right to request a hearing under § 2570.46 of this part and establish a deadline for receipt of requests for such hearings.

§ 2570.43 Notification of Interested persons by applicant.

- a. If, as set forth in the exemption application, the notification that an applicant intends to provide to interested persons upon publication of a notice of proposed exemption in the Federal Register is inadequate, the Department will so inform the applicant and will secure the applicant's written agreement to provide what it considers to be adequate notice under the circumstances.
- b. If a notice of proposed exemption is published in the Federal Register in accordance with § 2570.42 of this part, the applicant must notify interested persons of the pendency of the exemption in the manner and time period specified in the application or in any superseding agreement with the Department. Any such notification must include:
  1. A copy of the notice of proposed exemption; and
  2. A supplemental statement in the following form:

You are hereby notified that the United States Department of Labor is considering granting an exemption from the prohibited transaction restrictions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974, the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, or the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act of 1986. The exemption under consideration is explained in the enclosed Notice of Proposed Exemption. As a person who may be affected by this exemption, you have the right to comment on the proposed exemption by [date].<sup>1</sup> [If you may be adversely affected by the grant of the exemption, you also have the right to request a hearing on the exemption by [date].]<sup>2</sup>

Comments or requests for a hearing should be addressed to: Office of Exemption Determinations, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Room ---,<sup>3</sup> US Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20210, Attention: Application No. ---.<sup>4</sup> The Department will make no final decision on the proposed exemption until it reviews all comments received in response to the enclosed notice. If the Department decides to hold a hearing on the exemption before making its final decision, you will be notified of the time and place of the hearing.

- c. The method used to furnish notice to interested persons must be reasonably calculated to ensure that interested persons actually receive the notice. In all cases, personal delivery and delivery by first-class mail will be considered reasonable methods of furnishing notice.
- d. After furnishing the notice required by this section, an applicant must provide the Department with a statement confirming that notice was furnished to the persons and in the manner and time designated in its exemption application or in any superseding agreement with the Department. This statement must be accompanied by a declaration under penalty of perjury attesting to the truth of the information provided in the statement and signed by a person qualified under § 2570.34(b)(5) of these procedures to sign such a declaration. No exemption will be granted until such a statement and its accompanying declaration have been furnished to the Department.

§ 2570.44 Withdrawal of exemption applications.

- a. An applicant may withdraw his application for an exemption at any time by informing the Department, either orally or in writing, of his intent to withdraw.
- b. Upon receiving an applicant's notice of intent to withdraw an application for an individual exemption, the Department will confirm by letter the applicant's withdrawal of the application and will terminate all proceedings relating to the application. If a notice of proposed exemption has been published in the Federal Register, the Department will publish a notice withdrawing the proposed exemption.
- c. Upon receiving an applicant's notice of intent to withdraw an application for a class exemption or for an individual exemption that is being considered with other applications as a request for a class exemption, the Department will inform any other applicants for the exemption of the withdrawal. The Department will continue to process other applications for the same exemption. If all applicants for a particular class exemption withdraw their applications, the Department may either terminate all proceedings relating to the exemption or propose the exemption on its own motion.
- d. If, following the withdrawal of an exemption application, an applicant decides to reapply for the same exemption, he may submit a letter to the Department requesting that the application be reinstated and referring to the application number assigned to the original application. If, at the time the original application was withdrawn, any additional information to be submitted to the Department under § 2570.39 of these procedures was outstanding, that information must accompany the letter requesting reinstatement of the application. However, the applicant need not resubmit information previously furnished to the Department in connection with a withdrawn application unless reinstatement of the application is requested more than two years after the date of its withdrawal.
- e. Any request for reinstatement of a withdrawn application submitted in accordance with paragraph (d) of this section, will be granted by the Department, and the Department will take whatever steps remained at the time the application was withdrawn to process the application.

§ 2570.45 Requests for reconsideration.

- a. The Department will entertain one request for reconsideration of an exemption application that has been finally denied pursuant to § 2570.41(a)(2) or (a)(3) of this part if the applicant presents in support of the application significant new facts or arguments which for good reason could not have been submitted for the Department's consideration during its initial review of the exemption application.
- b. A request for reconsideration of a previously denied application must be made within 180 days after the issuance of the final denial letter and must be accompanied by a copy of the Department's final letter denying the exemption and a statement setting forth the new information and/or arguments that provide the basis for reconsideration.

- c. A request for reconsideration must also be accompanied by a declaration under penalty of perjury attesting to the truth of the new information provided, which is signed by a person qualified under § 2570.34(b)(5) of these procedures to sign such a declaration.
- d. If, after reviewing a request for reconsideration, the Department decides that the facts and arguments presented do not warrant reversal of its original decision to deny the exemption, it will send a letter to the applicant reaffirming that decision.
- e. If, after reviewing a request for reconsideration, the Department decides, based on the new facts and arguments submitted, to reconsider its denial letter, it will notify the applicant of its intent to reconsider the application in light of the new information provided. The Department will then take whatever steps remained at the time it issued its final denial letter to process the exemption application.
- f. If, at any point during its subsequent processing of the application, the Department decides again that the exemption is unwarranted, it will issue a letter affirming its final denial.

§ 2570.46 Hearings in opposition to exemptions from restrictions on fiduciary self-dealing.

- a. Any interested person who may be adversely affected by an exemption which the Department proposes to grant from the restrictions of section 406(b) of ERISA, section 4975(c)(1)(E) or (F) of the Code, or section 8477(c)(2) of FERSA may request a hearing before the Department within the period of time specified in the Federal Register notice of the proposed exemption. Any such request must state:
  - 1. The name, address, and telephone number of the person making the request;
  - 2. The nature of the person's interest in the exemption and the manner in which the person would be adversely affected by the exemption; and
  - 3. A statement of the issues to be addressed and a general description of the evidence to be presented at the hearing.
- b. The Department will grant a request for a hearing made in accordance with paragraph (a) of this section where a hearing is necessary to fully explore material factual issues identified by the person requesting the hearing. However, the Department may decline to hold a hearing where:
  - 1. The request for the hearing does not meet the requirements of paragraph (a);
  - 2. The only issues identified for exploration at the hearing are matters of law; or
  - 3. The factual issues identified can be fully explored through the submission of evidence in written form.
- c. An applicant for an exemption must notify interested persons in the event that the Department schedules a hearing on the exemption. Such notification must be given in the form, time, and manner prescribed by the Department. Ordinarily, however, adequate notification can be given by providing to interested persons a copy of the notice of hearing published by the Department in the Federal Register within 10 days of its publication, using any of the methods approved in § 2570.43(c) of this part.
- d. After furnishing the notice required by paragraph (c) of this section, an applicant must submit a statement confirming that notice was given in the form, manner, and time prescribed. This statement must be accompanied by a declaration under penalty of perjury attesting to the truth of the information provided in the statement, which is signed by a person qualified under § 2570.34(b)(5) of these procedures to sign such a declaration.

2570.47 Other hearings.

- a. In its discretion, the Department may schedule a hearing on its own motion where it determines that issues relevant to the exemption can be most fully or expeditiously explored at a hearing.
- b. An applicant for an exemption must notify interested persons of any hearing on an exemption scheduled by the Department in the manner described in § 2570.46(c). In addition, the applicant must submit a statement subscribed as true under penalty of perjury like that required in § 2570.46(d).

§ 2570.48 Decision to grant exemptions.

- a. If, after considering all the facts and representations submitted by an applicant in support of an exemption application, all the comments received in response to a notice of proposed exemption, and the record of any hearing held in connection with the proposed exemption, the Department determines that the exemption should be granted, it will publish a notice in the Federal Register granting the exemption.
- b. A Federal Register notice granting an exemption will summarize the transaction or transactions for which exemptive relief has been granted and will specify the conditions under which such exemptive relief is available.

§ 2570.49 Limits on the effect of exemptions.

- a. An exemption does not take effect or protect parties in interest from liability with respect to the exemption transaction unless the material facts and representations contained in the application and in any materials and documents submitted in support of the application were true and complete.
- b. An exemption is effective only for the period of time specified and only under the conditions set forth in the exemption.
- c. Only the specific parties to whom an exemption grants relief may rely on the exemption. If the notice granting an exemption does not limit exemptive relief to specific parties, all parties to the exemption transaction may rely on the exemption.

§ 2570.50 Revocation or modification of exemptions.

- a. If, after an exemption takes effect, changes in circumstances, including changes in law or policy, occur which call into question the continuing validity of the Department's original conclusions concerning the exemption, the Department may take steps to revoke or modify the exemption.
- b. Before revoking or modifying an exemption, the Department will publish a notice of its proposed action in the Federal Register and provide interested persons with an opportunity to comment on the proposed revocation or modification. In addition, the Department will give the applicant at least 30 days notice in writing of the proposed revocation or modification and the reasons therefore and will provide the applicant with the opportunity to comment on the revocation or modification.
- c. Ordinarily the revocation or modification of an exemption will have prospective effect only.

§ 2570.51 Public inspection and copies.

- a. The administrative record of each exemption application will be open to public inspection and copying at the Public Disclosure Branch, PWBA, U.S. Department of Labor, 200 Constitution Avenue, NW, Washington, DC 20210.

- b. Upon request, the staff of the Public Disclosure Branch will furnish photocopies of an administrative record, or any specified portion of that record, for a specified charge per page.

§ 2570.52 Effective Date.

This regulation is effective with respect to all applications for exemptions filed with the Department under section 408(a) of ERISA, section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, or 5 USC 8477(c)(3) at any time on or after September 10, 1990. Applications for exemptions under section 408(a) of ERISA and/or section 4975 of the Code filed before September 10, 1990, are governed by ERISA Procedure 75-1. Applications for exemption under 5 USC 8477(c)(3) filed before September 10, 1990, but after December 29, 1988 are governed by part 2585 of chapter XXV of title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations, (section 29 C.F.R. part 2585 as revised July 1, 1990). Applications under 5 USC 8477(c)(3) filed before December 29, 1988 are governed by ERISA Procedure 75-1.

Part 2585 [Removed]

3. The regulations in part 2585 of chapter XXV of title 29 of the Code of Federal Regulations are removed.

Signed at Washington, DC, this 27th day of July, 1990.

David G. Ball, Assistant Secretary for Pension and Welfare Benefits

U.S. Department of Labor.

- Footnotes to Preamble -

1. Under section 111 of the FERSA Technical Corrections Act of 1986 (Pub.L. 99-566, October 27, 1986), the Department's existing exemption procedures were made applicable to exemption applications under FERSA until the earlier of the date of publication of final regulations adopting an exemption procedure or December 31, 1988.
2. Section 8477(g) of FERSA requires the Secretary of Labor to establish a program to carry out audits to determine the level of compliance with the requirements of this section relating to fiduciary responsibilities and prohibited activities of fiduciaries with respect to the Thrift Savings Fund of the Federal Employees' Retirement System. The Department has interpreted section 8477(g) to mean that the Department has a continuing responsibility to audit the Thrift Savings Fund established by FERSA.
3. These sections, relate, in pertinent part, to the Department's nonconsideration of exemption applications which are the subject of an investigation for possible violations of FERSA or which involve a party in interest who is the subject of such an investigation (§ 2570.33(a)(2)); and to the notification of the Division of Exemptions of certain investigations initiated after the filing of an exemption application (§ 2570.37(b)).
4. This section of the regulation requires certain exemption applications to include copies of correspondence relating to investigations, examinations, litigation, and continuing controversies with specified Federal agencies.
5. The Department must find that the statutory criteria are satisfied before granting a prohibited transaction exemption. The legislative history of ERISA makes it clear, however, that the Department has broad discretion in determining whether or not to grant an exemption. H.R. Rep. 1280, 93 Cong., 2d Sess. 311 (1974).
6. See section 1(e) of PTE 84-14 (49 FR 9494, March 13, 1984) the class exemption involving qualified professional asset managers [QPAM] (See page 5-).
7. The Department notes that the form of the notice is prescribed under § 2570.43(b) of the regulation.
8. Section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and 5 USC 8477(c)(3)(D) (added by FERSA) contain similar hearing requirements. The following discussion of the hearing requirements of section 408(a) of ERISA is equally applicable to those statutory provisions.
9. This comment compares the revocation of an exemption to the revocation of a license granted by an agency of the United States Government pursuant to 5 USC 558(c). The Department is expressing no opinion herein as to the applicability of 5 USC 558(c) to the revocation of prohibited transaction exemptions under ERISA, the Code, or FERSA.

- Footnotes to Regulation -

1. The applicant will write in this space the date of the last day of the time period specified in the notice of proposed exemption.
2. To be added in the case of an exemption that provides relief from section 406(b) of ERISA or corresponding sections of the Code or FERSA.
3. The applicant will fill in the room number of the Division of Exemptions. As of the date of this final regulation, the room number of the Division of Exemptions was N-5671.
4. The applicant will fill in the exemption application number, which is stated in the notice of proposed exemption, as well as in all correspondence from the Department to the applicant regarding the application.

Internal Revenue Code

Revenue Ruling 59-60

Valuation of Non-Traded Assets

As Modified by 65-193

In valuing the stock of closely held corporations, or the stock of corporations where market quotations are not available, all other available financial data, as well as all relevant factors affecting the fair market value must be considered for estate tax and gift tax purposes. No general formula may be given that is applicable to the many different valuation situations arising in the valuation of such stock. However, the general approach, methods, and factors which must be considered in valuing such securities are outlined.

Revenue Ruling 54-77, C.B. 1954-1, 187, superseded.

Section 1. Purpose.

The purpose of this Revenue Ruling is to outline and review in general the approach, methods and factors to be considered in valuing shares of the capital stock of closely held corporations for estate tax and gift tax purposes. The methods discussed herein will apply likewise to the valuation of corporate stocks on which market quotations are either unavailable or are of such scarcity that they do not reflect the fair market value.

Sec. 2. Background and definitions.

.01 All valuations must be made in accordance with the applicable provisions of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 and the Federal Estate Tax and Gift Tax Regulations. Sections 2031(a), 2032 and 2512(a) of the 1954 Code (sections 811 and 1005 of the 1939 Code) require that the property to be included in the gross estate, or made the subject of a gift, shall be taxed on the basis of the value of the property at the time of death of the decedent, the alternate date if so elected, or the date of gift.

.02 Section 20.2031-1(b) of the Estate Tax Regulations (section 81.10 of the Estate Tax Regulations 105) and section 25.2512-1 of the Gift Tax Regulations (section 86.19 of Gift Tax Regulations 108) define fair market value, in effect, as the price at which the property would change hands between a willing buyer and a willing seller when the former is not under any compulsion to buy and the latter is not under any compulsion to sell, both parties having reasonable knowledge of relevant facts. Court decisions frequently state in addition that the hypothetical buyer and seller are assumed to be able, as well as willing, to trade and to be well informed about the property and concerning the market for such property.

.03 Closely held corporations are those corporations the shares of which are owned by a relatively limited number of stockholders. Often the entire stock issue is held by one family. The result of this situation is that little, if any, trading in the shares takes place. There is, therefore, no established market for the stock and such sales as occur at irregular intervals seldom reflect all of the elements of a representative transaction as defined by the term "fair market value."

Sec. 3. Approach to valuation.

.01 A determination of fair market value, being a question of fact, will depend upon the circumstances in each case. No formula can be devised that will be generally applicable to the multitude of different valuation issues arising in estate and gift tax cases. Often, an appraiser will find wide differences of opinion as to the fair market value of a particular stock. In resolving such differences, he should maintain a reasonable attitude in recognition of the fact that valuation is not an exact science. A sound valuation will be based upon all the relevant facts, but the elements of common sense, informed judgment and reasonableness must enter into the process of weighing those facts and determining their aggregate significance.

.02 The fair market value of specific shares of stock will vary as general economic conditions change from "normal" to "boom" or "depression," that is, according to the degree of optimism or pessimism with which the investing public regards the future at the required date of appraisal. Uncertainty as to the stability or continuity of the future income from a property decreases its value by increasing the risk of loss of earnings and value in the future. The value of shares of stock of a company with very uncertain future prospects is highly speculative. The appraiser must exercise his judgment as to the degree of risk attaching to the business of the corporation which issued the stock, but that judgment must be related to all of the other factors affecting value.

.03 Valuation of securities is, in essence, a prophesy as to the future and must be based on facts available at the required date of appraisal. As a generalization, the prices of stocks which are traded in volume in a free and active market by informed persons best reflect the consensus of the investing public as to what the future holds for the corporations and industries represented. When a stock is closely held, is traded infrequently, or is traded in an erratic market, some other measure of value must be used. In many instances, the next best measure may be found in the prices at which the stocks of companies engaged in the same or a similar line of business are selling in a free and open market.

Sec. 4. Factors to consider.

.01 It is advisable to emphasize that in the valuation of the stock of closely held corporations or the stock of corporations where market quotations are either lacking or too scarce to be recognized, all available financial data, as well as all relevant factors affecting the fair market value, should be considered. The following factors, although not all-inclusive are fundamental and require careful analysis in each case:

- a. The nature of the business and the history of the enterprise from its inception.
- a. The economic outlook in general and the condition and outlook of the specific industry in particular.
- b. The book value of the stock and the financial condition of the business.
- c. The earning capacity of the company.
- d. The dividend-paying capacity.
- e. Whether or not the enterprise has goodwill or other intangible value.
- f. Sales of the stock and the size of the block of stock to be valued.
- g. The market price of stocks of corporations engaged in the same or a similar line of business having their stocks actively traded in a free and open market, either on an exchange or over-the-counter.

.02 The following is a brief discussion of each of the foregoing factors:

- a. The history of a corporate enterprise will show its past stability or instability, its growth or lack of growth, the diversity or lack of diversity of its operations, and other facts needed to form an opinion of the degree of risk involved in the business. For an enterprise which changed its form of organization but carried on the same or closely similar operations of its predecessor, the history of the former enterprise should be considered. The detail to be considered should increase with approach to the required date of appraisal, since recent events are of greatest help in predicting the future; but a study of gross and net income, and of dividends covering a long prior period, is highly desirable. The history to be studied should include, but need not be limited to, the nature of the business, its products or services, its operating and investment assets, capital structure, plant facilities, sales records and management, all of which should be considered as of the date of the appraisal, with due regard for recent significant changes. Events of the past that are unlikely to recur in the future should be discounted, since value has a close relation to future expectancy.
- b. A sound appraisal of a closely held stock must consider current and prospective economic conditions as of the date of appraisal, both in the national economy and in the industry or industries with which the corporation is allied. It is important to know that the company is more or less successful than its competitors in the same industry, or that it is maintaining a stable position with respect to competitors. Equal or even greater significance may attach to the ability of the industry with which the company is allied to compete with other industries. Prospective competition which has not been a factor in prior years should be given careful attention. For example, high profits due to the novelty of its product and the lack of competition often lead to increasing competition. The public's appraisal of the future prospects of competitive industries or of competitors within an industry may be indicated by price trends in the markets for commodities and for securities. The loss of the manager of a so-called "one-man" business may have a depressing effect upon the value of the stock of such business, particularly if there is a lack of trained personnel capable of succeeding to the management of the enterprise. In valuing the stock of this type of business, therefore, the effect of the loss of the manager on the future expectancy of the business, and the absence of management- succession potentialities are pertinent factors to be taken into consideration. On the other hand, there may be factors which offset, in whole or in part, the loss of the manager's services. For instance, the nature of the business and of its assets may be such that they will not be impaired by the loss of the manager. Furthermore, the loss may be adequately covered by life insurance, or competent management might be employed on the basis of the consideration paid for the former manager's services. These, or other offsetting factors, if found to exist, should be carefully weighed against the loss of the manager's services in valuing the stock of the enterprise.
- c. Balance sheets should be obtained, preferably in the form of comparative annual statements for two or more years immediately preceding the date of appraisal, together with a balance sheet at the end of the month preceding that date, if corporate accounting will permit. Any balance sheet descriptions that are not self-explanatory, and balance sheet items comprehending diverse assets or liabilities, should be clarified in essential detail by supporting supplemental schedules. These statements usually will disclose to the appraiser (1) liquid position (ratio of current assets to current liabilities); (2) gross and net book value of principal classes of fixed assets; (3) working capital; (4) long-term indebtedness; (5) capital structure; and (6) net worth. Consideration also should be given to any assets not essential to the operation of the business, such as investments in securities, real estate, etc. In general, such nonoperating assets will command a lower rate of return than do the operating assets, although in exceptional cases the reverse may be true. In computing the book value per share of stock, assets of the investment type should be revalued on the basis of their market price and the book value adjusted accordingly. Comparison of the company's balance sheets over several years may reveal, among other facts, such developments as the acquisition of additional production facilities or subsidiary companies, improvement in financial position, and details as to recapitalizations and other changes in the capital structure of the corporation. If the corporation has more than one class of stock outstanding, the charter or certificate of incorporation should be examined to ascertain the explicit rights and privileges of the various stock issues including: (1) voting powers, (2) preference as to dividends, and (3) preference as to assets in the event of liquidation.
- d. Detailed profit-and-loss statements should be obtained and considered for a representative period immediately prior to the required date of appraisal, preferably five or more years. Such statements should show:
  1. Gross income by principal items;
  2. Principal deductions from gross income including major prior items of operating expenses, interest and other expense on each item of long-term debt, depreciation and depletion if such deductions are made, officers' salaries, in total if they appear to be reasonable or in detail if they seem to be excessive, contributions (whether or not deductible for tax purposes) that the nature of its business and its community position require the corporation to make, and taxes by principal items, including income and excess profits taxes;
  3. Net income available for dividends;
  4. Rates and amounts of dividends paid on each class of stock;
  5. Remaining amount carried to surplus; and
  6. Adjustments to, and reconciliation with, surplus as stated on the balance sheet.

With profit and loss statements of this character available, the appraiser should be able to separate recurrent from nonrecurrent items of income and expense, to distinguish between operating income and investment income, and to ascertain whether or not any line of business in which the company is engaged is operated consistently at a loss and might be abandoned with benefit to the company. The percentage of earnings retained for business expansion should be noted when dividend-paying capacity is considered. Potential future income is a major factor in many valuations of closely-held stocks, and all information concerning past income which will be helpful in predicting the future should be secured. Prior earnings records usually are the most reliable guide as to the future expectancy, but resort to arbitrary five-or-ten-year averages without regard to current trends or future prospects will not produce a realistic valuation. If, for instance, a record of progressively increasing or decreasing net income is found, then greater weight may be accorded the most recent years' profits in estimating earning power. It will be helpful, in judging risk and the extent to which a business is a marginal operator, to consider deductions from income and net income in terms of percentage of sales. Major categories of cost and expense to be so analyzed include the consumption of raw materials and supplies in the case of manufacturers, processors and fabricators; the cost of purchased merchandise in the case of merchants; utility services; insurance; taxes; depletion or depreciation; and interest.

- e. Primary consideration should be given to the dividend-paying capacity of the company rather than to dividends actually paid in the past. Recognition must be given to the necessity of retaining a reasonable portion of profits in a company to meet competition. Dividend-paying capacity is a factor that must be considered in an appraisal, but dividends actually paid in the past may not have any relation to dividend-paying capacity. Specifically, the dividends paid by a closely held family company may be measured by the income needs of the stockholders or by their desire to avoid taxes on dividend receipts, instead of by the ability of the company to pay dividends. Where an actual or effective controlling interest in a corporation is to be valued, the dividend factor is not a material element, since the payment of such dividends is discretionary with the controlling stockholders. The individual or group in control can substitute salaries and bonuses for dividends, thus reducing net income and understating the dividend-paying capacity of the company. It follows, therefore, that dividends are less reliable criteria of fair market value than other applicable factors.
- f. In the final analysis, goodwill is based upon earning capacity. The presence of goodwill and its value, therefore, rests upon the excess of net earnings over and above a fair return on the net tangible assets. While the element of goodwill may be based primarily on earnings, such factors as the prestige and renown of the business, the ownership of a trade or brand name, and a record of successful operation over a prolonged period in a particular locality, also may furnish support for the inclusion of intangible value. In some instances it may not be possible to make a separate appraisal of the tangible and intangible assets of the business. The enterprise has a value as an entity. Whatever intangible value there is, which is supportable by the facts, may be measured by the amount by which the appraised value of the tangible assets exceeds the net book value of such assets.
- g. Sales of stock of a closely held corporation should be carefully investigated to determine whether they represent transactions at arm's length. Forced or distress sales do not ordinarily reflect fair market value nor do isolated sales in small amounts necessarily control as the measure of value. This is especially true in the valuation of a controlling interest in a corporation. Since, in the case of closely held stocks, no prevailing market prices are available, there is no basis for making an adjustment for blockage. It follows, therefore, that such stocks should be valued upon a consideration of all the evidence affecting the fair market value. The size of the block of stock itself is a relevant factor to be considered. Although it is true that a minority interest in an unlisted corporation's stock is more difficult to sell than a similar block of listed stock, it is equally true that control of a corporation, either actual or in effect, representing as it does an added element of value, may justify a higher value for a specific block of stock.
- h. Section 2031(b) of the Code states, in effect, that in valuing unlisted securities the value of stock or securities of corporations engaged in the same or a similar line of business which are listed on an exchange should be taken into consideration along with all other factors. An important consideration is that the corporations to be used for comparisons have capital stocks which are actively traded by the public. In accordance with section 2031(b) of the Code, stocks listed on an exchange are to be considered first. However, if sufficient comparable companies whose stocks are listed on an exchange cannot be found, other comparable companies which have stocks actively traded in on the over-the-counter market also may be used. The essential factor is that whether the stocks are sold on an exchange or over-the-counter there is evidence of an active, free public market for the stock as of the valuation date. In selecting corporations for comparative purposes, care should be taken to use only comparable companies. Although the only restrictive requirement as to comparable corporations specified in the statute is that their lines of business be the same or similar, yet it is obvious that consideration must be given to other relevant factors in order that the most valid comparison possible will be obtained. For illustration, a corporation having one or more issues of preferred stock, bonds or debentures in addition to its common stock should not be considered to be directly comparable to one having only common stock outstanding. In like manner, a company with a declining business and decreasing markets is not comparable to one with a record of current progress and market expansion.

Sec. 5. Weight to be accorded various factors.

The valuation of closely held corporate stock entails the consideration of all relevant factors as stated in section 4. Depending upon the circumstances in each case, certain factors may carry more weight than others because of the nature of the company's business. To illustrate:

- a. Earnings may be the most important criterion of value in some cases whereas asset value will receive primary consideration in others. In general, the appraiser will accord primary consideration to earnings when valuing stocks of companies which sell products or services to the public; conversely, in the investment or holding type of company, the appraiser may accord the greatest weight to the assets underlying the security to be valued.
- b. The value of the stock of a closely held investment or real estate holding company, whether or not family owned, is closely related to the value of the assets underlying the stock. For companies of this type the appraiser should determine the fair market values of the assets of the company. Operating expenses of such a company and the cost of liquidating it, if any, merit consideration when appraising the relative values of the stock and the underlying assets. The market values of the underlying assets give due weight to potential earnings and dividends of the particular items of property underlying the stock, capitalized at rates deemed proper by the investing public at the date of appraisal. A current appraisal by the investing public should be superior to the retrospective opinion of an individual. For these reasons, adjusted net worth should be accorded greater weight in valuing the stock of a closely held investment or real estate holding company, whether or not family owned, than any of the other customary yardsticks of appraisal, such as earnings and dividend paying capacity.

Sec. 6. Capitalization rates.

In the application of certain fundamental valuation factors, such as earnings and dividends, it is necessary to capitalize the average or current results at some appropriate rate. A determination of the proper capitalization rate presents one of the most difficult problems in valuation. That there is no ready or simple solution will become apparent by a cursory check of the rates of return and dividend yields in terms of the selling prices of corporate shares listed on the major exchanges of the country. Wide variations will be found even for companies in the same industry. Moreover, the ratio will fluctuate from year to year depending upon economic conditions. Thus, no standard tables of capitalization rates applicable to closely held corporations can be formulated. Among the more important factors to be taken into consideration in deciding upon a capitalization rate in a particular case are: (1) the nature of the business; (2) the risk involved; and (3) the stability or irregularity of earnings.

Sec. 7. Average of factors.

Because valuations cannot be made on the basis of a prescribed formula, there is no means whereby the various applicable factors in a particular case can be assigned mathematical weights in deriving the fair market value. For this reason, no useful purpose is served by taking an average of several factors (for example, book value, capitalized earnings and capitalized dividends) and basing the valuation on the result. Such a process excludes active consideration of other pertinent factors, and the end result cannot be supported by a realistic application of the significant facts in the case except by mere chance.

Sec. 8. Restrictive agreements.

Frequently, in the valuation of closely held stock for estate and gift tax purposes, it will be found that the stock is subject to an agreement restricting its sale or transfer. Where shares of stock were acquired by a decedent subject to an option reserved by the issuing corporation to repurchase at a certain price, the option price is usually accepted as the fair market value for estate tax purposes. See Rev. Rul. 54-76, C.B. 1954-1, 194. However, in such case the option price is not determinative of fair market value for gift tax purposes. Where the option, or buy and sell agreement, is the result of voluntary action by the stockholders and is binding during the life as well as at the death of the stockholders, such agreement may or may not, depending upon the circumstances of each case, fix the value for estate tax purposes. However, such agreement is a factor to be considered, with other relevant factors, in determining fair market value. Where the stockholder is free to dispose of his shares during life and the option is to become effective only upon his death, the fair market value is not limited to the option price. It is always necessary to consider the relationship of the parties, the relative number of shares held by the decedent, and other material facts, to determine whether the agreement represents a bona fide business arrangement or is a device to pass the decedent's shares to the natural objects of his bounty for less than an adequate and full consideration in money or money's worth. In this connection see Rev. Rul. 157 C.B. 1953-2, 255, and Rev. Rul. 189, C.B. 1953-2, 294.

Department of the treasury

Internal Revenue Service (IRS)

26 CFR Part 1

Agency: Internal Revenue Service (IRS), Treasury

Action: Final regulations

Summary:

This document contains final regulations that provide guidance concerning the requirements for retirement plans providing catch-up contributions to individuals age 50 or older pursuant to the provisions of section 414(v). These final regulations affect section 401(k) plans, section 408(p) SIMPLE IRA plans, section 408(k) simplified employee pensions, section 403(b) tax-sheltered annuity contracts, and section 457 eligible governmental plans, and affect participants eligible to make elective deferrals under these plans or contracts.

Dates:

Effective Date: These final regulations are effective on July 8, 2003.

Applicability Date: These final regulations are applicable to contributions in taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2004.

Supplementary information:

Background

This document contains amendments to the Income Tax Regulations (26 CFR Part 1) under sections 402(g) and 414(v) of the Internal Revenue Code (Code). Section 414(v), added by the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001 (EGTRRA) (Public Law 107-16; 115 Stat. 38), effective for years beginning after December 31, 2001, permits an individual age 50 or older to make additional elective deferrals each year, up to a dollar limit, if certain requirements provided under that section are satisfied. Under section 414(v)(3), these additional elective deferrals are not subject to certain otherwise applicable limitations on elective deferrals and are excluded from consideration for certain nondiscrimination tests. Under section 414(v)(4), catch-up contributions generally must be made available to all catch-up eligible individuals who participate under any plan maintained by the employer that provides for elective deferrals.

Adoption of Amendments to the Regulations

26 CFR part 1 is amended as follows:

Part 1- Income Taxes

Paragraph 1. The authority citation for part 1 continues to read in part as follows:

Authority: 26 U.S.C. 7805 * * *

Par. 2. Section 1.402(g)-2 is added to read as follows:

§1.402(g)-2 Increased limit for catch-up contributions.

(a) General rule. Under section 402(g)(1)(C), in determining the amount of elective deferrals that are includible in gross income under section 402(g) for a catch-up eligible participant (within the meaning of §1.414(v)-1(g)), the otherwise applicable dollar limit under section 402(g)(1)(B) (as increased under section 402(g)(7), to the extent applicable) shall be further increased by the applicable dollar catch-up limit as set forth under §1.414(v)-1(c)(2).

(b) Participants in multiple plans. Paragraph (a) of this section applies without regard to whether the applicable employer plans (within the meaning of section 414(v)(6)) treat the elective deferrals as catch-up contributions. Thus, a catch-up eligible participant who makes elective deferrals under applicable employer plans of two or more employers that in total exceed the applicable dollar amount under section 402(g)(1) by an amount that does not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit under either plan may exclude the elective deferrals from gross income, even if neither applicable employer plan treats those elective deferrals as catch-up contributions.

(c) Effective date-

(1) Statutory effective date. Section 402(g)(1)(C) applies to contributions in taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2002.

(2) Regulatory effective date. Paragraphs (a) and (b) of this section apply to contributions in taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2004.

Par. 3. Section 1.414(v)-1 is added to read as follows:

§1.414(v)-1 Catch-up contributions.

(a) Catch-up contributions-

(1) General rule. An applicable employer plan shall not be treated as failing to meet any requirement of the Internal Revenue Code solely because the plan permits a catch-up eligible participant to make catch-up contributions in accordance with section 414(v) and this section. With respect to an applicable employer plan, catch-up contributions are elective deferrals made by a catch-up eligible participant that exceed any of the applicable limits set forth in paragraph (b) of this section and that are treated under the applicable employer plan as catch-up contributions, but only to the extent they do not exceed the catch-up contribution limit described in paragraph (c) of this section (determined in accordance with the special rules for employers that maintain multiple applicable employer plans in paragraph (f) of this section, if applicable). To the extent provided under paragraph (d) of this section, catch-up contributions are disregarded for purposes of various statutory limits. In addition, unless otherwise provided in paragraph (e) of this section, all catch-up eligible participants of the employer must be provided the opportunity to make catch-up contributions in order for an applicable employer plan to comply with the universal availability requirement of section 414(v)(4). The definitions in paragraph (g) of this section apply for purposes of this section and §1.402(g)-2.

(2) Treatment as elective deferrals. Except as specifically provided in this section, elective deferrals treated as catch-up contributions remain subject to statutory and regulatory rules otherwise applicable to elective deferrals. For example, catch-up contributions under an applicable employer plan that is a section 401(k) plan are subject to the distribution and vesting restrictions of section 401(k)(2)(B) and (C). In addition, the plan is permitted to provide a single election for catch-up eligible participants, with the determination of whether elective deferrals are catch-up contributions being made under the terms of the plan.

(3) Coordination with section 457(b)(3). In the case of an applicable employer plan that is a section 457 eligible governmental plan, the catch-up contributions permitted under this section shall not apply to a catch-up eligible participant for any taxable year for which a higher limitation applies to such participant under section 457(b)(3). For additional guidance, see regulations under section 457.

(b) Elective deferrals that exceed an applicable limit-

(1) Applicable limits. An applicable limit for purposes of determining catch-up contributions for a catch-up eligible participant is any of the following:

(i) Statutory limit. A statutory limit is a limit on elective deferrals or annual additions permitted to be made (without regard to section 414(v) and this section) with respect to an employee for a year provided in section 401(a)(30), 402(h), 403(b), 408, 415(c), or 457(b)(2) (without regard to section 457(b)(3)), as applicable.

(ii) Employer-provided limit. An employer-provided limit is any limit on the elective deferrals an employee is permitted to make (without regard to section 414(v) and this section) that is contained in the terms of the plan, but which is not required under the Internal Revenue Code. Thus, for example, if, in accordance with the terms of the plan, highly compensated employees are limited to a deferral percentage of 10% of compensation, this limit is an employer-provided limit that is an applicable limit with respect to the highly compensated employees.

(iii) Actual deferral percentage (ADP) limit. In the case of a section 401(k) plan that would fail the ADP test of section 401(k)(3) if it did not correct under section 401(k)(8), the ADP limit is the highest amount of elective deferrals that can be retained in the plan by any highly compensated employee under the rules of section 401(k)(8)(C) (without regard to paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of this section). In the case of a simplified employee pension (SEP) with a salary reduction arrangement (within the meaning of section 408(k)(6)) that would fail the requirements of section 408(k)(6)(A)(iii) if it did not correct in accordance with section 408(k)(6)(C), the ADP limit is the highest amount of elective deferrals that can be made by any highly compensated employee under the rules of section 408(k)(6) (without regard to paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of this section).

(2) Contributions in excess of applicable limit-

(i) Plan year limits-

(A) General rule. Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2)(ii) of this section, the amount of elective deferrals in excess of an applicable limit is determined as of the end of the plan year by comparing the total elective deferrals for the plan year with the applicable limit for the plan year. In addition, except as provided in paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B) of this section, in the case of a plan that provides for separate employer-provided limits on elective deferrals for separate portions of plan compensation within the plan year, the applicable limit for the plan year is the sum of the dollar amounts of the limits for the separate portions. For example, if a plan sets a deferral percentage limit for each payroll period, the applicable limit for the plan year is the sum of the dollar amounts of the limits for the payroll periods.

(B) Alternative method for determining employer-provided limit-

(1) General rule. If the plan limits elective deferrals for separate portions of the plan year, then, solely for purposes of determining the amount that is in excess of an employer-provided limit, the plan is permitted to provide that the applicable limit for the plan year is the product of the employee's plan year compensation and the time-weighted average of the deferral percentage limits, rather than determining the employer-provided limit as the sum of the limits for the separate portions of the year. Thus, for example, if, in accordance with the terms of the plan, highly compensated employees are limited to 8% of compensation during the first half of the plan year and 10% of compensation for the second half of the plan year, the plan is permitted to provide that the applicable limit for a highly compensated employee is 9% of the employee's plan year compensation.

(2) Alternative definition of compensation permitted. A plan using the alternative method in this paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B) is permitted to provide that the applicable limit for the plan year is determined as the product of the catch-up eligible participant's compensation used for purposes of the ADP test and the time-weighted average of the deferral percentage limits. The alternative calculation in this paragraph (b)(2)(i)(B)(2) is available regardless of whether the deferral percentage limits change during the plan year.

(ii) Other year limit. In the case of an applicable limit that is applied on the basis of a year other than the plan year (e.g., the calendar-year limit on elective deferrals under section 401(a)(30)), the determination of whether elective deferrals are in excess of the applicable limit is made on the basis of such other year.

(c) Catch-up contribution limit-

(1) General rule. Elective deferrals with respect to a catch-up eligible participant in excess of an applicable limit under paragraph (b) of this section are treated as catch-up contributions under this section as of a date within a taxable year only to the extent that such elective deferrals do not exceed the catch-up contribution limit described in paragraphs (c)(1) and (2) of this section, reduced by elective deferrals previously treated as catch-up contributions for the taxable year, determined in accordance with paragraph (c)(3) of this section. The catch-up contribution limit for a taxable year is generally the applicable dollar catch-up limit for such taxable year, as set forth in paragraph (c)(2) of this section. However, an elective deferral is not treated as a catch-up contribution to the extent that the elective deferral, when added to all other elective deferrals for the taxable year under any applicable employer plan of the employer, exceeds the participant's compensation (determined in accordance with section 415(c)(3)) for the taxable year. See also paragraph (f) of this section for special rules for employees who participate in more than one applicable employer plan maintained by the employer.

(2) Applicable dollar catch-up limit-

(i) In general. The applicable dollar catch-up limit for an applicable employer plan, other than a plan described in section 401(k)(11) or 408(p), is determined under the following table:

For Taxable Years Beginning in	Applicable Dollar Catch-up Limit
2002	$1,000
2003	$2,000
2004	$3,000
2005	$4,000
2006	$5,000

(ii) Simple plans. The applicable dollar catch-up limit for a SIMPLE 401(k) plan described in section 401(k)(11) or a Simple IRA plan as described in section 408(p) is determined under the following table:

For Taxable Years Beginning in	Applicable Dollar Catch-up Limit
2002	$500
2003	$1,000
2004	$1,500
2005	$2,000
2006	$2,500

(iii) Cost of living adjustments. For taxable years beginning after 2006, the applicable dollar catch-up limit is the applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006 described in paragraph (c)(2)(i) or (ii) of this section increased at the same time and in the same manner as adjustments under section 415(d), except that the base period shall be the calendar quarter beginning July 1, 2005, and any increase that is not a multiple of $500 shall be rounded to the next lower multiple of $500.

(3) Timing rules. For purposes of determining the maximum amount of permitted catch-up contributions for a catch-up eligible participant, the determination of whether an elective deferral is a catch-up contribution is made as of the last day of the plan year (or in the case of section 415, as of the last day of the limitation year), except that, with respect to elective deferrals in excess of an applicable limit that is tested on the basis of the taxable year or calendar year (e.g., the section 401(a)(30) limit on elective deferrals), the determination of whether such elective deferrals are treated as catch-up contributions is made at the time they are deferred.

(d) Treatment of catch-up contributions-

(1) Contributions not taken into account for certain limits. Catch-up contributions are not taken into account in applying the limits of section 401(a)(30), 402(h), 403(b), 408, 415(c), or 457(b)(2) (determined without regard to section 457(b)(3)) to other contributions or benefits under an applicable employer plan or any other plan of the employer.

(2) Contributions not taken into account in application of ADP test-

(i) Calculation of ADR. Elective deferrals that are treated as catch-up contributions pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section with respect to a section 401(k) plan because they exceed a statutory or employer-provided limit described in paragraph (b)(1)(i) or (ii) of this section, respectively, are subtracted from the catch-up eligible participant's elective deferrals for the plan year for purposes of determining the actual deferral ratio (ADR) (as defined in regulations under section 401(k)) of a catch-up eligible participant. Similarly, elective deferrals that are treated as catch-up contributions pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section with respect to a SEP because they exceed a statutory or employer-provided limit described in paragraph (b)(1)(i) or (ii) of this section, respectively, are subtracted from the catch-up eligible participant's elective deferrals for the plan year for purposes of determining the deferral percentage under section 408(k)(6)(D) of a catch-up eligible participant.

(ii) Adjustment of elective deferrals for correction purposes. For purposes of the correction of excess contributions in accordance with section 401(k)(8)(C), elective deferrals under the plan treated as catch-up contributions for the plan year and not taken into account in the ADP test under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section are subtracted from the catch-up eligible participant's elective deferrals under the plan for the plan year.

(iii) Excess contributions treated as catch-up contributions. A section 401(k) plan that satisfies the ADP test of section 401(k)(3) through correction under section 401(k)(8) must retain any elective deferrals that are treated as catch-up contributions pursuant to paragraph (c) of this section because they exceed the ADP limit in paragraph (b)(1)(iii) of this section. In addition, a section 401(k) plan is not treated as failing to satisfy section 401(k)(8) merely because elective deferrals described in the preceding sentence are not distributed or recharacterized as employee contributions. Similarly, a SEP is not treated as failing to satisfy section 408(k)(6)(A)(iii) merely because catch-up contributions are not treated as excess contributions with respect to a catch-up eligible participant under the rules of section 408(k)(6)(C). Notwithstanding the fact that elective deferrals described in this paragraph (d)(2)(iii) are not distributed, such elective deferrals are still considered to be excess contributions under section 401(k)(8), and accordingly, matching contributions with respect to such elective deferrals are permitted to be forfeited under the rules of section 411(a)(3)(G).

(3) Contributions not taken into account for other nondiscrimination purposes-

(i) Application for top-heavy. Catch-up contributions with respect to the current plan year are not taken into account for purposes of section 416. However, catch-up contributions for prior years are taken into account for purposes of section 416. Thus, catch-up contributions for prior years are included in the account balances that are used in determining whether the plan is top-heavy under section 416(g).

(ii) Application for section 410(b). Catch-up contributions with respect to the current plan year are not taken into account for purposes of section 410(b). Thus, catch-up contributions are not taken into account in determining the average benefit percentage under §1.410(b)-5 for the year if benefit percentages are determined based on current year contributions. However, catch-up contributions for prior years are taken into account for purposes of section 410(b). Thus, catch-up contributions for prior years would be included in the account balances that are used in determining the average benefit percentage if allocations for prior years are taken into account.

(4) Availability of catch-up contributions. An applicable employer plan does not violate §1.401(a)(4)-4 merely because the group of employees for whom catch-up contributions are currently available (i.e., the catch-up eligible participants) is not a group of employees that would satisfy section 410(b) (without regard to §1.410(b)-5). In addition, a catch-up eligible participant is not treated as having a right to a different rate of allocation of matching contributions merely because an otherwise nondiscriminatory schedule of matching rates is applied to elective deferrals that include catch-up contributions. The rules in this paragraph (d)(4) also apply for purposes of satisfying the requirements of section 403(b)(12).

(e) Universal availability requirement-

(1) General rule-

(i) Effective opportunity. An applicable employer plan that offers catch-up contributions and that is otherwise subject to section 401(a)(4) (including a plan that is subject to section 401(a)(4) pursuant to section 403(b)(12)) will not satisfy the requirements of section 401(a)(4) unless all catch-up eligible participants who participate under any applicable employer plan maintained by the employer are provided with an effective opportunity to make the same dollar amount of catch-up contributions. A plan fails to provide an effective opportunity to make catch-up contributions if it has an applicable limit (e.g., an employer-provided limit) that applies to a catch-up eligible participant and does not permit the participant to make elective deferrals in excess of that limit. An applicable employer plan does not fail to satisfy the universal availability requirement of this paragraph (e) solely because an employer-provided limit does not apply to all employees or different limits apply to different groups of employees under paragraph (b)(2)(i) of this section. However, a plan may not provide lower employer-provided limits for catch-up eligible participants.

(ii) Certain practices permitted-

(A) Proration of limit. A applicable employer plan does not fail to satisfy the universal availability requirement of this paragraph (e) merely because the plan allows participants to defer an amount equal to a specified percentage of compensation for each payroll period and for each payroll period permits each catch-up eligible participant to defer a pro-rata share of the applicable dollar catch-up limit in addition to that amount.

(B) Cash availability. An applicable employer plan does not fail to satisfy the universal availability requirement of this paragraph (e) merely because it restricts the elective deferrals of any employee (including a catch-up eligible participant) to amounts available after other withholding from the employee's pay (e.g., after deduction of all applicable income and employment taxes). For this purpose, an employer limit of 75% of compensation or higher will be treated as limiting employees to amounts available after other withholdings.

(2) Certain employees disregarded. An applicable employer plan does not fail to satisfy the universal availability requirement of this paragraph (e) merely because employees described in section 410(b)(3) (e.g., collectively bargained employees) are not provided the opportunity to make catch-up contributions.

(3) Exception for certain plans. An applicable employer plan does not fail to satisfy the universal availability requirement of this paragraph (e) merely because another applicable employer plan that is a section 457 eligible governmental plan does not provide for catch-up contributions to the extent set forth in section 414(v)(6)(C) and paragraph (a)(3) of this section.

(4) Exception for section 410(b)(6)(C)(ii) period. If an applicable employer plan satisfies the universal availability requirement of this paragraph (e) before an acquisition or disposition described in §1.410(b)-2(f) and would fail to satisfy the universal availability requirement of this paragraph (e) merely because of such event, then the applicable employer plan shall continue to be treated as satisfying this paragraph (e) through the end of the period determined under section 410(b)(6)(C)(ii).

(f) Special rules for an employer that sponsors multiple plans-

(1) General rule. For purposes of paragraph (c) of this section, all applicable employer plans, other than section 457 eligible governmental plans, maintained by the same employer are treated as one plan and all section 457 eligible governmental plans maintained by the same employer are treated as one plan. Thus, the total amount of catch-up contributions under all applicable employer plans of an employer (other than section 457 eligible governmental plans) is limited to the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the taxable year, and the total amount of catch-up contributions for all section 457 eligible governmental plans of an employer is limited to the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the taxable year.

(2) Coordination of employer-provided limits. An applicable employer plan is permitted to allow a catch-up eligible participant to defer amounts in excess of an employer-provided limit under that plan without regard to whether elective deferrals made by the participant have been treated as catch-up contributions for the taxable year under another applicable employer plan aggregated with such plan under this paragraph (f). However, to the extent elective deferrals under another plan maintained by the employer have already been treated as catch-up contributions during the taxable year, the elective deferrals under the plan may be treated as catch-up contributions only up to the amount remaining under the catch-up limit for the year. Any other elective deferrals that exceed the employer-provided limit may not be treated as catch-up contributions and must satisfy the otherwise applicable nondiscrimination rules. For example, the right to make contributions in excess of the employer-provided limit is an other right or feature which must satisfy §1.401(a)(4)-4 to the extent that the contributions are not catch-up contributions. Also, contributions in excess of the employer provided limit are taken into account under the ADP test to the extent they are not catch-up contributions.

(3) Allocation rules. If a catch-up eligible participant makes additional elective deferrals in excess of an applicable limit under paragraph (b)(1) of this section under more than one applicable employer plan that is aggregated under the rules of this paragraph (f), the applicable employer plan under which elective deferrals in excess of an applicable limit are treated as catch-up contributions is permitted to be determined in any manner that is not inconsistent with the manner in which such amounts were actually deferred under the plan.

(g) Definitions-

(1) Applicable employer plan. The term applicable employer plan means a section 401(k) plan, a SIMPLE IRA plan as defined in section 408(p), a simplified employee pension plan as defined in section 408(k) (SEP), a plan or contract that satisfies the requirements of section 403(b), or a section 457 eligible governmental plan.

(2) Elective deferral. The term elective deferral means an elective deferral within the meaning of section 402(g)(3) or any contribution to a section 457 eligible governmental plan.

(3) Catch-up eligible participant. An employee is a catch-up eligible participant for a taxable year if-

(i) The employee is eligible to make elective deferrals under an applicable employer plan (without regard to section 414(v) or this section); and

(ii) The employee's 50th or higher birthday would occur before the end of the employee's taxable year.

(4) Other definitions.

(i) The terms employer, employee, section 401(k) plan, and highly compensated employee have the meanings provided in §1.410(b)-9.

(ii) The term section 457 eligible governmental plan means an eligible deferred compensation plan described in section 457(b) that is established and maintained by an eligible employer described in section 457(e)(1)(A).

(h) Examples.

The following examples illustrate the application of this section. For purposes of these examples, the limit under section 401(a)(30) is $15,000 and the applicable dollar catch-up limit is $5,000 and, except as specifically provided, the plan year is the calendar year. In addition, it is assumed that the participant's elective deferrals under all plans of the employer do not exceed the participant's section 415(c)(3) compensation, that the taxable year of the participant is the calendar year and that any correction pursuant to section 401(k)(8) is made through distribution of excess contributions. The examples are as follows:

Example 1.

(i) Participant A is eligible to make elective deferrals under a section 401(k) plan, Plan P. Plan P does not limit elective deferrals except as necessary to comply with sections 401(a)(30) and 415. In 2006, Participant A is 55 years old. Plan P also provides that a catch-up eligible participant is permitted to defer amounts in excess of the section 401(a)(30) limit up to the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the year. Participant A defers $18,000 during 2006.

(ii) Participant A's elective deferrals in excess of the section 401(a)(30) limit ($3,000) do not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006 ($5,000). Under paragraph (a)(1) of this section, the $3,000 is a catch-up contribution and, pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section, it is not taken into account in determining Participant A's ADR for purposes of section 401(k)(3).

Example 2.

(i) Participants B and C, who are highly compensated employees each earning $120,000, are eligible to make elective deferrals under a section 401(k) plan, Plan Q. Plan Q limits elective deferrals as necessary to comply with section 401(a)(30) and 415, and also provides that no highly compensated employee may make an elective deferral at a rate that exceeds 10% of compensation. However, Plan Q also provides that a catch-up eligible participant is permitted to defer amounts in excess of 10% during the plan year up to the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the year. In 2006, Participants B and C are both 55 years old and, pursuant to the catch-up provision in Plan Q, both elect to defer 10% of compensation plus a pro-rata portion of the $5,000 applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006. Participant B continues this election in effect for the entire year, for a total elective contribution for the year of $17,000. However, in July 2006, after deferring $8,500, Participant C discontinues making elective deferrals.

(ii) Once Participant B's elective deferrals for the year exceed the section 401(a)(30) limit ($15,000), subsequent elective deferrals are treated as catch-up contributions as they are deferred, provided that such elective deferrals do not exceed the catch-up contribution limit for the taxable year. Since the $2,000 in elective deferrals made after Participant B reaches the section 402(g) limit for the calendar year does not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006, the entire $2,000 is treated as a catch-up contribution.

(iii) As of the last day of the plan year, Participant B has exceeded the employer-provided limit of 10% (10% of $120,000 or $12,000 for Participant B) by an additional $3,000. Since the additional $3,000 in elective deferrals does not exceed the $5,000 applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006, reduced by the $2,000 in elective deferrals previously treated as catch-up contributions, the entire $3,000 of elective deferrals is treated as a catch-up contribution.

(iv) In determining Participant B's ADR, the $5,000 of catch-up contributions are subtracted from Participant B's elective deferrals for the plan year under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section. Accordingly, Participant B's ADR is 10% ( $$12,000 / $120,000$ ). In addition, for purposes of applying the rules of section 401(k)(8), Participant B is treated as having elective deferrals of $12,000.

(v) Participant C's elective deferrals for the year do not exceed an applicable limit for the plan year. Accordingly, Participant C's $8,500 of elective deferrals must be taken into account in determining Participant C's ADR for purposes of section 401(k)(3).

Example 3.

(i) The facts are the same as in Example 2, except that Plan Q is amended to change the maximum permitted deferral percentage for highly compensated employees to 7%, effective for deferrals after April 1, 2006. Participant B, who has earned $40,000 in the first 3 months of the year and has been deferring at a rate of 10% of compensation plus a pro-rata portion of the $5,000 applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006, reduces the 10% of pay deferral rate to 7% for the remaining 9 months of the year (while continuing to defer a pro-rata portion of the $5,000 applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006). During those 9 months, Participant B earns $80,000. Thus, Participant B's total elective deferrals for the year are $14,600 ($4,000 for the first 3 months of the year plus $5,600 for the last 9 months of the year plus an additional $5,000 throughout the year).

(ii) The employer-provided limit for Participant B for the plan year is $9,600 ($4,000 for the first 3 months of the year, plus $5,600 for the last 9 months of the year). Accordingly, Participant B's elective deferrals for the year that are in excess of the employer-provided limit are $5,000 (the excess of $14,600 over $9,600), which does not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit of $5,000.

(iii) Alternatively, Plan Q may provide that the employer-provided limit is determined as the time-weighted average of the different deferral percentage limits over the course of the year. In this case, the time-weighted average limit is 7.75% for all participants, and the applicable limit for Participant B is 7.75% of $120,000, or $9,300. Accordingly, Participant B's elective deferrals for the year that are in excess of the employer-provided limit are $5,300 (the excess of $14,600 over $9,300). Since the amount of Participant B's elective deferrals in excess of the employer-provided limit ($5,300) exceeds the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the taxable year, only $5,000 of Participant B's elective deferrals may be treated as catch-up contributions. In determining Participant B's actual deferral ratio, the $5,000 of catch-up contributions are subtracted from Participant B's elective deferrals for the plan year under paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section. Accordingly, Participant B's actual deferral ratio is 8% ( $$9,600 / $120,000$ ). In addition, for purposes of applying the rules of section 401(k)(8), Participant B is treated as having elective deferrals of $9,600.

Example 4.

(i) The facts are the same as in Example 1. In addition to Participant A, Participant D is a highly compensated employee who is eligible to make elective deferrals under Plan P. During 2006, Participant D, who is 60 years old, elects to defer $14,000.

(ii) The ADP test is run for Plan P (after excluding the $3,000 in catch-up contributions from Participant A's elective deferrals), but Plan P needs to take corrective action in order to pass the ADP test. After applying the rules of section 401(k)(8)(C) to allocate the total excess contributions determined under section 401(k)(8)(B), the maximum deferrals which may be retained by any highly compensated employee in Plan P is $12,500.

(iii) Pursuant to paragraph (b)(1)(iii) of this section, the ADP limit under Plan P of $12,500 is an applicable limit. Accordingly, $1,500 of Participant D's elective deferrals exceed the applicable limit. Similarly, $2,500 of Participant A's elective deferrals (other than the $3,000 of elective deferrals treated as catch-up contributions because they exceed the section 401(a)(30) limit) exceed the applicable limit.

(iv) The $1,500 of Participant D's elective deferrals that exceed the applicable limit are less than the applicable dollar catch-up limit and are treated as catch-up contributions. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of this section, Plan P must retain Participant D's $1,500 in elective deferrals and Plan P is not treated as failing to satisfy section 401(k)(8) merely because the elective deferrals are not distributed to Participant D.

(v) The $2,500 of Participant A's elective deferrals that exceed the applicable limit are greater than the portion of the applicable dollar catch-up limit ($2,000) that remains after treating the $3,000 of elective deferrals in excess of the section 401(a)(30) limit as catch-up contributions. Accordingly, $2,000 of Participant A's elective deferrals are treated as catch-up contributions. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of this section, Plan P must retain Participant A's $2,000 in elective deferrals and Plan P is not treated as failing to satisfy section 401(k)(8) merely because the elective deferrals are not distributed to Participant A. However, $500 of Participant A's elective deferrals can not be treated as catch-up contributions and must be distributed to Participant A in order to satisfy section 401(k)(8).

Example 5.

(i) Participant E is a highly compensated employee who is a catch-up eligible participant under a section 401(k) plan, Plan R, with a plan year ending October 31, 2006. Plan R does not limit elective deferrals except as necessary to comply with section 401(a)(30) and section 415. Plan R permits all catch-up eligible participants to defer an additional amount equal to the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the year ($5,000) in excess of the section 401(a)(30) limit. Participant E did not exceed the section 401(a)(30) limit in 2005 and did not exceed the ADP limit for the plan year ending October 31, 2005. Participant E made $3,200 of deferrals in the period November 1, 2005, through December 31, 2005, and an additional $16,000 of deferrals in the first 10 months of 2006, for a total of $19,200 in elective deferrals for the plan year.

(ii) Once Participant E's elective deferrals for the calendar year 2006 exceed $15,000, subsequent elective deferrals are treated as catch-up contributions at the time they are deferred, provided that such elective deferrals do not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the taxable year. Since the $1,000 in elective deferrals made after Participant E reaches the section 402(g) limit for the calendar year does not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006, the entire $1,000 is a catch-up contribution. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section, $1,000 is subtracted from Participant E's $19,200 in elective deferrals for the plan year ending October 31, 2006, in determining Participant E's ADR for that plan year.

(iii) The ADP test is run for Plan R (after excluding the $1,000 in elective deferrals in excess of the section 401(a)(30) limit), but Plan R needs to take corrective action in order to pass the ADP test. After applying the rules of section 401(k)(8)(C) to allocate the total excess contributions determined under section 401(k)(8)(C), the maximum deferrals that may be retained by any highly compensated employee under Plan R for the plan year ending October 31, 2006, (the ADP limit) is $14,800.

(iv) Under paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, elective deferrals that exceed the section 401(a)(30) limit under Plan R are also subtracted from Participant E's elective deferrals under Plan R for purposes of applying the rules of section 401(k)(8). Accordingly, for purposes of correcting the failed ADP test, Participant E is treated as having contributed $18,200 of elective deferrals in Plan R. The amount of elective deferrals that would have to be distributed to Participant E in order to satisfy section 401(k)(8)(C) is $3,400 ($18,200 minus $14,800), which is less than the excess of the applicable dollar catch-up limit ($5,000) over the elective deferrals previously treated as catch-up contributions under Plan R for the taxable year ($1,000). Under paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of this section, Plan R must retain Participant E's $3,400 in elective deferrals and is not treated as failing to satisfy section 401(k)(8) merely because the elective deferrals are not distributed to Participant E.

(v) Even though Participant E's elective deferrals for the calendar year 2006 have exceeded the section 401(a)(30) limit, Participant E can continue to make elective deferrals during the last 2 months of the calendar year, since Participant E's catch-up contributions for the taxable year are not taken into account in applying the section 401(a)(30) limit for 2006. Thus, Participant E can make an additional contribution of $3,400 ($15,000 minus ($16,000 minus $4,400)) without exceeding the section 401(a)(30) for the calendar year and without regard to any additional catch-up contributions. In addition, Participant E may make additional catch-up contributions of $600 (the $5,000 applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006, reduced by the $4,400 ($1,000 plus $3,400) of elective deferrals previously treated as catch-up contributions during the taxable year). The $600 of catch-up contributions will not be taken into account in the ADP test for the plan year ending October 31, 2007.

Example 6.

(i) The facts are the same as in Example 5, except that Participant E exceeded the section 401(a)(30) limit for 2005 by $1,300 prior to October 31, 2005, and made $600 of elective deferrals in the period November 1, 2005, through December 31, 2005 (which were catch-up contributions for 2005). Thus, Participant E made $16,600 of elective deferrals for the plan year ending October 31, 2006.

(ii) Once Participant E's elective deferrals for the calendar year 2006 exceed $15,000, subsequent elective deferrals are treated as catch-up contributions as they are deferred, provided that such elective deferrals do not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the taxable year. Since the $1,000 in elective deferrals made after Participant E reaches the section 402(g) limit for calendar year 2006 does not exceed the applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006, the entire $1,000 is a catch-up contribution. Pursuant to paragraph (d)(2)(i) of this section, $1,000 is subtracted from Participant E's elective deferrals in determining Participant E's ADR for the plan year ending October 31, 2006. In addition, the $600 of catch-up contributions from the period November 1, 2005, to December 31, 2005, are subtracted from Participant E's elective deferrals in determining Participant E's ADR. Thus, the total elective deferrals taken into account in determining Participant E's ADR for the plan year ending October 31, 2006, is $15,000 ($16,600 in elective deferrals for the current plan year, less $1,600 in catch-up contributions).

(iii) The ADP test is run for Plan R (after excluding the $1,600 in elective deferrals in excess of the section 401(a)(30) limit), but Plan R needs to take corrective action in order to pass the ADP test. After applying the rules of section 401(k)(8)(C) to allocate the total excess contributions determined under section 401(k)(8)(C), the maximum deferrals that may be retained by any highly compensated employee under Plan R (the ADP limit) is $14,800.

(iv) Under paragraph (d)(2)(ii) of this section, elective deferrals that exceed the section 401(a)(30) limit under Plan R are also subtracted from Participant E's elective deferrals under Plan R for purposes of applying the rules of section 401(k)(8). Accordingly, for purposes of correcting the failed ADP test, Participant E is treated as having contributed $15,000 of elective deferrals in Plan R. The amount of elective deferrals that would have to be distributed to Participant E in order to satisfy section 401(k)(8)(C) is $200 ($15,000 minus $14,800), which is less than the excess of the applicable dollar catch-up limit ($5,000) over the elective deferrals previously treated as catch-up contributions under Plan R for the taxable year ($1,000). Under paragraph (d)(2)(iii) of this section, Plan R must retain Participant E's $200 in elective deferrals and is not treated as failing to satisfy section 401(k)(8) merely because the elective deferrals are not distributed to Participant E.

(v) Even though Participant E's elective deferrals for calendar year 2006 have exceeded the section 401(a)(30) limit, Participant E can continue to make elective deferrals during the last 2 months of the calendar year, since Participant E's catch-up contributions for the taxable year are not taken into account in applying the section 401(a)(30) limit for 2006. Thus Participant E can make an additional contribution of $200 ($15,000 minus ($16,000 minus $1,200)) without exceeding the section 401(a)(30) for the calendar year and without regard to any additional catch-up contributions. In addition, Participant E may make additional catch-up contributions of $3,800 (the $5,000 applicable dollar catch-up limit for 2006, reduced by the $1,200 ($1,000 plus $200) of elective deferrals previously treated as catch-up contributions during the taxable year). The $3,800 of catch-up contributions will not be taken into account in the ADP test for the plan year ending October 31, 2007.

Example 7.

(i) Participant F, who is 58 years old, is a highly compensated employee who earns $100,000 per year. Participant F participates in a section 401(k) plan, Plan S, for the first 6 months of the year and then transfers to another section 401(k) plan, Plan T, sponsored by the same employer, for the second 6 months of the year. Plan S limits highly compensated employees' elective deferrals to 6% of compensation for the period of participation, but permits catch-up eligible participants to defer amounts in excess of 6% during the plan year, up to the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the year. Plan T limits highly compensated employees' elective deferrals to 8% of compensation for the period of participation, but permits catch-up eligible participants to defer amounts in excess of 8% during the plan year, up to the applicable dollar catch-up limit for the year. Participant F earned $50,000 in the first 6 months of the year and deferred $6,000 under Plan S. Participant F also deferred $6,500 under Plan T.

(ii) As of the last day of the plan year, Participant F has $3,000 in elective deferrals under Plan S that exceed the employer-provided limit of $3,000. Under Plan T, Participant F has $2,500 in elective deferrals that exceed the employer-provided limit of $4,000. The total amount of elective deferrals in excess of employer-provided limits, $5,500, exceeds the applicable dollar catch-up limit by $500. Accordingly, $500 of the elective deferrals in excess of the employer-provided limits are not catch-up contributions and are treated as regular elective deferrals (and are taken into account in the ADP test). The determination of which elective deferrals in excess of an applicable limit are treated as catch-up contributions is permitted to be made in any manner that is not inconsistent with the manner in which such amounts were actually deferred under Plan S and Plan T.

Example 8.

(i) Employer X sponsors Plan P, which provides for matching contributions equal to 50% of elective deferrals that do not exceed 10% of compensation. Elective deferrals for highly compensated employees are limited, on a payroll-by-payroll basis, to 10% of compensation. Employer X pays employees on a monthly basis. Plan P also provides that elective contributions are limited in accordance with section 401(a)(30) and other applicable statutory limits. Plan P also provides for catch-up contributions. Under Plan P, for purposes of calculating the amount to be treated as catch-up contributions (and to be excluded from the ADP test), amounts in excess of the 10% limit for highly compensated employees are determined at the end of the plan year based on compensation used for purposes of ADP testing (testing compensation), a definition of compensation that is different from the definition used under the plan for purposes of calculating elective deferrals and matching contributions during the plan year (deferral compensation).

(ii) Participant A, a highly compensated employee, is a catch-up eligible participant under Plan P with deferral compensation of $10,000 per monthly payroll period. Participant A defers 10% per payroll period for the first 10 months of the year, and is allocated a matching contribution each payroll period of $500. In addition, Participant A defers an additional $4,000 during the first 10 months of the year. Participant A then reduces deferrals during the last 2 months of the year to 5% of compensation. Participant A is allocated a matching contribution of $250 for each of the last 2 months of the plan year. For the plan year, Participant A has $15,000 in elective deferrals and $5,500 in matching contributions.

(iii) A's testing compensation is $118,000. At the end of the plan year, based on 10% of testing compensation, or $11,800, Plan P determines that A has $3,200 in deferrals that exceed the 10% employer provided limit. Plan P excludes $3,200 from ADP testing and calculates A's ADR as $11,800 divided by $118,000, or 10%. Although A has not been allocated a matching contribution equal to 50% of $11,800, because Plan P provides that matching contributions are calculated based on elective deferrals during a payroll period as a percentage of deferral compensation, Plan P is not required to allocate an additional $400 of matching contributions to A.

(i) Effective date-

(1) Statutory effective date. Section 414(v) applies to contributions in taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2002.

(2) Regulatory effective date. Paragraphs (a) through (h) of this section apply to contributions in taxable years beginning on or after January 1, 2004.

Internal Revenue Service

Revenue Procedure 2003-13

Deemed Individual Retirement Accounts

"Deemed IRAs" were created under the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001 when it added Section 408(q) to the Internal Revenue Code. Section 408q permits employees to make either regular IRA and/or Roth IRA contributions to an individual retirement account (IRA) within a qualified employer plan.

Part III. Administrative, Procedural, and Miscellaneous

26 CFR 601.201: Rulings and determination letters

Revenue Procedure 2003-13

Section 1. Purpose

This revenue procedure provides guidance for employers that want to amend their plans qualified under § 401(a) of the Internal Revenue Code to include "deemed IRAs" described in § 408\(q\). The revenue procedure also provides a sample plan amendment that may be used, in conjunction with IRA language, to amend a qualified plan to provide for deemed IRAs.

Section 2. Background

.01 Section 408(q) was added to the Code by section 602 of the Economic Growth and Tax Relief Reconciliation Act of 2001 ("EGTRRA"), Pub. L. 107-16, effective for plan years beginning after December 31, 2002. Section 408(q) provides that if a qualified employer plan elects to allow employees to make voluntary employee contributions to a separate account or annuity established under the plan, and under the terms of the qualified employer plan such account or annuity meets the applicable requirements of § 408 or 408A for an individual retirement account or annuity, then such account or annuity shall be treated under the Code in the same manner as an IRA and not as a qualified employer plan. The Internal Revenue Service and Treasury expect to issue regulations under Code § 408(q) in the near future.

.02 Notice 2001-42, 2001-2 C.B. 70, provides a remedial amendment period under § 401(b), ending no earlier than the end of the first plan year beginning on or after January 1, 2005, in which any needed retroactive EGTRRA plan amendment may be adopted (the "EGTRRA remedial amendment period"). The availability of the EGTRRA remedial amendment period is conditioned on the timely adoption of a good faith EGTRRA plan amendment.

.03 Notice 2001-57, 2001-2 C.B. 279, provides sample plan amendments that satisfy, in form, the "good faith EGTRRA plan amendment" requirement described in the preceding paragraph. Although not containing a sample plan amendment for deemed IRAs under Code § 408(q), the notice provides that the good faith plan amendment requirement applies to § 408(q). The notice also provides that, until further notice, the Service will not consider EGTRRA in issuing determination, opinion or advisory letters.

.04 Rev. Proc. 2002-10, 2002-4 I.R.B. 401, requires all prototype sponsors with currently approved IRAs, SEPs, and SIMPLE IRA plans to amend these documents and submit applications for opinion letters on the amended documents by December 31, 2002.

Section 3. Required language for deemed IRAs

.01 Plan sponsors that want to provide for deemed IRAs must have such provisions in their plan documents and must have deemed IRAs in effect for employees no later than the date deemed IRA contributions are accepted from such employees. Notwithstanding the preceding sentence, plan sponsors that want to provide for deemed IRAs for plan years beginning before January 1, 2004, (but after December 31, 2002) are not required to have such provisions in their plan documents before the end of such plan years. Plan sponsors must otherwise comply with the rules in Notice 2001-57. To satisfy the requirements for the EGTRRA remedial amendment period, the provisions must reflect a reasonable, good-faith interpretation of the statute. The sample plan amendment contained in the appendix to this revenue procedure, when used in conjunction with IRA language described in section 3.02 below, is a reasonable, good-faith interpretation of the statute.

.02 In addition to the sample plan amendment in the Appendix, a plan that intends to comply with Code § 408(q) must also contain language that satisfies § 408 or 408A, relating to traditional and Roth IRAs, respectively. The Service provides sample language (a "Listing of Required Modifications," or "LRMs") that satisfies §§ 408 and 408A on the Service's Web Site at www.irs.gov/ep. A plan will satisfy the "reasonable, good-faith interpretation of the statute" requirement with respect to IRA language if the language addresses every applicable point in the IRA LRMs.

Appendix

Sample Plan Amendment

(The following sample plan amendment may be adopted only by plans trustee by a person eligible to act as a trustee of an IRA under § 408(a)(2) and plans that designate an insurance company to issue annuity contracts under § 408(b). Additional language that satisfies § 408 or 408A must also be added to the plan.)

Section ----- . Deemed IRAs

1. Applicability and effective date. This section shall apply if elected by the employer in the adoption agreement and shall be effective for plan years beginning after the date specified in the adoption agreement.
2. Deemed IRAs. Each participant may make voluntary employee contributions to the participant's ----- [insert "traditional" or "Roth"] IRA under the plan. The plan shall establish a separate ----- [insert "account" or "annuity"] for the designated IRA contributions of each participant and any earnings properly allocable to the contributions, and maintain separate recordkeeping with respect to each such IRA.
3. Reporting duties. The ----- [insert "trustee" or "issuer"] shall be subject to the reporting requirements of section 408(i) of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to all IRAs that are established and maintained under the plan.
4. Voluntary employee contributions. For purposes of this section, a voluntary employee contribution means any contribution (other than a mandatory contribution within the meaning of section 411(c)(2) of the Code) that is made by the participant and which the participant has designated, at or prior to the time of making the contribution, as a contribution to which this section applies.
5. IRAs established pursuant to this section shall be held in ----- [insert "a trust" or "an annuity"] separate from the trust established under the plan to hold contributions other than deemed IRA contributions and shall satisfy the applicable requirements of sections 408 and 408A of the Code, which requirements are set forth in section ----- [insert the section of the plan that contains the IRA requirements].

(Adoption agreement provisions)

Roth and Deemed Individual Retirement Account Participation in Group Trusts Described in Revenue Ruling 81-100

Part I

Section 501.--Exemption From Tax on Corporations, Certain Trusts, Etc.

26 CFR 1.501(a)-1: Exemption from taxation.

(Also, §§ 457; 1.457-8.)

Revenue Ruling 2004-67

Purpose

This revenue ruling extends the ability to participate in group trusts described in Revenue Ruling 81-100, 1981-1 C.B. 326, to eligible governmental plans under § 457(b) of the Internal Revenue Code and clarifies the ability of Roth individual retirement accounts described in § 408A and deemed individual retirement accounts described in § 408\(q\) to participate in these group trusts. In addition, this revenue ruling provides related model language for eligible governmental plans under § 457(b).

Issue

Whether the assets of eligible governmental plan trusts described in § 457(b) may be pooled with the assets of a group trust described in Revenue Ruling 81-100, without affecting the tax status of the eligible governmental plan trust or the group trust (including its current participants).

Law and analysis

Section 501(a) provides, in part, that a trust described in § 401(a) is exempt from income tax. Section 401(a)(1) provides that a trust or trusts created or organized in the United States and forming a part of a stock bonus, pension, or profit-sharing plan of an employer for the exclusive benefit of its employees or their beneficiaries is qualified under § 401(a) if contributions are made to the trust or trusts by the applicable employer, or employees, or both for the purpose of distributing to such employees or their beneficiaries the corpus and income of the fund accumulated in accordance with such plan. Section 401(a)(2) provides, in part, that under each trust instrument it must be impossible, at any time prior to the satisfaction of all liabilities with respect to employees and their beneficiaries under the plan and the trust or trusts, for any part of the corpus or income of the trust, to be used for or diverted to purposes other than for the exclusive benefit of the employees or their beneficiaries.

Section 401(a)(24) provides that any group trust that otherwise meets the requirements of § 401(a) will not fail to satisfy such requirements due to the participation or inclusion of a plan or governmental unit described in § 818(a)(6) in the group trust. Section 818(a)(6) provides, in part, that for these purposes the trust of a pension plan contract includes a governmental plan within the meaning of § 414(d) and an eligible deferred compensation plan within the meaning of § 457(b).

Section 401(f) provides that a custodial account, an annuity contract and certain other contracts issued by an insurance company will be treated as a qualified trust if the custodial account or contract would, except for the fact that it is not a trust, constitute a qualified trust under § 401, and, if the assets in any such custodial account are held by a bank or another person who demonstrates that he will hold the assets in a manner consistent with the requirements of § 401.

Section 408\(e\) provides for the exemption from taxation of an individual retirement account that meets the requirements of § 408. Section 408(a)(5) provides that the assets of an individual retirement account may not be commingled with other property except in a common trust fund or common investment fund.

Section 408A provides that, except as otherwise provided in § 408A, a Roth IRA is treated for purposes of the Code as an individual retirement plan, which includes an individual retirement account that meets the requirement of § 408. Consequently, a Roth IRA that is an individual retirement account is exempt from tax under § 408(e). Section 408(q) provides, in part, that if a qualified employer plan, as defined in § 408(q)(3)(A), elects to allow employees to make voluntary employee contributions to a separate account established under the plan and, under the terms of the qualified employer plan, the account meets the requirements of § 408 or 408A for an individual retirement account, then that account is treated as an individual retirement account (deemed individual retirement account), and not as a qualified employer plan. An individual retirement account described in § 408(q) is exempt from taxation under § 408(e).

Rev. Rul. 81-100 holds that if certain requirements are satisfied, a group trust is exempt from taxation under § 501(a) with respect to its funds that equitably belong to participating trusts described in § 401(a) and also is exempt from taxation under § 408(e) with respect to its funds that equitably belong to individual retirement accounts that satisfy the requirements of § 408. Also, the status of individual trusts as qualified under § 401(a), or as meeting the requirements of § 408 and as being exempt from tax under § 501(a) or § 408(e), are not affected by the pooling of their funds in a group trust.

Section 457 provides that compensation deferred under an eligible deferred compensation plan of an eligible employer that is a State or political subdivision, agency, or instrumentality thereof (an eligible governmental plan) and any income attributable to the amounts deferred, is includible in gross income only in the taxable year in which it is paid to the plan participant or beneficiary.

Section 457(g)(1) requires an eligible governmental plan under § 457(b) to hold all assets and income of the plan in a trust for the exclusive benefit of participants and their beneficiaries.

Section 457(g)(2) provides, in part, that a trust described in § 457(g)(1) is treated as an organization exempt from federal income tax under § 501(a).

Section 457(g)(3) provides that custodial account and contracts described in § 401(f) are treated as trusts under rules similar to the rules under § 401(f).

This revenue ruling extends the holding of Revenue Ruling 81-100 to eligible governmental plans described in § 457(b). Therefore, if the requirements below are satisfied, the funds from qualified plan trusts, individual retirement accounts (including a Roth individual retirement account described in § 408A and a deemed individual retirement account described in § 408(q)) that are tax-exempt under § 408(e), and eligible governmental plan trusts described in § 457(b) and § 457(g) may be pooled without adversely affecting the tax status of the group trust or the tax status of the separate trusts.

Holding

The assets of eligible governmental plan trusts described in § 457(b) may be pooled with the assets of a group trust described in Revenue Ruling 81-100 without affecting the tax status of the eligible governmental plan trust or the group trust (including its current participants). Accordingly, under Revenue Ruling 81-100 and this revenue ruling, if the five criteria below are satisfied, a trust that is part of a qualified retirement plan, an individual retirement account (including a Roth individual retirement account described in § 408A and a deemed individual retirement account described in § 408(q)) that is exempt from taxation under § 408\(e\), or an eligible governmental plan under § 457(b) may pool its assets in a group trust without adversely affecting the tax status of any of the separate trusts or the group trust. For this purpose, a trust includes a custodial account that is treated as a trust under § 401(f), under § 408\(h\), or under § 457(g)(3).

- (1) The group trust is adopted as a part of each adopting employer's plan or each adopting individual retirement account.
- (2) The group trust instrument expressly limits participation to pension, profit sharing, and stock bonus trusts or custodial accounts qualifying under § 401(a) that are exempt under § 501(a); individual retirement accounts that are exempt under § 408(e); and eligible governmental plan trusts or custodial accounts under § 457(b) that are exempt under § 457(g) (adopting entities).
- (3) The group trust instrument prohibits any part of its corpus or income that equitably belongs to any adopting entity from being used for or diverted to any purpose other than for the exclusive benefit of the employees (and the individual for whom an individual retirement account is maintained) and their beneficiaries who are entitled to benefits under such adopting entity.
- (4) The group trust instrument prohibits assignment by an adopting entity of any part of its equity or interest in the group trust.
- (5) The group trust is created or organized in the United States and is maintained at all times as a domestic trust in the United States.

Model amendments

There are two model amendments set forth below. One is for those group trusts that have received favorable determination letters from the Service that the group trust satisfies Revenue Ruling 81-100. The other is for those trusts of eligible governmental plans under § 457(b) that have received a letter ruling from the Service (in each instance issued prior to July 12, 2004).

Amendment 1 - For group trust

A sponsor of a group trust that satisfies Revenue Ruling 81-100 may amend its group trust to include the model language below to reflect this revenue ruling: "This group trust is operated or maintained exclusively for the commingling and collective investment of funds from other trusts that it holds. Notwithstanding any contrary provision in this group trust, the trustee of this group trust is permitted, unless restricted in writing by the named fiduciary, to hold in this group trust funds that consist exclusively of trust assets held under plans qualified under Code section 401(a), individual retirement accounts that are exempt under Code section 408(e), and eligible governmental plans that meet the requirements of Code section 457(b). For this purpose, a trust includes a custodial account that is treated as a trust under Code section 401(f) or under Code section 457(g)(3).

"For purposes of valuation, the value of the interest maintained by the fund with respect to any plan or account in such group trust shall be the fair market value of the portion of the fund held for that plan or account, determined in accordance with generally recognized valuation procedures."

Reliance by trustees with prior determination letter

A trustee entitled to rely on a favorable determination letter issued to it prior to July 12, 2004, regarding eligibility of its group trust under Revenue Ruling 81-100 will not lose its right to rely on its determination letter merely because it adopts Model Amendment 1 set forth above in this revenue ruling on a word-for-word basis (or adopts an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects). The group trust sponsor may adopt Model Amendment 1 on a word-for-word basis (or adopt an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects) and continue to rely on the previously issued determination letter regarding its group trust without filing another request with the Service for a new determination letter.

A sponsor that satisfies the above requirements and amends its group trust to include Model Amendment 1 on a word-for-word basis (or adopts an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects) will also not lose its right to rely on its prior determination letter merely because it becomes necessary, as a result of the adoption of such model amendment (or an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects), to delete a prior provision that is inconsistent with the model amendment so adopted (or an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects that is so adopted).

Generally, the group trust instrument will provide that amendments to the group trust will automatically pass through to the trusts of qualified plans under § 401(a); individual retirement accounts that are exempt under § 408(e); and trusts of eligible governmental plans under § 457(b). However, a group trust that has received a favorable determination letter under Rev. Proc. 2004-6, 2004-1 Internal Revenue Bulletin 204, (or its predecessors) that does not contain such a pass-through provision may not adopt Model Amendment 1 and automatically continue to rely on its determination letter. In addition, further guidance will be issued to address the transition necessary to bring into compliance a group trust that has received a favorable determination letter under Rev. Proc. 2004-6, 2004-1 Internal Revenue Bulletin 204, (or its predecessors) that does not comply with this revenue ruling.

Amendment 2 - For eligible governmental plan under § 457(b)

A plan sponsor of a trust that funds an eligible governmental plan under § 457(b) may amend the trust agreement to include the model language below to reflect this revenue ruling:

"Notwithstanding any contrary provision in the instrument governing the [Name of eligible governmental plan under § 457(b)], the plan trustee may, unless restricted in writing by the named fiduciary, transfer assets of the plan to a group trust that is operated or maintained exclusively for the commingling and collective investment of monies provided that the funds in the group trust consist exclusively of trust assets held under plans qualified under Code section 401(a), individual retirement accounts that are exempt under Code section 408(e), and eligible governmental plans that meets the requirements of Code section 457(b).

For this purpose, a trust includes a custodial account that is treated as a trust under Code section 401(f) or under Code section 457(g)(3).

"For purposes of valuation, the value of the interest maintained by the [Name of eligible governmental plan under §457] in such group trust shall be the fair market value of the portion of the group trust held for the [Name of eligible governmental plan under § 457(b)], determined in accordance with generally recognized valuation procedures."

Reliance by employer on prior § 457(b) ruling

An employer described in section 457(e)(1)(A) entitled to rely on a favorable private letter ruling issued to it prior to July 12, 2004 regarding the eligibility of its plan under § 457(b) will not lose its right to rely on its letter ruling merely because it adopts Model Amendment 2 set forth above on a word-for-word basis (or adopts an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects). Such an employer may adopt Model Amendment 2 on a word-for-word basis (or adopt an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects) and continue to rely on the previously issued letter ruling regarding its § 457(b) plan without filing another request with the Service for a new letter ruling.

An employer described in § 457(e)(1)(A) that satisfies the above requirements and amends the trust of its eligible governmental plan under § 457(b) to include Model Amendment 2 on a word-for-word basis (or adopts an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects) will not lose its right to rely on its prior letter ruling merely because it becomes necessary as a result of the adoption of such model amendment (or an amendment that is substantially similar in all material respects), to delete a prior provision that is inconsistent with the model amendment so adopted.

IRS Self-Correction Program Frequently Asked Questions Guidance

These frequently asked questions and answers are provided for general information only and should not be cited as any type of legal authority. They are designed to provide the user with information required to respond to general inquiries. Due to the uniqueness and complexities of Federal tax law, it is imperative to ensure a full understanding of the specific question presented, and to perform the requisite research to ensure a correct response is provided.

Is there a way to attain IRS approval prior to audit regarding the appropriate way to correct a failure under the SCP?

The SCP is a voluntary employer-initiated program that does not involve IRS approval; therefore, the IRS will not approve a Plan Sponsor's method of correction prior to audit. However, Rev. Proc. 2003-44 sets forth General Correction Principles designed to assist a plan sponsor in determining the appropriate method of correction for a failure. In addition, Appendix A and Appendix B of Rev. Proc. 2003-44 provide plan sponsors with sample correction methods for certain failures. To the extent the plan sponsor applies the applicable correction method set forth in either of these appendices, the correction is deemed to be reasonable and appropriate correction for the failure. Upon examination, the IRS has the right to review whether the taxpayer made the correct determination that such failure(s) were eligible under the SCP as well as whether the correction method is acceptable.

What practices and procedures are required to be in place in order for a plan to be eligible for relief under the SCP?

The IRS is concerned that the practices and procedures of a plan foster compliance with the requirements of the Code.

- Practices and procedures may be formal or informal.
- Practices and procedures must be routinely followed.
- Practices and procedures need not be in place for a specific failure (as long as practices and procedures exist that evidence an overall effort on the part of the Plan Sponsor to maintain the plan in compliance with the Code requirements).
- A plan document alone is not sufficient to establish evidence of good practices and procedures.
- An example of an acceptable practice or procedure outside of the plan document is a checklist routinely followed for determining whether an employee is a key employee for purposes of meeting the top heavy requirements.

If a plan sponsor discovers a failure of the Actual Deferral Percentage (ADP), Actual Deferral Percentage (ACP), or Multiple Use tests in the plan sponsor's profit-sharing plan, may the failures be corrected under the SCP?

Yes. A failure of the ADP, ACP or Multiple Use Tests is treated as an Operational Failure for purposes of EPCRS. Under Code section 401(k) and (m), a Plan Sponsor has until the end of the plan year following the plan year in which an excess contribution or excess aggregate contribution was made to correct the failure; under the SCP, the two-year correction period applicable to Significant Operational Failures does not begin under the expiration of the statutory correction period. (Note that the Multiple Use Test has been repealed for plan years beginning after 12/31/01.)

Example - In 2004, a Plan Sponsor discovers that in 2003, when testing the contributions made in its section 401(k) plan during 2003 for the ADP test, mistakes were made in determining the correct amount of compensation that should have been taken into account under the test. When the ADP test was rerun with the correct data, the plan sponsor discovers that the ADP test was failed. Assuming the other eligibility requirements of Self-Correction Program are satisfied, if the ADP failure is a Significant Operational Failure, the plan sponsor may correct the failure to satisfy the ADP test by the end of the 2006 plan year. If the ADP failure is an Insignificant Operational Failure, the plan sponsor has even longer to correct the failure, and may correct even upon audit of the plan.

What are Insignificant Operational Failures under the SCP?

The SCP permits Plan Sponsors to correct significant Operational Failures within two years of the year in which the failure occurred, provided the other requirements of the SCP are satisfied. A number of factors are considered in determining whether Operational Failures are insignificant. These include, but are not limited to:

- whether other failures occurred during the period being examined (for this purpose, a failure is not considered to have occurred more than once merely because more than one participant is affected by the failure);
- the percentage of plan assets and contributions involved in the failure;
- the number of years the failure occurred;

- the number of participants affected relative to the total number of participants in the plan;
- the number of participants affected as a result of the failure relative to the number of participants who could have been affected by the failure;
- whether correction was made within a reasonable time after discovery of the failure; and
- the reason for the failure (for example, data errors such as errors in the transcription of data, the transposition of numbers, or minor arithmetic errors).

This is not an exclusive list and no single factor is determinative. Failures will not be considered significant merely because they occur in more than one year. In addition, the IRS will apply these factors in a way so as to not preclude small businesses from being eligible for the SCP merely because of their size.

When correcting Significant Operational Failures, what actions must be taken by a plan sponsor by the end of the two-year correction period in order to be entitled to relief under the SCP?

In general, correction must be completed by the end of the two-year correction period in order for a plan to be entitled to relief under the SCP. However, where a Plan Sponsor substantially completes correction within the correction period, the plan sponsor will not lose the relief provided under the SCP merely because correction wasn't completed during the correction period. There are two circumstances under which correction is considered to have been substantially completed:

First, where,

- during the correction period, the Plan Sponsor is reasonably prompt in identifying the Operational Failure, formulating a correction method, and initiating correction in a manner that demonstrates a commitment to completing correction of the Operational Failure as expeditiously as practicable, and
- within 90 days after the last day of the correction period, the Plan Sponsor completes correction of the Operational Failure; and

Second, where,

- during the correction period, correction is completed with respect to 85% of all participants affected by the Operational Failure, and
- thereafter, the Plan Sponsor completes correction of the Operational Failure with respect to the remaining affected participants in a diligent manner.

In addition, a Plan Sponsor will not be considered to have failed to fully correct within the correction period where a plan sponsor takes reasonable action to find but has not located all current and former participants and beneficiaries to whom additional benefits are due. Reasonable action includes the use of the Internal Revenue Service Letter Forwarding Program (see Rev. Proc. 94-22, 1994-1 C.B. 608) or the Social Security Administration Reporting Service. If an individual is later located, the additional benefits must be provided to the individual at that time.

If correction of an Operational Failure is being implemented through adoption of a plan amendment, the required application for a determination letter must be submitted within the two-year correction period in order for correction to be considered to have been timely implemented.

Assume a plan sponsor discovers a vesting problem in which the plan terms were not followed, should the plan sponsor use SCP or the Voluntary Correction Program to correct the problem?

The decision of whether to use the SCP or Voluntary Correction Program to correct an Operational Failure depends on a number of factors, including: (1) the type of failure involved, (2) the practices and procedures under the plan, (3) whether, if the failure is an Operational Failure, it would be considered to be a Significant Operational Failure, (4) whether a Favorable Letter has been issued with respect to the plan, (5) whether the failure is an Egregious Failure, (6) when the failure is discovered, and (7) the amount of comfort the Plan Sponsor has with respect to the method used to correct the failure.

Although the SCP does not require the payment of a fee or notification to the IRS, it is limited to correcting Operational Failures that are not egregious. In addition, if the failure is a Significant Operational Failure, the Plan Sponsor must complete correction of the failure within two years of the year in which the failure occurred. Although a plan sponsor does not necessarily get assurance that the correction method employed under the SCP is acceptable to the IRS, the IRS has provided several examples of failures and acceptable correction methods under Appendix A and Appendix B in Rev. Proc. 2003-44. If a plan sponsor corrects a failure listed in Appendix A or Appendix B in accordance with the method of correction method set forth in the appendix, the plan sponsor may be assured that the IRS will find that correction method to be acceptable.

In this example, an Operational Failure, a vesting failure, has occurred. Appendix B, section 2.03 provides examples of acceptable correction methods for a vesting failure. Therefore, if there are acceptable practices and procedures under the plan (see Q&A 2 above), and the failure is an Insignificant Operational Failure, the Plan Sponsor may use the SCP to correct the failure at any time, even if the plan is Under Examination. Further, if the plan sponsor uses one of the correction methods under Appendix B of the revenue procedure, it will have assurance that the plan would be entitled to relief under the SCP with respect to its correction method. If, however, the failure is a Significant Operational Failure, the plan would be entitled to relief under the SCP only if the failure is identified and corrected within the two-year correction period under the SCP. Also, if the failure is a Significant Operational Failure, the plan would be eligible for relief under the SCP only if a Favorable Letter has been issued with respect to the plan. If the failure would be considered an Egregious Failure, it would be eligible for correction under the Voluntary Correction Program but not under the SCP.

IRS Voluntary Compliance Program Frequently Asked Questions Guidance

The frequently asked questions and answers provided below are for general information only and should not be cited as any type of legal authority. They are designed to provide the user with information required to respond to general inquiries. Due to the uniqueness and complexities of Federal tax law, it is imperative to ensure a full understanding of the specific question presented, and to perform the requisite research to ensure a correct response is provided.

Is there an application form that plan sponsors must use to apply under the VCP?

There is no application form applicable to the VCP; however, the IRS provides Sample Submission Formats in Appendix D of Rev. Proc. 2003-44, which facilitate the submission process. The IRS also provides a Checklist designed to assist the Plan Sponsor and their representatives in preparing a submission that contains the information and documents required under each of those programs. The checklist must be completed, signed, and dated by the employer, plan sponsor, or the plan sponsor's representative, and should be placed on top of the submission.

What is the mailing address for applications submitted under the VCP?

All VCP submissions and accompanying determination letter applications (if applicable) should be mailed to the following address:

Internal Revenue Service
Attention: T:EP:RA:VC
P.O. Box 27063
McPherson Station
Washington, D.C. 20038

Some employers have very little involvement in their employees' 403(b) plans. Who should file a VCP application in these cases?

The employer is the only one who can submit an application to correct failures under the VCP. Although insurers and custodians may have some liability to the employer, they have no liability under the VCP. The employer is responsible for identifying the failures, correcting the failures, and insuring that necessary changes are made to administrative procedures for operating the 403(b) plan. When necessary for correction, the employer must secure the cooperation of the providers prior to submitting an application under the VCP.

For a VCP submission, what information must the plan sponsor supply with respect to correction of the failures?

The letter from the Plan Sponsor or the plan sponsor's representative must contain a detailed description of the method for correcting the failures that the plan sponsor has implemented or proposes to implement.

- Each step of the correction method must be described in narrative form.
- The description must include the specific information needed to support the suggested correction method, including:
  - the number of employees affected;
  - the expected cost of correction;
  - the years involved, and
  - calculations or assumptions the Plan Sponsor used to determine the amounts needed for correction.
- The number of employees affected and the expected cost of correction may be approximated if the exact number cannot be determined at the time of the request.
- A description of the methodology that will be used to calculate earnings or actuarial adjustments on any corrective contributions or distributions (indicating the computation periods and the basis for determining earnings or actuarial adjustments).
- Specific calculations for each affected employee or a representative sample of affected employees.
- The sample calculations must be sufficient to demonstrate each aspect of the correction method proposed. For example, if a Plan Sponsor requests a compliance statement with respect to a failure to satisfy the contribution limits of § 415(c) and proposes a correction method that involves elective contributions (both matched and unmatched) and matching contributions, the plan sponsor must submit calculations illustrating the correction method proposed with respect to each type of contribution. As another example, with respect to a failure to satisfy the actual deferral percentage (ADP) test in § 401(k)(3), the plan sponsor must submit the ADP test results both before the correction and after the correction.
- The method that will be used to locate and notify former employees and beneficiaries, or an affirmative statement that no former employees or beneficiaries were affected by the failures.
- A description of the measures that have been or will be implemented to ensure that the same failures will not recur.

If a plan with a Plan Document Failure is submitted under the VCP, is the plan sponsor required to concurrently submit an application for a determination letter?

"Yes. Anytime a Plan Sponsor is required to file for a determination letter in association with a VCP application, whether it be for the correction of a Plan Document Failure, Demographic Failure, or correction of an Operational Failure by plan amendment, if the amendment is other than the adoption of an amendment designated by the IRS as a model amendment or the adoption of a prototype or volume submitter plan for which the Plan Sponsor has reliance on the plan's opinion or advisory letter (see Rev. Proc. 2003-6, 2003-1 I.R.B. 191 ), the plan sponsor is required to submit a determination letter application with the appropriate user fee at the same time and to the same address that the VCP submission is sent.

Is there an avenue for plan sponsors to negotiate correction under the VCP on an anonymous basis?

Yes. Rev. Proc. 2003-44, section 10.11 sets forth the provisions of the Anonymous Submission procedure. The Anonymous Submission procedure permits Plan Sponsors to submit Qualified Plans, 403(b) Plans, SEPs, and Simple IRA Plans under VCP without initially identifying the applicable plan(s) or applicant. The submission requirements relating to VCP apply to anonymous submissions on the same terms they apply to submissions in which the plan and plan sponsor are identified. However, information identifying the plan or the Plan Sponsor may be excluded from the submission until the IRS and the plan representative reach agreement with respect to all aspects of the submission.

Until the plan(s) and Plan Sponsor are identified to the IRS, an anonymous submission does not preclude an examination of the Plan Sponsor or its plan(s). Thus, a plan submitted under the Anonymous Submission procedure that comes Under Examination prior to the date the plan(s) and Plan Sponsor(s) identifying materials are received by the IRS will no longer be eligible under VCP.

Should a plan sponsor that discovers a Plan Document Failure in a plan that has been submitted for a determination letter raise the issue to the Employee Plans agent working the determination letter application?

If the Plan Sponsor knows about the failure prior to submitting a determination letter application, the plan sponsor should submit under the VCP and include the determination letter application with the VCP submission. If the failure is identified and voluntarily raised by the taxpayer to the Employee Plans Agent or Specialist assigned to the determination letter application, the taxpayer will be given an opportunity to perfect a VCP submission and have the issue resolved under the VCP.

What happens if the IRS and plan sponsor fail to reach resolution regarding the appropriate correction of a failure?

Under the VCP, if resolution cannot be reached (for example, where information is not timely provided to the IRS or because agreement cannot be reached on correction or a change in administrative procedures), the compliance fee will not be returned, and the case may be referred to the appropriate EP office for examination consideration.

May a plan sponsor receive an extension of the 150-day correction period under the VCP?

In appropriate circumstances, a Plan Sponsor will be granted an extension of the 150-day correction period under VCP. The plan sponsor should submit a written request explaining the reason for the request to the agent working the case. The request must be made prior to the expiration of the 150-day correction period.

Can trust assets be used for the payment of the fee or sanction under the VCP?

As a rule, fees or sanctions should be paid by parties other than the trust. Exceptions are allowed only in very narrow circumstances.

Has the IRS established a program to verify that plan sponsors are correcting failures in accordance with Compliance Statements that have been issued under the VCP?

Yes, the IRS has established a verification program. The program is not an examination of the Plan Sponsor books and records. The IRS checks available information from the plan sponsor to insure that all corrections were made in accordance with the terms of the compliance statement. If necessary corrections or administrative changes were not timely made, the plan may be referred to EP Examinations.

Are matters relating to excise taxes resolved under the EPCRS?

The correction programs are not available for events for which the Code provides tax consequences other than plan disqualification (such as the imposition of an excise tax or additional income tax). For example, funding deficiencies (failures to make the required contributions to a plan subject to § 412), prohibited transactions, and failures to file the Form 5500 cannot be corrected under the correction programs.

However, it should be noted that excise taxes and additional taxes, to the extent applicable, are not waived merely because the underlying failure has been corrected or because the taxes result from the correction. Thus, for example, the excise tax on certain excess contributions under § 4979 is not waived under these correction programs, even though the underlying Qualification Failure is corrected under the EPCRS.

Under Audit CAP, excise taxes that are reportable on the Form 5330 (e.g., prohibited transactions) may be resolved by the agent securing a Form 5330 providing for 100% of the tax and interest outstanding. The agent may, in his or her discretion, recommend to the Service Center waiver of the failure to file and/or failure to pay penalty, under IRC §6651.

Section 4974(d) provides for waiver of the minimum distribution excise tax under certain circumstances. As part of VCP, if the failure involves the failure to satisfy the minimum required distribution requirements of § 401(a)(9), in appropriate cases, the IRS will waive the excise tax under § 4974 applicable to plan participants. The waiver will be included in the compliance statement issued by the IRS. The Plan Sponsor, as part of the submission, must request the waiver and in cases where the participant subject to the excise tax is an owner-employee as defined in § 401(c)(3), or a 10 percent owner of a corporation, the Plan Sponsor must also provide an explanation supporting the request for the waiver.

Assume a plan sponsor discovers a vesting problem in which the plan terms were not followed, should the plan sponsor use the Self-Correction Program or the VCP to correct the problem?

The decision of whether to use the SCP or Voluntary Correction Program to correct an Operational Failure depends on a number of factors, including: (1) the type of failure involved, (2) the practices and procedures under the plan, (3) whether, if the failure is an Operational Failure, it would be considered to be a Significant Operational Failure, (4) whether a Favorable Letter has been issued with respect to the plan, (5) whether the failure is an Egregious Failure, (6) when the failure is discovered, and (7) the amount of comfort the Plan Sponsor has with respect to the method used to correct the failure.

Although the SCP does not require the payment of a fee or notification to the IRS, it is limited to correcting Operational Failures that are not egregious. In addition, if the failure is a Significant Operational Failure, the Plan Sponsor must complete correction of the failure within two years of the year in which the failure occurred. Although a plan sponsor does not necessarily get assurance that the correction method employed under the SCP is acceptable to the IRS, the IRS has provided several examples of failures and acceptable correction methods under Appendix A and Appendix B in Rev. Proc. 2003-44. If a plan sponsor corrects a failure listed in Appendix A or Appendix B in accordance with the method of correction method set forth in the appendix, the plan sponsor may be assured that the IRS will find that correction method to be acceptable.

In this example, an Operational Failure, a vesting failure, has occurred. Appendix B, section 2.03 provides examples of acceptable correction methods for a vesting failure. Therefore, if there are acceptable practices and procedures under the plan, and the failure is an Insignificant Operational Failure, the Plan Sponsor may use the SCP to correct the failure at any time, even if the plan is Under Examination. Further, if the plan sponsor uses one of the correction methods under Appendix B of the revenue procedure, it will have assurance that the plan would be entitled to relief under the SCP with respect to its correction method. If, however, the failure is a Significant Operational Failure, the plan would be entitled to relief under the SCP only if the failure is identified and corrected within the two-year correction period under the SCP. Also, if the failure is a Significant Operational Failure, the plan would be eligible for relief under the SCP only if a Favorable Letter has been issued with respect to the plan. If the failure would be considered an Egregious Failure, it would be eligible for correction under the Voluntary Correction Program but not under the SCP.

Dear Mr.

This is in response to your letter to Martin Slate, Director of the Employee Plans Technical and Actuarial Division, dated December 24, 1992, in which you requested general information regarding valuation of assets in Individual Retirement Accounts and Individual Retirement Annuities ("IRAs"). In your letter, you posed the following questions: (1) Is an IRA required to value its assets on an annual basis? (2) Is an IRA required to value "hard to value" assets (e.g. partnerships, closely-held stock, collectibles, etc.) as well as exchange-traded securities? (3) Are non-traded asset value standards the same for IRAs as for defined benefit ("DB") plans and defined contribution ("DC") plans? (4) Who is responsible for insuring an IRA's assets are properly valued? (5) Can a fiduciary evade its valuation responsibilities by having the client sign a release, indemnification or other instrument?

Section 408(i) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the "Code") requires the trustee of an individual retirement account and the issuer of an endowment contract or an individual retirement annuity to make certain reports regarding such account, contract, or annuity to the Secretary of the Treasury and to the individual for whom such account, contract or annuity is maintained. Section 408(i) of the Code gives the Secretary authority to prescribe the manner of providing such reports and to determine the information required to be provided.

Section 1.408-5 of the Income Tax Regulations provides that the trustee of an individual retirement account or the issuer of an individual retirement annuity shall make annual calendar year reports concerning the status of the account or the annuity. The information required in the annual reports by the trustees and issuers of IRAs includes: the amount of contributions, the amount of distributions, the amount of the premium paid for an endowment contract allocable to the cost of life insurance, the name and address of the trustee or issuer, and such other information as the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may require.

Internal Revenue Service Form 5498, Individual Retirement Arrangement Information, is the prescribed form for satisfying the annual reporting requirements of section 408(j) of the Code and the regulations thereunder. The instructions to Form 5498 require the trustee or issuer to report the fair market value of the IRA account as of December 31 of each year.

In response to your questions, first, based on the fact that the Internal Revenue Service (the "Service") requires that the fair market value of the assets as of December 31 be reported on Form 5498, an IRA is required to value its assets on an annual basis. Similarly, the requirement that fair market value be determined annually for purposes of Form 5498 necessitates the valuation of all IRA assets, including "hard to value" assets.

With respect to your third question, Revenue Ruling 59-60, 1959-1 C.B. 237, as modified by Revenue Ruling 65-193, 1965-2 C.B. 370, sets forth the proper approach to use to value corporate stock for estate and gift tax purposes. Revenue Ruling 68-609, 1968-2 C.B. 327, states that the general approach, methods and factors outlined in Revenue Ruling 59-60 are equally applicable to valuations of corporate stock for income and other tax purposes. The general approach, methods and factors also apply to valuations of corporate stock in IRAs.

With respect to your fourth question, the person responsible for insuring that an IRA's assets are properly valued is the IRA trustee or issuer, because under the Service's reporting requirements that person is responsible for reporting the correct fair market value of the assets.

Finally, the IRA trustee or issuer cannot evade valuation responsibility by having the participant sign a release, indemnification or other instrument, because the trustee's or issuer's responsibility for valuation derives from the Service's reporting requirements, which cannot be waived by participant action.

We believe this information will be of assistance to you. This is not a ruling, however, and may not be relied upon with respect to any specific transaction.

Sincerely,

John G. Riddle, Jr.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Office of the Secretary

Submission for OMB Review: Comment Request

January 26, 2006.

The Department of Labor (DOL) has submitted the following public information collection request (ICR) to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review and approval in accordance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (Pub. L. 104-13, 44 U.S.C. chapter 35). A copy of this ICR, with applicable supporting documentation, may be obtained by contacting the Department of Labor (DOL). To obtain documentation, contact Darrin King on 202-693-4129 (this is not a toll-free number) or e-mail: king.darrin@dol.gov.

Comments should be sent to Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs, Attn: OMB Desk Officer for the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), Office of Management and Budget, Room 10235, Washington, DC 20503, 202-395-7316 (this is not a toll-free number), within 30 days from the date of this publication in the Federal Register.

The OMB is particularly interested in comments which:

- Evaluate whether the proposed collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the agency, including whether the information will have practical utility;
- Evaluate the accuracy of the agency's estimate of the burden of the proposed collection of information, including the validity of the methodology and assumptions used;
  - Enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and
  - Minimize the burden of the collection of information on those who are to respond, including through the use of appropriate automated, electronic, mechanical, or other technological collection techniques or other forms of information technology, e.g., permitting electronic submission of responses.

Agency: Occupational Safety and Health Administration.

Type of Review: Extension of currently approved collection.

Title: Longshoring and Marine Terminal Operations (29 CFR Parts 1918 and 1917).

OMB Number: 1218-0196.

Frequency: On occasion; Weekly; Monthly; and Annually.

Type of Response: Recordkeeping and Third party disclosure.

Affected Public: Business or other for-profit; not-for-profit institutions; Federal Government; and State, Local, or Tribal Government.

Number of Respondents: 750.

Number of Annual Responses: 152,458.

Estimated Time per Response: Varies from 1 minute to 1 hour and five minutes.

Total Burden Hours: 35,948.

Total Annualized capital/startup costs: $0.

Total Annual Costs (operating/maintaining systems or purchasing services): $0.

Description: The Standards on Marine Terminals (29 CFR Part 1917) and Safety and Health Regulations for Longshoring (29 CFR Part 1918) contain a number of collections of information which are used by employers to ensure that employees are informed properly about the safety and health hazards associated with marine terminals and longshoring operations. OSHA uses the records developed in response to the collection of information requirements to find out if the employer is complying adequately with the provisions of the standards.

Employee Benefits Security Administration

[Application No. D-11184]

Amendment to Prohibited Transaction Exemption (PTE) 75-1, Exemptions From Prohibitions Respecting Certain Classes of Transactions Involving Employee Benefit Plans and Certain Broker-Dealers, Reporting Dealers and Banks

AGENCY: Employee Benefits Security Administration.

ACTION: Final Amendment to PTE 75-1, Part II and Part V.

SUMMARY: This document amends PTE 75-1, Part II and Part V (40 FR 50845, October 31, 1975). PTE 75-1, Part II, permits the purchase or sale of a security in a principal transaction between an employee benefit plan and a broker-dealer, reporting dealer, or bank. PTE 75-1, Part V, permits an extension of credit to a plan by a broker-dealer in connection with the purchase or sale of securities. The amendment affects participants, beneficiaries and fiduciaries of employee benefit plans, and broker-dealers, reporting dealers and banks entering into the described transactions.

DATES: Effective Date: This amendment is effective January 1, 1975.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Brian Buyniski or Karen Lloyd, Office of Exemption Determinations, Employee Benefits Security Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Room N-5649, 200 Constitution Avenue, NW., Washington, DC 20210, 202-693-8540. (This is not a toll free number.)

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On April 28, 2004, notice was published in the Federal Register (69 FR 23216) of the pendency before the Department of Labor (the Department) of a proposed amendment to PTE 75-1, Part II and Part V. PTE 75-1 provides exemptive relief from certain of the restrictions of section 406 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA or the Act), and from certain taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code), by reason of section 4975(c)(1) of the Code. The amendment was proposed by the Department on its own motion, pursuant to section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990).<sup>1</sup>

The notice gave interested persons an opportunity to comment or to request a hearing on the proposed amendment. The Department received three comments which are discussed below. One commenter requested a public hearing if the Department determined to modify a specific provision of the exemption. As the Department has not modified that provision in the final exemption, a public hearing will not be held with regard to this amendment.

Executive Order 12866 Statement

Under Executive Order 12866, the Department must determine whether the regulatory action is “significant” and therefore subject to the requirements of the Executive Order and subject to review by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Under section 3(f), the order defines a “significant regulatory action” as an action that is likely to result in a rule (1) having an annual effect on the economy of $100 million or more, or adversely and materially affecting a sector of the economy, productivity, competition, jobs, the environment, public health or safety, or State, local or tribal governments or communities (also referred to as “economically significant”); (2) creating serious inconsistency or otherwise interfering with an action taken or planned by another agency; (3) materially altering the budgetary impacts of entitlement grants, user fees, or loan programs or the rights and obligations of recipients thereof; or (4) raising novel legal or policy issues arising out of legal mandates, the President’s priorities, or the principles set forth in the Executive Order.

In the discussion of the exemption, references to specific provisions of the Act should be read to refer as well to the corresponding provisions of section 4975 of the Code.

This amendment has been drafted and reviewed in accordance with Executive Order 12866, section 1(b), Principles of Regulation. The Department has determined that this amendment is not a “significant regulatory action” under Executive Order 12866, section 3(f). Accordingly, it does not require an assessment of potential costs and benefits under section 6(a)(3) of that order.

Paperwork Reduction Act

The information collection request (ICR) included in the existing PTE 75–1 is currently approved under Office of Management and Budget (OMB) control number 1210–0092 (through March 31, 2007). The amendment does not modify the information collection provisions of the exemption. Therefore, the Department has not submitted an ICR to OMB in connection with this Final Amendment to PTE 75–1.

Description of the Exemption

Part I of PTE 75–1 provides relief for agency transactions and services;<sup>2</sup> Part II for principal transactions; Part III for underwritings; Part IV for market-making; and Part V for extension of credit.

PTE 75–1, Part II

Part II of PTE 75–1 provides relief from the restrictions of 406(a) of ERISA and the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(A) through (D) of the Code, for the purchase or sale of a security between an employee benefit plan and: (1) A broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the 1934 Act); (2) a reporting dealer who makes primary markets in securities of the U.S. Government or of any agency thereof and reports daily to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York its positions with respect to Government securities and borrowings thereon; or (3) a bank supervised by the United States or a State.<sup>3</sup>

The exemption further provides relief from the restrictions of section 406(b) of ERISA and the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(E) and (F) of the Code, for the purchase or sale by a plan of securities issued by an open-end investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, provided that a fiduciary with respect to the plan is not a principal underwriter for, or affiliated with, such investment company within the meaning of sections 2(a)(29) and 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (the Mutual Fund Exemption).

The conditions of PTE 75–1, Part II, require that a broker-dealer must customarily purchase and sell securities for its own account in the ordinary course of its business as a broker-dealer. The conditions further require that reporting dealers and banks must customarily purchase and sell Government securities for their own accounts in the ordinary course of their businesses, and that any purchase or sale between the plan and such reporting dealer or bank be limited to a purchase or sale of Government securities.

All transactions entered into pursuant to Part II must be at least as favorable to the plan as an arm’s length transaction with an unrelated party would be, and must not be, at the time of the transaction, a prohibited transaction within the meaning of section 503(b) of the Code.

Except with respect to the Mutual Fund Exemption, Part II as originally granted provided that the broker-dealer, reporting dealer or bank may not be a fiduciary with respect to the plan, and such broker-dealer, reporting dealer or bank may be a party in interest or disqualified person with respect to the plan solely by reason of section 3(14)(B) of the Act or section 4975(e)(2)(B) of the Code or a relationship to a person described in those sections. For purposes of this condition, a broker-dealer, reporting dealer or bank is not deemed to be a fiduciary with respect to a plan solely by reason of providing securities custodial services for a plan. Lastly, the exemption for principal transactions also contains certain recordkeeping requirements.

PTE 75–1, Part V

Part V of PTE 75–1 provides relief from the restrictions of section 406 of ERISA and the related excise taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1) of the Code, for any extension of credit to a plan by a broker or dealer registered under the 1934 Act.<sup>4</sup> As originally granted, Part V provided that the broker-dealer extending credit may not be a fiduciary with respect to any assets of the plan, unless no interest or other consideration is received by such fiduciary or any affiliate in connection with the extension of credit.

Under Part V, the extension of credit must be made in connection with the purchase or sale of securities, must be lawful under the 1934 Act, and may not be a prohibited transaction within the meaning of section 503(b) of the Code. Lastly, the exemption for extensions of credit also contains certain recordkeeping requirements.

Amendment

As part of the proposed amendment, the Department repositioned the following language found in section (d) of Part II of the exemption:

Neither the restrictions of this paragraph nor (if the other conditions of this exemption are met) the restrictions of section 406(b) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(E) and (F) of the Code, shall apply to the purchase or sale by the plan of securities issued by an open-end investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a–1 et seq.), provided that a fiduciary with respect to the plan is not a principal underwriter for, or affiliated with, such investment company within the meaning of sections 2(a)(29) and 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a–2(a)(29) and 80a–2(a)(3)).

The Department included the relief provided by this provision in a new paragraph (2) of Part II of the exemption for principal transactions. The Department also proposed to amend the language of this section to clarify that the fiduciary referenced therein is the fiduciary who makes the decision on behalf of the plan to enter into the transaction. The Department also requested public comment on the current utility of this exemption.

<sup>4</sup>The exemption defines the terms “broker” and “dealer” to include such entities and any affiliate thereof. The term “affiliate” is defined as in 29 CFR 2510.3–21(e) and 26 CFR 54.4975–9(e).

<sup>2</sup>Part I(a) expired on May 1, 1978. It ultimately was replaced by PTE 86–128 (51 FR 41686, Nov. 18, 1986).

The Department additionally proposed to amend another provision of section (d) of Part II, which stated, in relevant part, that:

Such broker-dealer, reporting dealer or bank is not a fiduciary with respect to the plan, and such broker-dealer, reporting dealer or bank is a party in interest or disqualified person with respect to the plan solely by reason of section 3(14)(B) of the Act or section 4975(e)(2)(B) of the Code or a relationship to a person described in such sections. For purposes of this paragraph, a broker-dealer, reporting dealer, or bank shall not be deemed to be a fiduciary with respect to a plan solely by reason of providing securities custodial services for a plan.

Under the proposed amendment, the exemption permits plans to engage in transactions with broker-dealers, reporting dealers, banks and their affiliates except where the broker-dealer, reporting dealer, bank or an affiliate has or exercises any discretionary authority or control (except as a directed trustee) with respect to the investment of plan assets involved in the transaction, or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 CFR 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to the investment of those assets.<sup>5</sup>

The Department likewise proposed to amend condition (a)(2) of PTE 75-1, Part V, which required that the party in interest or disqualified person providing the extension of credit to the plan:

[i]s not a fiduciary with respect to any assets of such plan, unless no interest or other consideration is received by such fiduciary or any affiliate thereof in connection with such extension of credit.

Under the proposed amendment, section (a)(2) states that the party in interest or disqualified person extending credit to the plan:

does not have or exercise any discretionary authority or control (except as a directed trustee) with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction, nor does it render investment advice (within the meaning of 29 CFR section 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets, unless no interest or other consideration is received by the party in interest or disqualified person or any affiliate thereof in connection with such extension of credit.

<sup>5</sup>Nothing herein should be construed to imply that a directed trustee is not a fiduciary under the Act. See 29 U.S.C. 103(a)(1). A plan may expressly provide that a trustee is subject to the direction of a named fiduciary who is not a trustee, in which case the trustee shall be subject to proper directions of such fiduciary which are made in accordance with the terms of the plan and which are not contrary to the Act.

Discussion of Comments

The Department received one comment concerning the effective date of the proposed amendments. The commenter requested that, with respect to the proposed amendments to condition (d) of Part II and condition (a)(2) of Part V, the Department state that it was the intention of the Department at the time of the granting of the final exemption in 1975 to focus only on fiduciaries with respect to the plan assets involved in the transaction, as opposed to any fiduciary of the plan. The commenter referenced the following language in the preamble of the proposed exemption in August 1975 regarding proposed regulations under the definition of fiduciary at section 3(21) of the Act:

It should be noted, moreover, that under the regulations proposed in conjunction with these proposed exemptions relating to the definition of the term "fiduciary," a person who is a plan fiduciary would be deemed to be a fiduciary only with respect to those plan assets with respect to which he exercises those functions which make him a fiduciary. 40 FR 33566. The Department received a follow up submission from this commenter requesting that, in order to avoid confusion and uncertainty, this amendment to PTE 75-1 be made retroactive to October 31, 1975. The Department also has been urged informally to adopt a retroactive effective date.

While the Department acknowledges that some confusion may have arisen from the fact that two conditions of PTE 75-1, Part II and Part V, regarding fiduciaries, were broader than the Department's regulations regarding the definition of a fiduciary under section 3(21) of the Act, the Department is unable to concur with the commenter that its original intent with respect to such conditions was in fact to limit them to fiduciaries with respect to the plan assets involved in the transaction.<sup>6</sup> The conditions contained in the Department's administrative exemptions are designed to ensure that the Department can make findings required pursuant to section 408(a) of ERISA and 4975(c)(2) of the Code that the exemption is administratively feasible, and in the interests of, and protective of the rights of, plan participants and beneficiaries. The Department's regulations do not govern the scope of the conditions of its administrative exemptions. Therefore, the fact that a regulation defining the term "fiduciary" may have focused on the plan assets with respect to which a person exercises fiduciary functions does not necessarily govern the meaning of a condition of an administrative exemption. Prior to this amendment, the conditions in PTE 75-1, Part II and V, clearly referred to a fiduciary with respect to a plan.

Nevertheless, in the Department's view, an interpretation of the conditions of PTE 75-1, Part II and Part V, which focused on fiduciaries with respect to the plan assets involved in the transaction would not have created an undue risk of loss of plan assets. As the Department has concluded that the amendments are sufficiently protective of plan assets on a prospective basis, the Department believes a similar conclusion would dictate in favor of granting the amendments on a retroactive basis. Accordingly, the Department has determined to make these amendments to PTE 75-1 retroactive to January 1, 1975, which is the effective date of PTE 75-1.

The Department received three comments on the current utility of the Mutual Fund Exemption. Based on the information received, the Department believes that additional time is needed to more fully consider the issues raised by the commenters. However, the Department does not wish to unduly delay finalization of the other amendments to PTE 75-1. Accordingly, this document contains final amendments to Parts II and V of PTE 75-1 and adopts the repositioning of the Mutual Fund Exemption to paragraph (2) of PTE 75-1, Part II, and adopts the clarifying language. As a result, the Mutual Fund Exemption remains in effect pending further action by the Department.

General Information

The attention of interested persons is directed to the following:

(1) The fact that a transaction is the subject of an exemption granted under section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code does not relieve a fiduciary or other party in interest or disqualified person with respect to a plan to which the exemption is applicable from certain other provisions of the Act and the Code, including any prohibited transaction provisions to which the exemption does not apply and the general fiduciary responsibility provisions of section 404 of the Act which, among other things, require a fiduciary to discharge his duties respecting the plan solely in the interest of the plan's participants and beneficiaries and in a prudent fashion in accordance with subsection (a)(1)(B) of section 404 of the Act; nor does it affect the requirement of section 401(a) of the Code that a plan must operate for the exclusive benefit of employees of the employer maintaining the plan and their beneficiaries;

(2) The Department finds that the amended exemption is administratively feasible, in the interests of the plan and of its participants and beneficiaries, and protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of the plan;

(3) The amended exemption is applicable to a particular transaction only if the transaction satisfies the conditions specified in the exemption; and

(4) The amended exemption is supplemental to, and not in derogation of, any other provisions of the Act and the Code, including statutory and other exemptions and transitional rules. Furthermore, the fact that a transaction is the subject of an exemption is not dispositive of whether the transaction would have been a prohibited transaction in the absence of such exemption.

Amendment

Accordingly, PTE 75-1 is amended as follows under the authority of section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, 32847, August 10, 1990).

I. PTE 75-1, Part II, is amended in its entirety to read as follows:

(1) The restrictions of section 406(a) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code), by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(A) through (D) of the Code, shall not apply to any purchase or sale of a security between an employee benefit plan and a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 U.S.C. 78a et seq.), a reporting dealer who makes primary markets in securities of the United States Government or of any agency of the United States Government ("Government securities") and reports daily to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York its positions with respect to Government securities and borrowings thereon, or a bank supervised by the United States or a State, and

(2) The restrictions of section 406(a) and 406(b) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(A) through (F) of the Code, shall not apply to the purchase or sale by a plan of securities issued by an open-end investment company registered under the Investment

Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-1 et seq.), provided that no fiduciary with respect to the plan who makes the decision on behalf of the plan to enter into the transaction is a principal underwriter for, or affiliated with, such investment company within the meaning of sections 2(a)(29) and 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940 (15 U.S.C. 80a-2(a)(29) and 80a-2(a)(3)).

The exemptions set forth in (1) and (2) above are subject to the following conditions:

(a) In the case of such broker-dealer, it customarily purchases and sells securities for its own account in the ordinary course of its business as a broker-dealer.

(b) In the case of such reporting dealer or bank, it customarily purchases and sells Government securities for its own account in the ordinary course of its business and such purchase or sale between the plan and such reporting dealer or bank is a purchase or sale of Government securities.

(c) Such transaction is at least as favorable to the plan as an arm's length transaction with an unrelated party would be, and it was not, at the time of such transaction, a prohibited transaction within the meaning of section 503(b) of the Code.

(d) Except with respect to transactions described in section (2) above, neither the broker-dealer, reporting dealer, bank, nor any affiliate thereof has or exercises any discretionary authority or control (except as a directed trustee) with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction, or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 CFR 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets.

(e) The plan maintains or causes to be maintained for a period of six years from the date of such transaction such records as are necessary to enable the persons described in paragraph (f) of this exemption to determine whether the conditions of this exemption have been met, except that:

(1) Such broker-dealer, reporting dealer, or bank shall not be subject to the civil penalty which may be assessed under section 502(i) of the Act, or to the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, if such records are not maintained, or are not available for examination as required by paragraph (f) below; and

(2) A prohibited transaction will not be deemed to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the control of the plan fiduciaries, such records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of such six-year period.

(f) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in subsections (a)(2) and (b) of section 504 of the Act, the records referred to in paragraph (e) are unconditionally available for examination during normal business hours by duly authorized employees of (1) the Department of Labor, (2) the Internal Revenue Service, (3) plan participants and beneficiaries, (4) any employer of plan participants and beneficiaries, and (5) any employee organization any of whose members are covered by such plan. For purposes of this exemption, the terms "broker-dealer," "reporting dealer" and "bank" shall include such persons and any affiliates thereof, and the term "affiliate" shall be defined in the same manner as that term is defined in 29 CFR 2510.3-21(e) and 26 CFR 54.4975-9(e).

II. PTE 75-1, Part V, is amended in its entirety to read as follows:

The restrictions of section 406 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code), by reason of section 4975(c)(1) of the Code, shall not apply to any extension of credit to an employee benefit plan by a party in interest or a disqualified person with respect to the plan, provided that the following conditions are met:

(a) The party in interest or disqualified person:

(1) Is a broker or dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; and

(2) Does not have or exercise any discretionary authority or control (except as a directed trustee) with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction, nor does it render investment advice (within the meaning of 29 CFR 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets, unless no interest or other consideration is received by the party in interest or disqualified person or any affiliate thereof in connection with such extension of credit.

(b) Such extension of credit:

(1) Is in connection with the purchase or sale of securities;

(2) Is lawful under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 and any rules and regulations promulgated thereunder; and

(3) Is not a prohibited transaction within the meaning of section 503(b) of the Code.

(c) The plan maintains or causes to be maintained for a period of six years from the date of such transaction such records as are necessary to enable the persons described in paragraph (d) of this exemption to determine whether the conditions of this exemption have been met, except that:

(1) If such party in interest or disqualified person is not a fiduciary with respect to any assets of the plan, such party in interest or disqualified person shall not be subject to the civil penalty which may be assessed under section 502(i) of the Act, or to the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, if such records are not maintained, or are not available for examination as required by paragraph (d) below; and

(2) A prohibited transaction will not be deemed to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the control of the plan fiduciaries, such records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of such six-year period.

(d) Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in subsections (a)(2) and (b) of section 504 of the Act, the records referred to in paragraph (c) are unconditionally available for examination during normal business hours by duly authorized employees of (1) the Department of Labor, (2) the Internal Revenue Service, (3) plan participants and beneficiaries, (4) any employer of plan participants and beneficiaries, and (5) any employee organization any of whose members are covered by such plan. For purposes of this exemption, the terms "party in interest" and "disqualified person" shall include such party in interest or disqualified person and any affiliates thereof, and the term "affiliate" shall be defined in the same manner as that term is defined in 29 CFR 2510.3-21(e) and 26 CFR 54.4975-9(e).

[Exemption Application D-11069]

Amendment to Prohibited Transaction Exemption 84-24 (PTE 84-24) For Certain Transactions Involving Insurance Agents and Brokers, Pension Consultants, Insurance Companies, Investment Companies and Investment Company Principal Underwriters

AGENCY: Employee Benefits Security Administration, U.S. Department of Labor.

ACTION: Adoption of Amendment to PTE 84-24.

SUMMARY: This document amends PTE 84-24, a class exemption that provides relief for certain transactions relating to the purchase, with plan assets, of investment company securities or insurance or annuity contracts, and the payment of associated sales commissions to insurance agents or brokers, pension consultants, or investment company principal underwriters that are parties in interest with respect to such plan. The amendment extends relief to purchase transactions involving insurance agents and brokers, pension consultants, and investment company principal underwriters whose affiliates exercise investment discretion over plan assets that are not involved in the transaction.

DATES: The amendment is effective February 3, 2006.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Christopher Motta, Office of Exemption Determinations, Employee Benefits Security Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, (202) 693-8540 (this is not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On September 14, 2004, notice was published in the Federal Register (69 FR 55463) of the pendency before the Department of a proposed amendment to PTE 84-24 (49 FR 13208 (April 3, 1984) as corrected at 49 FR 24819 (June 15, 1984)). PTE 84-24 provides an exemption from the restrictions of section 406(a)(1)(A) through (D) and section 406(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA or the Act) and from the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(A) through (F) of the Code.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> References to section 406 of ERISA as they appear throughout this amendment should be read to refer as well to the corresponding provisions of section 4975 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, as amended (the Code).

The amendment to PTE 84-24 was proposed by the Department on its own motion, pursuant to section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, 32847, August 10, 1990).<sup>2</sup> The notice of pendency gave interested persons an opportunity to comment or to request a hearing on the proposed amendment. The Department received one comment on the proposed amendment. That comment, from the Investment Company Institute, supported the amendment as proposed. The Department did not receive a request for a public hearing.

For the sake of convenience, the entire text of PTE 84-24, as amended, has been reprinted in this notice.

Executive Order 12866 Statement

Under Executive Order 12866, the Department must determine whether a regulatory action is "significant" and therefore subject to the requirements of the Executive Order and subject to review by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Under section 3(f), the order defines a "significant regulatory action" as an action that is likely to result in a rule (1) having an annual effect on the economy of $100 million or more, or adversely and materially affecting a sector of the economy, productivity, competition, jobs, the environment, public health or safety, or State, local or tribal governments or communities (also referred to as "economically significant"); (2) creating serious inconsistency or otherwise interfering with an action taken or planned by another agency; (3) materially altering the budgetary impacts of entitlement grants, user fees, or loan programs or the rights and obligations of recipients thereof; or (4) raising novel legal or policy issues arising out of legal mandates, the President's priorities, or the principles set forth in the Executive Order.

This amendment has been drafted and reviewed in accordance with Executive Order 12866, section 1(b), Principles of Regulation. The Department has determined that this amendment is not a "significant regulatory action" under Executive Order 12866, section 3(f). Accordingly, it does not require an assessment of potential costs and benefits under section 6(a)(3) of that order.

April 8, 1977 (42 FR 18743)

Recap

Permits an employee benefit plan which covers only employees of a mutual fund, the fund's investment adviser, the principal underwriter, or an affiliate of such persons, to "acquire" or sell shares of a registered open-end investment company .

Class Exemption

Agency: Department of Labor, Labor-Management Services Administration

Action: Grant of Class Exemption

Effective Date: December 31, 1974

Exemption

Effective for transactions occurring after December 31, 1974, the restrictions of sections 406 and 407\(a\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975 \(a\) and \(b\) of the Code, by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\) of the Code, shall not apply to the acquisition or sale of shares of an open-end investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940 by an employee benefit plan covering only employees of such investment company, employees of the investment adviser or principal underwriter for such investment company, or employees of any affiliated person (as defined in section 2(a)(3) of the Investment Company Act of 1940) of such investment adviser or principal underwriter, provided that the following conditions are met (whether or not such investment company, investment adviser, principal underwriter or any affiliated person thereof is a fiduciary with respect to the plan):

- a. The plan does not pay any investment management, investment advisory or similar fee to such investment adviser, principal underwriter or affiliated person. This condition does not preclude the payment of investment advisory fees by the investment company under the terms of its investment advisory agreement adopted in accordance with section 15 of the Investment Company Act of 1940.
- b. The plan does not pay a redemption fee in connection with the sale by the plan to the investment company of such shares unless (1) such redemption fee is paid only to the investment company, and (2) the existence of such redemption fee is disclosed in the investment company prospectus in effect both at the time of the acquisition of such shares and at the time of such sale.
- c. In the case of transactions occurring more than 60 days after the granting of this exemption, the plan does not pay a sales commission in connection with such acquisition or sale.
- d. All other dealings between the plan and the investment company, the investment adviser or principal underwriter for the investment company, or any affiliated person of such investment adviser or principal underwriter, are on a basis no less favorable to the plan than such dealings are with other shareholders of the investment company.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 77-4

Investment in Advised or Affiliated Mutual Funds

March 31, 1977

Recap

Permits investment in mutual funds advised by or affiliated with a fiduciary if: (1) approved by a second, independent, fiduciary, (2) no front-end load is imposed, (3) redemption fees meet certain conditions, and (4) conditions on mutual fund fees are met.

Cross reference: See Advisory Opinion 93-13 regarding application of PTE 77-4 to purchase of affiliated mutual funds. Also see 1994 DOL letter to OCC regarding conversions of collective investment funds into mutual funds.

Class Exemption

To Invest in Mutual Funds Affiliated With or Advised By a Fiduciary

Agency: Department of Labor and Internal Revenue Service.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Effective Date: Certain retroactive exemption is given for transactions between January 1, 1975 and ninety days after the exemption is granted.

Prospective exemption is granted for transactions occurring ninety days after the exemption is granted. [Since the exemption was signed 3-31-77, the prospective exemption should be effective 7-1-77.]

Exemption

Section I - Retroactive.

The Retroactive portion of this Exemption covers transactions between 1-1-75 and 7-1-77. As such, it is not reprinted here.

Section II - Prospective. Effective 90 days after the date of granting of this exemption, the restrictions of section 406 of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code, by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\) of the Code, shall not apply to the purchase or sale by an employee benefit plan of shares of an open-end investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, the investment adviser for which is also a fiduciary with respect to the plan (or an affiliate of such fiduciary) and is not an employer of employees covered by the plan (hereinafter referred to as "fiduciary/investment adviser"), provided that the following conditions are met:

- a. The plan does not pay a sales commission in connection with such purchase or sale.
- b. The plan does not pay a redemption fee in connection with the sale by the plan to the investment company of such shares, unless:
  1. Such redemption fee is paid only to the investment company, and
  2. The existence of such redemption fee is disclosed in the investment company prospectus in effect both at the time of the purchase of such shares and at the time of such sale.
- c. The plan does not pay an investment management, investment advisory, or similar fee with respect to the plan assets invested in such shares for the entire period of such investment.
  - This condition does not preclude the payment of investment advisory fees by the investment company under the terms of its investment advisory agreement adopted in accordance with section 15 of the Investment Company Act of 1940.
  - This condition also does not preclude the payment of an investment advisory fee by the plan based on total plan assets from which a credit has been subtracted representing the plan's pro rata share of investment advisory fees paid by the investment company.
  - If, during any fee period for which the plan prepaid its investment management, investment advisory or similar fee, the plan purchases shares of the investment company, the requirements of this paragraph (c) shall be deemed met with respect to such prepaid fee if, by a method reasonable designed to accomplish the same, the amount of the prepaid fee that constitutes the fee with respect to the plan assets invested in the investment company shares
    1. Is anticipated and subtracted from the prepaid fee at the time of payment of such fee,
    2. Is returned to the plan no later than during the immediately following fee period, or
    3. Is offset against the prepaid fee for the immediately following fee period or for the fee period immediately following thereafter.

For purposes of this paragraph, a fee shall be deemed to be prepaid for any fee period if the amount of such fee is calculated as of a date not later than the first day of such period.

- d. A second fiduciary with respect to the plan, who is independent of and unrelated to the fiduciary/investment adviser or any affiliate thereof, receives
  - A current prospectus issued by the investment company, and
  - Full and detailed written disclosure of the investment advisory and other fees charged to or paid by the plan and the investment company, including
    - The nature and extent of any differential between the rates of such fees,

- The reasons why the fiduciary/investment adviser may consider such purchases to be appropriate for the plan, and
- Whether there are any limitations on the fiduciary/investment adviser with respect to which plan assets may be invested in shares of the investment company and, if so, the nature of such limitations.

For purposes of this exemption, such second fiduciary will not be deemed to be independent of and unrelated to the fiduciary/investment adviser or any affiliate thereof if:

1. Such second fiduciary directly or indirectly controls, is controlled by, or under common control with the fiduciary/investment adviser or any affiliate thereof;
2. Such second fiduciary or any officer, director, partner, employee or relative of such second fiduciary is an officer, director, partner, employee or relative of such fiduciary/investment adviser or any affiliate thereof; or
3. Such second fiduciary directly or indirectly receives any compensation or other consideration for his or his own personal account in connection with any transaction described in this exemption.

If an officer, director, partner, employee or relative of such fiduciary/investment adviser or any affiliate thereof is a director of such second fiduciary, and if he or she abstains from participation in

- i. The choice of the plan's investment adviser,
- ii. The approval of any such purchase or sale between the plan and the investment company and
- iii. The approval of any change of fees charged to or paid by the plan, then paragraph (d)(2) of this section shall not apply.

For purposes of this exemption, the term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual, and the term "relative" means a "relative" as that term is defined in section 3\(15\) of the Act (or a "member of the family" as that term is defined in section 4975\(e\)\(6\) of the Code), or a brother, a sister, or a spouse of a brother or a sister.

- e. On the basis of the prospectus and disclosure referred to in paragraph (d), the second fiduciary referred to in paragraph (d) approves such purchases and sales consistent with the responsibilities, obligations, and duties imposed on fiduciaries by Part 4 of Title I of the Act. Such approval may be limited solely to the investment advisory and other fees paid by the mutual fund in relation to the fees paid by the plan and need not relate to any other aspects of such investments. In addition, such approval must be either
  1. Set forth in the plan documents or in the investment management agreement between the plan and the fiduciary/investment adviser,
  2. Indicated in writing prior to each purchase or sale, or
  3. Indicated in writing prior to the commencement of a specified purchase or sale program in the shares of such investment company.
- f. The second fiduciary referred to in paragraph (d), or any successor thereto, is notified of any change in any of the rates of fees referred to in paragraph (d) and approves in writing the continuation of such purchases or sales and the continued holding of any investment company shares acquired by the plan prior to such change and still held by the change. Such approval may be limited solely to the investment advisory and other fees paid by the mutual fund in relation to the fees paid by the plan and need not relate to any other aspects of such investment.

Signed at Washington, D. C. this 31st day of March 1977.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 80-26

Interest-Free Loans (Including Overdrafts)

April 29, 1980 (45 FR 28545)

Recap

Interest-free loans. Permits interest-free loans (including overdrafts) between plans and parties in interest provided certain conditions are met.

Class Exemption for Certain Interest Free Loans to Employee Benefit Plans

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This class exemption permits parties in interest with respect to employee benefit plans to make interest free loans to such plans. Such loans would be prohibited by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the Internal Revenue Code of 1964 (the Code). The exemption affects all employee benefit plans, their participants and beneficiaries, and parties in interest with respect to those plans.

Effective Date: January 1, 1975.

Exemption

Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) and \(D\) and section 406\(b\)\(2\) of the Act, and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(B\) and \(D\) of the Code, shall not apply to the lending of money or other extension of credit from party in interest or disqualified person to an employee benefit plan, nor to the repayment of such loan or other extension of credit in accordance with its terms or written modifications thereof, if:

- a. No interest or other fee is charged to the plan, and no discount for payment in cash is relinquished by the plan in connection with the loan or extension of credit;
- b. The proceeds of the loan or extension of credit are used only:
  1. For the payment of ordinary operating expenses of the plan, including the payment of benefits in accordance with the terms of the plan and periodic premiums under an insurance or annuity contract; or
  2. For a period of not more than three days, for a purpose incidental to the ordinary operation of the plan;
- c. The loan or extension of credit is unsecured; and
- d. The loan or extension of credit is not directly or indirectly made by an employee benefit plan.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 80-51

Collective Investment Funds

June 25, 1980 (45 FR 49709)

Recap

Collective Investment Funds. ERISA plans are permitted to invest in collective investment funds operated by bank fiduciaries, subject to certain limitations and conditions.

Class Exemption Covering Collective Investment Funds

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This exemption allows collective investment funds that are maintained by banks and in which employee benefit plans participate to engage in certain transactions provided that specified conditions are met. In the absence of this exemption, these transactions might be prohibited by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code).

Effective Date: January 1, 1975.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 80-83

Purchase of Securities Where Issuer May Use Proceeds To Reduce or Retire Indebtedness To Parties in Interest

November 4, 1980 (45 FR 73189)

Recap

Permits ERISA plans to invest in securities issued by plan sponsors, when proceeds are used to reduce debt at the fiduciary bank or its affiliates (even if fiduciary personnel know how proceeds will be used) subject to conditions:

(1) Issuer has been in business for 3 or more years, or securities are not convertible and are rated in the highest 4 ratings by a nationally-recognized firm; (2) No more than 10% of the offering is subscribed to by the bank as fiduciary; (3) No more than 3% of the offering is subscribed to by an individual ERISA plan; (4) Consideration paid by the plan to acquire the securities does not exceed 3% of an ERISA plan's market value.

Note: Covers discretionary, non-discretionary and custodial accounts.

Class Exemption for Certain Transactions Involving Purchase of Securities

Where Issuer May Use Proceeds To Reduce or Retire Indebtedness

To Parties in Interest

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Grant of Class Exemption.

Summary: This class exemption permits, under certain conditions, purchases of securities by employee benefit plans when the proceeds from the sale of such securities may be used by the issuer to reduce or retire indebtedness to persons who are parties in interest with respect to such plans. In the absence of the retroactive and prospective relief provided by this exemption, these transactions might be prohibited by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code).

Effective Date: Section I(B) of this exemption is effective December 1, 1980. The remainder of this exemption is effective January 1, 1975.

Exemption

I. Transactions

- A. Effective January 1, 1975 the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Code shall not apply to the purchase or other acquisition prior to December 1, 1980 in a public offering (defined in Section II(B)) of securities by a fiduciary on behalf of an employee benefit plan solely because the proceeds from the sale were or were to be used by the issuer of the securities to retire or reduce indebtedness owed to a party in interest with respect to the plan other than the fiduciary, provided that the price paid by the plan for the securities does not exceed adequate consideration as defined in section 3\(18\) of the Act.
- B. Subject to the conditions described in section II(A), effective December 1, 1980, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Code shall not apply to the purchase or other acquisition in a public offering (defined in section II(B)) of securities by a fiduciary on behalf of an employee benefit plan solely because the proceeds from the sale may be used by the issuer of the securities to retire or reduce indebtedness owed to a party in interest of the plan other than the fiduciary.
- C. Subject to the conditions described in section II(A), effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(E\) of the Code shall not apply to the purchase or other acquisition in a public offering (defined in section II(B)) of securities by a fiduciary, which is a bank or an affiliate thereof, on behalf of an employee benefit plan solely because the proceeds from the sale may be used by the issuer of the securities to retire or reduce indebtedness owed to such fiduciary or any affiliate thereof provided that, if such fiduciary of the plan knows (as defined in paragraph (7) that the proceeds of this issue will be used in whole or in part by the issuer of the securities to reduce or retire indebtedness owed to such fiduciary or affiliate thereof the transaction shall have complied with the conditions set forth in paragraph 1 through 6 below:
1. Such securities are purchased prior to the end of the first full business day after the securities have been offered to the public, except that -
    - a. If such securities are offered for subscription upon exercise of rights, they may be purchased on or before the fourth day preceding the day on which the rights offering terminates; or
    - b. If such securities are debt securities, they may be purchased on a day subsequent to the end of such first full business day, if the effective interest rates on comparable debt securities offered to the public subsequent to such first full business day and prior to the purchase are less than effective interest rate of the debt securities being purchased;
  2. Such securities are offered by the issuer pursuant to an underwriting agreement under which the members of the underwriting syndicate are committed to purchase all of the securities being offered, except if the securities
    - a. Are purchased by others pursuant to a rights offering, or
    - b. Are offered pursuant to an over allotment option;
  3. The issuer of such securities has been in continuous operation for not less than three years, including the operations of any predecessors, unless such securities are nonconvertible debt securities rated in one of the four highest rating categories by at least one nationally recognized statistical rating organization;
  4. The amount of securities purchased or otherwise acquired on behalf of the plan by the fiduciary does not exceed three percent of the total amount of the securities being offered;
  5. The consideration to be paid by any plan in purchasing or otherwise acquiring such securities does not exceed three percent of the fair market value, as of the most recent valuation date of the plan prior to such transaction of the plan assets which are subject to the management and control of such fiduciary;
  6. The total amount of securities in any single offering purchased by the fiduciary of behalf of the plan together with the total amount of such securities purchased by such fiduciary acting as a fiduciary on behalf of any other employee benefit plan subject to Title I of the Act does not exceed 10 percent of the amount of the offering;
  7. As used in this section I(C), a fiduciary will be deemed to know that the proceeds of an issuance of securities will be used in whole or in part by the issuer of the securities to reduce or retire indebtedness owned [owed] to such fiduciary or an affiliate thereof, if
    - a. Such knowledge is actually communicated to, or
    - b. Information reasonably sufficient to cause belief that the proceeds will be used in whole or in part by the issuer of the securities to reduce or retire indebtedness owned [owed] to the fiduciary, or an affiliate thereof, is possessed by, the officers or employees of the fiduciary, who are authorized to be involved in carrying out the investment responsibilities, obligations, or duties of the fiduciary, or who in fact are involved in carrying out such responsibilities, obligations, or duties, regarding the purchase or other acquisition.
- D. Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(E\) of the Code shall not apply to the receipt by a party in interest of any of the proceeds resulting from the issuance, in a public offering (as defined in section II(B)), of securities merely because such proceeds are used by the issuer of the securities to retire or reduce indebtedness owed to the party in interest provided that, when such party in interest is a fiduciary acquiring such securities on behalf of a plan, such fiduciary is a bank or an affiliate thereof (as defined in section II(B)) which meets the provisions of section I(C) of this exemption.

II. General Conditions

A. The following conditions apply to the transactions described in section I(B) and (C) above:

1. The price paid by the plan fiduciary for the securities shall not be in excess of the offering price described in an effective registration statement under the Securities Act of 1933 covering such securities or in the case of securities described in section II(B)(1)(b), in the offering circular required under applicable federal law;
2. (a) The fiduciary, on behalf of the plan, maintains for a period of six years from the date of the transaction the records necessary to enable the persons described in section II(A)(2)(b) below to determine whether the conditions of this exemption have been met, except that a prohibited transaction will not be deemed to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the control of the fiduciary, the records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of the six-year period;

(b) Notwithstanding any provisions of subsections (a)(2) and (b) of section 504 of the Act, the records referred to in section II(A)(2)(a) above are unconditionally available at their customary location for examination during normal business hours by:

- i. Any duly authorized employee or representative of the Department of Labor or the Internal Revenue Service,
- ii. Any fiduciary of a plan who has authority to manage and control the assets of the plan, or to allocate to another fiduciary the authority to manage and control the assets of the plan, or any duly authorized employee or representative of such fiduciary,
- iii. Any contributing employer to the plan or representative of such employer,
- iv. Any participant or beneficiary of the plan or any duly-authorized employee or representative of such participant or beneficiary,
- v. None of the persons described in subparagraph (ii) through (iv) of this paragraph shall be authorized to examine any fiduciary's trade secrets or required to be kept commercial [sic] or financial information which is privileged or required to be kept confidential.

B. For the purposes of the exemptions contained in Part I,

1. The term "public offering" means -

- a. The offering of securities registered under the Securities Act of 1933 (Securities Act), or
- b. The offering of securities exempt from registration under the Securities Act which are -

(i) Issued by a bank.

(ii) Issued by a motor carrier if such issuance is subject to the provisions of section 214 of the Interstate Commerce Act, as amended,

(iii) Exempt from the registration requirements of the Securities Act pursuant to a federal statute other than the Securities Act, or

(iv) The subject of a distribution and of a class which is required to be registered under section 12 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (15 USC 781), and the issuer of which has been subject to the reporting requirements of section 13 of that Act (15 USC 78m) for a period of at least 90 days immediately preceding the sale of securities and has filed all reports required to be filed thereunder with the Securities and Exchange Commission during the preceding 12 months.

2. An "affiliate" of a bank means any entity directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such bank.

For the purposes of this paragraph, the term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

3. Each plan participating in a collective or commingled fund shall be considered to own the same proportionate undivided interest in each asset of the collective investment fund as its proportionate interest in the total assets of the collective investment fund as calculated on the most recent preceding valuation date of the fund.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 81-6*Securities Lending

January 23, 1981 (46 FR 7527)

[Amended on May 19, 1987 (52 FR 18754)]

Recap

Securities Lending: Loans by plans to banks and broker-dealers. - The lending of securities by employee benefit plans to broker-dealers and banks who are parties in interest is permitted under this class exemption. In order for such loans to be exempt from ERISA's prohibited transaction provisions, neither the borrower nor an affiliate may have discretionary authority with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction.

A 1987 amendment, which expanded the exemption to government securities dealers, is included in the Amended Exemption.

 Class Exemption To Permit Certain Loans of Securities by Employee Benefit Plans

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This exemption will allow the lending of securities by employee benefit plans to banks and broker-dealers who are parties in interest with respect to such plans, if the conditions specified in the exemption are met. The exemption affects participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans, persons who manage the assets of such plans, and parties in interest who might engage in securities lending transactions with such plans. In the absence of this exemption, securities lending transactions between a plan and a party in interest would be prohibited by the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code).

Effective Date: January 23, 1981. For purposes solely of Prohibited Transaction Exemption 79-23 (the Grumman Corp. Pension Trust, 44 FR 31750, June 1, 1979). The final disposition of this class exemption will be deemed to occur on February 23, 1981.

Amended Exemption

Effective January 23, 1981, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Code shall not apply to the lending of securities that are assets of an employee benefit plan to a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 (the 1934 Act) or exempted from registration under section 15(a)(l) of the 1934 Act as a dealer in exempted Government securities (as defined in section 3(a)(12) of the 1934 Act) or to a bank, if:

1. Neither the borrower nor an affiliate of the borrower has discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction, or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets;
2. The plan receives from the borrower (either by physical delivery or by, book entry in a securities depository) by the close of the lending fiduciary's business on the day in which the securities lent are delivered to the borrower, collateral consisting of cash, securities issued or guaranteed by the United States Government or its agencies, or irrevocable bank letters of credit issued by a person other than the borrower or an affiliate thereof, or any combination thereof, having, as of the close of business on the preceding business day, a market value equal to not less than 100 percent of the market value of the securities lent;
3. Prior to the making of any such loan, the borrower shall have furnished the lending fiduciary with (1) the most recent available audited statement of the borrower's financial condition, (2) the most recent available unaudited statement of its financial condition (if more recent than such audited statement), and (3) a representation that, at the time the loan is negotiated, there has been no material adverse change in its financial condition since the date of the most recent financial statement furnished to the plan that has not been disclosed to the lending fiduciary. Such representation may be made by the borrower's agreeing that each such loan shall constitute a representation by the borrower that there has been no such material adverse change;
4. The loan is made pursuant to a written loan agreement, the terms of which are at least as favorable to the plan as an arm's length transaction with an unrelated party, would be. Such agreement may be in the form of a master agreement covering a series of securities lending transactions;
5. (a) The plan (1) receives a reasonable fee that is related to the value of the borrowed securities and the duration of the loan, or (2) has the opportunity to derive compensation through the investment of cash collateral. Where the plan has that opportunity, the plan may pay a loan rebate or similar fee to the borrower, if such fee is not greater than the plan would pay in a comparable transaction with an unrelated party;

(b) The plan receives the equivalent of all distributions made to holders of the borrowed securities during the term of the loan, including, but not limited to, cash dividends, interest payments, shares of stock as a result of stock splits and rights to purchase additional securities;
6. If the market value of the collateral at the close of trading on a business day is less than 100 percent of the market value of the borrowed securities at the close of trading on that day, the borrower shall deliver, by the close of business on the following business day, an additional amount of collateral (as described in paragraph 2) the market value of which, together with the market value of all previously delivered collateral, equals at least 100 percent of the market value of all the borrowed securities as of such preceding day.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, part of the collateral may be returned to the borrower if the market value of the collateral exceeds 100 percent of the market value of the borrowed securities, as long as the market value of the remaining collateral equals at least 100 percent of the market value of the borrowed securities;

7. The loan may be terminated by the plan at any time, whereupon the borrower shall deliver certificates for securities identical to the borrowed securities (or the equivalent thereof in the event of reorganization, recapitalization or merger of the issuer of the borrowed securities) to the plan within (1) the customary delivery period for such securities, (2) five business days, or (3) the time negotiated for such delivery by the plan and the borrower, whichever is lesser; and
8. In the event the loan is terminated, and the borrower fails to return the borrowed securities or the equivalent thereof within the time described in paragraph 7 above, (i) the plan may, under the terms of the loan agreement, purchase securities, identical to the borrowed securities (or their equivalent as described above) and may apply, the collateral to the payment of the purchase price, any other obligations of the borrower under the agreement, and any expenses associated with the sale and/or purchase, and (ii) the borrower is obligated, under the terms of the loan agreement, to pay, and does pay to the plan the amount of any remaining obligations and expenses not covered by the collateral plus interest at a reasonable rate.

Notwithstanding the foregoing, the borrower may, in the event the borrower fails to return borrowed securities as described above, replace non-cash collateral with an amount of cash not less than the then current market value of the collateral, provided such replacement is approved by the lending fiduciary.

If the borrower fails to comply with any condition of this exemption in the course of engaging in a securities lending transaction, the plan fiduciary who caused the plan to engage in such transaction shall not be deemed to have caused the plan to engage in a transaction prohibited by section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Act solely by reason of the borrower's failure to comply with the conditions of the exemption.

For purposes of this class exemption the term "affiliate" of another person shall include:

- i. Any person directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such other person;

- ii. Any officer, director, or partner, employee or relative (as defined in section 3\(15\) of the Act) of such other person; and
- iii. Any corporation or partnership of which such other person is an officer, director or partner.

For purposes of this definition the term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 81-8

Short-term Investments & Repurchase Agreements

January 23, 1981 (46 FR 7511)

[Amended on April 9, 1985 (50 FR 14043)]

Recap

Employee benefit plans: Short-term investments. Employee benefit plans are permitted to engage in transactions involving certain short-term investments, notwithstanding the prohibited transaction provisions of ERISA. The class exemption allows four types of short-term investments: banker's acceptances, commercial paper, repurchase agreements, and certificates of deposit.

Class Exemption Covering Certain Short-Term Investments

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This exemption permits employee benefit plans to engage in transactions involving certain short-term investments notwithstanding the prohibited transaction restrictions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA or the Act). The exemption will affect participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans, persons who manage the assets of such plans, and other persons who provide services to such plans.

Effective Date: January 1, 1975. (Certain conditions to the availability of the exemption are effective April 23, 1981).

AmendedExemption

Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of sections 408\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) \(B\) and \(D\) of the Act, and the taxes imposed by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(B\) and \(D\) of the Code shall not apply to an investment of employee benefit plan assets which involves the purchase or other acquisition, holding, sale, exchange or redemption by or on behalf of an employee benefit plan of the following:

I. Banker's Acceptances. A banker's acceptance that is issued by a bank if:

- A. The banker's acceptance has a stated maturity date of one year or less from date of issue or has a maturity date of one year or less from the date of purchase on behalf of the plan;
- B. Neither the bank nor any affiliate of the bank has discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets;
- C. The terms of the transaction are at least as favorable to the plan as those of an arm's length transaction with an unrelated party would be; and,
- D. With respect to transactions occurring on or after April 23, 1981 the bank issuing the banker's acceptance is supervised by the United States or a State.

II. Commercial Paper. Commercial paper if:

- A. It is not issued by an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan or by an affiliate of such employer;
- B. It has a stated maturity date of nine months or less from the date of issue, exclusive of days of grace, or is a renewal of an issue of commercial paper the maturity of which is likewise limited;
- C. Neither the issuer of the commercial paper, any guarantor of the commercial paper, nor an affiliate of such issuer or guarantor, has discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets;
- D. With respect to an acquisition or holding of commercial paper (including an acquisition by exchange) occurring on or after April 23, 1981, at the time it is acquired, the commercial paper is ranked in one of the three highest rating categories by at least one nationally recognized statistical rating services.

III. Repurchase Agreement.

A repurchase agreement (or securities or other instruments under cover of a repurchase agreement) in which the seller of the underlying securities or other instruments is a bank which is supervised by the United States or a State; a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934; or a dealer who makes primary markets in securities of the United States government or any agency thereof or in bankers acceptances and reports daily to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York its position with respect to these obligations, if each of the following conditions are satisfied.

- A. The repurchase agreement is embodied in, or is entered into pursuant to a written agreement the terms of which are at least as favorable to the plan as an arm's length transaction with an unrelated party would be. For transactions occurring before April 23, 1981 a written confirmation of a repurchase agreement whose terms were at least as favorable to the plan as an arm's length transaction with an unrelated party would have been will be deemed to satisfy this condition.
- B. The plan receives interest at a rate no less than that which it would receive in a comparable transaction with an unrelated party.
- C. The repurchase agreement has a duration of one year or less.
- D. The plan receives securities, banker's acceptances, commercial paper, or certificates of deposit having a market value equal to not less than 100 percent of the purchase price paid by the plan.

- E. Upon expiration of the repurchase agreement and return of the securities or other instruments to the bank, broker-dealer or dealer (seller), the seller transfers to the plan an amount equal to the purchase price plus the appropriate interest.
- F. Neither the seller nor an affiliate of the seller has discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction or render investment advice (within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets.
- G. The securities, banker's acceptances, commercial paper or certificates of deposit received by the plan:
1. Could be acquired directly by the plan in a transaction not covered by this section III without violating sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(E\), 406\(a\)\(2\) or 407\(a\) of the Act; and,
  2. If the securities are subject to the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933, they are obligations that are not "restricted securities" within the meaning of Rule 144 under that act.
- H. With respect to transactions occurring on or after April 23, 1981:
1. If the market value of the underlying securities or other instruments falls below the purchase price at any time during the term of the agreement, the plan may, under the written agreement required by paragraph A of this section, require the seller to deliver, by the close of business on the following business day, additional securities or other instruments the market value of which, together with the market value of securities previously delivered or sold to the plan under the repurchase agreement, equals at least 100 percent of the purchase price paid by the plan;
  2. If the seller does not deliver additional securities or other instruments as required above, the plan may terminate the agreement, and, if upon termination or expiration of the agreement, the amount owing is not paid to the plan, the plan may sell the securities or other instruments and apply the proceeds against the obligations of the seller under the agreement, and against any expenses associated with the sale; and,
  3. The seller agrees to furnish the plan with the most recent available audited statement of its financial condition as well as its most recent available unaudited statement, agrees to furnish additional audited and unaudited statements of its financial condition as they are issued and either:
    - A. Agrees that each repurchase agreement transaction pursuant to the agreement shall constitute a representation by the seller that there has been no material adverse change in its financial condition since the date of the last statement furnished that has not been disclosed to the plan fiduciary with whom such written agreement is made; or
    - B. Prior to each repurchase agreement transaction, the seller represents that, as of the time the transaction is negotiated, there has been no material adverse change in its financial condition since the date of the last statement furnished that has not been disclosed to the plan fiduciary with whom such written agreement is made.
  4. In the event of termination and sale as described in (2) above, the seller pays to the plan the amount of any remaining obligations and expenses not covered by the sale of the securities or other instruments, plus interest at a reasonable rate.

If a seller involved in a repurchase agreement covered by this exemption fails to comply with any condition of this exemption in the course of engaging in the repurchase agreement, the plan fiduciary who caused the plan to engage in such repurchase agreement shall not be deemed to have caused the plan to engage in a transaction prohibited by section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Act solely by reason of the seller's failure to comply with the conditions of the exemption.

IV. Certificates of Deposit.

A certificate of deposit that is issued by a bank which is supervised by the United States or a State if neither the bank nor any affiliate of the bank has discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to those assets.

For purposes of this exemption the term affiliate is defined in 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(e).

V. Securities of Banks.

A security issued by a bank or an affiliate of the bank if:

- A. The bank is supervised by the United States or a State;
- B. The bank is a party in interest or disqualified person with respect to the plan solely by reason of the furnishing of checking account or related services to the plan;
- C. The terms of the transaction are at least as favorable to the plan as those of an arm's-length transaction with an unrelated party would be; and
- D. The investment is not part of an arrangement under which the bank causes a transaction to be made with or for the benefit of a party in interest or disqualified person.

Class Exemption to Permit Payment of Compensation to Plan Fiduciaries for the Provision of Securities Lending Services

Agency: Office of Pension and Welfare Benefit Programs, Labor.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This exemption will allow certain compensation arrangements to be made for the provision by a fiduciary of securities lending services to an employee benefit plan, if the conditions specified in the exemption are met. The exemption affects participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans and fiduciaries who provide securities lending services to such plans. In the absence of this exemption, certain compensation arrangements for the provision of securities lending services by a plan fiduciary to an employee benefit plan would be subject to the prohibitions of section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code) by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\) of the Code.

Effective Date: April 6, 1982.

The Explanatory Preamble, together with the full Exemption, are available in the PREAMBLE document.

Exemption

I. Transactions

Effective April 6, 1982, the restrictions of section 406\(b\)\(1\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code) by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\) of the Code shall not apply to the payment to a fiduciary (the "lending fiduciary") of compensation for services rendered in connection with loans of plan assets that are securities, provided that:

- a. The loan of securities is not prohibited by section 406\(a\) of the Act;
- b. The lending fiduciary is authorized to engage in securities lending transactions on behalf of the plan;
- c. The compensation is reasonable and is paid in accordance with the terms of a written instrument, which may be in the form of a master agreement covering a series of securities lending transactions;
- d. Except as otherwise provided in paragraph (f), the arrangement under which the compensation is paid (1) is subject to the prior written authorization of a plan fiduciary (the "authorizing fiduciary"), who is (other than in the case of a plan covering only employees of the lending fiduciary or affiliates of such fiduciary) independent of the lending fiduciary and of any affiliate thereof, and (2) may be terminated by the authorizing fiduciary within (i) the time negotiated for such notice of termination by the plan and the lending fiduciary, or (ii) five business days, whichever is lesser, in either case without penalty to the plan;
- e. No such authorization is made or renewed unless the lending fiduciary shall have furnished the authorizing fiduciary with any reasonably available information which the lending fiduciary reasonably believes to be necessary to determine whether such authorization should be made or renewed, and any other reasonably available information regarding the matter that the authorizing fiduciary may reasonably request; and
- f. (Special Rule for Commingled Investment Funds) In the case of a pooled separate account maintained by an insurance company qualified to do business in a state or, a common or collective trust fund maintained by a bank or trust company supervised by a state or federal agency, the requirements of paragraph (d) of this exemption shall not apply: Provided, that -
  1. The information described in paragraph (e) (including information with respect to any material change in the arrangement) shall be furnished by the lending fiduciary to the authorizing fiduciary described in paragraph (d) with respect to each plan whose assets are invested in the account or fund, not less than 30 days prior to implementation of the arrangement or material change thereto, and, where requested, upon the reasonable request of the authorizing fiduciary;
  2. In the event any such authorizing fiduciary submits a notice in writing to the lending fiduciary objecting to the implementation of, material change in, or continuation of the arrangement, the plan on whose behalf the objection was tendered is given the opportunity to terminate its investment in the account or fund, without penalty to the plan, within such time as may be necessary to effect such withdrawal in an orderly manner that is equitable to all withdrawing plans and to the nonwithdrawing plans. In the case of a plan that elects to withdraw pursuant to the foregoing, such withdrawal shall be effected prior to the implementation of, or material change in, the arrangement, but an existing arrangement need not be discontinued by reason of a plan electing to withdraw; and
  3. In the case of a plan whose assets are proposed to be invested in the account or fund subsequent to the implementation of the compensation arrangement and which has not authorized the arrangement in the manner described in paragraphs (f)(1) and (f)(2), the plan's investment in the account or fund shall be authorized in the manner described in paragraph (d)(1).

Definitions

For purposes of this exemption, the term, "affiliate" of another person means:

1. Any person directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such other person;
2. Any officer, director, partner, employee, relative (as defined in section 3\(15\) of the Act) of such other person, and
3. Any corporation or partnership of which such other person is an officer, director or partner.

For purposes of this paragraph, the term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

Recap

Residential Mortgages. ERISA plans are permitted to invest in 1-to-4 family mortgages and mortgage participations, collect origination fees, and use affiliates to service the mortgages, subject to certain limitations and conditions. The PTE covers first and second liens on homes, townhouses, condominiums, cooperative apartments, and "manufactured housing". Rental housing is not covered.

Class Exemption for Transactions Involving

Certain Residential Mortgage Financing Arrangements

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This document contains a final exemption from certain of the prohibited transactions provisions of the Employee Retirement Security Income Act of 1974 (the Act) and the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code). The exemption involves the issuance of commitments for the provision of mortgage financing to purchasers of residential dwelling units, the receipt of a fee in exchange for the issuance of such commitment, the making or purchase of loans or participation interests therein pursuant to such commitments, and the direct making, purchase, sale, exchange or transfer of mortgage loans or participation interests therein by employee benefit plans, if the conditions specified in the exemption are met. The exemption affects participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans involved in such transactions, certain employers who contribute to such plans and other persons who engage in the described transactions. In the absence of this exemption, certain purchase and sale transactions between the plan and parties in interest and certain extensions of credit transactions between the plan and other parties in interest would be prohibited by the Act and the Code.

Effective Date: January 1, 1975. [Certain conditions, as specified herein, are applicable effective June 17, 1982.]

Exemption

I. Transactions

Accordingly, the following exemption is hereby granted under the authority of section 408\(a\) of the Act and section 4975\(c\)\(2\) of the Code and in accordance with the procedure set forth in ERISA Procedure 75-1.

Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of section 406\(a\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (Code) by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Code shall not apply to the following transactions if the conditions set forth in Part II below are met:

- A. The issuance of a commitment by one or more employee benefit plans to provide mortgage financing to purchasers of residential dwelling units, either by making or participating in loans directly to purchasers or by purchasing mortgage loans or participation interests in mortgage loans originated by a third party;
- B. The receipt by the plan of a fee in exchange for issuing such commitment;
- C. The actual making or purchase of a mortgage loan or participation interest therein pursuant to such commitment;
- D. The direct making or purchase by one or more employee benefit plans of a mortgage loan or a participation interest therein other than where a commitment has been issued; and
- E. The sale, exchange or transfer of a mortgage loan or participation interest therein by an employee benefit plan prior to the maturity date of such instrument whether or not acquired pursuant to this exemption, provided that the ownership interest sold, exchanged or transferred represents the plan's entire interest in such investment.

II. Conditions

A. Effective January 1, 1975, the exemption provided for transactions described in Part I is available only if each of the following conditions, as applicable, is met:

1. General Conditions

- a. Any mortgage loan to be acquired must be a "recognized mortgage loan" (as defined in Section D of Part III) or a participation interest in such loan for the purchase of a "residential dwelling unit" (as defined in Section E of Part III)
- b. Any mortgage loan must be originated (either directly for the plan or by the origination-purchase process) by an "established mortgage lender" (as defined in Section B of Part III) -
  - i. Who qualifies the recipient, and
  - ii. As to which neither the plan, nor an employer or group of employers contributing to the plan, nor an employee organization any of whose members are covered by the plan, has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of such "established mortgage lender";
- c. The price paid or received by the plan must be at least as favorable to the plan as a similar transaction involving unrelated parties; and
- d. No person who is a developer or a builder involved in the development or construction of the units, or a lender who is associated with the construction financing arrangement for the units, or who, at the time the decision to purchase is made by the plan (whether directly or pursuant to a commitment) is the owner of a mortgage or a participation interest therein which is subsequently sold to the plan, shall have exercised any discretionary authority or control or rendered any investment advice that would make that person a fiduciary with respect to the plan's decision to purchase, or to commit to purchase, a mortgage loan or a participation interest therein or setting the terms thereof.

2. Specific Conditions Applicable to Commitments. Where the decision by the plan involves a commitment to purchase either a mortgage loan or participation interest therein:

- a. The commitment must be in writing and must be at least as favorable to the plan as a commitment involving unrelated parties and consistent with customary practices in the residential finance industry; and
  - b. The commitment must provide for the use of underwriting guidelines and mortgage instruments which will ensure that all mortgage loans originated pursuant to such commitment will result in a "recognized mortgage loan";
3. Specific Conditions Applicable to Participations Where the acquisition by the plan involves a participation interest in a mortgage loan(s) (whether directly or pursuant to a commitment):
- a. the participation agreement governing such transaction must provide that:
    - i. The rights and interests evidenced by such participation interest not be subordinated to the rights and interests of other holders of the same participation agreement,
    - ii. The majority interest in the participation agreement must be owned by parties independent of and not controlled by the person selling the participation interest and servicing the underlying mortgage(s), and
    - iii. In the event of an inability to obtain collections on any mortgage loan(s) underlying the participation agreement, decisions regarding foreclosure options must be directed by persons other than the seller/service; and
  - b. Such participation agreement must be in writing and must be at least as favorable to the plan as a participation agreement involving unrelated parties and consistent with customary practices in the residential finance industry.
- B. Effective 30 days after date of publication of this notice in the Federal Register the exemption provided for transactions described in Part I is available only if each of the following conditions is satisfied in addition to each of the applicable conditions described in Section A of this Part II:
1. The decision to purchase or sell the mortgage loan or participation interest therein, or to issue a commitment to do so, must be made on behalf of the plan by a "qualified real estate manager" (as defined in Section C of Part III) as to which neither the plan, nor an employer or group of employers contributing to the plan, nor an employee organization any of whose members are covered by the plan, has the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of such "qualified real estate manager."
  2. (a) The plan shall maintain for the duration of any loan made pursuant to this exemption records necessary to enable the persons described in paragraph (b) of this subsection to determine whether the conditions of this exemption have been met, except that,
    - i. A prohibited transaction will not be deemed to have occurred, if due to circumstances beyond the control of the fiduciaries of the plan, records are lost or destroyed prior to the termination of the loan and,
    - ii. No party in interest shall be subject to the civil penalty which may be assessed under section 502\(j\) of ERISA, or to the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code, if the records are not maintained or are not available for examination as required by sub-paragraph (b) below.
  - b. Notwithstanding any provisions of subsection (a)(2) and (b) of section 504 of the Act, the records referred to in sub-paragraph (a) of this paragraph must be unconditionally available at their customary location for examination during normal business hours by: any trustee, investment manager, participant or beneficiary of the plan, or any duly authorized employee or representative of such person or of the Department or the Internal Revenue Service.

III. Definitions.

For purposes of this exemption:

- A. References to persons described in this exemption includes their affiliates. An affiliate is defined as:
  1. Any person directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such person;
  2. Any officer, director, partner, employee or relative (as defined in section 3\(15\) of the Act) of such person; and
  3. Any corporation or partnership of which such person is an officer, director or partner.
- B. An established mortgage lender means an organized business enterprise which has as one of its principal purposes in the normal course of business the origination of loans secured by real estate mortgages or deeds of trust and which has satisfied the qualification requirements of one of the following categories:
  1. Approval by the Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development for participation in any mortgage insurance program under the National Housing Act;
  2. Approval by the Federal National Mortgage Association or the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation as a qualified Seller/Service; or
  3. A State agency or independent State authority empowered by State law to raise capital to provide financing for residential dwelling units.
- C. A qualified real estate manager means a fiduciary as defined in section 3\(21\) of the Act who:
  1. Is a financial institution or business organization, which in the normal course of business advises institutional investors regarding investments similar to those in which the plan desires to engage and which are described in Part I of this exemption; and
  2. Acknowledges in writing to the plan that it will make decisions regarding plan investments in mortgage loans or participation interests therein in its capacity as a fiduciary of such plan.
- D. A recognized mortgage loan is any mortgage loan on a "residential dwelling unit" which, at the time of its origination, was eligible, through an established program, for purchase by the Federal National Mortgage Association, the Government National Mortgage Association or the Federal Home Loan Mortgage

Corporation;

E. A "residential dwelling unit" or "unit" means:

1. Owner occupied non-farm property comprising one to four dwelling units, including detached houses, townhouses, manufactured housing, condominiums, units in a housing cooperative, or a unit in a multi unit subdivision (planned unit development) restricted by recorded documents which limit the use of the unit to residential purposes and provide for maintenance of common facilities; or
2. Certain non-owner occupied units where such unit complies with the uniform underwriting standards required for investor loans to qualify as a "recognized mortgage loan" under this exemption.

Signed at Washington, D.C. this 13th day of May 1982.

Qualified Professional Asset Managers (QPAMs)

March 13, 1984 (49 FR 9494)

[Amended on October 10, 1985 (50 FR 41430)]

Summary

Permits various parties who are related to employee benefit plans to engage in transactions involving plan assets if, among other conditions, the assets are managed by "qualified professional asset managers" (QPAMs), who are independent of the parties in interest and meet specified financial standards.

Additional exemptive relief is provided for: (1) employers to furnish limited amounts of goods and services in the ordinary course of business, and (2) leases of office or commercial space between managed funds and QPAMs or contributing employers.

Includes 1985 Amendment which clarified the term "Affiliate".

Class Exemption 84-14

for Plan Asset Transactions Determined by Independent Qualified Professional Asset Managers

Agency: Department of Labor

Action: Grant of Class Exemption.

Summary: This document contains a final exemption from certain prohibited transactions restrictions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) and from certain taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code of 1954 (the Code). The exemption permits various parties who are related to employee benefit plans to engage in transactions involving plan assets if, among other conditions, the assets are managed by persons, defined for purposes of this exemption as "qualified professional asset managers" (QPAMs), which are independent of the parties in interest and which meet specified financial standards. Additional exemptive relief is provided for employers to furnish limited amounts of goods and services in the ordinary course of business. Limited relief is also provided for leases of office or commercial space between managed funds and QPAMs or contributing employers. The exemption will affect participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans, the sponsoring employers of such plans, QPAMs and other persons engaging in the described transactions.

Effective Date: December 21, 1982.

The Explanatory Preamble for the original PTE 84-14, together with the full Amended Exemption, are available in the PREAMBLE document. The Preamble for the Amendment appears in the PREAMBLE documents, immediately following the Amended Exemption.

Amended Exemption

Part I. General Exemption. Effective December 21, 1982, the restrictions of ERISA section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) and the taxes imposed by Code section 4975\(a\) and \(b\), by reason of Code section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\), shall not apply to a transaction between a party in interest with respect to an employee benefit plan and an investment fund (as defined in section V(b)) in which the plan has an interest, and which is managed by a qualified professional asset manager (QPAM) (as defined in section V(a)), if the following conditions are satisfied:

- a. At the time of the transaction (as defined in section V(i)) the party in interest, or its affiliate (as defined in section V(c)), does not have, and during the immediately preceding one year has not exercised, the authority to -
  1. Appoint or terminate the QPAM as a manager of any of the plan's assets or
  2. Negotiate the terms of the management agreement with the QPAM (including renewals or modifications thereof) on behalf of the plan;
- b. The transaction is not described in -
  1. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 81-6 (46 FR 7527; January 23, 1981) (relating to securities lending arrangements),
  2. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 83-1 (28 FR 895; January 7, 1983) (relating to acquisitions by plans of interests in mortgage pools), or
  3. Prohibited Transaction Exemption 82-87 (47 FR 21331; May 18, 1982) (relating to certain mortgage financing arrangements);
- c. The terms of the transaction are negotiated on behalf of the investment fund by, or under the authority and general direction of, the QPAM, and either the QPAM, or (so long as the QPAM retains full fiduciary responsibility with respect to the transaction) a property manager acting in accordance with written guidelines established and administered by the QPAM, makes the decision on behalf of the investment fund to enter into the transaction, provided that the transaction is not part of an agreement, arrangement or understanding designed to benefit a party in interest;

- d. The party in interest dealing with the investment fund is neither the QPAM nor a person related to the QPAM (within the meaning of section V(h));
- e. The transaction is not entered into with a party in interest with respect to any plan whose assets managed by the QPAM, when combined with the assets of other plans established or maintained by the same employer (or affiliate thereof described in section V(c)(1) of this exemption) or by the same employee organization, and managed by the QPAM, represent more than 20 percent of the total client assets managed by the QPAM at the time of the transaction;
- f. At the time the transaction is entered into, and at the time of any subsequent renewal or modification thereof that requires the consent of the QPAM, the terms of the transaction are at least as favorable to the investment fund as the terms generally available in arm's length transactions between unrelated parties;
- g. Neither the QPAM nor any affiliate thereof (as defined in section V(d)), nor any owner, direct or indirect, of a 5 percent or more interest in the QPAM is a person who within the 10 years immediately preceding the transaction has been either convicted or released from imprisonment, whichever is later, as a result of any felony involving abuse or misuse of such person's employee benefit plan position or employment, or position or employment with a labor organization; any felony arising out of the conduct of the business of a broker, dealer, investment adviser, bank, insurance company or fiduciary; income tax evasion; any felony involving the larceny, theft, robbery, extortion, forgery, counterfeiting, fraudulent concealment, embezzlement, fraudulent conversion, or misappropriation of funds or securities; conspiracy or attempt to commit any such crimes or a crime in which any of the foregoing crimes is an element; or any other crime described in section 411 of ERISA. For purposes of this section (g), a person shall be deemed to have been "convicted" from the date of the judgment of the trial court, regardless of whether that judgment remains under appeal.

Part II. Specific Exemptions for Employers. Effective December 21, 1982, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(1\) and 407\(a\) of ERISA and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code, by reason of Code section 4975\(e\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(E\), shall not apply to:

- a. The sale, leasing, or servicing of goods (as defined in section V(j)), or to the furnishing of services, to an investment fund managed by a QPAM by a party in interest with respect to a plan having an interest in the fund, if -
  - 1. The party in interest is an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan or is a person who is a party in interest by virtue of a relationship to such an employer described in section V(c),
  - 2. The transaction is necessary for the administration or management of the investment fund,
  - 3. The transaction takes place in the ordinary course of a business engaged in by the party in interest with the general public,
  - 4. Effective for taxable years of the party in interest furnishing goods and services after the date this exemption is granted, the amount attributable in any taxable year of the party in interest to transactions engaged in with an investment fund pursuant to section II(a) of this exemption does not exceed one (1) percent of the gross receipts derived from all sources for the prior taxable year of the party in interest, and
  - 5. The requirements of sections I(c) through (g) are satisfied with respect to the transaction;
- b. The leasing of office or commercial space by an investment fund managed by a QPAM to a party in interest with respect to a plan having an interest in the investment fund, if -
  - 1. The party in interest is an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan or is a person who is a party in interest by virtue of a relationship to such an employer described in section V(c),
  - 2. No commission or other fee is paid by the investment fund to the QPAM or to the employer, or to an affiliate of the QPAM or employer (as defined in section V(c)), in connection with the transaction,
  - 3. Any unit of space leased to the party in interest by the investment fund is suitable (or adaptable without excessive cost) for use by different tenants,
  - 4. The amount of space covered by the lease does not exceed fifteen (15) percent of the rentable space of the office building, integrated office park, or of the commercial center (if the lease does not pertain to office space),
  - 5. In the case of a plan that is not an eligible individual account plan (as defined in section 407\(d\)\(3\) of ERISA), immediately after the transaction is entered into, the aggregate fair market value of employer real property and employer securities held by investment funds of the QPAM in which the plan has an interest does not exceed 10 percent of the fair market value of the assets of the plan held in those investment funds. In determining the aggregate fair market value of employer real property and employer securities as described herein, a plan shall be considered to own the same proportionate undivided interest in each asset of the investment fund or funds as its proportionate interest in the total assets of the investment fund(s). For purposes of this requirement, the term "employer real property" means real property leased to, and the term "employer securities" means securities issued by, an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan or a party in interest of the plan by reason of a relationship to the employer described in subparagraphs \(E\) or \(G\) of ERISA section 3\(14\), and
  - 6. The requirements of sections I(c) through (g) are satisfied with respect to the transaction.

Part III. Specific Lease Exemption for QPAMs. Effective December 21, 1982, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of ERISA and the taxes imposed by Code section 4975\(a\) and \(b\), by reason of Code section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(E\), shall not apply to the leasing of office or commercial space by an investment fund managed by a QPAM to the QPAM, a person who is a party in interest of a plan by virtue of a relationship to such QPAM described in subparagraphs \(G\), \(H\), or \(I\) of ERISA section 3\(14\) or a person not eligible for the General Exemption of Part I by reason of section I(a), if -

- a. The amount of space covered by the lease does not exceed the greater of 7500 square feet or one (1) percent of the rentable space of the office building, integrated office park or of the commercial center in which the investment fund has the investment,
- b. The unit of space subject to the lease is suitable (or adaptable without excessive cost) for use by different tenants,
- c. At the time the transaction is entered into, and at the time of any subsequent renewal or modification thereof that requires the consent of the QPAM, the terms of the transaction are not more favorable to the lessee than the terms generally available in arm's length transactions between unrelated parties, and
- d. No commission or other fee is paid by the investment fund to the QPAM, any person possessing the disqualifying, powers described in section I(a), or any affiliate of such persons (as defined in section V(c)), in connection with the transaction.

Part IV. Transactions Involving Places of Public Accommodation. Effective December 21, 1982, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(2\) of ERISA and the taxes imposed by Code section 4975\(a\) and \(b\), by reason of Code section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(E\), shall not apply to the furnishing of services and facilities (and goods incidental thereto) by a place of public accommodation owned by an investment fund managed by a QPAM to a party in interest with respect to a plan having an interest in the investment fund, if the services and facilities (and incidental goods) are furnished on a comparable basis to the general public.

Part V. Definitions and General Rules. For the purposes of this exemption:

a. The term "qualified professional asset manager" or "QPAM" means -

1. A bank, as described in section 202(a)(2) of the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 that has the power to manage, acquire or dispose of assets of a plan, which bank has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, equity capital (as defined in section V(k)) in excess of $1,000,000, or
2. A savings and loan association, the accounts of which are insured by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, that has made application for and been granted trust powers to manage, acquire or dispose of assets of a plan by a State or Federal authority having supervision over savings and loan associations, which savings and loan association has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, equity capital (as defined in section V(k)) or net worth (as defined in section V(l)) in excess of $1,000,000, or
3. An insurance company which is qualified under the laws of more than one State to manage, acquire, or dispose of any assets of a plan, which company has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, net worth (as defined in section V(l)) in excess of $1,000,000 and which is subject to supervision and examination by a State authority having supervision over insurance companies, or
4. An investment adviser registered under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940 that has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, total client assets under its management and control in excess of $50,000,000, and either (A) shareholders' or partners' equity (as defined in section V(m)) in excess of $750,000, or (B) payment of all of its liabilities including any liabilities that may arise by reason of a breach or violation of a duty described in sections 404 or 406 of ERISA is unconditionally guaranteed by -
  - i. A person with a relationship to such investment adviser described in section V(c)(l) if the investment adviser and such affiliate have, as of the last day of their most recent fiscal year, shareholders' or partners' equity, in the aggregate, in excess of $750,000, or
  - ii. A person described in (a)(1), (a)(2) or (a)(3) of section V above, or
  - iii. A broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 that has, as of the last day of its most recent fiscal year, net worth in excess of $750,000;

Provided that such bank, savings and loan association, insurance company or investment adviser has acknowledged in a written management agreement that it is a fiduciary with respect to each plan that has retained the QPAM.

b. An "investment fund" includes single customer and pooled separate accounts maintained by an insurance company, individual trusts and common, collective or group trusts maintained by a bank, and any other account or fund to the extent that the disposition of its assets (whether or not in the custody of the QPAM) is subject to the discretionary authority of the QPAM.

c. For purposes of section I(a) and Part II, and "affiliate" of a person means -

1. Any person directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the person,
2. Any corporation, partnership, trust or unincorporated enterprise of which such person is an officer, director, 5 percent or more partner, or employee (but only if the employer of such employee is the plan sponsor), and
3. Any director of the person or any employee of the person who is a highly compensated employee, as defined in section 4975\(e\)\(2\)\(H\) of the Code, or who has direct or indirect authority, responsibility or control regarding the custody, management or disposition of plan assets. A named fiduciary (within the meaning of section 402\(a\)\(2\) of ERISA) of a plan and an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan will also be considered affiliates with respect to each other for purposes of section I(a) if such employer or an affiliate of such employer has the authority, alone or shared with others, to appoint or terminate the named fiduciary or otherwise negotiate the terms of the named fiduciary's employment agreement.

d. For purposes of section I(g) an "affiliate" of a person means -

1. Any person directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the person,
2. Any director of, relative of, or partner in, any such person,
3. Any corporation, partnership, trust or unincorporated enterprise of which such person is an officer, director, or a 5 percent or more partner or owner, and
4. Any employee or officer of the person who -
  - A. Is a highly compensated employee (as defined in section 4975\(e\)\(2\)\(H\) of the Code) or officer (earning 10 percent or more of the yearly wages of such person), or
  - B. Has direct or indirect authority, responsibility or control regarding the custody, management or disposition of plan assets.

e. The term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

f. The term "party in interest" means a person described in ERISA section 3\(14\) and includes a "disqualified person," as defined in Code section 4975\(e\)\(2\).

g. The term "relative" means a relative as that term is defined in ERISA section 3\(15\), or a brother, a sister, or a spouse of a brother or sister.

h. A QPAM is "related" to a party in interest for purposes of section I(d) of this exemption if the party in interest (or a person controlling, or controlled by, the party in interest) owns a five percent or more interest in the QPAM or if the QPAM (or a person controlling, or controlled by, the QPAM) owns a five percent or more interest in the party in interest. For purposes of this definition:

1. The term "interest" means with respect to ownership of an entity -
  - A. The combined voting power of all classes of stock entitled to vote or the total value of the shares of all classes of stock of the entity if the entity is a corporation,
  - B. The capital interest or the profits interest of the entity if the entity is a partnership, or
  - C. The beneficial interest of the entity if the entity is a trust or unincorporated enterprise; and

2. A person is considered to own an interest held in any capacity if the person has or shares the authority -

- A. To exercise any voting rights or to direct some other person to exercise the voting rights relating to such interest, or
- B. To dispose or to direct the disposition of such interest.

- i. The time as of which any transaction occurs is the date upon which the transaction is entered into. In addition, in the case of a transaction that is continuing, the transaction shall be deemed to occur until it is terminated. If any transaction is entered into on or after December 21, 1982, or a renewal that requires the consent of the QPAM occurs on or after December 21, 1982 and the requirements of this exemption are satisfied at the time the transaction is entered into or renewed, respectively, the requirements will continue to be satisfied thereafter with respect to the transaction. Notwithstanding the foregoing, this exemption shall cease to apply to a transaction exempt by virtue of Part I or Part II at such time as the percentage requirement contained in section I(e) is exceeded, unless no portion of such excess results from an increase in the assets transferred for discretionary management to a QPAM. For this purpose, assets transferred do not include the reinvestment of earnings attributable to those plan assets already under the discretionary management of the QPAM. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as exempting a transaction entered into by an investment fund which becomes a transaction described in section 406 of ERISA or section 4975 of the Code while the transaction is continuing, unless the conditions of this exemption were met either at the time the transaction was entered into or at the time the transaction would have become prohibited but for this exemption.
- j. The term "goods" includes all things which are movable or which are fixtures used by an investment fund but does not include securities, commodities, commodities futures, money, documents, instruments, accounts, chattel paper, contract rights and any other property, tangible or intangible, which, under the relevant facts and circumstances, is held primarily for investment.
- k. For purposes of section V(a)(1) and (2), the term "equity capital" means stock (common and preferred), surplus, undivided profits, contingency reserves and other capital reserves.
- l. For purposes of section V(a)(3), the term "net worth" means capital, paid-in and contributed surplus, unassigned surplus, contingency reserves, group contingency reserves, and special reserves.
- m. For purposes of section V(a)(4), the term "shareholders' or partners' equity" means the equity shown in the most recent balance sheet prepared within the two years immediately preceding a transaction undertaken pursuant to this exemption, in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

Class Exemption Covering Securities Transactions with Brokers

Explanatory Preamble to PTE 86-128 (Excerpt)

Agency: Department of Labor.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This document contains an exemption which allows persons who serve as fiduciaries for employee benefit plans to effect or execute securities transactions under certain circumstances. The exemption also allows sponsors of pooled separate accounts and other pooled investment funds to use their affiliates to effect or execute securities transactions for such accounts when certain conditions are met. The exemption will replace Prohibited Transaction Exemption 79-1 and Prohibited Transaction Exemption 84-46. It affects participants and beneficiaries of, and fiduciaries with respect to, employee benefit plans which invest in securities, and other persons who engage in the described transactions.

Effective Date: The later of December 18, 1986, or the date on which the Office of Management and Budget approves the information collection requests contained in this exemption under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980.

Exemption

In accordance with section 408\(a\) of the Act and section 4975\(c\)\(2\) of the Code, and based upon the entire record including the written comments submitted in response to the notice of January 24, 1985, the Department makes the following determinations:

- a. The class exemption set forth herein is administratively feasible;
- b. It is in the interests of plans and of their participants and beneficiaries; and
- c. It is protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of plans.

Accordingly, the following exemption is hereby granted under the authority of section 408\(a\) of the Act and section 4975\(c\)\(2\) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in ERISA Procedure 75-1.

Section I

Definitions and Special Rules

The following definitions and special rules apply to this exemption:

- a. The term "person" includes the person and affiliates of the person.
- b. An "affiliate" of a person includes the following:
  1. Any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with, the person
  2. Any officer, director, partner, employee, relative (as defined in section 3\(15\) of ERISA), brother, sister, or spouse of a brother or sister, of the person;
  3. Any corporation or partnership of which the person is an officer, director or partner.

A person is not an affiliate of another person solely because one of them has investment discretion over the other's assets. The term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

- c. An "agency cross transaction" is a securities transaction in which the same person acts as agent for both any seller and any buyer for the purchase or sale of a security.
- d. The term "covered transaction" means an action described in section II(a), (b) or (c) of this exemption.
- e. The term "effecting or executing a securities transaction" means the execution of a securities transaction as agent for another person and/or the performance of clearance, settlement, custodial or other functions ancillary thereto.
- f. A plan fiduciary is independent of a person only if the fiduciary has no relationship to or interest in such person that might affect the exercise of such fiduciary's best judgment as a fiduciary.
- g. The term "profit" includes all charges relating to effecting or executing securities transactions, less reasonable and necessary expenses including reasonable indirect expenses (such as overhead costs) properly allocated to the performance of these transactions under generally accepted accounting principles.
- h. The term "securities transaction" means the purchase or sale of securities.
- i. The term "nondiscretionary trustee" of a plan means a trustee or custodian whose powers and duties with respect to any assets of the plan are limited to -
  1. The provision of nondiscretionary trust services to the plan, and
  2. Duties imposed on the trustee by any provision or provisions of the Act or the Code.

The term "nondiscretionary trust services" means custodial services and services ancillary to custodial services, none of which services are discretionary. For purposes of this exemption, a person does not fail to be a nondiscretionary trustee solely by reason of having been delegated, by the sponsor of a master or prototype plan, the power to amend such plan.

Section II

Covered transactions

Effective the later of December 18, 1986, or the date on which the Office of Management and Budget approves the information collection requests contained in this exemption under the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1980, if each condition of section III of this exemption is either satisfied or not applicable under section IV, the restrictions of section 406\(b\) of ERISA and the taxes imposed by sections 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(E\) or \(F\) of the Code shall not apply to

- a. A plan fiduciary's using its authority to cause a plan to pay a fee for effecting or executing securities transactions to that person as agent for the plan, but only to the extent that such transactions are not excessive, under the circumstances, in either amount or frequency;
- b. A plan fiduciary's acting as the agent in an agency cross transaction for both the plan and one or more other parties to the transaction; or
- c. The receipt by a plan fiduciary of reasonable compensation for effecting or executing an agency cross transaction to which a plan is a party from one or more other parties to the transaction.

Section III

Conditions

Except to the extent otherwise provided in section IV of this exemption, section II of this exemption applies only if the following conditions are satisfied:

- a. The person engaging in the covered transaction is not a trustee (other than a nondiscretionary trustee) or an administrator of the plan, or an employer any of whose employees are covered by the plan.
- b. The covered transaction is performed under a written authorization executed in advance by a fiduciary of each plan whose assets are involved in the transaction, which plan fiduciary is independent of the person engaging in the covered transaction.
- c. The authorization referred to in paragraph (b) of this section is terminable at will by the plan, without penalty to the plan, upon receipt by the authorized person of written notice of termination. A form expressly providing an election to terminate the authorization described in paragraph (b) of this section with instructions on the use of the form must be supplied to the authorizing fiduciary no less than annually. The instructions for such form must include the following information:
  1. The authorization is terminable at will by the plan, without penalty to the plan, upon receipt by the authorized person of written notice from the authorizing fiduciary or other plan official having authority to terminate the authorization; and
  2. Failure to return the form will result in the continued authorization of the authorized person to engage in the covered transactions on behalf of the plan.
- d. Within three months before an authorization is made, the authorizing fiduciary is furnished with any reasonably available information that the person seeking authorization reasonably believes to be necessary for the authorizing fiduciary to determine whether the authorization should be made, including (but not limited to) a copy of this exemption, the form for termination of authorization described in section III(c), a description of the person's brokerage placement practices, and any other reasonably available information regarding the matter that the authorizing fiduciary requests.
- e. The person engaging in a covered transaction furnishes the authorizing fiduciary with either:
  1. A confirmation slip for each securities transaction underlying a covered transaction within ten business days of the securities transaction containing the information described in Rule 10b-10(a)(1-7) under Securities Exchange Act of 1934, 17 C.F.R. 240.10b-10; or
  2. At least once every three months and not later than 45 days following the period to which it relates, a report disclosing:

- A. A compilation of the information that would be provided to the plan pursuant to subparagraph (e)(1) of this section during the three-month period covered by the report;
- B. The total of all securities transaction-related charges incurred by the plan during such period in connection with such covered transactions; and
- C. The amount of the securities transaction-related charges retained by such person and the amount of such charges paid to other persons for execution or other services.

For purposes of this paragraph (e), the words "incurred by the plan" shall be construed to mean "incurred by the pooled fund" when such person engages in covered transactions on behalf of a pooled fund in which the plan participates.

- f. The authorizing fiduciary is furnished with a summary of the information required under paragraph (e)(1) of this section at least once per year. The summary must be furnished within 45 days after the end of the period to which it relates, and must contain the following:
  - 1. The total of all securities transaction-related charges incurred by the plan during the period in connection with covered securities transactions.
  - 2. The amount of the securities transaction-related charges retained by the authorized person and the amount of these charges paid to other persons for execution or other services.
  - 3. A description of the person's brokerage placement practices, if such practices have materially changed during the period covered by the summary.
  - 4. (i) A portfolio turnover ratio, calculated in a manner which is reasonably designed to provide the authorizing fiduciary with the information needed to assist in discharging its duty of prudence. The requirements of this paragraph (f)(4)(i) will be met if the "annualized portfolio turnover ratio", calculated in the manner described in paragraph (f)(4)(ii), is contained in the summary.

- i. The "annualized portfolio turnover ratio" shall be calculated as a percentage of the plan assets consisting of securities or cash over which the authorized person had discretionary investment authority, or with respect to which such person rendered, or had any responsibility to render, investment advice (the "portfolio") at any time or times ("management period(s)") during the period covered by the report. First, the "portfolio turnover ratio" (not annualized) is obtained by dividing (A) the lesser of the aggregate dollar amounts of purchases or sales of portfolio securities during the management period(s) by (B) the monthly average of the market value of the portfolio securities during all management period(s). Such monthly average is calculated by totaling the market values of the portfolio securities as of the beginning and end of each management period and as of the end of each month that ends within such period(s), and dividing the sum by the number of valuation dates so used. For purposes of this calculation, all debt securities whose maturities at the time of acquisition were one year or less are excluded from both the numerator and the denominator.

The "annualized portfolio turnover ratio" is then derived by multiplying the "portfolio turnover ratio" by an annualizing factor. The annualizing factor is obtained by dividing (C) the number twelve by (D) the aggregate duration of the management period(s) expressed in months (and fractions thereof).

Examples of the use of this formula are provided in section V of this exemption.

- ii. The information described in this paragraph (f)(4) is not required to be furnished in any case where the authorized person has not exercised discretionary authority over trading in the plan's account during the period covered by the report.

For purposes of this paragraph (f), the words "incurred by the plan" shall be construed to mean "incurred by the pooled fund" when such person engages in covered transactions on behalf of a pooled fund in which the plan participates.

- g. If an agency cross transaction to which section IV(b) does not apply is involved, the following conditions must also be satisfied:

- 1. The information required under section III(d) or IV(d)(1)(B) of this exemption includes a statement to the effect that with respect to agency cross transactions the person effecting or executing the transactions will have a potentially conflicting division of loyalties and responsibilities regarding the parties to the transactions;
- 2. The summary required under section III(f) of this exemption includes a statement identifying the total number of agency cross transactions during the period covered by the summary and the total amount of all commissions or other remuneration received or to be received from all sources by the person engaging in the transactions in connection with those transactions during the period;
- 3. The person effecting or executing the agency cross transaction has the discretionary authority to act on behalf of, and/or provide investment advice to, either (A) one or more sellers or (B) one or more buyers with respect to the transaction, but not both.
- 4. The agency cross transaction is a purchase or sale, for no consideration other than cash payment against prompt delivery of a security for which market quotations are readily available; and
- 5. The agency cross transaction is executed or effected at a price that is at or between the independent bid and independent ask prices for the security prevailing at the time of the transaction.

Section IV

Exceptions from conditions

- a. Certain plans not covering employees. Section III of this exemption does not apply to covered transactions to the extent they are engaged in on behalf of individual retirement accounts meeting the conditions of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-2(d), or plans, other than training programs, that cover no employees within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-3.
- b. Certain agency cross transactions. Section III of this exemption does not apply in the case of an agency cross transaction, provided that the person effecting or executing the transaction
  - 1. Does not render investment advice to any plan for a fee within the meaning of section 3\(21\)\(A\)\(ii\) of ERISA with respect to the transaction;
  - 2. Is not otherwise a fiduciary who has investment discretion with respect to any plan assets involved in the transaction, see 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(d); and

3. Does not have the authority to engage, retain or discharge any person who is or is proposed to be a fiduciary regarding any such plan assets.
- c. Recapture of profits. Section III(a) of this exemption does not apply in any case where the person engaging in a covered transaction returns or credits to the plan all profits earned by that person in connection with the securities transactions associated with the covered transaction.
- d. Special rules for pooled funds. In the case of a person engaging in a covered transaction on behalf of an account or fund for the collective investment of the assets of more than one plan (pooled fund):
1. Sections III(b), (c) and (d) of this exemption do not apply if -
    - A. The arrangement under which the covered transaction is performed is subject to the prior and continuing authorization, in the manner described in this paragraph (d)(1), of a plan fiduciary with respect to each plan whose assets are invested in the pooled fund who is independent of the person. The requirement that the authorizing fiduciary be independent of the person shall not apply in the case of a plan covering only employees of the person, if the requirements of section IV(d)(2)(A) and (B) are met.
    - B. The authorizing fiduciary is furnished with any reasonably available information that the person engaging or proposing to engage in the covered transactions reasonably believes to be necessary to determine whether the authorization should be given or continued, not less than 30 days prior to implementation of the arrangement or material change thereto, including (but not limited to) a description of the person's brokerage placement practices, and, where requested, any reasonably available information regarding the matter upon the reasonable request of the authorizing fiduciary at any time.
    - C. In the event an authorizing fiduciary submits a notice in writing to the person engaging in or proposing to engage in the covered transaction objecting to the implementation of, material change in, or continuation of, the arrangement, the plan on whose behalf the objection was tendered is given the opportunity to terminate its investment in the pooled fund, without penalty to the plan, within such time as may be necessary to effect the withdrawal in an orderly manner that is equitable to all withdrawing plans and to the nonwithdrawing plans. In the case of a plan that elects to withdraw under this subparagraph (d)(1)(C), the withdrawal shall be effected prior to the implementation of, or material change in, the arrangement; but an existing arrangement need not be discontinued by reason of a plan electing to withdraw.
    - D. In the case of a plan whose assets are proposed to be invested in the pooled fund subsequent to the implementation of the arrangement and that has not authorized the arrangement in the manner described in subparagraphs (d)(1)(B) and (C) of this section, the plan's investment in the pooled fund is subject to the prior written authorization of an authorizing fiduciary who satisfies the requirements of subparagraph (d)(1)(A).
  2. Section III(a) of this exemption, to the extent that it prohibits the person from being the employer of employees covered by a plan investing in a pool managed by the person does not apply if -
    - A. The person is an "investment manager" as defined in section 3\(38\) of ERISA, and
    - B. Either (i) the person returns or credits to the pooled fund all profits earned by the person in connection with all covered transactions engaged in by the person on behalf of the fund, or (ii) the pooled fund satisfies the requirements of paragraph IV(d)(3).
  3. A pooled fund satisfies the requirements of this paragraph for a fiscal year of the fund if -
    - A. On the first day of such fiscal year, and immediately following each acquisition of an interest in the pooled fund during the fiscal year by any plan covering employees of the person, the aggregate fair market value of the interests in such fund of all plans covering employees of the person does not exceed twenty percent of the fair market value of the total assets of the fund; and
    - B. The aggregate brokerage commissions received by the person, in connection with covered transactions engaged in by the person on behalf of all pooled funds in which a plan covering employees of the person participates, do not exceed five percent of the total brokerage commissions received by the person from all sources in such fiscal year.

For the sake of convenience, the entire text of PTE 80-51, as amended, has been reprinted with this notice. The Department has redesignated the exemption as PTE 91-38.

Section I

Exemption for Certain Transactions Involving Bank Collective Investment Funds

- a. Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(2\) and 407\(a\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(B\), \(C\) or \(D\) of the Code, shall not apply to the transactions described below if the applicable conditions set forth in section III are met.
1. Transactions between parties in interest and bank collective investment funds: General. Any transaction between a party in interest with respect to a plan and a collective investment fund that is maintained by a bank and in which the plan has an interest, or any acquisition or holding by the collective investment fund of employer securities or employer real property, if the party in interest is not the bank that maintains the collective investment fund, any other collective fund maintained by the bank or any affiliate of the bank, and if, at the time of the transaction, acquisition or holding, either -
    - A. The interest of the plan together with the interests of any other plans maintained by the same employer or employee organization in the collective investment fund does not exceed -
      - i. 10 percent of the total of all interests in the collective investment fund, if the transaction occurs prior to October 23, 1980; or
      - ii. 5 percent of the total of all assets in the collective investment fund, if the transaction occurs on or after October 23, 1980, and on or before June 30, 1990; or
      - iii. 10 percent of the total of all assets in the collective investment fund, if the transaction occurs on or after July 1, 1990; or
    - B. The collective investment fund is a specialized fund that has a policy of investing, and invests, substantially all of its assets in short-term obligations (having a stated maturity date of one year or less or having a maturity date of one year or less from the date of acquisition by such specialized fund), including but not necessarily limited to --
      - i. Corporate or governmental obligations or related repurchase agreements;
      - ii. Certificates of deposit;
      - iii. Bankers' acceptances; or
      - iv. Variable amount notes of borrowers of prime credit.
  2. Special transactions not meeting the criteria of section I(a)(1)(A) between employers of employees covered by a multiple employer plan and collective investment funds. Any transaction between an employer (or an affiliate of an employer) of employees covered by a multiple employer plan and a collective investment fund maintained by a bank in which the plan has an interest, or any acquisition or holding by the collective investment fund of employer securities or employer real property, if at the time of the transaction, acquisition or holding --
    - A. In the case of a transaction occurring prior to October 23, 1980, the employer is not a "substantial employer" with respect to the plan (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(2) of the Act); or
    - B. In the case of a transaction occurring on or after October 23, 1980:
      - i. The interest of the multiple employer plan in the collective investment fund does not exceed 10 percent of the total assets in the collective investment fund, and the employer is not a "substantial employer" with respect to the plan (within the meaning of section 4001(a)(2) of the Act); or
      - ii. The interest of the multiple employer plan in the collective investment fund exceeds 10 percent of the total assets in the collective investment fund, but the employer is not a "substantial employer" with respect to the plan and would not be a "substantial employer" within the meaning of section 4001(a)(2) of the Act if "5 percent" were substituted for "10 percent" in that definition.
  3. Acquisition, sale or holding of employer securities and employer real property.
    - A. Except as provided in subsection (B) of this section (3), any acquisition, sale or holding of employer securities and any acquisition, sale or holding of employer real property by a collective investment fund in which a plan has an interest and which does not meet the requirements of paragraphs (a)(1) and (a)(2) of this section, if no commission is paid to the bank or to the employer or any affiliate of the bank or the employer in connection with the acquisition or sale of employer securities or the acquisition, sale or lease of employer real property; and

i. In the case of employer real property --

(aa) Each parcel of employer real property and the improvements thereon held by the collective investment fund are suitable (or adaptable without excessive cost) for use by different tenants, and

(bb) The property of the collective investment fund that is leased or held for lease to others, in the aggregate, is dispersed geographically.

ii. In the case of employer securities --

(aa) The bank in whose collective investment fund the security is held is not an affiliate of the issuer of the security, and

(bb) If the security is an obligation of the issuer, either

1. The collective investment fund owns the obligation at the time the plan acquires an interest in the collective investment fund, and interests in the collective fund are offered and redeemed in accordance with valuation procedures of the collective investment fund applied on a uniform or consistent basis, or
2. Immediately after acquisition of the obligation: (a) Not more than 25 percent of the aggregate amount of obligations issued in the issue and outstanding at the time of acquisition is held by such plan, and (b) in the case of an obligation that is a restricted security within the meaning of rule 144 under the Securities Act of 1933, at least 50 percent of the aggregate amount of obligations issued in the issue and outstanding at the time of acquisition is held by persons independent of the issuer. The bank, its affiliates and any collective investment fund maintained by the bank shall be considered to be persons independent of the issuer if the bank is not an affiliate of the issuer.

B. In the case of a plan that is not an eligible individual account plan (as defined in section 407(d)(3) of the Act), the exemption provided in subsection (A) of this paragraph (3) shall be available only if, immediately after the acquisition of the securities or real property, the aggregate fair market value of employer securities and employer real property with respect to which the bank has investment discretion does not exceed 10 percent of the fair market value of all the assets of the plan with respect to which the bank has such investment discretion.

C. For the purposes of the exemption contained in subsection (A) of this section (3), the term "employer securities" shall include securities issued by, and the term "employer real property" shall include real property leased to, a person who is a party in interest with respect to a plan (participating in the collective investment fund) by reason of a relationship to the employer described in section 3(14) (E), (G), (H) or (I) of the Act.

b. Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\) \(A\), \(B\), \(C\) and \(D\) and section 406\(b\) \(1\) and \(2\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975 \(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\) \(A\), \(B\), \(C\), \(D\) or \(E\) of the Code, shall not apply to the transactions described below, if the conditions of section III are met.

1. Transactions with persons who are parties in interest with respect to the plan solely by virtue of being certain service providers or certain affiliates of service providers. Any transaction between a collective investment fund and a person who is a party in interest with respect to a plan that has an interest in the collective investment fund, if --

A. The person is a party in interest (including a fiduciary) solely by reason of providing services to the plan, or solely by reason of a relationship to a service provider described in section 3\(14\) \(F\), \(G\), \(H\) or \(I\) of the Act, or both and the person neither exercised nor has any discretionary authority, control, responsibility or influence with respect to the investment of plan assets in, or held by, the collective investment fund, and

B. The person is not an affiliate of the bank maintaining the collective investment fund.

2. Certain leases and goods. The furnishing of goods to a collective investment fund by a party in interest with respect to a plan participating in the collective investment fund, or the leasing of real property owned by the collective investment fund to such party in interest and the incidental furnishing of goods to such party in interest by the collective investment fund, if--

A. In the case of goods, they are furnished to or by the collective investment fund in connection with real property owned by the collective investment fund;

B. The party in interest is not the bank maintaining the collective investment fund, or any affiliate of the bank, or any other collective investment fund maintained by the bank; and

C. The amount involved in the furnishing of goods or leasing of real property in any calendar year (including the amount under any other lease or arrangement for the furnishing of goods in connection with the real property investments of the collective investment fund with the same party in interest or any affiliate thereof) does not exceed the greater of $25,000 or 0.5 percent of the fair market value of the assets of the collective investment fund on the most recent valuation date of the fund prior to the transaction.

3. Management of real property. Any services provided to a collective investment fund in which a plan has an interest by the bank maintaining that fund or by an affiliate of that bank in connection with the management of the real property owned by the collective investment fund, if the compensation paid to the bank or its affiliate does not exceed the cost of the services to the bank or its affiliate.

4. Transactions involving places of public accommodation. The furnishing of services, facilities and any goods incidental to such services and facilities by a place of public accommodation owned by a bank collective investment fund, to a party in interest with respect to a plan, which plan has an interest in the collective investment fund, if the services, facilities and incidental goods are furnished on a comparable basis to the general public.

Excess Holdings Exemption for Employee Benefit Plans

- a. Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\), 406\(b\)\(2\) and 407\(a\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(B\), \(C\) or \(D\) of the Code shall not apply to any acquisition or holding of qualifying employer securities or qualifying employer real property (other than through a collective investment fund), if -
1. The acquisition or holding contravenes the restrictions of sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(E\), 406\(a\)\(2\) and 407\(a\) of the Act solely by reason of being aggregated with employer securities or employer real property held by a collective investment fund in which the plan has an interest;
  2. The requirements of either paragraph (a)(1) or paragraph (a)(2) of section I of this exemption are met; and
  3. The applicable conditions set forth in section III of this exemption are met.

Section III

General conditions

- a. At the time the transaction is entered into, and at the time of any subsequent renewal thereof that requires the consent of the bank, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the collective investment fund than the terms generally available in arm's-length transactions between unrelated parties.
- b. The bank maintains for a period of six years from the date of the transaction, the records necessary to enable the persons described in paragraph (c) of this section to determine whether the conditions of this exemption have been met, except that -
1. a prohibited transaction will not be considered to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the bank's control, the records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of the six-year period; and
  2. no party in interest other than the bank shall be subject to the civil penalty that may be assessed under 502\(i\) of the Act, or to the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code, if the records are not maintained, or are not available for examination as required by paragraph (c) below.
- c. (1) Except as provided in subsection 2 of this paragraph and notwithstanding any provisions of subsections (a)(2) and (b) of section 504 of the Act, the records referred to in paragraph (b) of this section are unconditionally available at their customary location for examination during normal business hours by:
- A. Any duly authorized employee or representative of the Department of Labor or the Internal Revenue Service,
  - B. Any fiduciary of a plan who has authority to acquire or dispose of the interests of the plan in the collective investment fund, or any duly authorized employee or representative of such fiduciary.
  - C. Any contributing employer to any plan that has an interest in the collective investment fund or any duly authorized employee or representative of such employer.
  - D. Any participant or beneficiary of any plan that has an interest in the collective investment fund, or any duly authorized employee or representative of such participant or beneficiary.
- (2) None of the persons described in subparagraphs (B) through (D) of this paragraph shall be authorized to examine a bank's trade secrets or commercial or financial information which is privileged or confidential.

Section IV

Definitions and General Rules

For the purposes of this exemption,

- a. An "affiliate" of a person includes -
1. Any person directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the person;
  2. Any officer, director, employee, relative of, or partner in any such person; and
  3. Any corporation or partnership of which such person is an officer, director, partner or employee.
- b. The term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.
- c. The term "party in interest" includes a "disqualified person" as defined in section 4975\(e\)\(2\) of the Code.
- d. The term "relative" means a "relative" as that term is defined in section 3\(15\) of the Act (or a "member of the family" as that term is defined in section 4975\(e\)\(6\) of the Code), or a brother, a sister, or a spouse of a brother or sister.
- e. (1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph, the term "collective investment fund" means a common or collective trust fund or pooled investment fund maintained by a bank or a trust company.
- (2) In the case of a common or collective trust fund or pooled investment fund maintained by a bank or trust company that consists of separate investment accounts, each separate investment account of that fund, rather than the entire fund, shall be considered to be a separate "collective investment fund" for purposes of this exemption.
- f. The term "multiple employer plan" means an employee benefit plan that satisfies at least the requirements of section 3\(37\)\(A\)\(i\), \(ii\) and \(v\) of the Act and section 414(f)(1)(A), (B) and (E) of the Code.
- g. The term "obligation" means a bond, debenture, note, certificate, or other evidence of indebtedness.
- h. The time as of which any transaction, acquisition or holding occurs is the date upon which the transaction is entered into, the acquisition is made or the holding commences. In addition, in the case of a transaction that is continuing, the transaction shall be deemed to occur until it is terminated. If any transaction is entered into, or an acquisition is made, on or after January 1, 1975, or a renewal that requires the consent of the bank occurs on or after January 1, 1975, and the requirements of this exemption are satisfied at the time the transaction is entered into or renewed, respectively, or at the time the acquisition is made, the requirements will continue to be satisfied thereafter with respect to the transaction or acquisition and the exemption shall apply thereafter to the continued holding of the securities or property so acquired. This exemption also applies to any transaction or acquisition entered into, or holding commencing prior to January 1, 1975, if either the requirements of this exemption would have been satisfied on the date the transaction was entered into or acquisition was made (or on which the holding commenced), or the requirements would have been satisfied on January 1, 1975, if the transaction had been entered into, the acquisition was made, or the holding had commenced, on January 1, 1975. Notwithstanding the foregoing, this exemption shall cease to apply to a holding exempt by virtue of section 1(a)(1) at such time as the interest of the plan in the collective investment fund exceeds the percentage interest limitation of section 1(a)(1), unless no portion of such excess results from an increase in the assets allocated to the collective investment fund by the plan. For this purpose, assets allocated do not include the reinvestment of fund earnings. Nothing in this paragraph shall be construed as exempting a transaction entered into by a collective investment fund which becomes a transaction described in section 406 of the Act or section 4975 of the Code while the transaction is continuing, unless the conditions of the exemption were met either at the time the transaction was entered into or at the time the transaction would have become prohibited but for this exemption.

- i. Each plan participating in a collective investment fund shall be considered to own the same proportionate undivided interest in each asset of the collective investment fund as its proportionate interest in the total assets of the collective investment fund as calculated on the most recent preceding valuation date of the fund.
- j. Where any of the assets of a collective investment fund are invested in another collective investment fund, the interest of the plan in the second fund arising from its investment in the first fund shall be established by multiplying the percentage interest of the plan in the first fund by the percentage interest of the first fund in the second fund, such computation to be continued similarly in the event that further investments are made by the second investment fund in one or more other collective investment funds.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 91-55

American Eagle Gold Coins Permitted as IRA Investment

September 27, 1991 (56 FR 49209)

Summary

Permits IRA accounts to invest in American Eagle. Other gold coins and "collectibles" still prohibited as investment vehicles.

Class Exemption

Transactions Between Individual Retirement Accounts and Authorized Purchasers of American Eagle Coins

Agency: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Labor Department.

Internal Revenue Service.

Action: Grant of class exemption.

Summary: This document contains a final class exemption from certain taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code). The exemption permits purchases and sales by certain "individual retirement accounts," as defined in Code section 408 ("IRAs"), of American Eagle bullion coins ("Coins") in principal transactions from or to broker-dealers in Coins which are "authorized purchasers" of Coins in bulk quantities from the United States Mint (the "Mint") and which are also "disqualified persons," within the meaning of Code section 4975\(e\)\(2\), with respect to the IRAs. The exemption would also permit the interest-free extension of credit in connection with such purchases and sales. The exemption affects persons with an interest in the investments of IRAs, including IRA depositors and their beneficiaries, as well as persons who provide custodial services to IRAs.

Effective Date: January 1, 1987.

The Explanatory Preamble, together with the full Exemption, are available in the PREAMBLE document.

Exemption

Section I: Definitions and Special Rules

The following definitions apply to this exemption:

- a. "Authorized purchasers" are banks or other persons referenced in section 408(a)(2) or (h) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (Code) that are approved by the United States Mint (the Mint), for eligibility to purchase the American Eagle U.S. gold or silver bullion coins which are described in section 5112(a)(7), (8), (9), and (10) or section (e) of Title 31 of the United States Code (Coins), directly from the Mint in bulk quantities.
- b. The term "covered transaction" means a transaction described in section II of this exemption.
- c. "IRA" means an individual retirement account described in Code section 408 with respect to which the authorized purchaser is a disqualified person.
- d. An "affiliate" of a person includes the following:
  1. Any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with, the person;
  2. Any officer, director, partner, employee, member of the family (as defined in Code section 4975(e)(6)), brother, sister, or spouse of a brother or sister, of the person;
  3. Any corporation or partnership of which the person is an officer, director or partner.

The term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

- e. The term "execution" means the acceptance of an offer to purchase or sell a Coin in a covered transaction such that both the IRA and the authorized purchaser are legally obligated to complete the transaction as directed.
- f. The term "accredited person" means any duly authorized employee of the Department of Labor or the Internal Revenue Service or the person directing the investments of an IRA.

g. The term "independent third party" excludes the authorized purchaser and any person affiliated therewith.

Section II. Covered Transactions

Effective January 1, 1987, if each condition of section III of this exemption is satisfied, the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\), \(B\) or \(D\) of the Code shall not apply to -

- a. The purchase of Coins by an IRA from an authorized purchaser; or
- b. The sale by an IRA of Coins to be authorized purchaser;
- c. The extension of credit in connection with the settlement of transactions described in (a) or (b).

Section III. Conditions

- a. In the case of an IRA with is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), the covered transaction is the type of transaction described in section 404\(c\) of ERISA.
- b. The transaction is directed either by the individual for whose benefit the IRA is maintained or by an independent third party appointed by such individual.
- c. Neither the authorized purchaser nor any affiliate thereof has any discretionary authority or control respecting the management or disposition of the IRA assets involved in the transaction, or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 26 C.F.R. 54.4975-9(c)) respecting those assets.
- d. Each denomination of Coins offered to IRAs pursuant to this exemption is purchased and sold by the authorized purchaser in transactions with unrelated parties in the ordinary course of its business with customers other than IRAs.
- e. At the time the transaction is executed, the terms of the transaction must be not less favorable to the IRA than the terms afforded by the disqualified person or any affiliate thereof in comparable Coin transactions involving unrelated parties.
- f. Payment for, and delivery of, Coins in settlement of a covered transaction is made simultaneously and in no event more than 10 business days after execution of the transaction involved, and no interest is charged for the period of time between execution and settlement.
- g. The disqualified person provides current price quotations to the person directing the investments of the IRA immediately prior to the time a covered transaction is executed so that such person will know the exact price at which the purchase or sale will occur.
- h. A separate written confirmation statement is issued with respect to each covered transaction to the person who directs the transaction for the IRA. The confirmation shall disclose the date, quantity, and price of the Coins bought or sold as well as the fact that the disqualified person acted as a principal in the transaction. The confirmation shall be issued in no event more than 10 business days after the execution of the transaction.
- i. With regard to transactions entered into subsequent to (enter date 90 days after grant of the final exemption), prior to its engaging in covered transactions the disqualified person prepares and provides to the person directing the investments of the IRA material information regarding transactions in Coins, and furnishes supplemental information to the person directing the investments of IRAs which have invested in Coins if material changes occur. This information must include:
  1. A general description of the manner in which Coins are priced in the market.
  2. Disclosure of any fees for services or special or minimum transaction costs that will be incurred as the result of the purchase or sale of Coins by an IRA.
  3. Any minimum quantity of Coins which must be brought or sold.
  4. Disclosure of the role of the disqualified person as a principal in the transaction.
  5. An explanation that the purchase or sale of Coins between the IRA and the authorized purchaser would be prohibited in the absence of an exemption, a discussion of the arm's-length pricing standard of this exemption and disclosure that records are accessible which would enable the person directing investments of the IRA to determine whether the conditions of this exemption have been met.
- j. The disqualified person maintains or causes to be maintained for a period of at least six years from the date of settlement of a covered transaction such records as are necessary to allow accredited persons to determine whether the conditions of the exemption have been met. The records shall include daily information indicating each customer (including each IRA and each other client) with whom a transaction involving Coins was consummated, the price and number of Coins involved, and the date and the time at which the transaction was executed. The persons directing the investments of an IRA are not authorized to examine a disqualified person's trade secrets or financial information which is privileged or confidential. The records must be reasonably accessible and must be available for examination during normal business hours. Notwithstanding these recordkeeping requirements, a prohibited transaction will not be deemed to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the control of the disqualified person, such records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of the six year period.

Amendment to Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 93-33 [Formerly PTE 93-2]

Receipt of Services by Individuals for Whose Benefit IRAs or Retirement Plans for Self-Employed Individuals are Established

May 11, 1993

Recap

Permits the receipt of services from a bank at reduced or no cost by an IRA or Keogh Plan beneficiary under certain conditions.

Class Exemption

Receipt of Services by an IRA or Keogh Plan from a Bank

Agency: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor.

Action: Adoption of Amendment to PTE 93-33.

Effective Date: The amendment is effective January 1, 1998.

Exemption

Accordingly, PTE 93-33 is amended under the authority of section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR Part 2570, Subpart B (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990).

Section I: Covered Transactions

Effective January 1, 1998, the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and 406(b) of ERISA and the sanctions resulting from the application of section 4975 of the Code, including the loss of exemption of an individual retirement account (IRA) pursuant to section 408(e)(2)(A) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(D), (E) and (F) of the Code, shall not apply to the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an IRA, or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan, is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a bank pursuant to an arrangement in which the account balance in the IRA or Keogh Plan is taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive such services, provided that each condition of Section II of this exemption is satisfied.

Section II: Conditions

- (a) The IRA or Keogh Plan, the balance of which is taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive services at reduced or no cost, is established and maintained for the exclusive benefit of the participant covered under the IRA or Keogh Plan, his or her spouse or their beneficiaries.
- (b) The services must be of the type that the bank itself could offer consistent with applicable federal and state banking law.
- (c) The services are provided by the bank (or an affiliate of the bank) in the ordinary course of the bank's business to customers who qualify for reduced or no cost banking services but do not maintain IRAs or Keogh Plans with the bank.
- (d) For the purpose of determining eligibility to receive services at reduced or no cost, the account balance required by the bank for the IRA or Keogh Plan is equal to the lowest balance required for any other type of account which the bank includes to determine eligibility to receive reduced or no cost services.
- (e) The rate of return on the IRA or Keogh Plan investment is no less favorable than the rate of return on an identical investment that could have been made at the same time at the same branch of the bank by a customer of the bank who is not eligible for (or who does not receive) reduced or no cost services.

Section III: Definitions

The following definitions apply to this exemption:

- (a) The term bank means a bank described in section 408(n) of the Code.
- (b) The term IRA means an individual retirement account described in Code section 408(a) or an education individual retirement account described in section 530 of the Code. For purposes of this exemption, the term IRA shall not include an IRA which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA, except for a Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) described in section 408(k) of the Code or a Simple Retirement Account described in section 408(p) of the Code which provides participants with the unrestricted authority to transfer their balances to IRAs or Simple Retirement Accounts sponsored by different financial institutions.
- (c) The term Keogh Plan means a pension, profit sharing, or stock bonus plan qualified under Code section 401(a) and exempt from taxation under Code section 501(a) under which some or all of the participants are employees described in section 401(c) of the Code. For purposes of this exemption, the term Keogh Plan shall not include a Keogh Plan which is an employee benefit plan covered by title I of ERISA.
- (d) The term account balance means deposits as that term is defined under 29 CFR 2550.408b-4(c)(3), or investments in securities for which market quotations are readily available. For purposes of this exemption, the term account balance shall not include investments in securities offered by the bank (or its affiliate) exclusively to IRAs and Keogh Plans.
- (e) An affiliate of a bank includes any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with a bank. The term control means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.
- (f) The term members of his or her family refers to beneficiaries of the individual for whose benefit the IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained, who would be members of the family as that term is defined in Code section 4975(e)(6), or a brother, a sister, or spouse of a brother or a sister.
- (g) The term service includes incidental products of a de minimis value provided by third persons pursuant to an arrangement with the bank, which are directly related to the provision of banking services covered by the exemption.

Signed at Washington, DC this 26th day of February 1999.

Class Exemption

Agency: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Labor Department.

Action: Grant of Class Exemption.

Summary: This document contains a final exemption from certain prohibited transaction restrictions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and from certain taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code). The class exemption permits the purchase and sale of foreign currencies between an employee benefit plan and a bank or a broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof which is a party in interest with respect to such plan.

The exemption affects participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans involved in such transactions, as well as banks and broker-dealers and their affiliates which act as dealers in foreign exchange.

Effective Date: Section I(a) of PTE 94-20 is effective for transactions occurring from January 1, 1975 to June 18, 1991. Section I(b) of PTE 94-20 is effective for transactions occurring on or after June 18, 1991.

The Explanatory Preamble, together with the full Exemption, are available in the PREAMBLE document.

Exemption

Section I. Transactions

- a. For the period from January 1, 1975 to June 18, 1991, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act) and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) by reason of Code section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) shall not apply to any foreign exchange transaction between a bank or broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof and an employee benefit plan with respect to which the bank or broker-dealer or affiliate thereof is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary or other party in interest, provided that (i) the transaction is directed (within the meaning of section IV(e)) on behalf of the plan by a fiduciary which is independent of the bank, the broker-dealer, and any affiliate thereof, and (ii) the conditions set forth in section II are met.
- b. Effective June 18, 1991, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code by reason of Code section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) shall not apply to any foreign exchange transaction between a bank or broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof and an employee benefit plan with respect to which the bank or broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary, or other party in interest, provided that (i) the transaction is directed (within the meaning of section IV(e)) on behalf of the plan by a fiduciary which is independent of the bank, the broker-dealer, and any affiliate thereof, and (ii) all of the conditions set forth in sections II and III are met.

Section II. General Conditions

Section I of this exemption applies only if the following conditions of this section II are satisfied. In the case of transactions described in section I(b), all of the conditions specified in section III below must also be satisfied.

- a. At the time the transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms generally available in comparable arm's length foreign exchange transactions between unrelated parties.
- b. Neither the bank, the broker-dealer, nor any affiliate thereof has any discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan, assets involved in the transaction or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to the investments of those assets.

Section III. Specific Conditions

Section I(b) of this exemption applies only if the conditions specified in section II above and the following conditions are satisfied:

- a. At the time the transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms afforded by the bank, the broker-dealer, or any affiliate thereof in comparable arm's length foreign exchange transactions involving unrelated parties.
- b. The bank, or broker-dealer, maintains at all times written policies and procedures regarding the handling of foreign exchange transactions with plans with respect to which the bank or broker-dealer is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary or other party in interest or disqualified person which assure that the person acting for the bank or broker-dealer knows that he or she is dealing with a plan.
- c. A written confirmation statement is issued with respect to each covered transaction to the independent plan fiduciary who directs the transaction for the plan.

The confirmation shall disclose the following information:

1. Account name;
2. Transaction date;
3. Exchange rates;
4. Settlement date;
5. Currencies exchanged:
  - i. Identity of the currency sold,
  - ii. The amount sold;
  - iii. Identity of the currency purchased;
  - iv. The amount purchased.

The confirmation shall be issued in no event more than 5 business days after execution of the transaction.

- d. The bank or broker-dealer, or affiliate thereof, maintains within territories under the jurisdiction of the United States Government, for a period of six years from the date of the transaction, the records necessary to enable the persons described in paragraph (e) of this section to determine whether the applicable conditions of this exemption have been met. Notwithstanding these recordkeeping requirements, a prohibited transaction will not be considered to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the bank's or broker-dealer's control, the records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of the six-year period, and no fiduciary of a plan who is independent of the bank or broker-dealer or any affiliate thereof, which engages in a transaction covered by the exemption, shall be subject to the civil penalty that may be assessed under 502\(i\) of the Act, or to the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code solely because the records are not maintained by the bank, the broker-dealer, or its affiliate, or are not made available for examination by the bank or broker-dealer or affiliate as required by paragraph (e) below.

- e. (i) Except as provided in subparagraph (ii) of this paragraph and notwithstanding any provisions of subsection (a)(2) and (b) of section 504 of the Act, the records referred to in paragraph (d) of this Section are available at their customary location for examination, upon reasonable notice, during normal business hours by:
- A. Any duly authorized employee or representative of the Department of Labor or the Internal Revenue Service.
  - B. Any fiduciary of a plan who has authority to acquire or dispose, of the assets of the plan involved in the foreign exchange transaction or any duly authorized employee and representative of such fiduciary.
  - C. Any contributing employer to the plan involved in the foreign exchange transaction or any duly authorized employee or representative of such employer.
- (ii) None of the persons described in subparagraphs (B) and (C) shall be authorized to examine a bank's or broker-dealer's trade secrets or commercial or financial information of a bank or broker-dealer or an affiliate thereof which is privileged or confidential.

Section IV. Definitions and General Rules

For purposes of this exemption.

- a. A "foreign exchange transaction" means the exchange of the currency of one nation for the currency of another nation, or a contract for such an exchange. The term foreign exchange transaction includes options contracts on foreign exchange transactions.
- b. A "bank" means a bank which is supervised by the United States or a State thereof, or any affiliate thereof.
- c. A "broker-dealer" means a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or any affiliate thereof.
- d. An "affiliate" of a bank or broker-dealer means any entity directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such bank or broker-dealer.
- e. The term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.
- f. A foreign exchange transaction involving assets of an employee benefit plan shall be considered "directed" only where the independent plan fiduciary who has not been appointed by the bank or broker-dealer or affiliate dealer or affiliate thereof, directs such bank or broker-dealer or affiliate thereof to effect the purchase or sale of a specific amount of currency at a specific exchange rate.
- g. For purposes of this exemption, the term "employee benefit plan" refers to a pension plan described in 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-2 and/or a welfare benefit plan described in 29 C.F.R. 2510.3-1.

Collective Investment Fund Conversion Transactions

August 8, 1997 (62 FR 42830)

Recap

Permits an employee benefit plan (Plan) to purchase shares of a mutual fund, advised by a bank or investment adviser which is also a fiduciary to the Plan, in exchange for assets transferred in-kind from a collective investment fund (CIF), when the Plan's assets are completely withdrawn from the CIF.

Class Exemption

Conversion of Collective Investment Funds into a Registered Investment Company (Mutual Fund)

Agency: Department of Labor, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration

Action: Grant of Class Exemption

Effective Date: Section I of this exemption is effective for transactions occurring from October 1, 1988 until August 8, 1997. Section II of the exemption is effective for transactions occurring after August 8, 1997.

Exemption

Section I.

Retroactive Exemption for the Purchase of Fund Shares With Assets Transferred In-Kind From a CIFF or the period from October 1, 1988 to August 8, 1997, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\) and 406 \(b\)\(1\) and \(b\)\(2\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975 of the Code, by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\) \(A\) through \(E\), shall not apply to the purchase by an employee benefit plan (the Client Plan) of shares of one or more open-end management investment companies (the Fund or Funds) registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, in exchange for assets of the Client Plan transferred in-kind to the Fund from a collective investment fund (the CIF) maintained by a bank (the Bank) or a plan adviser (the Plan Adviser), where the Bank or Plan Adviser is the investment adviser to the Fund and also a fiduciary of the Client Plan. The transfer and purchase must be in connection with a complete withdrawal of the Client Plan's assets from the CIF, and the following conditions must be met:

- (a) No sales commissions or other fees are paid by the Client Plan in connection with the purchase of Fund shares.

- (b) All transferred assets are securities for which market quotations are readily available, or cash.
- (c) The transferred assets constitute the Client Plan's pro rata portion of all assets that were held by the CIF immediately prior to the transfer.
- (d) The Client Plan receives Fund shares that have a total net asset value equal to the value of the Client Plan's transferred assets on the date of the transfer, as determined with respect to securities, in a single valuation for each asset, with all valuations performed in the same manner, at the close of the same business day, in accordance with Securities and Exchange Commission Rule 17a-7 (using sources independent of the Bank or Plan Adviser and the Fund) and the procedures established by the Funds pursuant to Rule 17a-7.
- (e) An independent fiduciary with respect to the Client Plan (the Independent Fiduciary) receives advance written notice of an in-kind transfer and purchase of assets and full written disclosure of information concerning the Fund which includes the following:
  - (1) A current prospectus for each Fund to which the CIF assets may be transferred;
  - (2) A statement describing the fees to be charged to, or paid by, a Client Plan and the Funds to the Bank or Plan Adviser, including the nature and extent of any differential between the rates of the fees;
  - (3) A statement of the reasons why the Bank or Plan Adviser may consider the transfer and purchase to be appropriate for the Client Plan; and
  - (4) A statement of whether there are any limitations on the Bank or Plan Adviser with respect to which plan assets may be invested in shares of the Funds, and, if so, the nature of such limitations.
- (f) On the basis of the foregoing information, the Independent Fiduciary gives prior approval, in writing, for each purchase of Fund shares in exchange for the Client Plan's assets transferred from the CIF, consistent with the responsibilities, obligations and duties imposed on fiduciaries by Part 4 of Title I of the Act.
- (g) The Bank or Plan Adviser sends by regular mail or personal delivery to the Independent Fiduciary of each Client Plan that purchases Fund shares in connection with the in-kind transfer, no later than 105 days after completion of each purchase, a written confirmation of the transaction containing--(1) The number of CIF units held by the Client Plan immediately before the in-kind transfer, the related per unit value and the total dollar amount of such CIF units; and (2) The number of shares in the Funds that are held by the Client Plan immediately following the purchase, the related per share net asset value and the total dollar amount of such shares.
- (h) As to each Client Plan, the combined total of all fees received by the Bank or Plan Adviser for the provision of services to the Client Plan, and in connection with the provision of services to a Fund in which a Client Plan holds shares purchased in connection with the in-kind transfer, is not in excess of "reasonable compensation" within the meaning of section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Act.
- (i) All dealings in connection with the in-kind transfer and purchase between the Client Plan and a Fund are on a basis no less favorable to the Client Plan than dealings between the Fund and other shareholders.

Section II.

Prospective Exemption for the Purchase of Fund Shares With Assets Transferred In-Kind From a CIF Effective after August 8, 1997, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\) and 406 \(b\)\(1\) and \(b\)\(2\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975 of the Code, by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\) \(A\) through \(E\) of the Code, shall not apply to the purchase by an employee benefit plan (the Client Plan) of shares of one or more open-end management investment companies (the Fund or Funds) registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, in exchange for assets of the Client Plan transferred in-kind to the Fund from a collective investment fund (the CIF) maintained by a bank (the Bank) or a plan adviser (the Plan Adviser), where the Bank or Plan Adviser is the investment adviser to the Fund and also a fiduciary of the Client Plan. The transfer and purchase must be in connection with a complete withdrawal of the Client Plan's assets from the CIF, and the following conditions must be met:

- (a) No sales commissions or other fees are paid by the Client Plan in connection with the purchase of Fund shares.
- (b) All transferred assets are securities for which market quotations are readily available, or cash.
- (c) The transferred assets constitute the Client Plan's pro rata portion of all assets that were held by the CIF immediately prior to the transfer. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the allocation of fixed-income securities held by a CIF among Client Plans on the basis of each Client Plan's pro rata share of the aggregate value of such securities will not fail to meet the requirements of this subsection if: (1) The aggregate value of such securities does not exceed one (1) percent of the total value of the assets held by the CIF immediately prior to the transfer; and (2) Such securities have the same coupon rate and maturity, and at the time of the transfer, the same credit ratings from nationally recognized statistical rating agencies.
- (d) The Client Plan receives Fund shares that have a total net asset value equal to the value of the Client Plan's transferred assets on the date of the transfer, as determined with respect to securities, in a single valuation for each asset, with all valuations performed in the same manner, at the close of the same business day, in accordance with Securities and Exchange Commission Rule 17a-7 (using sources independent of the Bank or Plan Adviser and the Fund) and the procedures established by the Funds pursuant to Rule 17a-7.
- (e) An independent fiduciary with respect to the Client Plan (the Independent Fiduciary) receives advance written notice of the in-kind transfer and purchase of assets and full written disclosure of information concerning the Funds which includes the following:
  - (1) A current prospectus for each Fund to which the CIF assets may be transferred;
  - (2) A statement describing the fees to be charged to, or paid by, a Client Plan and the Funds to the Bank or Plan Adviser, including the nature and extent of any differential between the rates of the fees paid by the Fund and the rates of the fees paid by the Client Plan in connection with the Client Plan's investment in the CIF;
  - (3) A statement of the reasons why the Bank or Plan Adviser may consider the transfer and purchase to be appropriate for the Client Plan;
  - (4) A statement of whether there are any limitations on the Bank or Plan Adviser with respect to which plan assets may be invested in shares of the Funds, and, if so, the nature of such limitations;
  - (5) The identity of all securities that will be valued in accordance with Rule 17a-7(b)(4) and allocated on the basis of the Client Plan's pro rata portion under section II(c); and
  - (6) The identity of any fixed-income securities that will be allocated on the basis of each Client Plan's pro rata share of the aggregate value of such securities pursuant to section II(c).

(f) On the basis of the foregoing information, the Independent Fiduciary gives prior approval, in writing, for each purchase of Fund shares in exchange for the Client Plan's assets transferred from the CIF, consistent with the responsibilities, obligations and duties imposed on fiduciaries by Part 4 of Title I of the Act. In addition, the Independent Fiduciary must give prior approval, in writing, for the receipt of confirmation statements described below in paragraph (g)(1) and (g)(2) by facsimile or electronic mail if the Independent Fiduciary elects to receive such statements in that form.

(g) The Bank or Plan Adviser sends by regular mail or personal delivery or, if applicable, by facsimile or electronic mail to the Independent Fiduciary of each Client Plan that purchases Fund shares in connection with the in-kind transfer, the following information:

1. No later than 30 days after the completion of the purchase, a written confirmation which contains--(i) The identity of each transferred security that was valued for purposes of the purchase of Fund shares in accordance with Rule 17a-7(b)(4); (ii) The current market price, as of the date of the in-kind transfer, of each such security involved in the purchase of Fund shares; and (iii) The identity of each pricing service or market-maker consulted in determining the current market price of such securities.
2. No later than 105 days after the completion of each purchase, a written confirmation which contains—
  - (i) The number of CIF units held by the Client Plan immediately before the in-kind transfer, the related per unit value and the total dollar amount of such CIF units; and (ii) The number of shares in the Funds that are held by the Client Plan immediately following the purchase, the related per share net asset value and the total dollar amount of such shares.

(h) With respect to each of the Funds in which the Client Plan continues to hold shares acquired in connection with the in-kind transfer, the Bank or Plan Adviser provides the Independent Fiduciary of the Client Plan with--(1) A copy of an updated prospectus of such Fund, at least annually; and (2) Upon request of the Independent Fiduciary, a report or statement (which may take the form of the most recent financial report, the current Statement of Additional Information, or some other written statement) containing a description of all fees paid by the Fund to the Bank or Plan Adviser.

(i) As to each Client Plan, the combined total of all fees received by the Bank or Plan Adviser for the provision of services to the Client Plan, and in connection with the provision of services to a Fund in which a Client Plan holds shares acquired in connection with the in-kind transfer, is not in excess of "reasonable compensation" within the meaning of section 408\(b\)\(2\) of the Act.

(j) All dealings in connection with the in-kind transfer and purchase between the Client Plan and a Fund are on a basis no less favorable to the Client Plan than dealings between the Fund and other shareholders.

Section III.

Availability of Prohibited Transaction Exemption \(PTE\) 77-4

Any purchase of Fund shares that complies with the conditions of either Section I or Section II of this class exemption shall be treated as a "purchase or sale" of shares of an open-end investment company for purposes of PTE 77-4 and shall be deemed to have satisfied paragraphs (a), (d) and (e) of section II of that exemption. 42 FR 18732 (April 8, 1977).

Section IV.

Definitions For purposes of this exemption:

- (a) The term "Bank" means a bank or trust company, and any affiliate thereof [as defined below in paragraph (b)(1)], which is supervised by a state or federal agency.
- (b) An "affiliate" of a person includes--(1) Any person directly or indirectly through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the person. (2) Any officer, director, employee or relative of such person, or partner in any such person; and (3) Any corporation or partnership of which such person is an officer, director, partner or employee.
- (c) The term "control" means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.
- (d) The term "collective investment fund" or "CIF" means a common or collective trust fund or pooled investment fund maintained by a "Bank" as defined in paragraph (a) of this Section IV or by a "Plan Adviser" as defined in paragraph (m) of this Section IV for the collective investment of the assets attributable to two or more plans maintained by unrelated employers.
- (e) The term "Fund" or "Funds" means any open-end management investment company or companies registered under the 1940 Act for which the Bank or Plan Adviser serves as an investment adviser, and may also serve as a custodian, shareholder servicing agent, transfer agent or provide some other secondary service (as defined below in paragraph (i) of this section).
- (f) The term "net asset value" means the amount calculated by dividing the value of all securities, determined by a method as set forth in a Fund's prospectus and Statement of Additional Information, and other assets belonging to each of the portfolios in such Fund, less the liabilities chargeable to each portfolio, by the number of outstanding shares.
- (g) The term "relative" means a "relative" as that term is defined in section 3\(15\) of the Act (or a "member of the family" as that term is defined in section 4975\(e\)\(6\) of the Code), or a brother, a sister, or a spouse of a brother or a sister.

(h) The term "Independent Fiduciary" means a fiduciary of a Client Plan who is independent of and unrelated to the Bank or Plan Adviser. For purposes of this exemption, the Independent Fiduciary will not be deemed to be independent of and unrelated to the Bank or Plan Adviser if: (1) Such fiduciary directly or indirectly controls, is controlled by, or is under common control with the Bank or Plan Adviser; (2) Such fiduciary, or any officer, director, partner, employee, or relative of such fiduciary, is an officer, director, partner, employee of the Bank or Plan Adviser (or is a relative of such persons); (3) Such fiduciary, directly or indirectly receives any compensation or other consideration for his or her own personal account in connection with any transaction described in this exemption.

If an officer, director, partner, employee of the Bank or Plan Adviser (or relative of such persons), is a director of such Independent Fiduciary, and if he or she abstains from participation in (i) the choice of the Client Plan's investment adviser, and (ii) the approval of any purchase or sale between the Client Plan and the Funds, as well as any transaction described in Sections I and II above, then paragraph (h)(2) of this Section IV shall not apply.

(i) The term "secondary service" means a service provided by a Bank or Plan Adviser to a Fund other than investment management, investment advisory or similar services.

- (j) The term "fixed-income security" means any interest-bearing or discounted government or corporate security with a face amount of $1,000 or more that obligates the issuer to pay the holder a specified sum of money, at specific intervals, and to repay the principal amount of the loan at maturity.
- (k) The term "Client Plan" means a pension plan described in 29 CFR 2510.3-2, a welfare benefit plan described in 29 CFR 2510.3-1, and a plan described in section 4975\(e\)\(1\) of the Code, but does not include an employee benefit plan established or maintained by the Bank or a Plan Adviser for its own employees.
- (l) The term "security" shall have the same meaning as defined in section 2(36) of the 1940 Act, as amended, 15 U.S.C. 80a-2(36) (1996).
- (m) The term "Plan Adviser" means an investment adviser registered under the Investment Advisers Act of 1940, and any "affiliate" thereof [as defined above in paragraph (b)(1)].
- (n) The term "business day" means a banking day as defined by federal or state banking regulations.
- (o) The term "unrelated employers" means persons which are not, directly or indirectly, affiliates, as defined above in paragraph (b)(1).
- (p) The term "personal delivery" means delivery of the information described in sections I(g) and II(g) above to an individual or individuals designated by the Client Plan to act on behalf of the Independent Fiduciary.

Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption 98-54

Foreign Exchange Transactions Executed Pursuant to Standing Instructions

November 12, 1998 (FR Doc 98-30291)

Recap

Permits foreign exchange transactions between employee benefit plans and banks and broker-dealers, which are parties in interest with respect to such plans, pursuant to standing instructions.

Class Exemption

Foreign Exchange Transactions Executed Pursuant to Standing Instructions

Agency: Department of Labor, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration

Action: Grant of Class Exemption

Effective Dates: Section II is effective for transactions occurring from June 18, 1991 to January 12, 1999. Section III is effective for transactions occurring after January 12, 1999.

Exemption

Effective Dates: Section II is effective for transactions occurring from June 18, 1991 to January 12, 1999. Section III is effective for transactions occurring after January 12, 1999.

Exemption

Accordingly, the following exemption is granted under the authority of section 408\(a\) of the Act and section 4975\(c\)\(2\) of the Code, and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 ERISA Procedure 75-1 (40 FR 18471, April 28, 1975).

Section I Covered Transactions

- a. For the period from June 18, 1991 to January 12, 1999, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(b\)\(2\) of the Employee Retirement Security Act of 1974 (ERISA or the Act) and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code), by reason of Code section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(E\), shall not apply to the following foreign exchange transactions, between a bank or broker-dealer and an employee benefit plan with respect to which the bank or broker-dealer is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary or other party in interest, pursuant to a standing instruction, if the conditions set forth in section II below are met:
  1. An income item conversion; or
  2. A de minimis purchase or sale transaction.
- b. Effective after January 12, 1999, the restrictions of sections 406\(a\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(D\) and 406\(b\)\(1\) and \(b\)\(2\) of the Act and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of Code, by reason of Code section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(A\) through \(E\), shall not apply to the following foreign exchange transactions, between a bank or broker-dealer, and an employee benefit plan with respect to which the bank or broker-dealer is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary or other party in interest, pursuant to a standing instruction, if the conditions set forth in section III below are met:
  1. An income item conversion; or
  2. A de minimis purchase or sale transaction.

Section II Retroactive Conditions

- a. At the time the foreign exchange transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms generally available in comparable arm's length foreign exchange transactions between unrelated parties.
- b. At the time the foreign exchange transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms afforded by the bank or the broker-dealer in comparable arm's length foreign exchange transactions involving unrelated parties.
- c. Neither the bank, the broker-dealer nor any foreign affiliate thereof, has any discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 CFR 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to the investment of those assets.
- d. The bank or broker-dealer maintains at all times written policies and procedures regarding the handling of foreign exchange transactions for plans with respect to which the bank or broker-dealer is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary or other party in interest or disqualified person which assure that the person acting for the bank or broker-dealer knows that he or she is dealing with a plan.
- e. The exchange rate used by the bank or broker-dealer for a particular foreign exchange transaction did not deviate by more than 10% (above or below) the interbank bid and asked rates at the time of the transaction as displayed on Reuters or another independent service in the foreign currency market for such currency; provided, however, that a prohibited transaction shall not be deemed to have occurred solely because records demonstrating compliance with this section with respect to specific transactions have been lost, destroyed or are not available to the bank or broker-dealer. Nothing in this section shall be deemed to relieve the bank or broker-dealer of its responsibility to demonstrate compliance with the conditions of this exemption.
- f. A written confirmation statement is furnished with respect to each covered transaction to the independent plan fiduciary that authorized the standing instruction. The confirmation statement shall include:
  - A. Account name;
  - B. Transaction date;
  - C. Exchange rates;
  - D. Settlement date;
  - E. Currencies exchanged;
    - i. Identity of foreign currency sold;
    - ii. Amount sold;
    - iii. Identity of currency purchased; and
    - iv. Amount purchased.

The confirmation shall be issued in no event more than 5 business days after execution of the transaction.

Section III Prospective Conditions

- a. At the time the foreign exchange transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms generally available in comparable arm's-length foreign exchange transactions between unrelated parties.
- b. At the time the foreign exchange transaction is entered into, the terms of the transaction are not less favorable to the plan than the terms afforded by the bank or broker-dealer in comparable arm's-length foreign exchange transactions involving unrelated parties.
- c. Neither the bank, the broker-dealer, nor any foreign affiliate thereof has any discretionary authority or control with respect to the investment of the plan assets involved in the transaction or renders investment advice (within the meaning of 29 CFR 2510.3-21(c)) with respect to the investment of those assets.
- d. The bank or broker-dealer maintains at all times written policies and procedures regarding the handling of foreign exchange transactions for plans with respect to which the bank or broker-dealer is a trustee, custodian, fiduciary or other party in interest or disqualified person which assure that the person acting for the bank or broker-dealer knows that he or she is dealing with a plan.
- e. The covered transaction is performed under a written authorization executed in advance by a fiduciary of the plan whose assets are involved in the transaction, which plan fiduciary is independent of the bank or broker-dealer engaging in the covered transaction or any foreign affiliate thereof. The written authorization must specify: (1) The identities of the currencies in which covered transactions may be executed; and (2) That the authorization may be terminated by either party without penalty on no more than ten days notice.
- f. (1) Income item conversions are executed within no more than one business day from the date of receipt of notice by the bank or broker-dealer that such items are good funds, and a foreign custodian which is an affiliate of the bank or broker-dealer, provides such notice to the bank or broker-dealer within "one business day" of its receipt of good funds;

(2) De minimis purchase and sale transactions are executed within no more than one business day from the date that either the bank or broker-dealer receives notice from a foreign custodian that the proceeds of a sale of foreign securities denominated in foreign currency are good funds, or the direction to acquire foreign currency was received by the bank or broker-dealer, and a foreign custodian which is an affiliate of the bank or broker-dealer, provides such notice to the bank or broker-dealer within one business day of its receipt of good funds from a sale.
- g. (1) At least once each day, at the time(s) specified in its written policies and procedures, the bank or broker-dealer establishes either a rate of exchange or a range of rates to be used for income item conversions and de minimis purchase and sale transactions covered by this exemption.

(2) Income item conversions are executed at the next scheduled time for conversions following receipt of notice by the bank or broker-dealer from the foreign custodian that such funds are good funds. If it is the policy of the bank or broker-dealer to aggregate small amounts of foreign currency until a specified minimum threshold amount is received, then the conversion may take place at a later time but in no event more than 24 hours after receipt of notice.

(3) De minimis purchase and sale transactions are executed at the next scheduled time for such transactions following receipt of either notice that the sales proceeds denominated in foreign currency are good funds, or a direction to acquire foreign currency. If it is the policy of the bank or broker-dealer to aggregate small transactions until a specified threshold amount is received, then the execution may take place at a later time but in no event more than 24 hours after receipt of either notice that the sales proceeds have been received by the foreign custodian as good funds, or a direction to acquire foreign currency. For purposes of this paragraph (g), the range of exchange rates established by the bank or broker-dealer for a particular foreign currency cannot deviate by more than three percent [above or below] the interbank bid and asked rates as displayed on Reuters or another nationally recognized independent service in the foreign exchange market, for such currency at the time such range of rates is established by the bank or broker-dealer.

- h. Prior to the execution of the authorization referred to in paragraph (e), the bank or broker-dealer provides the independent fiduciary with a copy of the bank's or broker-dealer's written policies and procedures regarding the handling of foreign exchange transactions involving income item conversions and de minimis purchase and sale transactions. The policies and procedures must, at a minimum, contain the following information:
1. Disclosure of the time(s) each day that the bank or broker-dealer will establish the specific rate of exchange or the range of exchange rates for the covered transactions to be executed and the time(s) that such covered transactions will take place. The bank or broker-dealer shall include a description of the methodology that the bank or broker-dealer uses to determine the specific exchange rate or range of exchange rates;
  2. Disclosure that income item conversions and de minimis purchase and sale transactions will be executed at the first scheduled transaction time after notice that good funds from an income item conversion or a sale have been received, or a direction to purchase foreign currency has been received. To the extent that the bank or broker-dealer aggregates small amounts of foreign currency until a specified minimum threshold amount is met, a description of this practice and disclosure of the threshold amount; and
  3. A description of the process by which the bank's or broker-dealer's foreign exchange policies and procedures for income item conversions and de minimis purchase and sale transactions may be amended and disclosed to plans.
- i. The bank or broker-dealer engaging in the covered transaction furnishes to the independent fiduciary a written confirmation statement with respect to each covered transaction not more than five business days after execution of the transaction.
1. With respect to income item conversions, the confirmation shall disclose the following information:
    - A. Account name;
    - B. Date of notice that good funds were received;
    - C. Transaction date;
    - D. Exchange rate;
    - E. Settlement date;
    - F. Identity of foreign currency;
    - G. Amount of foreign currency sold;
    - H. Amount of U.S. dollars or other currency credited to the plan; and
  2. With respect to de minimis purchase and sale transactions, the confirmation shall disclose the following information:
    - A. Account name;
    - B. Date of notice that sales proceeds denominated in foreign currency are received as good funds or direction to acquire foreign currency was received;
    - C. Transaction date;
    - D. Exchange rates;
    - E. Settlement date;
    - F. Currencies exchanged:
      - i. Identity of the currency sold;
      - ii. The amount sold;
      - iii. Identity of the currency purchased; and
      - iv. The amount purchased;
- j. The bank or broker-dealer, maintains, within territories under the jurisdiction of the United States Government, for a period of six years from the date of the transaction, the records necessary to enable the persons described in paragraph (l) of this section to determine whether the applicable conditions of this exemption have been met, including a record of the specific exchange rate or range of exchange rates the bank or broker-dealer established each day for foreign exchange transactions effected under standing instructions for income item conversions and de minimis purchase and sale transactions. However, a prohibited transaction will not be considered to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the bank's or broker-dealer's control, the records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of the six-year period, and no party in interest other than the bank or broker-dealer shall be subject to the civil penalty that may be assessed under section 502\(i\) of the Act, or the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, if the records are not maintained by the bank or broker-dealer, or are not made available for examination by the bank or broker-dealer, or its affiliate as required by paragraph (k) of this section.
- k. (1) Except as provided in subparagraph (2) of this paragraph and notwithstanding any provisions of subsection (a)(2) and (b) of section 504 of the Act, the records referred to in paragraph (j) of this Section are available at their customary location for examination, upon reasonable notice, during normal business hours by:
- A. Any duly authorized employee or representative of the Department of Labor or the Internal Revenue Service.

- B. Any fiduciary of a plan who has authority to acquire or dispose of the assets of the plan involved in the foreign exchange transaction or any duly authorized employee or representative of such fiduciary.
- C. Any contributing employer to the plan involved in the foreign exchange transaction or any duly authorized employee or representative of such employer.

(2) None of the persons described in subparagraphs (B) and (C) shall be authorized to examine a bank's or broker-dealer's trade secrets or commercial or financial information of a bank or broker-dealer, which is privileged or confidential.

Section IV Definitions and General Rules

For purposes of this exemption,

- a. A foreign exchange transaction means the exchange of the currency of one nation for the currency of another nation.
- b. The term standing instruction means a written authorization from a plan fiduciary, who is independent of the bank or broker-dealer engaging in the foreign exchange transaction and any foreign affiliate thereof, to the bank or broker-dealer to effect the transactions specified therein pursuant to the instructions provided in such authorization.
- c. A bank means a bank which is supervised by the United States or a State thereof, or any domestic affiliate thereof.
- d. A broker-dealer means a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, or any domestic affiliate thereof.
- e. A domestic affiliate of a bank or broker-dealer means any entity which is supervised by the United States or a State thereof and which is directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such bank or broker-dealer.
- f. The term control means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.
- g. An income item conversion means: (1) The conversion into U.S. dollars of an amount which is the equivalent of no more than 300,000 U.S. dollars of interest, dividends or other distributions or payments with respect to a security, tax reclaims, proceeds from dispositions of rights, fractional shares or other similar items denominated in the currency of another nation that are received by the bank or broker-dealer on behalf of the plan from the plan's foreign investment portfolio; or (2) the conversion into any currency as required and specified by the standing instruction of an amount which is the equivalent of no more than 300,000 U.S. dollars of interest, dividends, or other distributions or payments with respect to a security, tax reclaims, proceeds from dispositions of rights, fractional shares or other similar items denominated in the currency of another nation that are received by the bank or broker-dealer on behalf of the plan from the plan's foreign investment portfolio, provided that the converted funds are either transferred to an interest bearing account which provides a reasonable rate of interest within 24 hours of the conversion and held therein pending reinvestment by the plan or the bank reinvests such proceeds within 24 hours of the conversion at the direction of the plan.
- h. A de minimis purchase or sale transaction means the purchase or sale of foreign currencies in an amount of no more than 300,000 U.S. dollars or the equivalent thereof in connection with the purchase or sale of foreign securities by a plan.
- i. For purposes of this exemption the term employee benefit plan refers to a pension plan described in 29 CFR Sec. 2510.3-2 and/or a welfare benefit plan described in 29 CFR Sec. 2510.3-1.
- j. For purposes of this exemption, the term good funds means funds immediately available in cash with no sovereign or other governmental impediments or restrictions to the exchange or transfer of such funds.
- k. For purposes of this exemption, the term business day means a banking day as defined by federal or state banking regulations.
- l. For purposes of this exemption, the term foreign affiliate of a bank or broker-dealer means any non-U.S. entity which is directly or indirectly, through one or more intermediaries, controlling, controlled by, or under common control with such bank or broker-dealer.

Amendment to PTE 80-26 for Certain Interest Free Loans to Employee Benefit Plans

April 3, 2000 (65 FR 17540)

Recap

Provides a temporary amendment to PTE 80-26, permitting parties-in-interest to make interest free loans to a plan to continue the plan's ordinary operation, in the event it experiences an inability to liquidate or access assets, or to access data as a result of a Y2K problem, but permits the loans to be repaid no later than December 31, 2000.

Class Exemption

Amendment to PTE 80-26 for Certain Interest Free Loans to Employee Benefit Plans

Agency: Department of Labor, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration

Action: Grant of Class Exemption

Effective Date: The amendment to PTE 80-26 is effective from November 1, 1999 until December 31, 2000.

Exemption

Section I: General Exemption

Effective January 1, 1975, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) and \(D\) and section 406\(b\)\(2\) of the Act, and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code, by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(B\) and \(D\) of the Code, shall not apply to the lending of money or other extension of credit from a party in interest or disqualified person to an employee benefit plan, nor to the repayment of such loan or other extension of credit in accordance with its terms or written modifications thereof, if:

- a. No interest or other fee is charged to the plan, and no discount for payment in cash is relinquished by the plan, in connection with the loan or extension of credit;
- b. The proceeds of the loan or extension of credit are used only:
  1. For the payment of ordinary operating expenses of the plan, including the payment of benefits in accordance with the terms of the plan and periodic premiums under an insurance or annuity contract; or
  2. For a period of no more than three business days, for a purpose incidental to the ordinary operation of the plan;
- c. The loan or extension of credit is unsecured; and
- d. The loan or extension of credit is not directly or indirectly made by an employee benefit plan.

Section II: Temporary Exemption

Effective November 1, 1999 through December 31, 2000, the restrictions of section 406\(a\)\(1\)\(B\) and \(D\) and section 406\(b\)\(2\) of the Act, and the taxes imposed by section 4975\(a\) and \(b\) of the Code, by reason of section 4975\(c\)\(1\)\(B\) and \(D\) of the Code, shall not apply to the lending of money or other extension of credit from a party in interest or disqualified person to an employee benefit plan, nor to the repayment of such loan or other extension of credit in accordance with its terms or written modifications thereof, if:

- a. No interest or other fee is charged to the plan, and no discount for payment in cash is relinquished by the plan, in connection with the loan or extension of credit;
- b. The proceeds of the loan or extension of credit are used only for a purpose incidental to the ordinary operation of the plan which arises in connection with the plan's inability to liquidate, or otherwise access its assets or access data as a result of a Y2K problem.
  - c. The loan or extension of credit is unsecured;
  - d. The loan or extension of credit is not directly or indirectly made by an employee benefit plan;
  - e. The loan or extension of credit begins on or after November 1, 1999 and is repaid or terminated no later than December 31, 2000.

For the purposes of section II, a Y2K problem is a disruption of computer operations resulting from a computer system's inability to process data because such system recognizes years only by the last two digits, causing a "00" entry to be read as the year "1900" rather than the year "2000."

the charge, if any, shall be no more than $7.41 per day, unless the RA has approved a higher charge pursuant to 20 CFR 655.111 or 655.211(b); for 20 CFR 655.111 and 655.211, the RA may permit an employer to charge workers up to $9.25 per day for providing them with three meals per day, if the employer justifies the charge and submits to the RA the documentation required to support the higher charge.

C. Maximum Travel Subsistence Expense

The regulations at 20 CFR 655.102(b)(5) establish that the minimum daily subsistence expense related to travel expenses, for which a worker is entitled to reimbursement, is the employer's daily charge for three meals or, if the employer makes no charge, the amount permitted under 20 CFR 655.104(b)(4). The regulation is silent about the maximum amount to which a qualifying worker is entitled.

The Department, in Field Memorandum 42-94, established that the maximum is the meals component of the standard CONUS (continental United States) per diem rate established by the General Services Administration (GSA) and published at 41 CFR Ch. 301. The CONUS meal component is now $28.00 per day.

Workers who qualify for travel reimbursement are entitled to reimbursement up to the CONUS meal rate for related subsistence when they provide receipts. In determining the appropriate amount of subsistence reimbursement, the employer may use the GSA system under which a traveler qualifies for meal expense reimbursement per quarter of a day. Thus, a worker whose travel occurred during two quarters of a day is entitled, with receipts, to a maximum reimbursement of $14.00. If a worker has no receipts, the employer is not obligated to reimburse above the minimum stated at 20 CFR 655.102(b)(4) as specified above.

Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration

[Prohibited Transaction Exemption 97-11; Application D-09707]

Class Exemption for the Receipt of Certain Investment Services by Individuals for Whose Benefit Individual Retirement Accounts or Retirement Plans for Self-Employed Individuals Have Been Established or Maintained

AGENCY: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor.

ACTION: Grant of class exemption.

SUMMARY: This document contains a final class exemption from the prohibited transaction restrictions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) and the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code). The class exemption permits the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an individual retirement account (IRA) or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer, provided that the conditions of the exemption are met. The exemption affects individuals with beneficial interests in such plans who receive such services as well as the broker-dealers who provide such services.

EFFECTIVE DATE: February 7, 1997.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Allison Padams, Office of Exemption Determinations, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, (202) 219-8971, (This is not a toll-free number); or Paul D. Mannina, Plan Benefits Security Division, Office of Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor (202) 219-9141, (This is not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On July 31, 1996, the Department of Labor (the Department) published a notice in the Federal Register (61 FR 39996) of the pendency of a proposed class exemption from the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and 406(b) of ERISA and the sanctions resulting from the application of sections 4975 (a) and (b), 4975(c)(3) and 408(e)(2) of the Code by reason of section 4975(c)(1) (D), (E) and (F) of the Code. This exemption was requested in an exemption application filed on behalf of the Securities Industry Association (the SIA or the Applicant). The application was filed pursuant to section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B, (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990.)<sup>1</sup>

The notice of pendency gave interested persons an opportunity to comment or request a public hearing on the proposal. No requests for a public hearing were received by the Department. Two public comments were received by the Department. Upon consideration of the record as a whole, the Department has determined to grant the proposed exemption subject to certain modifications. These modifications and the comments are discussed below.

Discussion of the Comments Received

One commenter sought clarification of the language in the preamble to the notice of proposed exemption which addressed the Investment Company Institute's inquiry as to whether the exemption would provide relief for a relationship brokerage program whereby a broker-dealer offers reduced sales charges with respect to the purchase of investment company shares as the size of the purchase increases. In this regard, a broker-dealer would aggregate total purchases of all of a customer's accounts, including IRAs and Keogh Plans. Thus, a broker-dealer would set a schedule of commissions or rates that vary according to the size of the transaction. Specifically, the commenter requests that the Department clarify that the exemption covers "rights of accumulation" programs as described in the National Association of Securities Dealers' Rules of Fair Practice in which a broker dealer takes into account both a customer's present purchases of shares and the aggregate quantity of securities previously purchased by the customer. The Department notes that such programs would be covered by the exemption provided that all the conditions of the exemption are satisfied.

In addition, the commenter requests that the Department reconsider its views stated in footnote 8 of the Preamble relating to "letter of intent programs" in which broker-dealers reduce sales commissions based on the aggregate of a customer's actual purchases and anticipated purchases over a specified period of time, as agreed to by the customer (the Target Amount). The commenter states that the letter of intent is not a binding obligation on the customer to purchase the Target Amount. Rather, if the customer holds less than the Target Amount in his accounts at the end of the specified period, the sales charge is adjusted upward for the shares purchased during such period, and the customer is required to pay the same sales charge he would have paid if he had not participated in the letter of intent program. For example, an individual purchases shares of a mutual fund under a letter of intent program which requires the individual to purchase a total of $100,000 of mutual fund shares within 13 months of the initial purchase. The individual makes an initial purchase of $2,000 for his or her IRA account. In addition, the individual makes a $3,000 purchase for a non-IRA/Keogh account and pays a reduced sales charge associated with both purchases. An escrow arrangement is established with regard to the $5,000 in purchases to secure payment of the higher sales charge in the event the investor fails to purchase the intended number of shares during the specified period. During the 13-month period, the individual only purchases another $5,000 amount for his non-IRA/Keogh account. In accordance with the program, an unreduced sales charge must be reinstated. The broker-dealer would assess each account its prorata share of the reinstated sales charge. Thus, the IRA would only pay 20% of the total amount of money owed for the reinstated sales charge (the IRA purchased $2,000 of the total $10,000 purchased or 20%). The commenter represents that under letter of intent programs, IRA and Keogh Plans would be treated as favorably as any other type of account that a broker-dealer includes in the letter of intent program. Based upon the commenter's assertion that the IRA and Keogh Plans only will be assessed that portion of the reinstated sales charges related to the IRA and Keogh Plan purchases, the Department is of the view that letter of intent programs would be covered by the class exemption.

Another commenter urged the Department to modify the definition of an individual retirement account to include simple retirement accounts as described in section 408(p) of the Code. The Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996 (Pub. L. 104-188), effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 1996, amended section 408 of the Code to permit simple retirement accounts. In this regard, the commenter states that section 408(p)(7) provides that participants of simple employee pensions have the unrestricted authority to transfer their account balances without cost or penalty to simple retirement accounts sponsored by different financial institutions. The Department finds merit in this comment and has modified section III(b) of the exemption to include simple retirement accounts. The same commenter urges the Department to clarify the definition of account value to include insured investment accounts or insured savings accounts. According to the commenter, such accounts are established in a separate bank and are insured by a federal deposit agency. Broker-dealers establish insured savings accounts whereby the uninvested cash in a clients account is swept into a separate bank account for a client rather than into a money market fund. Clients may select such an account as a sweep vehicle because the assets in the bank account are insured by federal deposit insurance up to the maximum permitted by law. In this regard, the commenter represents that a separate program may be maintained for the broker-dealer's retirement account clients. In response to the comment, the Department has clarified section III(d) to include accounts that are insured by a federal deposit insurance agency and that constitute deposits as that term is defined in section 29 CFR 2550.408(b)-4(c)(3).

General Information

The attention of interested persons is directed to the following:

(1) In accordance with section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and based upon the entire record, the Department finds that the exemption is administratively feasible, in the interests of the IRAs and Keogh Plans and their participants and beneficiaries and protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of such plans.

(2) The exemption is supplemental to, and not in derogation of, any other provisions of ERISA and the Code including statutory or administrative exemptions and transitional rules. Furthermore, the fact that a transaction is subject to an administrative exemption is not dispositive of whether the transaction is in fact a prohibited transaction.

(3) The exemption is applicable to a transaction only if the conditions specified in the class exemption are met.

Exemption

Accordingly, the following exemption is granted under the authority of section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B. [55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990].

Section I: Covered Transactions

Effective February 7, 1997, the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and 406(b) of ERISA and the sanctions resulting from the application of section 4975 of the Code, including the loss of exemption of an IRA pursuant to section 408(e)(2)(A) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(D), (E) and (F) of the Code, shall not apply to the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an IRA or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan, is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 pursuant to an arrangement in which the account value of, or the fees incurred for services provided to, the IRA or Keogh Plan is taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive such services, provided that each condition of Section II of this exemption is satisfied.

Section II: Conditions

(a) The IRA or Keogh Plan whose account value or whose fees are taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive services under the arrangement is established and maintained for the exclusive benefit of the participant covered under the IRA or Keogh Plan, his or her spouse or their beneficiaries.

(b) The services offered under the relationship brokerage arrangement must be of the type that the broker-dealer itself could offer consistent with all applicable federal and state laws regulating broker-dealers.

(c) The services offered under the arrangement are provided by the broker-dealer (or an affiliate of the broker-dealer in the ordinary course of the broker-dealer's business to customers who qualify for reduced or no cost services, but do not maintain IRAs or Keogh Plans with the broker-dealer.

(d) For purposes of determining eligibility to receive services, the arrangement satisfies one of the following:

(i) Eligibility requirements based on the account value of the IRA or Keogh Plan are as favorable as any such requirements based on the value of any other type of account which the broker-dealer includes to determine eligibility; and

(ii) Eligibility requirements based on the amount of fees incurred by the IRA or Keogh Plan are as favorable as any requirements based on the amount of fees incurred by any other type of account which the broker-dealer includes to determine eligibility.

(e) The combined total of all fees for the provision of services to the IRA or Keogh Plan is not in excess of reasonable compensation within the meaning of section 4975(d)(2) of the Code.

(f) The investment performance of the IRA or Keogh Plan investment is no less favorable than the investment performance of an identical investment(s) that could have been made at the same time by a customer of the broker-dealer who is not eligible for (or who does not receive) reduced or no cost services.

(g) The services offered under the arrangement to the IRA or Keogh Plan customer must be the same as are offered to non-IRA or non-Keogh Plan customers with account values of the same amount or the same amount of fees generated.

Section III: Definitions

The following definitions apply to this exemption:

(a) The term "broker-dealer" means a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

(b) The term "IRA" means an individual retirement account described in Code section 408(a). For purposes of this exemption, the term IRA shall not include an IRA which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA, except for a Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) described in section 408(k) of the Code or a Simple Retirement Account described in section 408(p) of the Code which provides participants with the unrestricted authority to transfer their balances to IRAs or Simple Retirement Accounts sponsored by different financial institutions.

(c) The term "Keogh Plan" means a pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan qualified under Code section 401(a) and exempt from taxation under Code section 501(a) under which some or all of the participants are employees described in section 401(c) of the Code. For purposes of this exemption, the term Keogh Plan shall not include a Keogh Plan which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA.

(d) The term "account value" means investments in cash or securities held in the account for which market quotations are readily available. For purposes of this exemption, the term cash shall include savings accounts that are insured by a federal deposit insurance agency that constitute deposits as that term is defined in section 29 CFR 2550.408b-4(c)(3). The term account value shall not include investments in securities that are offered by the broker-dealer [or its affiliate] exclusively to IRAs and Keogh Plans.

(e) An affiliate of a broker-dealer includes any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the broker-dealer. The term control means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

(f) The term "members of his or her family" refers to beneficiaries of the individual for whose benefit the IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained, who would be members of the family as that term is defined in Code section 4975(e)(6), or a brother, a sister, or spouse of a brother or sister.

(g) The term "service" includes incidental products of a de minimis value which are directly related to the provision of services covered by the exemption.

(h) The term "fees" means commissions and other fees received by the broker-dealer from the IRA or Keogh Plan for the provision of services, including, but not limited to, brokerage commissions, investment management fees, custodial fees, and administrative fees.

Signed at Washington, DC, this 31st day of January 1997.

Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration

[Application Number: D-10554]

Amendment to Prohibited Transaction Exemption 97-11 (PTE 97-11) for the Receipt of Certain Investment Services by Individuals for Whose Benefit Individual Retirement Accounts or Retirement Plans for Self-Employed Individuals Have Been Established or Maintained

AGENCY: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor.

ACTION: Adoption of Amendment to PTE 97-11.

SUMMARY: This document amends PTE 97-11, a class exemption that permits the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an individual retirement account (IRA) or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan, is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer, provided that the conditions of the exemption are met. The amendment affects individuals with a beneficial interest in the IRAs and Keogh Plans who receive such services as well as the broker-dealers who provide such services.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The amendment is effective January 1, 1998.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Allison Padams Lavigne, Office of Exemption Determinations, U.S. Department of Labor, (202) 219-8971, (this is not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On October 21, 1998, notice was published in the Federal Register (63 FR 56231) of the pendency before the Department of a proposed amendment to PTE 97-11 (62 FR 5855, February 7, 1997). PTE 97-11 provides relief from the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and 406(b) of ERISA and the sanctions resulting from the application of sections 4975(a) and (b), 4975(c)(3) and 408(e)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(D), (E) and (F) of the Code.*

The amendment to PTE 97-11 adopted by this notice was requested in an exemption application filed on behalf of the Securities Industry Association (SIA). The exemption application was submitted pursuant to section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990).

The notice of pendency gave interested persons an opportunity to comment or to request a hearing on the proposed amendment. No public comments or requests for a hearing were received.

For the sake of convenience, the entire text of PTE 97-11, as amended, has been reprinted with this notice.

PTE 97-11 permits the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 pursuant to an arrangement in which the account value of, or the fees incurred for services provided to, the IRA or Keogh Plan is/are taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive such services, provided that the conditions of the exemption are met.

The term "IRA" is defined in section III(b) of PTE 97-11 to mean an individual retirement account described in section 408(a) of the Code. The definition further states that, for purposes of this exemption, the term IRA shall not include an IRA which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA, except for a Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) described in section 408(k) of the Code or a Simple Retirement Account described in section 408(p) of the Code which provides participants with the unrestricted authority to transfer their balances to IRAs or Simple Retirement Accounts sponsored by different financial institutions. The amendment adopted by this notice modifies section III(b) of PTE 97-11 to include education individual retirement account (Education IRAs) as defined in section 530 of the Code. The Department notes that all the conditions contained in PTE 97-11 still must be satisfied with respect to education IRAs as with all other IRAs and Keogh Plans covered by the exemption.

General Information

The attention of interested persons is directed to the following:

(1) In accordance with section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and based upon the entire record, the Department finds that this amendment is administratively feasible, in the interests of the IRAs and Keogh Plans, and their participants and beneficiaries and protective of the rights of the participants and beneficiaries of such plans.

(2) The amendment is supplemental to, and not in derogation of, any other provisions of ERISA and the Code, including statutory or administrative exemptions and transitional rules. Furthermore, the fact that a transaction is subject to an administrative or statutory exemption is not dispositive of whether the transaction is in fact a prohibited transaction.

(3) The class exemption is applicable to a transaction only if the conditions specified in the class exemption are met.

Exemption

Accordingly, PTE 97-11 is amended under the authority of section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990).

Section I: Covered Transactions

Effective January 1, 1998, the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and (b) of ERISA, and the sanctions resulting from the application of section 4975 of the Code, including the loss of exemption of an IRA, pursuant to section 408(e)(2)(A) of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(D), (E), and (F) of the Code, shall not apply to the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an IRA, or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan, is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934

pursuant to an arrangement in which the account value of, or the fees incurred for services provided to, the IRA or Keogh Plan is taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive such services, provided that each condition of Section II of this exemption is satisfied.

Section II: Conditions

(a) The IRA or Keogh Plan whose account value or whose fees are taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive services under the arrangement is established and maintained for the exclusive benefit of the participant covered under the IRA or Keogh Plan, his or her spouse or their beneficiaries.

(b) The services offered under the relationship brokerage arrangement must be of the type that the broker-dealer itself could offer consistent with all applicable federal and state laws regulating broker-dealers.

(c) The services offered under the arrangement are provided by the broker-dealer (or an affiliate of the broker-dealer) in the ordinary course of the broker-dealer's business to customers who qualify for reduced or no cost services, but do not maintain IRAs or Keogh Plans with the broker-dealer.

(d) For the purpose of determining eligibility to receive services, the arrangement satisfies one of the following:

(i) Eligibility requirements based on the account value of the IRA or Keogh Plan are as favorable as any such requirements based on the value of any other type of account which the broker-dealer includes to determine eligibility; or

(ii) Eligibility requirements based on the amount of fees incurred by the IRA or Keogh Plan are as favorable as any requirements based on the amount of fees incurred by any other type of account which the broker-dealer includes to determine eligibility.

(e) The combined total of all fees for the provision of services to the IRA or Keogh Plan is not in excess of reasonable compensation within the meaning of section 4975(d)(2) of the Code.

(f) The investment performance of the IRA or Keogh Plan investment is no less favorable than the investment performance of an identical investment(s) that could have been made at the same time by a customer of the broker-dealer who is not eligible for (or who does not receive) reduced or no cost services.

(g) The services offered under the arrangement to the IRA or Keogh Plan customer must be the same as are offered to non-IRA or non-Keogh Plan customers with account values of the same amount or the same amount of fees generated.

* Section 102 of Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (43 FR 47713, October 17, 1978) generally transferred the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue administrative exemptions under section 4975(c)(2) of the Code to the Secretary of Labor.

Section III: Definitions

The following definitions apply to this exemption:

(a) The term broker-dealer means a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

(b) The term IRA means an individual retirement account described in Code section 408(a) or an education individual retirement account described in section 530 of the Code. For purposes of this exemption, the term IRA shall not include an IRA which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA, except for a Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) described in section 408(k) of the Code or a Simple Retirement Account described in section 408(p) of the Code which provides participants with the unrestricted authority to transfer their balances to IRAs or Simple Retirement Accounts sponsored by different financial institutions.

(c) The term Keogh Plan means a pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan qualified under Code section 401(a) and exempt from taxation under Code section 501(a) under which some or all of the participants are employees described in section 401(c) of the Code. For purposes of this exemption, the term Keogh Plan shall not include a Keogh Plan which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA.

(d) The term account value means investments in cash or securities held in the account for which market quotations are readily available. For purposes of this exemption, the term cash shall include savings accounts that are insured by a federal deposit insurance agency that constitute deposits as that term is defined in section 29 CFR 2550.408b-4(c)(3). The term account value shall not include investments in securities that are offered by the broker-dealer (or its affiliate) exclusively to IRAs and Keogh Plans.

(e) An affiliate of a broker-dealer includes any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the broker-dealer. The term control means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

(f) The term members of his or her family refers to beneficiaries of the individual for whose benefit the IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained, who would be members of the family as that term is defined in

Code section 4975(e)(6), or a brother, a sister, or spouse of a brother or sister.

(g) The term service includes incidental products of a de minimis value which are directly related to the provision of services covered by the exemption.

(h) The term fees means commissions and other fees received by the broker-dealer from the IRA or Keogh Plan for the provision of services, including, but not limited to, brokerage commissions, investment management fees, custodial fees, and administrative fees.

Signed at Washington, DC, this 26th day of February 1999.

Amendment to Prohibited Transaction Exemption 93-33 (PTE 93-33) for the Receipt of Certain Services by Individuals for Whose Benefit Individual Retirement Accounts or Retirement Plans for Self-Employed Individuals Have Been Established or Maintained

AGENCY: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor.

ACTION: Adoption of Amendment to PTE 93-33.

SUMMARY: This document amends PTE 93-33, a class exemption that permits the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an individual retirement account (IRA) or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan, is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a bank, provided that the conditions of the exemption are met. The amendment affects individuals with a beneficial interest in IRAs and Keogh Plans who receive such services as well as the banks that provide such services.

DATES: The amendment is effective January 1, 1998.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Ms. Allison Padams Lavigne, Office of Exemption Determinations, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, (202) 219-8971 (this is not a toll-free number.)

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On October 21, 1998, notice was published of the pendency before the Department of a proposed amendment to PTE 93-33 (58 FR 31053, May 28, 1993, as amended, 59 FR 22686, May 2, 1994). PTE 93-33 provides relief from the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and 406(b) of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA) and the sanctions resulting from the application of sections 4975(a) and (b), 4975(c)(3) and 408(e)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(D), (E) and (F) of the Code.* The amendment was requested in an exemption application dated January 26, 1998 filed by the American Bankers Association.

The application was filed pursuant to section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990). The notice of pendency gave interested persons an opportunity to comment or to request a hearing on the proposed amendment. No public comments nor requests for a hearing on the proposed amendment were received. For the sake of convenience, the entire text of PTE 93-33, as amended, has been reprinted with this notice.

PTE 93-33, as amended, permits the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained or by members of his or her family, from a bank pursuant to an arrangement in which the account balance of the IRA or Keogh Plan is taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive such services, provided the conditions of the exemption are met.

Section III (b) of PTE 93-33, as amended, defines the term "IRA" as an individual retirement account described in Code section 408(a). In addition, section III(b) provides that for purposes of this exemption, the term IRA shall not include an IRA which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA, except for a Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) described in section 408(k) of the Code which provides participants with the unrestricted authority to transfer their SEP balances to IRAs sponsored by different financial institutions. The amendment set forth in this notice modifies section III(b) of PTE 93-33 to include Education IRAs described in section 530 of the Code and Simple

* Section 102 of Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (42 FR 47713, October 17, 1978) generally transferred the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue administrative exemptions under section 4975(c)(2) of the Code to the Secretary of Labor.

[Application Number: D-10934]

Amendment to Prohibited Transaction Exemption 97-11 (PTE 97-11) for the Receipt of Certain Investment Services by Individuals for Whose Benefit Individual Retirement Accounts or Retirement Plans for Self-Employed Individuals Have Been Established or Maintained

AGENCY: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor.

ACTION: Adoption of amendment to PTE 97-11.

SUMMARY: This document amends PTE 97-11, a class exemption that permits the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an individual retirement account (IRA) <sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> In Advisory Opinion 98-03A (March 6, 1998), the Department stated that a Roth IRA which satisfies the definition of an individual retirement plan contained in section 7701(a)(37)(A) of the or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan, is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer, provided that the conditions of the exemption are met. The amendment affects individuals with beneficial interests in such plans who receive such services as well as the broker-dealers who provide such services.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Ms. Allison Padams Lavigne or Mr. Christopher Motta, Office of Exemption Determinations, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, (202) 693-8540, (this is not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On June 18, 2002, the Department proposed an amendment to PTE 97-11 (67 FR 41504) <sup>2</sup> PTE 97-11 provides relief from the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and 406(b) of ERISA and the sanctions resulting from the application of sections 4975(a) and (b), 4975(c)(3) and 408(e)(2) of the Code by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(D), (E) and (F) of the Code. <sup>3</sup> The amendment to PTE 97-11 was requested in an exemption application dated September 26, 2000, filed on behalf of American Funds Distributors, Inc. (AFD), a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

The notice of pendency gave interested persons an opportunity to comment on the proposed amendment. Two comments were received pursuant to the provisions of section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B. No requests for a public hearing were received.

For the sake of convenience, the entire text of PTE 97-11, as amended, has been reprinted.

Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code) is an "individual retirement account" described in section 408(a) of the Code. Therefore, a Roth IRA which is not an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA (except for certain Simplified Employee Pensions and Simple Retirement Accounts described in section 408(k) and 408(p) of the Code, respectively) would be covered by the relief provided in PTE 97-11, if all conditions therein are met. In this regard, the Department wishes to clarify that this proposed modification of section III(b) of PTE 97-11 would include Roth individual retirement annuities described in section 7701(a)(37)(B) of the Code.

<sup>2</sup> PTE 97-11 was granted on February 7, 1997 (62 FR 5855) and amended on March 8, 1999 (64 FR 11042). Any references to PTE 97-11 include the 1999 amendment.

<sup>3</sup> Section 102 of Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978 (43 FR 47713, October 17, 1978 (5 U.S.C. App. 1 (1996)) generally transferred the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue administrative exemptions under section 4975(c)(2) of the Code to the Secretary of Labor.

1. Description of the Exemption

PTE 97-11 permits the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 pursuant to an arrangement in which the account value of, or the fees incurred for services provided to, the IRA or Keogh Plan is/are taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive such services, provided that certain conditions are met.

Relief under PTE 97-11, as originally amended, was limited to transactions involving IRAs, as defined in section III(b) of the class exemption. In this regard, section III(b) defined the term "IRA" as "an individual retirement account described in Code section 408(a) or an education individual retirement account described in section 530 of the Code." The exemption stated further that "(f)or purposes of the exemption, the term IRA shall not include an IRA which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA, except for a Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) described in section 408(k) of the Code or a Simple Retirement Account described in section 408(p) of the Code which provides participants with the unrestricted authority to transfer their balances to IRAs or Simple Retirement Accounts sponsored by different financial institutions."

AFD requested that PTE 97-11 be amended to expand the definition of IRA contained in section III(b) of PTE 97-11 to include Individual Retirement Annuities, as such term is defined in section 408(b) of the Code.

2. Discussion of the Comments Received

The Department received two comments on the proposed amendment to PTE 97-11. One of the commenters, the American Council of Life Insurers (ACLI), supported the amendment. The second commenter sought clarification with respect to the reduction of commissions in connection with the aggregation of variable annuity contracts and mutual funds that are offered and/or managed by unaffiliated entities. Specifically, the commenter asked the Department whether the amendment to PTE 97-11 is applicable to situations where the distributor of the annuity contract, the investment manager of the variable annuity separate account and mutual funds, and the provider of the annuity contracts are not affiliated.

As stated above, PTE 97-11 permits a broker-dealer to offer reduced or no cost services to individuals for whose benefit an IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained, provided that the conditions of the exemption have been met. The Department notes that the exemption does not limit relief to those services that are offered pursuant to an arrangement involving only affiliated entities.

Accordingly, a broker-dealer offering reduced commissions to an individual in connection with the purchase of a variable annuity contract under circumstances where the broker-dealer, the investment manager of the variable annuity separate account and mutual funds, and the provider of the annuity contracts are unaffiliated would be covered by the class exemption are met. In particular, the Department notes that PTE 97-11 requires, among other things, that the services offered under the relationship brokerage arrangement must be of the type that the broker-dealer itself could offer consistent with all applicable federal and state laws regulating broker-dealers. Additionally, the services offered under the arrangement must be provided by the broker-dealer or its affiliate in the ordinary course of the broker-dealer's business to customers who qualify for reduced or no cost services, but do not maintain IRAs or Keogh Plans with the broker-dealer.

General Information

The attention of interested persons is directed to the following:

(1) The Department finds that the amendment is administratively feasible, in the interest of the IRAs and Keogh Plans and their participants and beneficiaries and protective of the rights of the participants and beneficiaries of such plans.

(2) The amendment is supplemental to, and not in derogation of, any other provisions of ERISA and the Code including statutory or administrative exemptions and transitional rules. Furthermore, the fact that a transaction is subject to an administrative exemption is not dispositive of whether the transaction is in fact a prohibited transaction.

(3) The amendment is applicable to a transaction only if the conditions specified in the class exemption are met.

Exemption

Accordingly, PTE 97-11 is amended under the authority of section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, Subpart B (55 CFR 32836, August 10, 1990).

Section I: Covered Transactions

Effective January 1, 1998, the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(D) and 406(b) of ERISA and the sanctions resulting from the application of section 4975 of the Code, including the loss of exemption of an IRA pursuant to section 408(e)(2)(A) of the Code, by reason of the section 4975(c)(1)(D), (E) and (F) of the Code, shall not apply to the receipt of services at reduced or no cost by an individual for whose benefit an IRA or, if self-employed, a Keogh Plan, is established or maintained, or by members of his or her family, from a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 pursuant to an arrangement in which the account value of, or the fees incurred for services provided to, the IRA or Keogh Plan is taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive such services, provided that each condition of Section II of this exemption is satisfied.

Section II: Conditions

(a) The IRA or Keogh Plan whose account value or whose fees are taken into account for purposes of determining eligibility to receive services under the arrangement is established and maintained for the exclusive benefit of the participant covered under the IRA or Keogh Plan, his or her spouse or their beneficiaries.

(b) The services offered under the relationship brokerage arrangement must be of type that the broker-dealer itself could offer consistent with all applicable federal and state laws regulating broker-dealers.

(c) The services offered under the arrangement are provided by the broker-dealer (or an affiliate of the broker-dealer) in the ordinary course of the broker-dealer's business to customers who qualify for reduced or no cost services, but do not maintain IRAs or Keogh Plans with the broker-dealer.

(c) For the purpose of determining eligibility to receive services, the arrangement satisfies one of the following:

(i) Eligibility requirements based on the account value of the IRA or Keogh Plan are as favorable as any such requirements based on the value of any other type of account which the broker-dealer includes to determine eligibility; or

(ii) Eligibility requirements based on the amount of fees incurred by the IRA or Keogh Plan are as favorable as any requirements based on the amount of fees incurred by any other type of

account which the broker-dealer includes to determine eligibility.

(e) The combined total of all fees for the provision of services to the IRA or Keogh Plan is not in excess of reasonable compensation within the meaning of section 4975(d)(2) of the Code.

(f) The investment performance of the IRA or Keogh Plan investment is no less favorable than the investment performance of an identical investment(s) that could have been made at the same time by a customer of the broker-dealer who is not eligible for (or who does not receive) reduced or no cost services.

(g) The services offered under the arrangement to the IRA or Keogh Plan customer must be the same as are offered to non-IRA or non-Keogh Plan customers with account values of the same amount or the same amount of fees generated.

Section III: Definitions

The following definitions apply to this exemption:

(a) The term "broker-dealer" means a broker-dealer registered under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934.

(b) The term "IRA" means an individual retirement account described in Code section 408(a), an individual retirement annuity described in Code section 408(b) or an education individual retirement account described in section 530 of the Code. For purposes of this exemption, the term IRA shall not include an IRA which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA, except for a Simplified Employee Pension (SEP) described in section 408(k) of the Code or a Simple Retirement Account described in section 408(p) of the Code which provides participants with the unrestricted authority to transfer their balances to IRAs or Simple Retirement Accounts sponsored by different financial institutions.

(c) The term "Keogh Plan" means a pension, profit-sharing, or stock bonus plan qualified under Code section 401(a) and exempt from taxation under Code section 501(a) under which some or all of the participants are employees described in section 401(c) of the Code. For purposes of this exemption, the term Keogh Plan shall not include a Keogh Plan which is an employee benefit plan covered by Title I of ERISA.

(d) The term "account value" means investments in cash or securities held in the account for which market quotations are readily available. For purposes of this exemption, the term cash shall include savings accounts that are insured by a federal deposit insurance agency that constitute deposits as that term is defined in section 29 CFR 2550.408b-4(c)(3). The term account value shall not include investments in securities that are offered by the broker-dealer [or its affiliate] exclusively to IRAs and Keogh Plans.

(e) An affiliate or a broker-dealer includes any person directly or indirectly controlling, controlled by, or under common control with the broker-dealer. The term control means the power to exercise a controlling influence over the management or policies of a person other than an individual.

(f) The term "members of his or her family" refers to beneficiaries of the individual for whose benefit the IRA or Keogh Plan is established or maintained, who would be members of the family as that term is defined in Code section 4975(e)(6), or a brother, a sister, or a spouse of a brother or sister.

(g) The term "service" includes incidental products of a de minimis value which are directly related to the provision of services covered by the exemption.

(h) The term "fees" means commissions and other fees received by the broker-dealer from the IRA or Keogh Plan for the provision of services, including, but not limited to, brokerage commissions, investments management fees, custodial fees, and administrative fees.

General Wage Determination Publication

General Wage Determinations issued under the Davis-Bacon and related Acts, including those noted above, may be found in the Government Printing Office (GPO) document entitled "General Wage Determinations Issued Under The Davis-Bacon and Related Acts." This publication is available at each of the 50 Regional Government Depository Libraries and many of the 1,400 Government Depository Libraries across the country.

General wage determinations issued under the Davis-Bacon and related Acts are available electronically at no cost on the Government Printing Office site at www.access.gpo.gov/davisbacon. They are also available electronically by subscription to the Davis-Bacon Online Service (<http://davisbacon.fedworld.gov>) of the National Technical Information Service (NTIS) of the U.S. Department of Commerce at 1-800-363-2068. This subscription offers value-added features such as electronic delivery of modified wage decisions directly to the user's desktop, the ability to access prior wage decisions issued during the year, extensive Help Desk Support, etc.

Hard-copy subscriptions may be purchased from: Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington, DC 20402, (202) 512-1800.

When ordering hard-copy subscription(s), be sure to specify the State(s) of interest, since subscriptions may be ordered for any or all of the seven separate volumes, arranged by State. Subscriptions include an annual edition (issued in January or February) which includes all current general wage determinations for the States covered by each volume. Throughout the remainder of the year, regular weekly updates are distributed to subscribers.

Signed at Washington, DC, this 19th day of February 2002.

AGENCY: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Department of Labor.

ACTION: Adoption of amendment to certain class exemptions.

SUMMARY: This document amends certain class exemptions to define the term "employee benefit plan," as such term is used therein, to include plans described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code). The amendment affects individuals with beneficial interests in such plans, as well as the financial institutions that provide services and products to the plans.

EFFECTIVE DATES: The amendment is effective as of: May 1, 1979 with respect to PTE 79-15; January 1, 1975 with respect to PTE 80-26; December 1, 1980 with respect to Section I(B) of PTE 80-83 (the amendment is effective January 1, 1975 with respect to the remainder of PTE 80-83); January 23, 1981 with respect to PTE 81-6; January 1, 1975 with respect to PTE 81-8; April 6, 1982 with respect to PTE 82-63; January 1, 1975 with respect to PTE 83-1; December 21, 1982 with respect to PTE 84-14; January 1, 1975 with respect to PTE 88-59; July 1, 1990 with respect to PTE 91-38; January 1, 1975 with respect to PTE 95-60; and July 31, 1996 with respect to PTE 96-62.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT: Christopher J. Motta, Office of Exemption Determinations, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, (202) 693-8544, (this is not a toll-free number); or Paul Mannina, Plan Benefits Security Division, Office of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor (202) 693-5600. (This is not a toll-free number).

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On October 29, 2001, notice was published in the Federal Register (66 FR 54541) of the pendency before the Department of Labor (the Department) of a proposed amendment to PTE 79-15; PTE 80-26; PTE 80-83; PTE 81-6; PTE 81-8; PTE 82-63; PTE 83-1; PTE 84-14; PTE 88-59; PTE 91-38; PTE 95-60; and PTE 96-62. These class exemptions provide relief from certain of the restrictions described in section 406 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), and the taxes imposed by sections 4975(a) and (b) of the Code, by reason of a parallel provision described in section 4975(c)(1)(A) through (F) of the Code, provided that the conditions of the relevant exemption have been met. The amendment to the above-described exemptions adopted by this notice was proposed by the Department on its own motion, pursuant to section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990).

The notice gave interested persons an opportunity to submit written comments or requests for a public hearing on the proposed amendment to the Department. No public comments or requests for a hearing were received.

As noted in the proposed amendment, after consultation with the Internal Revenue Service (the Service), the Department determined that plans described in 4975(e)(1) of the Code are included within the scope of relief provided by certain class exemptions issued jointly by the Department and the Service. These exemptions are as follows:

PTE 75-1, 40 FR 50845 (1975);
 PTE 77-4, 42 FR 18732 (1977);
 PTE 77-7, 42 FR 31575 (1977), amended and redesignated as PTE 92-5 by 57 FR 5019 (1992);
 PTE 77-8, 42 FR 31574 (1977), amended and redesignated as PTE 92-6, 57 FR 5189 (1992);
 PTE 77-9, 42 FR 32395 (1977), amended and redesignated as PTE 84-24, 49 FR 13208 (1984); and PTE 78-19, 43 FR 59915 (1978), amended and redesignated as PTE 90-1, 55 FR 2891 (1990).

The class exemptions amended by this notice were issued pursuant to the sole authority of the Department. These exemptions did not always expressly define the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" as used therein.<sup>1</sup> The amendment adopted by this notice expressly defines the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan", as such terms are found in such exemptions, to include an employee benefit plan described in ERISA section 3(3)<sup>2</sup> and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.<sup>3</sup>

General Information

The attention of interested persons is directed to the following:

(1) The fact that a transaction is the subject of an exemption under section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code does not relieve a fiduciary or other party in interest or disqualified person from certain other provisions of ERISA and the Code, including any prohibited transaction provisions to which the exemption does not apply and the general fiduciary responsibility provisions of section 404 of the Act which require, among other things, that a fiduciary discharge his duties with respect to the plan solely in the interests of the participants and beneficiaries of the plan and in a prudent fashion in accordance with section 404(a)(1)(B) of ERISA; nor does it affect the requirement of section 401(a) of the Code that the plan must operate for the exclusive benefit of the employees of the employer maintaining the plan and their beneficiaries,

(2) In accordance with section 408(a) of ERISA and 4975(c)(2) of the Code, the Department makes the following determinations:

- (i) The amendment set forth herein is administratively feasible;
- (ii) The amendment set forth herein is in the interests of plans and of their participants and beneficiaries; and
- (iii) The amendment set forth herein is protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of plans,

(3) Each exemption amended herein is applicable to a particular transaction issue administrative exemptions under section 4975 of the Code to the Secretary of Labor.

<sup>2</sup> Section 3(3) of ERISA provides that the term "employee benefit plan" or "plan" means an employee welfare benefit plan or an employee pension benefit plan or a plan which is both an employee welfare benefit plan and an employee pension benefit plan.

<sup>3</sup> Section 4975(e)(1) of the Code provides that, for purposes of that Code section, the term "plan" means: (A) A trust described in Code section 401(a) which forms a part of a plan, or a plan described in Code section 403(a), which trust or plan is exempt from tax under section 501(a); (B) an individual retirement account described in Code section 408(a); (C) an individual retirement annuity described in section Code 408(b); (D) an Archer MSA described in Code section 220(d); (E) an education individual retirement account described in Code section 530, or (f) a trust, plan, account, or annuity which, at any time, has been determined by the Secretary to be described in any preceding subparagraph of this paragraph.

only if the transaction satisfies the conditions specified in such exemption, and

(4) The amendment is supplemental to, and not in derogation of, any other provisions of ERISA and the Code, including statutory or administrative exemptions and transitional rules. Furthermore, the fact that a transaction is subject to an administrative or statutory exemption is not dispositive of whether the transaction is in fact a prohibited transaction.

Paperwork Reduction Act

This proposed amendment to the class exemptions specifically enumerated does not contain a collection of information as that term is defined in 44 U.S.C. 3502(3), nor does it substantially or materially modify the terms of any collection of information included in the class exemptions that would be amended as to the definition of "employee benefit plan" and "plan" (specifically, PTE 80-83, PTE 81-6, PTE 81-8, PTE 82-63, PTE 88-59, PTE 91-38, and PTE 96-62). The amendment would clarify definitions already relied upon in the analyses of these information collections conducted in pursuant to the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995.

Amendment

Under section 408(a) of ERISA and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990), the Department amends the following class exemptions as set forth below:

1. PTE 79-15 is amended by adding the following paragraph at the end of the exemption to read as follows: For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in ERISA section 3(3) and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

2. PTE 80-26 is amended by adding the following paragraph at the end of the exemption to read as follows: For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in ERISA section 3(3) and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

3. PTE 80-83 is amended by adding the following paragraph 4. to Section II. b. to read as follows: 4. For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in section 3(3) of ERISA and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

4. PTE 81-6 is amended by adding the following paragraph at the end of the exemption to read as follows: For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in ERISA section 3(3) and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

5. PTE 81-8 is amended by adding the following paragraph at the end of the exemption to read as follows: For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in ERISA section 3(3) and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

6. PTE 82-63 is amended by adding the following paragraph (4) to section II. Definitions to read as follows: (4) For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in ERISA section 3(3) and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

7. PTE 83-1 is amended by adding the following paragraph I. to Section III. Definitions to read as follows: I. For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in ERISA section 3(3) and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

8. PTE 84-14 is amended by adding the following paragraph (n) to Part V. Definitions and General Rules to read as follows: (n) The terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in section 3(3) of ERISA and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

9. PTE 88-59 is amended by adding the following paragraph (F) to Section III. Definitions to read as follows: (F) The terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in section 3(3) of ERISA and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

10. PTE 91-38 is amended by adding the following paragraph (k) to Section IV. Definitions and General Rules to read as follows: The terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in section 3(3) of ERISA and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

11. PTE 95-60 is amended by adding the following paragraph (j) to Section V. Definitions to read as follows: (j) The terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in section 3(3) of ERISA and/or or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

12. PTE 96-62 is amended by adding paragraph (g) to Section IV. Definitions to read as follows: (g) For purposes of this exemption, the terms "employee benefit plan" and "plan" refer to an employee benefit plan described in section 3(3) of ERISA and/or a plan described in section 4975(e)(1) of the Code.

Description of the Exemption

Section I of PTE 80-26 permits the lending of money or other extension of credit from a party in interest or disqualified person to an employee benefit plan, and the repayment of such loan or other extension of credit in accordance with its terms or other written modifications thereof, if:

(a) No interest or other fee is charged to the plan, and no discount for payment in cash is relinquished by the plan, in connection with the loan or extension of credit;

(b) The proceeds of the loan or extension of credit are used only—

(1) For the payment of ordinary operating expenses of the plan, including the payment of benefits in accordance with the terms of the plan and periodic premiums under an insurance or annuity contract, or

(2) For a period of no more than three days, for a purpose incidental to the ordinary operation of the plan;

(c) The loan or extension of credit is unsecured; and

(d) The loan or extension of credit is not directly or indirectly made by an employee benefit plan.

Class Exemption for Cross-Trades of Securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds; Notice

DEPARTMENT OF LABOR*Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration

[Prohibited Transaction Exemption 2002-12; Application No. D-10851]

Class Exemption for Cross-Trades of Securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds

AGENCY: Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, Department of Labor.

ACTION: Grant of class exemption.

SUMMARY: This document contains a final exemption from certain prohibited transaction restrictions of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (the Act or ERISA), the Federal Employees' Retirement System Act (FERSA), and from certain taxes imposed by the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (the Code). The exemption permits cross-trades of securities among Index and Model-Driven Funds (Funds) managed by investment managers, and among such Funds and certain large accounts which engage such managers to carry out a specific portfolio restructuring program or to otherwise act as a "trading adviser" for such a program. The exemption affects participants and beneficiaries of employee benefit plans whose assets are invested in Index or Model-Driven Funds, large pension plans and other large accounts involved in portfolio restructuring programs, as well as the Funds and their investment managers. This exemption does not address cross-trades of securities among "actively-managed" accounts. The Department is considering additional safeguards to protect participants in plans that engage in active cross-trading prior to publishing a proposal to permit such cross-trades.

EFFECTIVE DATE: The effective date of the exemption is April 15, 2002.

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:

Motta of the Office of Exemption Determinations, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, DC 20210 at (202) 693-8540; or Michael Schloss, Plan Benefits Security Division, Office of the Solicitor, U.S. Department of Labor, Washington, DC 20210, at (202) 693-5600. Paperwork Reduction Act Analysis

In accordance with the Paperwork Reduction Act of 1995 (44 U.S.C. 3501-3520)(PRA 95), the Department submitted the information collection request (ICR) included in the Class

Exemption for Cross-Trades of Securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds to the Office of Management and Budget (OMB) for review and clearance at the time the Notice of proposed class exemption was published in the Federal Register (December 15, 1999, 64 FR 70057). OMB subsequently approved the ICR under OMB control number 1210-0115. The approval will expire on April 30, 2003. The public is not required to respond to an information collection request unless it displays a currently valid OMB control number.

As described in detail in the SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION section which follows, the Department of Labor (Department) has made certain modifications to the terms of the proposed class exemption in response to comments received from the public. Although the recordkeeping and information disclosure requirements which constitute the information collection provisions of the final class exemption have been clarified in certain respects, the information collection provisions have not been substantively or materially changed from the proposed exemption. The Department has, however, made certain adjustments to its burden estimates and underlying assumptions in response to comments on the proposal. These adjustments relate to the numbers of entities offering Index and Model-Driven Funds and their client plans, and the number of Large Accounts that may make use of the exemption, and the estimated burden of the record-keeping requirement.

The Department's original estimates of the number of users of the exemption were based on the number of individual exemptions granted and applications received, and information received from exemption applicants about the number of plans involved, resulting in estimates of 10 entities with an average of 20 client plans for each. One commenter expressed the view that at least 50 entities with an average of 40 client plans would make use of the exemption. Because the Department acknowledges that the grant of this final exemption may affect the number of entities that would consider implementing a program of cross trading involving index and model funds, the assumed numbers of entities and plans have been increased for purposes of burden estimates to 20 entities and 40 plans, respectively. Similarly, the number of Large Accounts assumed for purposes of estimating burden has been increased from 10 to 40. While the assumed number of Large Accounts is smaller than the 1,000 offered by the commenter, the Department believes that a number approximating 18% of all plans with $50 million in assets would substantially overstate the number likely to make use of the exemption in connection with a portfolio restructuring program in a given year.

The commenter also indicated that the Department's estimates of the time required to establish and maintain the record-keeping systems that would be needed to comply with the exemption were significantly low. The comment states that a significant investment of $4 to $5 million would be required for each user to establish the necessary record-keeping systems, and that substantial amounts of time would be required daily for ongoing record-keeping, and annually for ongoing disclosures. Upon consideration of the comment, the Department has concluded that its original estimates did omit the impact of the initial investment of resources that would be required to enhance existing software and systems to track cross-trades to triggering events. As a result, the Department has revised its estimates to include the hours, or costs as applicable, of 1,040 hours of systems analyst time at $51 per hour (based on Occupational Employment Survey data and 1999 Employment Cost Index, adjusted for non-wage compensation and overhead.) This change adds approximately 12,500 hours and $424,000 to the estimated burden of the final exemption. These totals are distributed over a three year period for purposes of the annual burden shown below.

Given that record-keeping systems for securities transactions are primarily electronic in nature, and that the Department's burden estimates now take into account the start-up cost of modifying automated record-keeping systems, the Department has decided not to revise the estimated time required to maintain the required records of trades and to prepare disclosure materials. In the Department's view, the original estimates are reasonable in light of the degree to which record-keeping is automated, the industry's existing record-keeping practices involving cross-trading, and the information provided by other commenters.

In addition, the final exemption clarifies that the annual disclosures are required to be made with respect to only those Funds that hold plan assets and in which a given plan invests. The commenter had indicated that eliminating the annual disclosure requirement with respect to Funds in which a plan had no investments would substantially reduce the burden. This clarification, therefore, further supports retention of the original assumptions.

Finally, the commenter expressed the view that certain of the information required to be disclosed by the terms of the proposed exemption was duplicative and unnecessary. As noted earlier, with the exception of certain clarifications, the information collection provisions of the final exemption are unchanged from the proposal. The Department's basis for its conclusions with respect to the need for the disclosure and record-keeping provisions of the final exemption are discussed in detail in the SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION section that follows.

The burden estimates that result from the revised assumptions are presented below:

Title: Prohibited Transaction Class Exemption for Cross-Trades of Securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds.

Agency: Department of Labor, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration.

Affected Entities: Business or other for-profit.

Respondents: 60 (20 entities and 40 Large Accounts).

Responses: 840.

Annual Hour Burden: $9,100.

Annualized Capital/Start-up Cost: $141,000.

Annual Cost (Operating and Maintenance): $280,000.

Annual Cost Burden: $421,000.

Executive Order 12866 Statement

Under Executive Order 12866, the Department must determine whether a regulatory action is "significant" and therefore subject to the requirements of the Executive Order and subject to review by the Office of Management and Budget (OMB). Under section 3(f), the order defines a "significant regulatory action" as an action that is likely to result in a rule (1) having an annual effect on the economy of $100 million or more, or adversely and materially affecting a sector of the economy, productivity, competition, jobs, the environment, public health or safety, or State, local or tribal governments or communities (also referred to as "economically significant"); (2) creating serious inconsistency or otherwise interfering with an action taken or planned by another agency; (3) materially altering the budgetary impacts of entitlement grants, user fees, or loan programs or the rights and obligations of recipients thereof; or (4) raising novel legal or policy issues arising out of legal mandates, the President's priorities, or the principles set forth in the Executive Order.

Pursuant to the terms of the Executive Order, it was determined that this action is "significant" under section 3(f)(1) of the Executive Order. Accordingly, this action has been reviewed by OMB.

Economic Analysis

Establishing a class exemption that permits plans to cross-trade can be expected to have a variety of positive economic effects that will considerably exceed the direct costs incurred by plans to comply with the record keeping and reporting requirements enumerated in the PRA section of the final class exemption. By removing existing barriers to these types of transactions, the exemption will significantly increase the utilization of cross-trading among index and model-driven portfolios. This will result in substantial savings to plans by lowering the transaction costs in a number of ways. Although there is currently no source of data that can be used to precisely estimate the level of these savings or the distribution of these effects among various parties, extrapolating from several sources can provide a reasonable estimate of their overall magnitude.

Limiting the exemption to index and model-driven portfolio management techniques should preclude any changes in the incidence of trading activity. In contrast to active management techniques, index and model funds will continue to execute trades at the same levels that they would in the absence of the exemption because their trading is motivated by the need to remain within their tracking parameters rather than in response to marginal changes in expected transaction costs. It is therefore reasonable to assume that the changes in costs will result solely from a decrease in the cost of executing many individual trades rather than from a change in the levels of trades.

Changes in the costs of individual trades will result from (1) the elimination of commission costs that would otherwise be associated with a trade, (2) the avoidance of bid-ask spreads that impose costs for transactions executed through dealers, (3) the absence of fees and taxes that might otherwise apply, and (4) the avoidance of the market impact of large trades which might otherwise require price concessions to execute or effect the trade which would directly impact the market value of the resulting holdings.

Only the first three of these effects are considered in the analysis. The last, market impact, is not included because it can reasonably be expected to have largely offsetting effects. ERISA plans are equally likely to be on either side of a cross trade and in most cases are likely to represent both parties to a transaction. In some instances, they will be advantaged by avoiding the changes in an individual securities price that might otherwise have resulted from a trade executed through another venue. In other circumstances, they will be disadvantaged. An equal probability of either will result in essentially offsetting effects in the aggregate.

A similarly conservative approach is taken in regard to two other aspects of the analysis. These are a result of the limitations in the available data and the absence of any experience with the full scope of relief afforded by the exemption on which to base an estimate. Although some data on the amount of ERISA plan assets in index funds is available, there is no similar source of reliable information to estimate the size of ERISA model driven assets to which the exemption would apply. There is also no experience with more extensive opportunities for cross-trading that are available under the exemption resulting from increased flexibility in allocating cross-trading opportunities, the extension of relief to a broader range of entities, and the inclusion of debt securities in the allowable transactions. Consequently the analysis is limited to index funds and does not incorporate increases in savings resulting from the extension of relief to circumstances with which there is no prior experience. As such, it should be interpreted as an extremely conservative estimate that is likely to represent a lower bound of the level of savings that can be expected to accrue to plans.

Two large financial services firms currently operating under individual exemptions that permit cross-trading among ERISA plans provided estimates of the savings in commissions, spreads, and fees that they have experienced managing both ERISA and non-ERISA indexed assets. These two estimates represent a significant portion of the ERISA plan universe and are therefore likely to be representative of the cost savings likely to occur. One of the firms estimated the cost savings to be approximately $275 million per year for a total indexed portfolio of $400 billion. The other estimated a savings of $207 million for $441 billion of indexed assets under management. Both of these include ERISA and non-ERISA assets, however, the experience should be indicative of expected results because the nature of trading costs for indexed funds should be virtually identical. Averaging these figures yields an estimate that costs savings of .057% or 5.7 basis points for each dollar of affected ERISA plan assets can be expected.

A recent survey of pension funds indicates that among the largest private sector defined benefit pension funds, 14% of the total assets were held in index funds. Among defined contribution plans, index funds constituted 12% of total assets. Applying these percentages to the most recent estimates of the total value of private pension funds yields an estimate of approximately $584 billion of ERISA pension funds that are currently managed as indexed funds.

Applying the estimate of $.00057 of savings for each dollar of assets under management results in an estimated level of cost reductions of approximately $332 million per year that will result from the class exemption. This total cost savings estimate overlaps, in part, current costs savings experienced by plans whose managers have cross-trading programs covered under existing individual exemptions. While certain large index fund managers are successfully operating cross-trading programs for ERISA plans at this time, the class exemption is expected to create additional cost savings for these plans by increasing the number and frequency of cross-trading opportunities among the managers' client accounts. In addition, new cross-trading opportunities will be made available for plans whose assets are managed by entities that currently do not have individual exemptions. Finally, the conservative nature of the total estimate is highlighted by the fact that cost savings associated with cross-trading by model-driven funds have not been factored into the estimate of total cost savings due to the absence of available data.

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION: On December 15, 1999, the Department of Labor (the Department) published a notice in the Federal Register (64 FR 70057) of the pendency of a proposed class exemption from the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(A) and 406(b)(2) of the Act, section 8477(c)(2)(B) of FERSA,<sup>1</sup> and from the taxes imposed by section 4975(a) and (b) of the Code by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(A) of the Code.

The Department proposed the class exemption on its own motion pursuant to section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B, (55 FR 32836, August 10, 1990).<sup>2</sup> The Department's determination to proceed with the proposed class exemption was based, in part, on information received from interested persons in response to a notice (the Notice) published in the Federal Register on March 20, 1998 (63 FR 13696).

<sup>1</sup> The Department has responsibility for the administration and enforcement of section 8477 of FERSA. Section 8477 establishes the standards of fiduciary responsibility and requirements relating to the activities of fiduciaries with respect to the Federal Thrift Savings Fund. All references herein to the fiduciary responsibility provisions of Part 4 of Title I of ERISA also apply to the corresponding provisions of FERSA. Accordingly, the relief provided under this class exemption applies to cross-trades of securities by the Federal Thrift Savings Fund.

The notice of pendency gave interested persons an opportunity to comment or request a public hearing on the proposal. Fourteen (14) public comments were received by the Department. Upon consideration of all the comments received, the Department has determined to grant the proposed class exemption subject to certain modifications. These modifications and the major comments are discussed below.

Discussion of Comments Received

The comments received by the Department were generally supportive of the issuance of a separate class exemption for cross-trading of securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds. However, many of the commenters requested specific modifications to the proposal in the following areas:

1. Accounts Permitted to Cross-Trade. Several comments noted that section I(a) and (b) of the proposal does not explicitly permit cross-trades between two or more Large Accounts. These comments noted that when more than one Large Account is buying or selling a particular security as part of a manager's cross-trading program, that security could be traded between two Large Accounts, two Index or Model-Driven Funds, or any combination thereof. In the operation of a cross-trading program, the matching of the buyer and seller would be coincidental. The commenters believe that a manager should be permitted to submit trade lists from each Large Account to its cross-trade allocation system and allow trades submitted on behalf of one Large Account to be crossed with trades submitted on behalf of another Large Account.

The Department notes that section I(a) and (b) of the proposal does not provide relief for cross-trades exclusively between two or more Large Accounts. The Department is of the view that such cross-trading would be outside the scope of the exemption because, among other things, there would be no "triggering event" to limit the amount of discretion exercised by the manager where such transactions occurred solely between Large Accounts.

<sup>2</sup> Section 102 of Reorganization Plan No. 4 of 1978, 5 U.S.C. App. 1 (1996) generally transferred the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury to issue exemptions under section 4975(c)(2) of the Code to the Secretary of Labor.

In the discussion of the exemption, references to specific provisions of the Act should be read to refer as well to the corresponding provisions of section 4975 of the Code.

The Department does recognize, however, that a manager's cross-trading program that complies with the requirements of the proposal may produce cross-trade opportunities that result from both triggering events of particular Index and Model-Driven Funds as well as from the decision of an independent fiduciary to restructure all or a portion of a Large Account's portfolio. Under such circumstances, the Department anticipates that the allocation of buying and selling opportunities across all Funds and Accounts participating in the cross-trading program may result in some individual cross-trades between two Large Accounts. In such an event, the exemption would permit the "coincidental" matching of a buyer and seller of particular securities where both buyer and seller are Large Accounts since such cross trades would be part of a unified process-driven cross-trading program where the allocations of available securities (from all Funds and/or Large Accounts) resulted from an objective process which did not permit the exercise of discretion by the manager, as required under section II(d) of the exemption. The Department has revised section I of the exemption to clarify this point.

Another commenter noted that no specific relief for cross-trades between two Large Accounts may be necessary where the decision to liquidate or restructure is made by an independent fiduciary or independent Account representative, and, therefore, the manager would not be acting as a fiduciary for either side of the transaction. Thus, the commenter suggested that the Department may wish to clarify whether additional relief for cross-trades exclusively between two or more Large Accounts is necessary. Alternatively, the commenter suggested that section I(b) of the proposal be modified to explicitly permit cross-trades solely between Large Accounts.

In response to this comment, the Department notes that violations of section 406(b)(2) of the Act would occur if the manager used its discretionary authority to determine whether to cross-trade securities between two Large Accounts at least one of which holds plan assets, which securities to cross-trade, the timing of such cross-trades, and the amount of securities to cross-trade notwithstanding that the overall determination to restructure the accounts was made by independent fiduciaries.

Accordingly, except as provided above, the Department has determined not to expand the relief provided under this exemption to include cross-trades solely between two or more Large Accounts. The Department notes that the final exemption provides a manager with a significant amount of time in which to conduct cross-trades for a Large Account in connection with a specific portfolio restructuring program. A manager's discretion to time specific cross-trades for two Large Accounts, absent the limitations provided by a process-driven cross-trading program involving "triggering events" for Index and Model-Driven Funds, would entail the type of discretion commonly exercised by managers for "actively-managed" accounts. In this regard, relief for cross-trades by "actively-managed" accounts and pooled funds containing "plan assets" will be considered by the Department in a separate proceeding.

2. Use of closing prices. One commenter suggested that the Department modify the requirement that all cross-trades occur at the closing prices for the securities on the relevant market in order to allow for alternate pricing methodologies (e.g., "volume weighted average price" or "VWAP"), after appropriate disclosure to the affected plans. Section II(a) of the proposal requires that the cross-trade be executed at the closing price, as defined in section IV(h). Section IV(h) of the proposal defines "closing price" as the price for a security on the date of the transaction, as determined by objective procedures disclosed to Fund investors in advance and consistently applied with respect to securities traded in the same market, which procedures shall indicate the independent pricing source used to establish the closing price and the time frame after the close of the market in which the closing price will be determined. The commenter does note that "closing prices" are the most appropriate prices currently in use for cross-trades of securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds, whose objective is to track the return of an index, since the calculation of an Index Fund's "tracking error" is based on closing prices for the securities listed in the relevant index. However, the commenter states that index providers may utilize alternative pricing methodologies in the future and suggests that the Department should consider broadening the exemption to include such pricing methodologies.

The Department notes that many commenters have indicated that the use of closing prices for cross-trades of securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds is common industry practice at the present time. The Department does not believe that it has sufficient information at this time to determine which types of alternative pricing methodologies may be used by managers in the future or how such pricing systems would enable Index and Model-Driven Funds to better achieve their investment goals and strategies. Therefore, the Department has determined not to modify the requirement that cross-trades be executed at the closing price. The Department would be prepared to consider additional relief at a later date upon proper demonstration that the appropriate findings can be made under section 408(a) of the Act with respect to other pricing methods for cross-traded securities.

3. "Triggering Events" and Cross-Trade Executions. Several of the comments objected to the requirement in section II(b) of the proposal that any cross-trade of securities by a Fund be executed no later than the close of the second business day following a "triggering event." These comments noted that previously issued individual exemptions for cross-trades by Index and Model-Driven Funds allowed cross-trades to be executed within three (3) business days of a "triggering event" and that the proposal's reduction of this requirement to two days is inconsistent with the stated premise of the proposal that cross-trading is beneficial to plans. Other comments noted that, once an investment decision is made, a manager should have 5 days to trade after a "triggering event"—the same period of time to execute the trade as is permitted under the safe harbor provided in the Department's regulations for determining whether a broker-dealer is a fiduciary when it executes a securities transaction on behalf of a plan (see 29 CFR 2510.3–21(d)). Another comment requested that section II(b) be revised to require that cross-trades be executed either within three (3) days of a "triggering event," or within such other period of time as the manager may disclose to the independent plan fiduciary pursuant to the disclosure requirements under section II(l) of the proposal.

In response to the comments, the Department has determined that it would be appropriate to modify section II(b) of the final exemption to require that all cross-trades by a Fund be executed no later than the close of the third business day following a Fund's

"triggering event." The Department notes that a three-day limit for cross-trades by a Fund following the relevant "triggering event(s)" has worked successfully in the past for managers who were granted individual exemptions.<sup>3</sup>

4. Blackout Period for Cross-Trades by Model-Driven Funds. Many of the comments objected to the requirement in section II(c) of the proposal that no cross-trades by a Model-Driven Fund may take place within ten (10) business days following any change made by the manager to the model underlying the Fund. The preamble to the proposal indicated that this restriction is intended to prevent model changes which might be made by managers, in part, to deliberately create additional cross-trading activity. The comments suggested that such a long delay on the ability of a manager to cross-trade after a change in the computer model was unnecessarily restrictive. According to the commenters, this condition would prevent cross-trading during the 10-day "blackout" period even though other "triggering events" were occurring in the Fund. Other commenters noted that there are already sufficient restrictions on a manager's discretion built into the proposal.

While most comments objected to the 10-day "blackout" period, several of the comments indicated that a 5-day period would be sufficient to safeguard against the Department's concerns regarding model changes that may be timed to create additional cross-trading opportunities. Other commenters suggested that, rather than imposing a "blackout" period for an arbitrary period of time (e.g., 5 or 10 days), a more flexible approach could be used where a Model-Driven Fund would be able to cross-trade following the period of time necessary to complete the first re-balancing of the Fund's portfolio after the change is made by the manager to the Fund's model. Thus, under this approach, the "blackout" period could be less than three (3) days. One comment suggested that any cross-trading "hiatus" for a Fund should not be more than three (3) days. Other comments simply requested that the condition for a "blackout" period after a model change be deleted. Still other comments noted that, in the absence of a "blackout" period, a requirement for 10-day prior notice of a model change to each relevant plan's independent fiduciary should suffice. Finally, some commenters requested clarification that model changes made either (i) at the direction of a client plan, or (ii) as a direct result of input changes furnished by a third party data vendor (e.g., BARRA or Vestek), would not invoke a "blackout" period because such model changes would not be the result of an exercise of discretion on the part of the manager.

The Department continues to believe that some "blackout" period is necessary to prevent managers from exercising their discretion over the criteria or data used for a model to generate specific cross-trade opportunities. However, in recognition that a 10-day restriction may be too long a period to prevent a Model-Driven Fund from cross-trading, the Department has decided to modify the final exemption to require that cross-trades not take place within three (3) business days following any change made by the manager to the model underlying the Fund.

In addition, with respect to the one commenter's concerns that model changes resulting from independent events should not invoke a "blackout" period for a Model-Driven Fund, the Department acknowledges that any change to a model which is not the result of an exercise of discretion by the manager (e.g., changes directed by an independent plan fiduciary or furnished by a third party data vendor whose model is being used by the manager) would not require a "blackout" period for cross-trades by such Fund.

5. Restrictions on Cross-Trades by a Manager Plan. One comment objected to, and requested the deletion of, the requirement in section II(e) of the proposal that no more than ten (10) percent of the assets of any Fund or Large Account engaging in a cross-trade may be comprised of assets of employee benefit plans maintained by the manager for its own employees (i.e., a Manager Plan), for which the manager exercises investment discretion. The comment stated that this condition would create a disincentive to in-house management and may cause investment managers to place assets of a Manager Plan with outside managers solely on the basis of the potential cost savings that the outside managers could derive from cross-trades.

The comment noted that for large plans, in-house management is frequently more cost-effective and keeps the asset management function closer to the people who have the most to gain from maximizing investment performance and minimizing investment risk. The comment further noted that larger in-house fiduciaries also manage assets for unaffiliated plans and other institutional investors, often as a result of a corporate spin-off with an accompanying plan restructuring. The comment stated that it understood the Department's concern regarding a manager's potential ability, through cross-trades, to unduly benefit a Manager Plan at the expense of its outside clients. However, the commenter believes that the other conditions of the proposal, including "triggering events" for cross-trades, detailed disclosures of cross-trading procedures and reporting of cross-trades resulting from a portfolio restructuring, would serve as a check on the manager's ability to favor a Manager Plan. Moreover, the commenter notes that to the extent that a Manager Plan's assets are commingled with assets of outside clients that are held in an Index or Model-Driven Fund managed as a collective investment fund, it would not be possible for the manager to "favor" only the Manager Plan in that Fund, even if the Manager Plan's assets represented more than 10 percent of the Fund's total assets. In any event, the comment noted that the 10 percent limitation should not apply to cross-trades that are made solely between Manager Plans.

With respect to the commenter's request to delete the 10% limitation in section II(e) of the proposal, the Department notes that, without such a percentage limitation, a substantial majority of the investors in a Fund could be comprised of Manager Plans. The Department does not believe that deletion of this percentage requirement would ensure a sufficient level of independent investor oversight of the manager's cross-trading program.

However, in consideration of the arguments raised by the commenters, the Department believes that a 20% limitation would still ensure a sufficient level of independent investor oversight in a Fund and would not unduly restrict the investment opportunities available for a Manager Plan with respect to such Funds. Therefore, the Department has modified section II(e) to increase the percentage limitation to 20%.

Accordingly, this exemption does not provide relief for cross-trades of securities of Index and Model-Driven Funds maintained by a manager under circumstances where the assets of the Manager Plans comprise all or a high percentage of the assets of the Fund. As noted above, the Department believes that the presence of independent fiduciaries to approve of plan participation in cross-trading programs following receipt of meaningful disclosures and the ability of such fiduciaries to periodically monitor the arrangements provide important protections under the exemption. However, in response to several comments, the Department wishes to take the opportunity to state that the granting of this exemption does not foreclose future consideration of additional relief for cross-trading transactions that do not fit within the framework developed by the Department for this exemption. For example, the Department is currently considering additional relief for transactions involving assets of plans managed by in-house managers, as well as for transactions involving discretionary asset managers.

With respect to the comments requesting that the exemption allow cross-trades to occur solely between two or more Manager Plans, the Department notes that relief for these transactions could involve the exercise of discretion on both sides to a transaction that is inconsistent with the underlying concept of the proposal—which is to provide relief for cross-trades made pursuant to "process-driven" investment strategies. For this reason, the Department has determined not to revise the exemption in this regard.

Another comment stated that section II(e) of the proposal does not adequately address how the independent authorization conditions in section II(i) through (n) of the proposal would apply to a Manager Plan, given that the plan fiduciary responsible for the plan's investment matters is unlikely to be independent of the manager. This comment suggested that the Department not require an independent fiduciary authorization for a Manager Plan's participation in the manager's cross-trading program. The commenter stated that the suggested modification would be consistent with other exemptions that do not apply an independent authorization requirement to plans of the fiduciary for whom relief is provided.<sup>4</sup> Accordingly, the commenter requests that the Department adopt a similar provision under the final exemption.

The Department concurs with the comments and has determined to modify section II(h) of the final exemption (formerly section II(i) of the proposal) to clarify that the requirement that the authorizing fiduciary be independent of the manager shall not apply in the case of a Manager Plan. Nevertheless, the appropriate fiduciary for the Manager Plan must still receive the proper disclosures and provide an authorization for the Manager Plan to participate in the manager's cross-trading program. This clarification modifies the disclosure and authorization requirements applicable to a plan's participation in a manager's cross-trading program, as described in section II(h) through (l) of the final exemption (formerly section II(i) through (m) of the proposal).

In addition, the Department has also determined to modify the requirements contained in section II(n) of the proposal, relating to disclosures to, and authorization by, a fiduciary of a Large Account who is independent of the manager for cross-trades in connection with a portfolio restructuring for the Large Account. To clarify this matter, the Department has revised section II(m) of the final exemption (formerly section II(n) of the proposal) by adding the parenthetical phrase “* * * (other than in the case of any assets of a Manager Plan)” to the requirements for an independent fiduciary discussed in section II(m)(1) through (4). In this regard, the Department notes that the final exemption still requires that proper disclosures be made to, and written authorization be made by, a Manager Plan's fiduciary in order for the Manager Plan to participate in a specific portfolio restructuring program.

6. Exclusion of Thinly-Traded Equity Securities. A number of commenters objected to the condition contained in section II(f)(1) of the proposal that required that cross-trades of equity securities involve only securities that are widely-held, actively-traded, and for which market quotations are readily available from independent sources. In this regard, the terms “widely-held” and “actively-traded” are deemed to include any security listed in an “Index” (as that term is defined in section IV(c) of the proposal).

The comments stated that this requirement was not necessary for an exemption for cross-trading by Index and Model-Driven Funds. According to the comments, security selection for such Funds is driven solely by objective factors. The commenters argued that the level of trading and diversity of holdings for securities are not relevant to security selections made by Funds and that such factors should not serve as a constraint on the ability of such Funds to cross-trade. Generally, the comments noted that if market prices are readily available, the exclusion of “closely-held” and “thinly-traded” equity securities is unduly restrictive. They further argued that such limitations would prevent use of the exemption for many “small-cap” and foreign equity securities. Thus, the commenters urged the Department to delete the requirement that cross-traded equity securities be “widely-held” and “actively-traded.”

As an alternative approach, one commenter suggested a limitation based on a comparison of the size of the cross-trade to the prior public trading volume in the security over a reasonable period of time prior to the date of the transaction. Such a volume limitation would prevent cross-trades of equity securities where the total volume of shares being cross-traded would exceed a certain percentage of the total number of shares publicly traded on the market during a particular period of time.

The Department is not persuaded by the arguments submitted in favor of deletion of the requirements contained in section II(f)(1) that equity securities that are cross-traded must be “widely-held” and “actively-traded.” The Department continues to believe that cross-trades of “thinly-traded” securities raise issues as to whether both sides of the cross-trade have benefitted equally from the avoidance of adverse market impact. The avoidance of market impact would be more dramatic with “thinly-traded” equity securities than with equity securities that are “widely-held” and “actively-traded.”<sup>5</sup> Similarly, the avoidance of liquidity restraints would be more dramatic with “thinly-traded” equity securities than with equity securities that are “widely-held” and “actively-traded.”

In order to address its concerns without unnecessarily restricting the scope of relief under the proposal, the Department determined to deem equity securities that are included in an Index (as defined in section IV(c) of the exemption) to be “widely-held” and “actively-traded” for purposes of the exemption. However, the Department notes that the exemption does not preclude a manager from cross-trading a particular equity security not included in an index if the manager otherwise determines that such security is “widely-held” and “actively-traded.”<sup>6</sup>

<sup>5</sup> The Department notes that these concerns would also arise with “thinly-traded” debt securities. However, since “thinly-traded” debt securities of different issuers with the same coupon rate, maturity, and credit rating are relatively fungible, the Department did not believe that it would be appropriate to apply these concepts to such securities for purposes of this exemption.

<sup>6</sup> With respect to the selection criteria for securities included in a Fund's portfolio which are not included in an Index, the Department assumes that any screening criteria and/or weighting procedures used to create the portfolio will be determined using purely mathematical computations based upon objective raw data. In addition, the Department assumes that the investment management agreement relating to each Fund, as approved by plan investors in the Fund,

With respect to the comment suggesting a trading volume limitation, the Department notes that other commenters have discouraged it from addressing its concerns about cross-trades of “thinly-traded” securities through volume limitations, based on arbitrary percentages of the average daily trading volume for the securities. These commenters noted that the systems used by managers to allocate cross-trades among various Funds would have difficulty monitoring and re-allocating cross-traded securities to conform to such volume limitations.

In consideration of the above, the Department has determined not to modify section II(f)(1) in the final exemption.

7. Cross-Trades of Securities Issued By the Manager. Several comments objected to the requirement in section II(h) of the proposal that cross-trades not involve securities issued by the manager, unless the manager has obtained a separate prohibited transaction exemption for the acquisition of such security. One commenter noted that, although some institutions have obtained individual exemptions to deal with issues relating to acquisitions and dispositions of the manager's own stock by its Index and Model-Driven Funds,<sup>7</sup> others have concluded that no exemptive relief is necessary based on the facts and circumstances surrounding their individual situations. The commenter noted that, with regard to certain Index Funds, the manager does not exercise discretion in choosing the individual stocks to buy or sell, but rather seeks to mechanically purchase stocks selected through objective criteria which is outside of the manager's control. For example, in an Index Fund that is designed to replicate the exact capitalization-weighted composition of the Standard & Poor's 500 Composite Stock Price Index (the S&P 500 Index), if the manager's stock is included in the index, that stock will be purchased in the proportion dictated by the index without the manager exercising any investment discretion. In such instances, the commenter stated that a manager's failure to acquire the stock would cause “tracking error,” thereby subverting the goal of plan investors in would set forth the specific dates on which the Fund's portfolio will be re-balanced. In this regard, the Department notes that no relief would be provided under this exemption for violations of section 406(b)(1) of the Act which may occur as a result of a manager's exercise of fiduciary authority or discretion to affect the components of an Index.

the Fund to replicate the performance of the index. Other comments stated that it was not clear why a restriction for cross-trades of a manager's own stock is necessary and that there appears to be no reason to exclude such securities from the exemption. The Department accepts these comments and has determined to delete section II(h) of the proposal from the final exemption.

However, the Department notes that the exemption does not provide relief for any discretionary changes in an Index or Model-Driven Fund made by a manager, or any other discretionary decisions by the manager, which are designed to result in cross-trades of the manager's own stock for the benefit of the manager. Only cross-trades generated by non-discretionary changes in a Fund (e.g., changes in the capitalization weighting of the manager's stock within an index, or the addition or removal of the manager's stock from an index) are covered by this exemption. Accordingly, no relief is provided for such discretionary changes regarding the manager's own stock.

As noted previously, all conditions in the final exemption have been redesignated to reflect the deletion of section II(h) of the proposal.

8. Disclosure and Authorization Requirements. Many comments raised concerns about the scope of the disclosure and authorization requirements contained in section II(j), (k), (l) and (m) of the proposal. In this regard, the comments noted that section II(i) of the proposal expressly states that the written authorization requirement for a plan's participation in a manager's cross-trading program only applies to plans investing in an Index or Model-Driven Fund that holds "plan assets" subject to the Act. The commenters urged the Department to clarify that the notice and disclosure requirements contained in section II(j), (k), (l) and (m) of the proposal similarly apply only to independent fiduciaries of employee benefit plans that invest in Funds holding plan assets.

The Department acknowledges the commenters' concerns regarding the intended scope of the disclosure and authorization requirements of the proposal and wishes to clarify that such requirements were meant to apply only to those Index and Model-Driven Funds which hold "plan assets," as defined under the Department's regulations (see 29 CFR 2510.3-101). Therefore, the Department has revised section II(i) and (l) of the final exemption (formerly section II(j) and (m) of the proposal) accordingly.

Other comments objected to the prior written authorization requirement contained in section II(i) of the proposal, noting that prior individual exemptions granted by the Department for cross-trades by Index and Model-Driven Funds did not contain a similar requirement. These comments expressed the view that requiring prior written consent from an independent plan fiduciary as a condition for the plan to invest in a Fund that is part of a manager's cross-trading program serves no useful purpose. The comments noted that if a plan fiduciary were to develop any objections to cross-trading on philosophical grounds, then the plan would be free to withdraw from the Fund without penalty. The commenters believed that imposition of such a requirement will be perceived negatively by plan sponsors as an unnecessary obstacle to their ability to freely invest and reinvest plan assets in a manager's Funds.

The Department disagrees with the commenters' assertion that prior written consent from an independent plan fiduciary is unnecessary. The Department notes that part of the reason for proposing a class exemption for cross-trades of securities by Index and Model-Driven Funds was to address issues which had come to the Department's attention subsequent to its granting of a number of individual cross-trading exemptions.

As stated in the Notice published on March 20, 1998, the Department recognizes that it is important to retain the flexibility to periodically review its exemption policy in the context of changed circumstances or new facts that may be brought to its attention (see 63 FR at 13698, first paragraph of section entitled "Issues and Developments"). The Department became aware of new issues involving cross-trades, including cross-trades by certain "passive" investment managers, through enforcement proceedings that raised concerns about whether plan fiduciaries were being provided with adequate disclosures regarding a manager's cross-trading program.

The Department continues to believe that adequate disclosures are necessary in order to enable a plan fiduciary to understand a manager's cross-trading program and how that program may affect the investment goals and objectives of Funds in which the plan may invest. The Department notes that the written authorization required by section II(i) of the proposal will apply to all of the Funds which participate in a manager's cross-trading program. Thus, once an authorization is provided by an independent fiduciary, a plan will be able to invest in any of the Funds without any additional authorization.

The Department further notes that the authorizations required under the exemption for existing plan investors in any Funds may be obtained through a separate notice which describes the Funds' participation in the manager's cross-trading program. Under this requirement, failure to return the termination form by the date specified in the notice will be deemed to be an approval by the independent plan fiduciary of the plan's participation in the cross-trading program. Therefore, the Department has determined not to revise the authorization requirements in the final exemption.

With respect to the required content for the disclosures that must be furnished pursuant to sections II(l) and (m) of the proposal, the commenters were concerned that the initial and annual notices must identify all Index and Model-Driven Funds participating in the manager's cross-trading program, together with detailed information regarding the "triggering events" and other information relating to each Fund. The comments noted that requiring such disclosures would cause managers to violate confidentiality restrictions contained in many client agreements and would also raise privacy concerns for clients who do not wish their identity, or the fact that they maintain an investment account with the manager, to be disclosed. In this regard, the comments noted that managers are restricted from disclosing confidential information about clients, particularly the Funds in which clients invest. In addition, the comments stated that such detailed disclosure would be of little practical value to plan fiduciaries when deciding whether to authorize or maintain plan investments in a particular Fund. As an alternative, several comments suggested that the initial and annual notices should include only general descriptions of the types of Funds that participate in the manager's cross-trading program and of the "triggering events" that give rise to cross-trade opportunities.

The Department acknowledges the concerns expressed by the commenters regarding the confidentiality restrictions contained in client agreements and privacy concerns relating to the identity of such clients and the Funds in which they may invest. Nevertheless, the Department continues to believe that the required disclosures will be useful to a plan fiduciary in understanding the scope and operation of the manager's cross-trading program and whether participation in the program remains in the plan's best interests. However, the Department does not intend for the disclosures in section II(k) of the exemption (relating to a manager's ongoing disclosures of information about the cross-trading program) or section II(l) of the exemption (relating to disclosures for an annual re-authorization of the cross-trading program by an independent plan fiduciary) to require that privileged or confidential information be revealed by the manager. For example, these provisions, as revised herein, do not require a manager to furnish to independent plan fiduciaries the identity of any clients of the manager that are invested in other Funds that are added to the cross-trading program. In addition, any information disclosed by the manager regarding new "triggering events" for existing Funds need only provide such information with respect to Funds in which the plans are invested. With respect to disclosures regarding new "triggering events" which must be provided to the relevant independent plan fiduciaries of the affected Funds (as discussed further below), the Department does not believe that the final exemption requires the disclosure of privileged or confidential information.

Other commenters requested that the Department clarify that portion of section II(l) of the proposal which requires that the manager notify each relevant independent plan fiduciary of the addition of Funds to the manager's cross-trading program, or changes to, or additions of, "triggering events" regarding Funds, following a plan's initial authorization of participation in the program. Specifically, the comments requested clarification as to whether the phrase "each relevant independent plan fiduciary" was intended by the Department to be limited to fiduciaries of plans invested in those specific Funds that are added to a manager's cross-trading program or whose "triggering events" have been modified. The comments noted that it would be burdensome to require managers to notify all plans regarding modifications to "triggering events" that may occur in all Funds, including Funds in which such plans are not invested, just because such Funds participate in the cross-trading program. In addition, it would be difficult to provide notice to all plans prior to, or within 10 days following, such events affecting any of the Funds.

In consideration of such comments, the Department has modified section II(k) of the final exemption (formerly section II(l) of the proposal) to provide that the ongoing notices of information that must be furnished to "each relevant independent plan fiduciary" are required to be made only to those fiduciaries whose plans are invested in the affected Funds (i.e., the Funds added to the program or whose "triggering events" have been changed).

Other commenters stated that certain of the disclosures are unnecessary. For example, several comments objected to the statement required by section II(k) of the proposal, relating to investment decisions for a Fund not being based on the availability of cross-trade opportunities. These comments noted that this statement would be duplicative of other information required in the proposal and would provide no added protection to plans, other than the manager's promise to follow the conditions of the exemption. Certain comments objected to the disclosures described in section II(l) of the proposal including the required statement that "* * * the Manager will have a potentially conflicting division of loyalties and responsibilities to the parties to any cross-trade transaction * * *." In addition, section II(l) of the proposal required that the Manager explain how its cross-trading practices and procedures will mitigate such conflicts. According to the comments, following the terms of the exemption should be viewed as precisely what is necessary to mitigate the conflicts. Thus, the commenters believed that it will be misleading to inform client plans that the operation of a manager's cross-trading program, even with adherence to the terms of the proposed exemption, will still create conflicts.

The Department believes that specific statements relating to the fact that investment decisions for a Fund will not be based on cross-trade opportunities (as described in section II(k) of the proposal), and that there are potential conflicts of interest in such cross-trades (as described in section II(l) of the proposal), are important to an independent plan fiduciary's understanding of the issues involved with cross-trades of securities. The Department notes that, in any cross-trading program, including cross-trading programs maintained by "passive" investment managers, there would be a potential for abuse if a manager were able to control cross-trade opportunities to favor the interests of particular clients. Therefore, the Department has determined not to revise the exemption as requested.

Section II(l) of the proposal requires that independent plan fiduciaries be furnished with detailed disclosure of the procedures to be implemented under the manager's cross-trading program (including the "triggering events" that will create cross-trading opportunities, the independent pricing services that will be used by the manager to price the cross-traded securities, and the methods that will be used for determining closing price). The comments noted that the preamble to the proposal suggests with respect to foreign securities that the applicable independent pricing source should provide the price in local currency rates and, if that currency is other than U.S. dollars, also provide the U.S. dollar exchange rate (see first paragraph of Section IV.B. of the preamble, 64 FR at 70062). In this regard, the comments noted that most pricing services that price foreign securities do not provide currency conversion rates. These commenters suggested that managers be allowed to use another independent service to provide such conversion rates, so long as the service is disclosed to plan investors.

The Department acknowledges the commenter's concerns, based on the language contained in the preamble to the proposal. However, the Department did not intend to prevent a manager from using another independent service to provide the appropriate currency exchange rates for a foreign security. Thus, the Department notes that no modification to section II(k) of the final exemption (formerly section II(l) of the proposal) is necessary.

A number of the comments noted that Section II(m) of the proposal (relating to a plan's annual re-authorization of its participation in the manager's cross-trading program) appears to require, among other things, that each plan fiduciary be notified annually of: (i) Any change in the "triggering events" in the Funds in which their plans are invested; (ii) any change in the "triggering events" in the Funds in which their plans are not invested; and (iii) any "triggering events" and other disclosure items for new Funds added to the cross-trading program since the last annual notice. These comments stated that the latter two categories of disclosures noted above are irrelevant to a plan fiduciary who has no assets invested in those Funds. The commenters believe that such information in the annual disclosures will make it more difficult for plans to properly analyze data which is relevant to an annual re-authorization of the plan's participation in the manager's cross-trading program. The comments suggested that annual disclosures to a plan fiduciary should be limited to that material which is relevant to its plan's investments in the manager's Funds. If a plan fiduciary determines to invest in other Funds for which no annual disclosure information has been previously provided, the fiduciary would then be provided with the material relevant to the new Funds in such annual disclosures.<sup>8</sup>

Upon consideration of these comments, the Department believes that some plan fiduciaries may still find information about other Funds to be useful and should be provided that information by the manager upon request. Therefore, in order to limit the scope of the annual disclosures required in section II(l) of the exemption (formerly section II(m) of the proposal), the Department has modified that section to read as follows:

“* * * Such annual re-authorization must provide information to the relevant independent plan fiduciary regarding each Fund in which the plan is invested as well as explicit notification that the plan fiduciary may upon request obtain disclosures regarding any new Funds in which the plan is not invested that are added to the cross-trading program, or any new triggering events that may have been added to existing Funds in which the plan is not invested, since the time of the initial authorization * * * etc.” [emphasis added]

A commenter requested that the annual re-authorization requirement contained in section II(m) of the proposal be deleted in its entirety. The commenter stated that coordinating such a re-authorization would entail the same administrative burdens as a requirement for periodic notice of new Funds to all plan fiduciaries investing in Funds which participate in the manager's cross-trading program. According to the commenter, a plan could request that the plan's investment in any Fund that participates in the cross-trading program be terminated without penalty. Thus, the commenter maintained that a plan's participants and beneficiaries should be adequately protected without having to re-authorize participation in the cross-trading program every year.

In the event that the Department determined to retain the annual re-authorization requirement, the commenter requested two modifications to section II(m) of the proposal. First, the commenter believed that providing a plan fiduciary with a list of new Funds participating in the manager's cross-trading program would not provide the fiduciary with any useful information. Therefore, the commenter requested that the requirement in section II(m) of the proposal for disclosure regarding new Funds added to the manager's cross-trading program or any new triggering events be modified to permit the manager to make such information available upon request. Second, the commenter noted that section II(m) of the proposal requires the use of a “special termination form” in the annual re-authorization. The commenter noted that there are other methods of communication which would be easier and more efficient for a plan fiduciary to use in the event that the fiduciary decides to terminate its prior authorization.

The Department has determined that it would not be appropriate to delete the requirement for plan fiduciaries of affected Funds to provide an annual re-authorization of their plan's participation in the manager's cross-trading program. The Department believes that annual re-authorization will help ensure effective monitoring of a cross-trading program by the affected plans. Therefore, the Department has retained this requirement in section II(l) of the exemption.

However, in response to the comments regarding the need for a special termination form to be sent to each plan fiduciary, the Department has modified section II(l) of the exemption (formerly section II(m) of the proposal) to permit other forms of written communication to be used to terminate an authorization. Thus, the following new sentence has been added to section II(l) of the final exemption:

“* * * In lieu of providing a special termination form, the notice may permit the independent plan fiduciary to utilize another written instrument by the specified date to terminate the plan's participation in the cross-trading program, provided that in such case the notice explicitly discloses that a termination form may be obtained from the Manager upon request.”

In response to the comments regarding the requirement in the proposal for the annual disclosures to include a list of any new Funds participating in the manager's cross-trading program in which the plan is not invested, or any new triggering events for a manager's Funds in which the plan is not invested, the Department has previously noted above that section II(l) of the exemption has been modified to require that such information need only be provided by a manager upon request.

9. Authorizations for Large Account Restructures. Under section II(n)(3) of the proposal, a portfolio restructuring program must be completed within the later of: (i) 30 days of the initial authorization by an independent fiduciary of the Large Account; or (ii) 30 days of the manager's initial receipt of assets associated with the portfolio restructuring, unless such fiduciary agrees to extend this period for another 30-days. The comments requested a number of revisions and clarifications to this provision. First, the commenters noted that most portfolio restructuring programs are completed within a thirty (30) day period. However, very large portfolio restructurings may take considerably longer. In such instances, the commenters believe that it would be more efficient to allow the manager to obtain authorization to extend the 30-day restructure period at the time of the Large Account fiduciary's initial authorization. Second, one commenter questioned whether securities that cannot be cross-traded with the manager's Funds and, therefore, must be traded on the open market, are affected by the 30-day deadline. Third, another commenter suggested that the 30-day period should begin for each asset on the date on which the asset is included as part of the restructuring account. According to the comment, this change would be responsive to the fact that the manager or trading adviser for a Large Account may not receive all assets to be restructured at the same time.

In response to these comments, the Department has determined to modify section II(m)(3) of the exemption (formerly section II(n)(3) of the proposal) to allow the initial authorization by an independent fiduciary of the Large Account for a specific portfolio restructuring to be effective for 60 days. The 60-day restructure period can be extended for another 30 days if the independent fiduciary for the Large Account agrees to the extension. In addition, the Department wishes to clarify that only securities that are cross-traded are affected by the requirements of section II(m) of the final exemption.

Accordingly, the Department has revised section II(m)(3) of the exemption (formerly section II(n)(3) of the proposal) to provide that:

“* * * All cross-trades made in connection with the portfolio restructuring program must be completed by the Manager within sixty (60) days of the initial authorization * * *” [emphasis added]

In light of the Department's revision to section II(m)(3), the Department does not believe that any further relief is warranted.

10. Record-keeping. Several comments expressed concerns regarding the record-keeping requirements contained in section III(a) of the proposal. In this regard, section III(a)(2)

<sup>8</sup>With respect to such annual disclosures, it should be noted that all relevant independent plan fiduciaries of plans invested in a Fund that is added to a manager's cross-trading program, or has changed or added any “triggering events” for cross-trades by such Fund after the Fund is included in the program, will already have been provided a separate notice of such event(s) prior to, or within ten (10) days following, each event, as required by section II(k) of the exemption.

requires, among other things, that each manager retain, on a Fund by Fund basis, trade lists which specify the amounts of each security to be purchased or sold for a Fund. This information should be provided in sufficient detail to allow an independent plan fiduciary to verify that each of the investment decisions for the Fund were made in response to specific triggering events. Section III(a)(3) of the proposal requires that, on a Fund by Fund basis, the manager must record the actual trades executed on a particular day, noting which of those trades (including all cross-trades) resulted from triggering events. The comments noted that the preamble to the proposal does not seem to require that the notations necessary to meet the requirements of section III(a)(3) specify which specific triggering event caused each trade (or cross-trade), provided that it is clear that a triggering event(s) caused such trades.

Other commenters stated that the record-keeping requirements of section III(a) are unnecessary because, under the proposed exemption, an Index or Model-Driven Fund can only cross-trade as a result of a triggering event. In addition, these commenters suggested that such a record-keeping requirement would be extremely burdensome if it became necessary to "tag" each purchase or sale of a security to a specific triggering event. In such instances, the comments stated that the exemption would involve so much additional record-keeping and costs (i.e., millions of dollars worth per year per manager) that no manager will be able to economically maintain or operate a cross-trading program for its client accounts. Conversely, the comments noted that if the Department believes that "tagging" is not required under the proposal, this record-keeping requirement should be deleted since all cross-trades by a manager's Funds will result from at least one "triggering event" in order to meet the conditions of the exemption. Other comments noted that records regarding specific triggering events should be retained only if the triggering event resulted in actual cross-trading.

In response to these comments, the Department notes that other commenters have indicated that the record-keeping requirements contained in section III of the proposal are consistent with their current record-keeping practices. In this regard, the Department understands that under the individual exemptions granted for cross-trades by Index and Model-Driven Funds, managers have established record-keeping and monitoring systems designed to ensure compliance with the terms and conditions of those exemptions.

The Department notes that the record-keeping requirements contained in the proposal, while more specific than those of the individual exemptions, were designed to be consistent with the record-keeping systems of managers operating cross-trading programs under the individual exemptions. Thus, the Department is not persuaded by the arguments submitted in favor of deletion of this record-keeping requirement. The Department continues to believe that records must be maintained with sufficient specificity to permit an independent plan fiduciary to verify compliance with the conditions of the exemption.

In response to the commenter's request for clarification as to whether the record-keeping requirements contained in section III(a) of the proposal would mandate that a manager's records demonstrate that each cross-trade by a Fund resulted from a specific "triggering event," the Department believes that the following discussion will be helpful.

When more than one bona fide "triggering event" has occurred, the Department expects that a manager's record-keeping system will be able to demonstrate that the cross-trades by the Fund resulted from such "triggering events." For example, if a manager's record-keeping system enables the manager to "link" purchases and sales of specific amounts of securities in each cross-trade by a Fund to "triggering events" within the 3-day period, then such a system would satisfy the record-keeping requirements of the exemption.

As discussed by the Department in the preamble to the proposal, the record-keeping requirements are intended to assure that independent plan fiduciaries will be able to determine whether Funds and their underlying models or indexes operate consistently in following the input of triggering event information. This information should be kept in sufficient detail to enable a replication of specific historical events in order to satisfy an inquiry by interested persons (as described in section III(b)(1) of the exemption). The Department further notes that records regarding specific triggering events need only be maintained if such events resulted in cross-trades that are subject to the conditions of this exemption.

Another comment noted that section III(a) of the proposal requires that the records must be " * * * readily available to assure accessibility and maintained so that an independent fiduciary" may obtain them within a reasonable period of time. The comment noted that most of the required records would be maintained electronically and archived after a few months. The commenter maintained that, while such records are retrievable within a period of days or weeks, the exemption should recognize that the volume of trading and records involved would make faster retrieval impossible. Another comment requested that the Department acknowledge that a "reasonable period of time" in this context would be thirty (30) days. In this regard, the Department acknowledges that thirty (30) days may be a reasonable period of time for obtaining and assembling the required information for interested persons if the volume and complexity of the cross-trading records that must be assembled for such persons is significant.

Other comments noted that making records available to plan participants and beneficiaries would be unduly burdensome and would add no significant additional protections.

The Department has determined that it would be appropriate to modify section III(b)(1) to exclude plan participants and beneficiaries unless such persons are participants or beneficiaries in a Manager Plan.

11. Definition of "Index Fund" and "Model-Driven Fund." Several comments noted that, unlike prior individual exemptions for cross-trading, the definition of the term "Index Fund" in the proposal (see section IV(a) below) requires not only that a Fund be designed to track the rate of return, risk profile and other characteristics of an independently maintained securities index, but also that such tracking occur either by " * * * replicating the same combination of securities which compose such index" or by " * * * sampling the securities which compose such index based on objective criteria and data." The commenters urged the Department to clarify that this definition was not intended to preclude an Index Fund from holding cash, cash equivalents or other equitizing cash investments.

The Department concurs with this comment. The definition of the term "Index Fund" under section IV(a) of the exemption is not intended to prevent a Fund from holding cash, cash equivalents or other equitizing cash investments. For example, the Department notes that the definition of "triggering event" contained in section IV(d)(3) of the exemption specifically contemplates that a Fund may have an accumulation of cash which is attributable to interest or dividends on, and/or tender offers for, portfolio securities.

In this regard, the Department recognizes that significant levels of cash or cash equivalents in an Index Fund generally will create "tracking error" vis-a-vis the independently maintained securities index which the Fund is designed to track. Therefore, assets other than securities which are included in the designated index will only be held by a Fund for a limited period of time.

However, the Department also understands that many managers use temporary cash investments to buy index futures contracts (e.g., S&P 500 futures) in order to more precisely replicate the rate of return and other characteristics of the index prior to investing in the actual securities. It is the view of the Department that the term "Index Fund" would allow the use of futures contracts by an Index Fund in order to reduce "tracking error" and to achieve the designated investment objectives of the Fund provided that such use is disclosed to plan investors. The disclosures should adequately describe the appropriate parameters and limitations on a manager's use of futures contracts for a Fund.

In this regard, the Department's conclusion is based upon its understanding that "passive" investment strategies employed by managers for Index Funds do not primarily rely on futures contracts to achieve a Fund's investment objectives, but rather rely on such contracts as a means for temporarily investing cash accumulations in the Fund prior to actually investing in and holding securities contained in the index. Conversely, the Department is unable to conclude that an Index Fund which invests primarily in index futures contracts as a means of achieving its investment objectives would meet the definition of "Index Fund" under section IV(a) of this exemption.

Several comments noted that the definition of the term "Model-Driven Fund" under the proposal (see section IV(b) below) requires that the identity and amount of a Fund's securities be "* * * selected by a computer model that is based on prescribed objective criteria using independent third party data, not within the control of the Manager * * *" These comments expressed concern that the definition does not appear to include separately managed Index Fund portfolios that exclude specific securities based on independent plan sponsor direction (as opposed to the determination of a computer model). In this regard, the comments noted that the Department has recognized in the past that the composition of a Model-Driven Fund may be influenced by client-initiated instructions to delete certain securities (e.g., tobacco stocks) from an index that is otherwise being tracked. The comments suggested that the definition should be modified to include plan sponsor direction. According to the comments, this modification will not affect the intended purpose of the definition, which is to limit the amount of discretion a manager may exercise to affect the identity or amount of securities to be purchased or sold and to assure that such transactions are not part of an arrangement to benefit the manager.

In response to these comments, the Department notes that the definition of "Model-Driven Fund" in section IV(b)(1) of the exemption would include separately managed Fund portfolios which exclude specific securities based upon an independent plan fiduciary's (e.g., a plan sponsor's) direction. The Department understands that managers will often use computer models which are designed to "screen" certain securities that are listed in an index from the acquisitions that a Fund would otherwise make, in order to accommodate plan sponsor direction. The definition of "Model-Driven Fund," by allowing the identity of the securities which compose the Fund to be selected by a computer model, can accommodate Fund portfolios which are specifically designed to meet the guidelines dictated by plan sponsors. Thus, the Department does not believe that any further modification to this definition is necessary.

Another commenter noted that the definition of "Model-Driven Fund" in section IV(b) of the proposal is limited to Funds which use a computer model to "transform an Index." The commenter stated that many Model-Driven Funds do not seek merely to "transform an index" by limiting their investment universe to those securities contained in a single Index, but rather seek to apply quantitative techniques using various forms of publicly available data across a wide spectrum of securities. For example, the Fund may seek to design a portfolio based on the largest 2500 stocks in the United States, based on market capitalization. These stocks may be contained in various independently maintained indexes, but not all 2500 stocks will be contained in a single index. The commenter urged the Department to delete the phrase "* * * to transform an Index" from section IV(b)(1) of the proposal and to substitute in its place the following "* * * to achieve an investment return that is either based upon or measured by an Index."

The Department does not believe that it would be appropriate in the context of a passive cross-trading exemption to permit managers to use indexes merely as a benchmark for the performance of a portfolio of a Model-Driven Fund. Accordingly, the Department has determined not to revise this definition.

Another comment related to both the definitions of "Index Fund" and "Model-Driven Fund." The commenter noted that sections IV(a)(3) and IV(b)(2) of the proposal provide that each definition includes any investment fund, account or portfolio which either contains "plan assets," is an investment company registered under the Investment Company Act of 1940, "* * * or is an institutional investor." The comment noted that many index and model-driven funds are structured as common trust funds, limited liability companies, New Hampshire trusts or other forms of collective investment vehicles. Many of these funds do not contain "plan assets" subject to the Act, but are managed in the exact same manner as Funds that do contain "plan assets." The commenter is concerned that the definitions of "Index Fund" and "Model-Driven Fund" will not include such funds unless the phrase "* * * or is an institutional investor" contained in sections IV(a)(3) and IV(b)(2) is modified to provide "* * * or contains assets of one or more institutional investors."

The Department concurs with the commenter's suggestion and, accordingly, has modified sections IV(a)(3) and IV(b)(2) of the final exemption.

12. Definition of "Triggering Event." Section IV(d) of the proposal defines the term "triggering event" by listing four specific "events" that are included within the definition. In this regard, the comments noted that the preamble to the proposal states that if a computer model used to create a portfolio for a Model-Driven Fund is designed to exclude particular securities for reasons specified by a plan client or the plan's investment guidelines, such exclusions would not be considered a separate triggering event. However, the comments noted that some of the Department's prior individual exemptions for cross-trading included, as a separate triggering event, the following:

"* * * a change in the composition or weighting of a portfolio used for a Model-Driven Fund which results from an independent fiduciary's decision to exclude certain stocks or types of stocks from the Fund even though such stocks are part of the index used by the Fund.”<sup>9</sup>

The commenters requested that the Department modify the definition of “triggering event” to include a similar provision under the final exemption.

In response to the comments, the Department has added a fifth “triggering event” to section IV(d) of the exemption to incorporate the suggestion made by the commenters. Thus, section IV(d)(5) of the exemption includes within the definition of the term “triggering event” purchases and sales of securities made by Funds after changes to the portfolio of an Index or Model-Driven Fund solely as a result of an independent fiduciary’s decision to exclude certain securities from the Fund.

In this regard, the Department notes that with respect to a Model-Driven Fund, if the exclusion of certain securities is “built into” the original design of the model, the operation of that model by the manager should not create additional cross-trade opportunities for the Fund, since the Fund was not designed to buy the specific securities which are excluded. Similarly, if an “excluded security” is added to an index which has been used by the model to create a portfolio for a Model-Driven Fund, the model should have been already programmed to “screen” such securities from the acquisitions made by the Fund. Moreover, the additional triggering event would not apply with respect to any Index Fund or Model-Driven Fund that is a collective investment fund maintained by the manager, if the decision to exclude certain securities from the Fund’s portfolio was made by the manager.

Lastly, the Department notes that the “triggering event” contained in section IV(d) would be effective on the date that the independent fiduciary directed the manager to exclude the securities from the Index or Model-Driven Fund, and, accordingly, the cross-trades of such securities would have to occur within three (3) business days, pursuant to the requirements of section II(b) of the exemption.

Another comment suggested a further modification to the definition of “triggering event” in the proposal. The commenter objected to the requirement in section IV(d)(2) of the proposal that a triggering event include a “specific amount” of net change in the overall level of assets in a Fund, as a result of investments and withdrawals, and the requirement in section IV(d)(3) of a “specified amount” of accumulated cash or stock in a Fund. The commenter suggested that the references to “specific amount” and “specified amount” be changed to “material amount” in both section IV(d)(2) and (3). In connection with this modification, the commenter also requested that a manager be allowed to either (i) identify such material amount in advance as a specified amount of net change (or accumulated cash or securities) relating to such Fund, or (ii) disclose, in the description of the manager’s cross-trading practices, pursuant to section II(l) of the proposal, the parameters for determining a material amount of net change (or accumulated cash or stock), including any amount of discretion retained by the manager that may affect such net change (or accumulated cash or securities), in sufficient detail to allow the independent fiduciary to determine whether the authorization to engage in cross-trading should be given.

The Department has considered the commenter’s suggestions for changes to the definition of “triggering event,” as contained in section IV(d)(2) and (3) of the proposal, and has determined that it would be appropriate to modify the final exemption. Thus, section IV(d)(2) and (3) of the exemption now reads as follows:

“(d) Triggering Event:

(2) A material amount of net change in the overall level of assets in a Fund, as a result of investments in and withdrawals from the Fund, provided that: (A) such material amount has either been identified in advance as a specified amount of net change relating to such Fund and disclosed in writing as a “triggering event” to an independent fiduciary of each plan having assets held in the Fund prior to, or within ten (10) days following, its inclusion as a “triggering event” for such Fund, *or the Manager has otherwise disclosed in the description of its cross-trading practices pursuant to section II(k) the parameters for determining a material amount of net change, including any amount of discretion retained by the Manager that may affect such net change, in sufficient detail to allow the independent fiduciary to determine whether the authorization to engage in cross-trading should be given; and * * ** [emphasis added]

(3) An accumulation in the Fund of a material amount of either:

(A) cash which is attributable to interest or dividends on, and/or tender offers for, portfolio securities; or

(B) stock attributable to dividends on portfolio securities; provided that such material amount has either been identified in advance as a specified amount relating to such Fund and disclosed in writing as a “triggering event” to an independent fiduciary of each plan having assets held in the Fund prior to, or within ten (10) days after, its inclusion as a “triggering event” for such Fund, *or the Manager has otherwise disclosed in the description of its cross-trading practices pursuant to section II(k) the parameters for determining a material amount of accumulated cash or securities, including any amount of discretion retained by the Manager that may affect such accumulated amount, in sufficient detail to allow the independent fiduciary to determine whether the authorization to engage in cross-trading should be given * * ** [emphasis added]

In connection with the modification noted above, the Department cautions managers that any parameters established for determining a material amount of net change (or accumulated cash or securities), and any discretion retained by the manager which may affect such amounts, must be sufficiently limited and described in enough detail to enable proper identification and monitoring of such triggering events by plan fiduciaries.

Further, with respect to the “triggering events” that must be disclosed to client plans, certain comments noted that section III(b)(2) of the proposal permits a manager, under certain circumstances, to refuse to disclose to clients any trade secrets, or commercial or financial information that is privileged or confidential, where such information is contained in the manager’s record-keeping system. However, these comments noted that the proposal does not include a similar protection for privileged or confidential information included within the mandated client disclosures for triggering events. For example, the triggering event contained in section IV(d)(4) of the proposal (i.e., a change in the model-prescribed portfolio solely by operation of the formulae contained in the computer model underlying the Fund) can only be utilized if certain disclosures are made to an independent fiduciary of each of the plans participating in the Model-Driven Fund. The comments stated that certain of these disclosures may involve highly proprietary information that the investment manager is reluctant to disclose to clients, particularly through a written communication that a client could easily transmit to others. Thus, the comments requested that the Department allow a manager to refuse to disclose trade secrets, or commercial or financial information that is privileged or confidential, so long as the manager notes the reason for non-disclosure in its general disclosure to clients.

In this regard, the Department does not believe that the disclosure of basic factors for making changes in a portfolio for a Model-Driven Fund would require that privileged or confidential information be revealed by the manager to independent plan fiduciaries. Therefore, the Department has not modified the language of section IV(d)(4) in the final exemption.

13. Definition of “Large Account.”
One comment noted that section IV(e) of the proposal excludes from the definition of “Large Account” any “

<sup>9</sup> See, for example, condition (c)(2) of PTE 94–36 (59 FR 19249, April 22, 1994) regarding The Northern Trust Company.

* * * Index Fund or Model-Driven Fund sponsored, maintained, trusteed or managed by the Manager * * * [emphasis added] The commenter noted that some banks act as a directed trustee for group trusts which are managed by third party investment managers. In these situations, the bank acts as a non-discretionary trustee and its primary role is to provide custody and record-keeping services for the group trust. The commenter stated that there is no reason that an independent investment manager should be precluded from retaining the bank as a trading adviser for the liquidation or restructuring of the Large Account since, in its capacity as a non-discretionary trustee, the bank will not be making the underlying investment decisions for the portfolio restructuring of the Large Account. Therefore, the commenter requested that the word "trusteed" be deleted from the definition of "Large Account" in section IV(e) of the proposal.

In this regard, the Department does not believe that it would be appropriate to include all investment funds trusteed by the manager in the definition of "Large Account" contained in the exemption. However, the Department has determined it would be appropriate to modify the language of section IV(e) of the final exemption to include an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund for which the manager is a nondiscretionary trustee. Consequently, the Department has added a definition of the term "nondiscretionary trustee" to the exemption under section IV(m).

Other comments suggested that the definition of "Large Account" in section IV(e) of the proposal should be modified by deleting entirely the phrase which provides that a Large Account " * * * is not an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund sponsored, maintained, trusteed or managed by the Manager." These comments stated that, if the decision to liquidate a Fund's portfolio is made by an independent plan fiduciary, and such decision is entirely out of the manager's control, it should not matter whether the portfolio is an Index or Model-Driven Fund that is managed by the manager.

In response to these comments, the Department has determined that it would not be appropriate to make the requested modification to the definition of the term "Large Account" in section IV(e) of the exemption. The Department continues to believe that cross-trades by a manager's Index and Model-Driven Funds should be subject to the requirements and limitations applicable to Funds under the exemption, such as specified "triggering events" for cross-trade opportunities.

Another comment noted that section IV(e) of the proposal defines a "Large Account" as any investment fund, account or portfolio that, among other things, holds assets of a registered investment company other than an investment company advised or sponsored by the manager. The commenter believes that the limitation excluding investment companies advised or sponsored by the manager should be deleted. The commenter argued that the Large Account would not be participating in the manager's cross-trading program unless it were advised by the manager, and that the definition in the proposal excludes the very category of investment companies for which relief was intended.

The Department notes that the commenter's argument that a Large Account could be, and most likely would be, a registered investment company advised or sponsored by the manager is not consistent with the record upon which the exemption was developed by the Department. In this regard, the category of investment companies for which relief was intended under this exemption, as well as under prior individual exemptions, were those entities that are independent of the manager operating the cross-trading program, but who decide to hire the manager in order to carry out a specific portfolio restructuring program. In such instances, the restructured portfolio will often become an "Index Fund" or "Model-Driven Fund" (as defined herein) that will be managed by the manager.

However, the situation described by the commenter, which would permit the inclusion within a manager's cross-trading program for Large Accounts of "actively-managed" investment company portfolios advised by the manager, would expand the scope of the exemption beyond that intended by the Department. As discussed further below, the Department is not providing relief at this time for cross-trading programs involving "actively-managed" accounts or funds. Therefore, in response to this comment, the Department has determined not to modify section IV(e)(3) of the final exemption.

Other comments noted that the definition of "Large Account" in section IV(e) of the proposal requires that the plan or institutional investor whose assets are held by the Large Account have $50 million or more in total assets. The commenter suggested that the definition be revised to permit assets of affiliated plans maintained by the same employer, or controlled group of employers, to be aggregated for purposes of meeting the $50 million threshold.

In consideration of the commenter's suggestion, the Department has modified the definition of "Large Account" in section IV(e)(1) of the exemption to permit the aggregation of assets of employee benefit plans maintained by the same employer, or controlled group of employers, provided that such assets are pooled for investment purposes in a single master trust.

14. Definition of "Portfolio Restructuring Program." Several comments noted that the term "portfolio restructuring program" is defined in section IV(f) of the proposal to include the buying and selling of securities on behalf of a Large Account in order to produce a portfolio of securities which will be an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund "managed by the Manager * * *" In this regard, the comments noted that portfolio restructuring assignments occasionally contemplate that a manager will construct an Index Fund or Model-Driven Fund portfolio or some other type of portfolio which, once formed, will be managed on an ongoing basis by either the plan sponsor or an independent third party manager. In addition, the comments stated that since the terms "Index Fund" and "Model-Driven Fund" are already defined in the proposal, the phrase " * * * managed by the Manager" in the definition of "portfolio restructuring program" is unnecessary. Accordingly, the commenters suggested that the phrase "managed by the Manager" be deleted from the definition in section IV(f) of the final exemption.

In response to the comments, the Department has modified the definition of the term "portfolio restructuring program" in section IV(f) of the exemption to read as follows:

"(f) Portfolio restructuring program—Buying and selling the securities on behalf of a Large Account in order to produce a portfolio of securities which will be an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund managed by the Manager or by another investment manager, or in order to produce a portfolio of securities the composition of which is designated by a party independent of the Manager, without regard to the requirements of * * * etc." [emphasis added]

15. Volume Restrictions for Cross-Traded Securities. A number of commenters responded to the Department's request for information on whether Index and Model-Driven Funds may hold a significant amount of the outstanding shares of a particular security, whether cross-trades of securities by a manager's Funds may represent a high percentage of the outstanding daily trading volume for such securities, and whether some volume limitation for cross-traded securities would be appropriate. The commenters expressed the view that, even if a manager's Funds were cross-trading securities representing a high percentage of the average daily trading volume, there is no reason to impose a volume limitation in the exemption so long as the purchase or sale of such securities is mandated by a triggering event of an Index or Model-Driven Fund and the securities can be crossed at the closing market price, as established through an independent pricing source. These comments noted that such cross-trades are beneficial to plans regardless of whether the securities involved are thinly-traded, whether the Index and Model-Driven Funds hold significant amounts of the outstanding shares of the securities, or whether the manager's trading represents a high percentage of the trading volume for the securities. The commenters again noted the significant savings which are incurred by avoiding brokerage commissions and bid-ask spreads.

Thus, most commenters expressed the view that if a manager's Index and Model-Driven Funds have a bona fide need to buy or sell specific amounts of securities on any particular business day, in response to various triggering events, there should not be an arbitrary percentage limitation that would inhibit the manager from taking advantage of all cross-trade opportunities for such securities. However, another commenter expressed the view that the Department's exclusion of "thinly-traded" equity securities (by requiring in section II(f)(1) of the proposal that all cross-traded equity securities must be "widely-held" and "actively-traded") is unduly burdensome and unnecessary. As an alternative, this commenter recommended that the Department include "thinly-traded" equity securities, but impose some reasonable limitation on cross-trades of such securities, based on a comparison of the size of the cross-trade to the prior trading volume in the security over a reasonable period of time prior to the date of the transaction.

After considering the comments regarding the inclusion of "thinly-traded" equity securities in the exemption if an appropriate volume limitation is imposed, the Department has determined not to adopt this approach. The Department's decision is based, in part, on its understanding that, since a process-driven cross-trading program must allocate cross-trade opportunities in a mechanical fashion, it would not be economically feasible to override such allocations whenever the equity securities involved exceeded a specified volume limitation. Therefore, the Department continues to believe that it is more appropriate to allow cross-trades of all equity securities that are listed in an independently maintained third party index (see definition of "Index" in section IV(c) of the exemption), without any volume limitations. Under the exemption, the Department deemed all equity securities listed in an index to be "widely-held" and "actively-traded" for purposes of this exemption in order to allow the largest possible universe of equity securities to be cross-traded within the parameters of the conditions of the exemption. In the Department's view, the inclusion of "thinly-traded" equity securities that are not listed in an index would require additional safeguards, such as volume information and limitations, which may not be economically feasible in connection with the operation of a manager's cross-trading program.

16. Avoidance of Adverse Market Impact; Savings in Transaction Costs; A Computer Model's Consideration of Liquidity. In response to specific questions posed by the Department in the preamble to the proposal on the avoidance of market impact through cross-trades (see Section IV.B. of the preamble, 64 FR at 70063), several commenters noted that, by cross-trading at the close of market price, both sides of the cross-trade benefit by avoiding the potential for adverse market impact. The comments stated that adverse market impact occurs each time an investor trades through the market as the market price moves away from the offered price, meaning that the price decreases when the investor wants to sell and increases when the investor wants to buy.

One commenter stated that the Department appears to have concerns about the fact that a manager's avoidance of market impact may not be beneficial to plans at certain times. These concerns originate from the assumption that a manager could benefit certain plans by using a particular trade's market impact as an opportunity for obtaining a better price for a security on the open market. In this regard, the commenter noted that market impact is unpredictable and cannot be forecast by the manager. The commenter stated that managers believe that in most cases market impact is to be avoided, if possible. Thus, the commenter expressed the view that cross-trading, by avoiding the uncertainty of market impact, enables a manager to avoid the possibility of harm to certain clients which would result if trades were placed on the open market, and also eliminate transaction costs and custody costs.

Most commenters noted that a "passive" manager would have no incentive to use the limited amount of discretion allowed by its cross-trading program to favor one Fund or Account over another. One commenter stated that each manager would have the same trading goals for all Funds and Large Accounts—i.e., to maximize cross-trading and to minimize transaction costs for open market transactions.

Another commenter noted that Index and Model-Driven Funds are often buying and selling the same securities because there are many different Funds maintained by a manager that are tracking the same index (e.g., the S&P 500 Index). Many managers also design portfolios for Model-Driven Funds that are based on the same index. Moreover, many large capitalization stocks are listed in more than one index. The commenters noted that cross-trades of such stocks between Index and Model-Driven Funds, pursuant to triggering events that occur without a manager's exercise of any investment discretion, at an objectively determined "closing price" as reported from a reputable third party source, are an efficient and effective way of meeting the investment objectives of plans which invest in such Funds.

In response, the Department recognizes the merits of cross-trading to reduce or eliminate transaction costs in the context of "passively managed" assets. In such instances, a manager has limited investment discretion as a result of independently determined triggering events.

With respect to the Department's concerns that the avoidance of market impact through cross-trades may not equally benefit both sides of such transactions, the Department notes that the potential for abuse appears to be significantly less with "passively-managed" assets than with "actively-managed" assets. However, the Department does not believe that the commenters have demonstrated that cross-trading creates market impact savings, if any, for both sides to any given cross-trade. The Department has been provided with data by one commenter demonstrating some market impact savings for one side in cross-trades of significant amounts of securities (i.e. market impact savings were measured where the cross-trades involved a large capitalization security traded in amounts averaging one and a quarter days of the average public trading volume of the security). No data was provided to the Department measuring market impact savings for smaller cross-trades, nor was data provided measuring the market impact savings, if any, for each side in a particular cross-trade. Even so, as noted below, certain commenters have concluded that there has been significant transaction cost savings with cross-trading "passively-managed" assets and that these savings are attributable solely to the reduction or elimination of brokerage commissions and bid-ask spreads.

Another commenter noted that the preamble to the proposal suggests that relief would not be available under the exemption if the computer model used for a Fund considered the liquidity or availability of securities that are in the cross-trading "network" of Funds managed by the manager (see the sixth paragraph of Section IV.A. of the preamble, 64 FR at 70062). This commenter expressed the view that such a restriction is harmful to plans and misapprehends the operation of some "passively-managed" Funds. The commenter stated that truly "passive" Index Funds track the relevant indices and attempt to reduce or eliminate "tracking error" between the value of the Fund's portfolio vis-a-vis the value of the index's portfolio. The more identical an Index Fund's portfolio looks when compared to the underlying index's portfolio, and the cheaper the acquisition and disposition costs of the securities in the index, the lower the "tracking error" becomes. Thus, a successful "passive" manager is one who has the least amount of tracking error in its Index Funds. The commenter noted that the model used for such an Index Fund will always start with the proposition that the portfolio wants each security in the index in its precise capitalization-weighting, as determined by the index. The more information the model has about the costs of acquisition of any security, the less the tracking error will be for the Fund's portfolio and the more successful the manager will be in meeting the plan's investment objectives.

The Department's concerns regarding a computer model's consideration of liquidity or availability of certain securities that are in the manager's cross-trading "network" are best illustrated by the following example:

A computer model for a Model-Driven Fund identifies three possible securities for acquisition by the Fund in an attempt to achieve the optimal portfolio for the Fund within the specified guidelines dictated by the Fund's investors. These securities are identified, for purposes of this example, as "A", "B", and "C". Security "A" is the most liquid of the three securities, based on third party data, and security "C" is the least liquid. The model considers each security's liquidity factor, among other factors, and the estimated transaction costs which would be incurred to acquire the security, as part of its determination as to which security to buy and how much of the security to buy.

Assume that the model is programmed to make the selection of which security to buy, and the amount to buy, by considering only the liquidity information about each security that is available based on third party market data. Let's also assume that, based on such data, the model chooses security "A" and does not choose securities "B" or "C". The exemption would apply for acquisition of security "A" to be made by the Fund through cross-trades.

However, let's assume that the model is programmed to make the selection of which security to buy, and the amount to buy, by considering cross-trade opportunities that are available for each security, in addition to other liquidity information that is available based on third party data. Let's also assume that security "C" is available through a cross-trade and that the Fund can acquire all the securities it needs through cross-trades of that security. The model has been programmed to "view" security "C" as having "infinite liquidity" because the data within the control of the manager suggests that it can be acquired without incurring any transaction costs. However, this circumstance results from the fact that the necessary number of shares of security "C" which the model has determined that the Fund needs is available through cross-trades. Under this example, security "C" is considerably less liquid than security "A" based upon available third party data. The exemption would not apply for acquisitions of security "C" to be made by the Fund through cross-trades because the selection of security "C" was based upon the manager's own liquidity information at that time and not liquidity information based solely on third party data.

The Department believes that adoption of the commenter's liquidity approach could result in cross-trading opportunities within the control of the manager impacting upon the investment determinations of the Fund. In this regard, the Department notes that investment decisions made by a Fund may not be based in whole or in part by the manager on the availability of cross-trade opportunities and must be made prior to the identification and determination of any cross-trade opportunities, pursuant to the statement required under section II(j) of the exemption. Therefore, any model's consideration of information relating to cross-trade opportunities for particular securities, as part of the model's determination of which securities to buy or sell, how much of a security to buy or sell, or when to execute a sale or purchase of the securities for the Fund, would not be permitted under the exemption. The Department continues to believe that liquidity considerations and other factors considered by a computer model must be based on independent third party data, not within the control of the manager, as described under section IV(b) of the exemption.

Other commenters noted that the transaction cost savings attributable to cross-trades, pursuant to cross-trading programs operating under the Department's existing individual exemptions, are significant. In response to the Department's questions about whether such cost savings are attributable to the avoidance of market impact or only commission savings, one commenter stated that its clients have saved over $300 million annually through cross-trading and that this calculation is based entirely on the avoidance of brokerage commissions and bid-ask spreads. Another commenter stated that its clients saved approximately $282 million in the calendar year 1999, based on the total number of shares that were cross-traded during the year, broken down by the market in which each share would have been traded if it went to the open market. This commenter also confirmed that these savings are attributable to savings in brokerage commissions, bid-ask spreads and taxes, as applicable in each market. Thus, in both instances, the commenters noted significant cost savings even without taking into consideration whatever measurable "savings" may have been attributable to the avoidance of market impact.

17. Effect of Class Exemption on Individual Exemptions; Appropriate Scope of Relief for the Exemption. The commenters expressed many different points of view in response to the Department's invitation for comments on the effect that the continuation of current individual exemptions, for cross-trades by Index and Model-Driven Funds, would have in offering an advantage to those investment managers granted such relief compared to those managers which would utilize this exemption (see Section IV.H. of the preamble to the proposal, 64 FR at 70066).

One comment noted that the proposal would expand the relief for cross-trading beyond the relief currently available under the individual exemptions, particularly by permitting cross-trades of debt securities and by expanding the definitions of Funds and Large Accounts that are permitted to cross-trade. However, the comment also noted that the proposal imposes a number of additional disclosure, authorization and operational requirements on cross-trading programs. Thus, the comment stated that it is not clear whether managers who continue to utilize their individual exemptions would have an advantage over those utilizing the class exemption.

Another comment stated that some individual exemptions have been relied upon by managers for more than a decade and that such exemptions should remain in place after the class exemption is granted. This commenter noted that managers have invested substantial time and resources in the current cross-trading systems, and other programmatic features in such systems have been developed in reliance upon the conditions of the individual exemptions. Any revocation of the existing exemptions would mandate conformance with the new exemption's requirements and features, and the manager's cross-trading procedures and systems would have to be significantly revised. The commenter stated that such revisions would place an undue burden on the managers, would add significant costs to the operation of the existing cross-trading programs, and would not provide any added benefits to the managers' client plans.

However, other commenters stated that, by permitting firms to continue to rely on individual exemptions that have, in some respects, less stringent conditions than the proposal, the Department would create a competitive advantage for advisers who already have exemptions. Some commenters further stated that, by granting the class exemption, the Department is already creating a competitive advantage for firms that "passively manage" plan assets over those which "actively manage" such assets. These commenters urged the Department to hold all firms to the same standard, at least with respect to the class exemption, and eliminate the existing individual exemptions to ensure an "equal playing field" for all similarly situated managers that "passively-manage" assets.

In this regard, the Department has not made a determination at the present time whether to revoke any past individual exemptions for cross-trading programs involving Index and Model-Driven Funds. It is not clear whether managers who continue to utilize their individual exemptions will have an advantage over those utilizing the class exemption since cross-trades may only be performed if they conform with either all of the provisions of an individual exemption or all of the provisions of the class exemption (i.e., managers who hold individual exemptions may not pick and choose selected provisions from their own exemptions and the class exemption). As noted in the preamble to the proposal, prior to modifying or revoking any individual exemption, the Department must publish a notice of its proposed action in the Federal Register and provide interested persons with an opportunity to comment on any proposed revocation or modification of such exemptions.

Other commenters requested that the Department expand the proposal to permit cross-trades by "actively-managed" plan accounts of a manager. These commenters noted that the clear advantages of cross-trading should be available to both actively and passively managed funds, and that the Department's exclusion of "actively-managed" funds from the current exemption is unfair.

Other commenters stated that it was appropriate for the Department to handle cross-trades by "passively-managed" funds separately. Such commenters noted that "passive" managers have far less discretion than "active" managers. One comment stated that a class exemption attempting to address both "actively" and "passively" managed funds would be confusing and could lead to the application of unnecessarily burdensome conditions on "passively-managed" funds to address concerns applicable only to "actively-managed" funds.

The Department has determined to grant this exemption for cross-trading programs involving Index and Model-Driven Funds and to separately proceed with its consideration of relief for cross-trades by "actively-managed" plan accounts or pooled funds containing "plan assets" covered by the Act.<sup>10</sup> The Department acknowledges that appropriate cross-trades of securities by "actively-managed" accounts or funds would be beneficial to employee benefit plans in saving transaction costs and avoiding adverse market impact for both sides of the transactions. However, the Department believes that adequate safeguards must be developed in order to prevent abuses which could occur <sup>10</sup> Interested persons may wish to review the information received by the Department in response to the Notice published in the Federal Register on March 20, 1998 (63 FR 13696) and in the testimony provided at the public hearing on cross-trades of securities by "actively-managed" plan accounts and pooled funds (the Hearing), which was held at the Department on February 10 and 11, 2000. Copies of the comments received by the Department in response to the Notice, and the testimony received at the Hearing, are available for public inspection in the Public Documents Room, Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration, U.S. Department of Labor, Room N-1513, 200 Constitution Avenue NW, Washington, DC 20210. when an investment manager has significant investment discretion which could be used to benefit certain clients or the manager itself at the expense of its ERISA-covered accounts.

The Department is currently considering what conditions may be necessary to address potential abuses in cross-trading programs that would involve "actively-managed" plan accounts. The Department continues to receive and review additional information from various interested persons which will assist the Department in developing a separate class exemption for cross-trades by "actively-managed" plan accounts.

Description of the Exemption

A. Scope and General Rule

The exemption consists of four parts. Section I sets forth the general exemption and describes the transactions covered by the exemption. Sections II and III contain specific and general conditions applicable to transactions described in section I. Section IV contains definitions for certain terms used in the exemption.

The exemption set forth in section I provides relief from the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(A) and 406(b)(2) of ERISA and section 8477(c)(2)(B) of FERSA for: (a) The purchase and sale of securities between an Index or Model-Driven Fund and another such Fund, at least one of which holds "plan assets" subject to the Act; and (b) the purchase and sale of securities between such Funds and certain large accounts (Large Accounts) pursuant to portfolio restructuring programs of the Large Accounts. The exemption also would apply to cross-trades between two or more Large Accounts if such cross-trades occur as part of a single cross-trading program involving both Funds and Large Accounts pursuant to which securities are cross-traded solely as a result of the objective operation of the program.

The exemption under section I(a) applies to cross-trades of securities among Index or Model-Driven Funds managed by the same investment manager where both Funds contain plan assets. However, as stated above, a violation of section 406(b)(2) occurs when an investment manager has investment discretion with respect to both sides of a cross-trade of securities and at least one side is an entity which contains plan assets. As a result, the exemption is also applicable to situations where the investment manager has investment discretion for both Funds involved in a cross-trade but one Fund does not contain plan assets because, for example, it is registered as an investment company under the Investment Company Act of 1940 (e.g., a mutual fund). Any mutual fund or other institutional investor covered by the exemption under section I(a) must meet the definition of an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund, contained in section IV(a) and (b). Institutional investors which meet the definitions contained in section IV(a) and (b) may include, but are not limited to, entities such as insurance company separate accounts or general accounts, governmental plans, university endowment funds, charitable foundation funds, trusts or other funds exempt from taxation under section 501(a) of the Code.

The exemption under section I(b) applies to the purchase and sale of securities between a Fund and a Large Account, at least one of which holds "plan assets" subject to ERISA or FERSA, pursuant to portfolio restructuring programs initiated on behalf of certain Large Accounts. The term "Large Account" is defined in section IV(e) to include certain large employee benefit plans or other large institutional investors with at least $50 million in total assets, including certain insurance company separate and general accounts and registered investment companies. For purposes of the $50 million requirement, the assets of one or more employee benefit plans maintained by the same employer, or controlled group of employers, may be aggregated, provided that such assets are pooled for investment purposes in a single master trust. A portfolio restructuring program, as defined in section IV(f), involves the buying and selling of securities on behalf of a Large Account in order to produce a portfolio of securities which either becomes an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund or resembles such a Fund, or to carry out a liquidation of a specified portfolio of securities for a Large Account. The Fund or other portfolio resulting from the restructuring program will be either managed by the manager of the Fund or by an investment manager that is independent of the Fund manager. The definition of a Large Account requires that an independent fiduciary authorize a Fund manager (i.e., a Manager, as defined in section IV(i)) to restructure all or part of the portfolio or to act as a "trading adviser" as defined in section IV(g) with respect to the restructuring of such portfolio. The trading adviser's role is limited under the exemption to the disposition within a stated period of time of a securities portfolio of a Large Account and/or the creation of the required portfolio.

Under this definition, the manager may not have any discretionary authority for any asset allocation, restructuring or liquidation decisions or otherwise provide investment advice with respect to such transactions. In this regard, the Department notes that it expects the investment manager to comply with the applicable securities laws in connection with any portfolio restructuring program.

Section IV(a) and (b) require that the Index or Model-Driven Fund be based upon an index which represents the investment performance of a specific segment of the public market for equity or debt securities. Section IV(c) requires that the index be established and maintained by an independent organization which is: in the business of providing financial information or brokerage services to institutional clients; a publisher of financial news or information; or a public stock exchange or association of securities dealers. The index must be a standardized index of securities which is not specifically tailored for the use of the Fund manager.

Section IV(a) and (b) specifically define Index and Model-Driven Funds for purposes of the exemption. These definitions are designed to limit the amount of discretion the manager can exercise to affect the identity or amount of securities to be purchased or sold and to assure that the purchase or sale of any security is not part of an arrangement, agreement or understanding designed to benefit the manager. Under the definition of "Index Fund" contained in section IV(a), the investment manager must track the rate of return of an independently maintained securities index by either replicating the same combination of securities which compose such index or by investing in a representative sample of such portfolio based on objective criteria and data designed to recreate the projected return, risk profile and other characteristics of the index. Under the definition of "Model-Driven Fund" contained in section IV(b), trading decisions are passive or process-driven since the identity and the amount of the securities contained in the Fund must be selected by a computer model. Although the manager can use its discretion to design the computer model, the model must be based on prescribed objective criteria using third party data, not within the control of the manager, to transform an independently maintained index. Thus, for example, no exemptive relief would be available if the manager designed the computer model to consider the liquidity or the availability of a security based on information that was solely within the control of the manager. In such instances, the computer model would be considering data that was not from a third party source, and that was within the control of the manager.

B. Price and Securities

Section II(a) of the exemption requires that each cross-trade be executed at the closing price for that security. In addition, section II(g) of the exemption requires that the manager may not receive any brokerage fees or commissions as a result of the cross-trades.

Closing price is defined in section IV(h) as the price for the security on the date of the transaction, as determined by objective procedures disclosed to Fund investors in advance and consistently applied with respect to securities traded in the same market. The procedures shall indicate the independent pricing source (and alternates, if the designated pricing source is unavailable) used to establish the closing price and the time frame after the close of the market in which the closing price will be determined. The pricing source must be independent of the manager and must be engaged in the ordinary course of business of providing financial news and pricing information to institutional investors and/or the general public, and must be widely recognized as an accurate and reliable source for such information. In this regard, some managers may use one pricing service for pricing domestic securities and another pricing service for pricing foreign securities. With respect to foreign securities, the applicable independent pricing source should provide the price in local currency rates and, if that currency is other than U.S. dollars, may also provide the U.S. dollar exchange rate. Thus, securities must be cross-traded in all cases at the closing prices received by the manager from the relevant independent pricing source.

The Department has adopted this definition of the term "closing price" in an effort to be consistent with the methods for determining the price of cross-traded securities currently utilized by Index and Model-Driven Fund investment managers, according to both the comments received in response to the proposal published on December 15, 1999 and the comments received in response to the Notice published on March 20, 1998. In addition, the Department believes that this pricing approach will ensure that the pricing procedures utilized are objective and not subject to the discretion or manipulation of any of the involved parties.

Section II(f) of the exemption requires that cross-trades of either equity securities or fixed income securities involve only securities for which market quotations are readily available from independent sources that are engaged in the ordinary course of business of providing financial news and pricing information to institutional investors and/or the general public, and are widely recognized as accurate and reliable sources for such information. Section II(f)(1) further requires that cross-trades of equity securities only involve securities which are widely-held and actively-traded. In this regard, the Department notes that equity securities will be deemed to be "widely-held" and "actively-traded" under this exemption if such securities are included in an independently maintained index, as defined in section IV(c) herein. The Department expects that managers, in making their determinations regarding the types of securities included within the scope of this condition, would consider information about the average daily trading volume for equities traded on any recognized securities exchange or automated broker-dealer quotation system which would be readily available from independent pricing sources or other independent sources which publish financial news and information.

C. Triggering Events

Section II(b) of the exemption requires that any purchase or sale of securities by a Fund in a cross-trade with another Fund or with a Large Account occur as a direct result of a "triggering event," as defined in section IV(d), and that such cross-trade be executed no later than the close of the third business day following such "triggering event." The Department believes that trading pursuant to triggering events limits the discretion of the manager to affect the identity or amount of securities to be purchased or sold. Triggering events, as defined in section IV(d), are outside the control of the manager and will "automatically" cause the buy or sell decision to occur.

Triggering events are defined in section IV(d) as:

(1) A change in the composition or weighting of the index underlying the Fund by the independent organization creating and maintaining the index;

(2) A material amount of net change in the overall level of assets in a Fund, as a result of investments in and withdrawals from the Fund, provided that:

(A) Such material amount has either been identified in advance as a specified amount of net change relating to such Fund and disclosed in writing as a "triggering event" to an independent fiduciary of each plan having assets held in the Fund prior to, or within ten (10) days following, its inclusion as a "triggering event" for such Fund or the Manager has otherwise disclosed in the description of its cross-trading practices pursuant to section II(k) the parameters for determining a material amount of net change, including any amount of discretion retained by the Manager that may affect such net change, in sufficient detail to allow the independent fiduciary to determine whether the authorization to engage in cross-trading should be given; and

(B) Investments or withdrawals as a result of the manager's discretion to invest or withdraw assets of a Manager Plan, other than a Manager Plan which is a defined contribution plan under which participants direct the investment of their accounts among various investment options, including such Fund, will not be taken into account in determining the specified amount of net change;

(3) An accumulation in the Fund of a material amount of either:

(A) Cash which is attributable to interest or dividends on, and/or tender offers for, portfolio securities; or

(B) Stock attributable to dividends on portfolio securities; provided that such material amount has either been identified in advance as a specified amount relating to such Fund and disclosed in writing as a "triggering event" to an independent fiduciary of each plan having assets held in the Fund prior to, or within ten (10) days after, its inclusion as a "triggering event" for such Fund, or the Manager has otherwise disclosed in the description of its cross-trading practices pursuant to section II(k) the parameters for determining a material amount of accumulated cash or securities, including any amount of discretion retained by the Manager that may affect such accumulated amount, in sufficient detail to allow the independent fiduciary to determine whether the authorization to engage in cross-trading should be given;

(4) A change in the composition of the portfolio of a Model-Driven Fund mandated solely by operation of the formulae contained in the computer model underlying the Fund where the basic factors for making such changes (and any fixed frequency for operating the computer model) have been disclosed in writing to an independent fiduciary of each plan having assets held in the Fund, prior to, or within ten (10) days after, its inclusion as a "triggering event" for such Fund; or

(5) A change in the composition or weighting of a portfolio for an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund which results from an independent fiduciary's direction to exclude certain securities or types of securities from the Fund, notwithstanding that such securities are part of the index used by the Fund.

The first three triggering events have been adopted based upon those triggering events utilized in prior individual exemptions, with an additional requirement in the second and third triggering events for the amounts involved, or the parameters for determining such amounts, to be specified and disclosed to independent fiduciaries of plans investing in the Funds. In addition, the fourth triggering event has been added in order to clarify that a triggering event also occurs as a result of a change in the composition of a Fund's portfolio mandated solely by operation of the computer model underlying the Fund. For example, if a model contained a formula for a Fund requiring only stocks with a certain price/earnings ratio and some of the originally prescribed stocks now were above the specified tolerances of the formula relating to that model, a triggering event would occur requiring that those stocks be sold by the Fund. The Department has included this triggering event under this exemption in order to clarify that Model-Driven Funds may need to buy or sell securities to conform to changes to the portfolio prescribed by the model that differ from changes to a portfolio necessitated as a result of changes to the underlying index. The exemption does not require that a computer model be operated according to any fixed frequency. However, the Department is of the view that the exemption would not be available unless the formulae contained in the computer model underlying a Fund were operated by the manager on an objective basis rather than being used for the purpose of creating cross-trade opportunities in response to the needs of other Funds or certain Large Accounts.

The Department further notes that under section II(k), disclosures must be made to independent plan fiduciaries of the affected Funds regarding the triggering events that would create cross-trading opportunities for such Funds under the manager's cross-trading program. Under the model-driven triggering event contained in the exemption, the basic factors for making changes in the composition of the portfolio of a Model-Driven Fund mandated solely by operation of the formulae contained in the computer model must be included in these disclosures.

The Department notes that a fifth triggering event has been added to the final exemption, based on comments received, which permits plan sponsors to direct the manager to delete certain securities from an Index or Model-Driven Fund where the Fund otherwise would hold such securities based upon the particular index or computer model. The Department understands that this triggering event is consistent with practices utilized by certain managers in prior individual exemptions and will facilitate additional cross-trade opportunities.

D. Modifications to the Computer Model

Section II(c) requires that, if the model or the computer program used to generate the model underlying the Fund is changed by the manager, no cross-trades of any securities can be engaged in pursuant to the exemption for three (3) business days following the change. This restriction recognizes the authority of the manager to change assumptions involving computer models after the model's activation.

The Department notes that the three (3) business day "blackout" period for cross-trades by a Fund after any change made by the manager to the model underlying the Fund is intended to prevent model changes which might be made by managers, in part, to deliberately create additional cross-trading activity.

In addition, under section IV(b), a computer model for a Model-Driven Fund must use independent third party data, not within the control of the manager, to transform an index.

E. Allocation of Cross-Trade Opportunities

The Department notes that frequently the amount of a security which all of the Funds need to buy may be less than the amount of such security which all of the Funds will need to sell, or vice versa. Thus, section II(d) of the exemption requires that all cross-trade opportunities be allocated by the manager among potential buyers, or sellers, on an objective basis. Under section II(d), this basis for allocation must have been previously disclosed to independent fiduciaries on behalf of each plan investor, and must not permit the exercise of any discretion by the manager. In previous individual exemptions, applicants have relied on different systems (e.g. pro rata or queue) to objectively allocate cross-trade opportunities. While it appears to the Department that a pro rata basis of allocation would be the method least subject to scrutiny, the Department recognizes the validity of other workable objective systems. However, the Department cautions that such systems may not permit the exercise of discretion by the manager.

F. Requirements for Cross-Trades by a Manager Plan

Section II(e) of the exemption requires that no more than twenty (20) percent of the assets of the Fund or Large Account at the time of the cross-trade may be comprised of assets of employee benefit plans maintained by the Manager for its own employees (Manager Plans) for which the Manager exercises investment discretion. In this regard, the Department wishes to note that this percentage limitation would not apply to any Manager Plan(s) for which the Manager does not exercise investment discretion. For example, a Manager Plan which is a defined contribution plan under which participants direct the investment of their accounts among various investment options would not be subject to the twenty (20) percent limit.

G. Disclosures and Authorizations

Section II(h) of the exemption requires that a plan's participation in a cross-trade program of a manager involving Index and Model-Driven Funds at least one of which holds "plan assets" subject to the Act will be subject to the prior written authorization of a plan fiduciary who is independent of the manager. However, for purposes of this exemption, the requirement that the authorizing fiduciary be independent of the manager shall not apply in the case of a Manager Plan. In this regard, section II(e) of the exemption requires that no more than twenty (20) percent of the assets of the Fund or Large Account at the time of the cross-trade may be comprised of assets of a Manager Plan for which the Manager exercises investment discretion.

The authorization described in section II(h), once given, would apply to all Funds that comprise the manager's cross-trading program at the time of the authorization. Thus, a new authorization by an independent plan fiduciary for investment in a different Fund, in which the plan did not invest at the time of its initial written authorization, would not be necessary to the extent that such Fund was part of the program at the time of the original authorization. However, where a manager makes new Funds available for plan investors or changes triggering events relating to Funds subject to the initial authorization, and such Funds or triggering events were not previously disclosed as being part of the manager's cross-trading program, section II(k) of the exemption requires that the manager furnish additional disclosures to an independent plan fiduciary. The Manager shall provide a notice to each relevant independent plan fiduciary of plans invested in the affected Funds prior to, or within ten (10) days following, such addition of Funds or change to, or addition of, triggering events, which contains a description of such Fund(s) or triggering event(s). Such notice will also include a statement that the plan has the right to terminate its participation in the cross-trading program and its investment in any Index Fund or Model-Driven Fund without penalty at any time, as soon as is necessary to effectuate the withdrawal in an orderly manner.

As noted below, section II(l) requires that disclosures be made to the relevant independent plan fiduciaries regarding each Fund in which the plan is invested as part of the notice required for a plan's annual re-authorization of its participation in the manager's cross-trading program. In addition, section II(l) requires that disclosures regarding any new Funds, or new triggering events in any existing Funds, in which a plan is not invested be made available, upon request, as part of the notice required for a plan's annual re-authorization of its participation in the manager's cross-trading program.

Section II(i) clarifies the meaning of Section II(h) with respect to existing plan investors in any of the Funds, which hold plan assets subject to the Act, prior to a manager's implementation of a cross-trading program. Under section II(i), the authorizing independent fiduciary must be furnished notice and an opportunity to object to that plan's participation in the program not less than forty-five (45) days prior to the implementation of the cross-trade program. Section II(i) further states that the failure of the authorizing fiduciary to return a special termination form provided in the notice by a specified date that is at least thirty (30) days from receipt shall be deemed to be approval of the plan's participation in the program. If the authorizing plan fiduciary objects to the plan's inclusion in the program, the plan will be given the opportunity to withdraw without penalty prior to the program's implementation.

Sections II(j) and II(k) describe the type of information that is required to be disclosed to a plan fiduciary prior to the authorization defined in sections II(h) and II(i). Important among these disclosures is a statement describing the conflicts that will exist as a result of the manager's cross-trading activities. This statement must also detail and explain how the manager's practices and procedures will mitigate such conflicts. Such writing must include a statement that:

Investment decisions will not be based in whole or in part by the manager on the availability of cross-trade opportunities. These investment decisions include:

- Which securities to buy or sell;
- How much of each security to buy or sell; and,
- When to execute a sale or purchase of each security.

Investment decisions will be made prior to the identification and determination of any cross-trade opportunities. In addition, all cross-trades by a Fund will be based solely upon triggering events set forth in the exemption. Records documenting each cross-trade transaction will be retained by the manager.

Section II(l) further requires that notice be provided to the authorizing plan fiduciary at least annually of the plan's right to terminate its participation in the cross-trading program and its investment in any of the Funds without penalty. Such notice must be accompanied by a special termination form. Failure to return the form by a specified date that is at least thirty (30) days from the receipt will be deemed approval of the plan's continued participation in the cross-trading program. In lieu of providing a special termination form, the notice may permit the independent plan fiduciary to utilize another written instrument by the specified date to terminate the plan's participation in the cross-trading program, provided that in such case the notice explicitly discloses that a termination form may be obtained from the Manager upon request. Such annual re-authorization will provide information to the relevant independent plan fiduciary regarding each Fund in which the plan is invested, as well as explicit notification that the plan fiduciary may request and obtain disclosures regarding any new Funds in which the plan is not invested that are added to the cross-trading program, or any new "triggering events" (as defined in Section IV(d) below) that may have been added to existing Funds in which the plan is not invested, since the time of the initial authorization described in Section II(h), or the time of the notice described in Section II(i).

Section II(m) of the exemption details specific requirements for cross-trades of securities which will occur in connection with a Large Account restructuring. In particular, section II(m)(2) requires that the authorization for such cross-trades must be made in writing prior to the cross-trade transactions by fiduciaries of the Large Account who are independent of the manager (except in the case of a Manager Plan). Such authorization must follow full written disclosure of information regarding the cross-trading program. Such authorization may be terminated at will upon receipt by the manager of written notice of termination. A termination form must be supplied to the Large Account fiduciary concurrent with the written description of the cross-trading program. Under section II(m)(3), the portfolio restructuring program must be completed within sixty (60) days of the initial authorization made by the Large Account's fiduciary (or initial receipt of assets associated with the restructuring, if later), unless the Large Account's fiduciary agrees in writing to extend this period for another thirty (30) days. Large Account fiduciaries may utilize the termination form or any other written instrument at any time within the 60-day period, or the additional 30-day period, to terminate their prior written authorization for cross-trading related to the portfolio restructuring program. Under section II(m)(4), within thirty (30) days of the completion of the restructuring program, the Large Account fiduciary must be fully apprised in writing of the results of the transactions. Such writing may include, upon request by the Large Account fiduciary, additional information sufficient to allow the independent fiduciary for the Large Account to verify the need for each cross-trade and the determination of the above decisions. However, pursuant to section III(b)(2) the manager may refuse to disclose to a Large Account fiduciary or other person any such information which is deemed confidential or privileged if the manager is otherwise permitted by law to withhold such information from such person, provided that by the close of the thirtieth (30th) day following the request, the manager gives a written notice to such person advising that person both the reasons for the refusal and that the Department may request such information.

H. Recordkeeping

Section III(a) requires that the manager maintain records necessary to allow a determination of whether the conditions of the exemption have been met. These records must be maintained for a period of six (6) years from the date of the transactions. These records must include records which identify the following:

(1) On a Fund by Fund basis, the specific triggering events which result in the creation of the model prescribed output or trade list of specific securities to be cross-traded;

(2) On a Fund by Fund basis, the model prescribed output or trade list which describes: (A) which securities to buy or sell; (B) how much of each security to buy or sell; in detail sufficient to allow an independent plan fiduciary to verify that each of the above decisions for the Fund was made in response to specific triggering events; and

(3) On a Fund by Fund basis, the actual trades executed by the Fund on a particular day and which of those trades were associated with triggering events.

As explained to the Department, the triggering event relating to net investments in, or withdrawals from, a Fund results in new cash to invest in the Fund or the need to liquidate securities from a Fund. The model or index underlying the Fund determines which securities to purchase or sell based on the amount of net investments or withdrawals. This process results in the creation of a trade list or a model prescribed output of securities to be purchased or sold. The manager then applies its objective allocation system to the trade lists or model prescribed outputs used for other Funds participating in the cross-trade program to determine which particular cross-trades will occur between Funds. For those securities which cannot be cross-traded after application of the manager's allocation system, the necessary purchases and sales are made through other means.

In the view of the Department, records must be maintained of this cross-trading activity with enough specificity to allow an independent plan fiduciary to verify whether the safeguards of this exemption have been met. Section II(b) requires that any cross-trade of securities by a Fund occur as a direct result of a "triggering event" as defined in section IV(d) and is executed no later than the close of the third business day following such "triggering event."

Among the records needed to verify that this condition has been satisfied, section III(a)(1) requires that, on a Fund by Fund basis, the manager maintain a record of the specific triggering events which result in the creation of the list of specific securities for the manager's cross-trading system. Section III(a)(2) further requires that, on a Fund by Fund basis, the manager maintain records of the model prescribed output or trade list, as well as the procedures utilized by the manager to determine which securities to buy or sell and how much of each security to buy or sell, in detail sufficient to allow an independent plan fiduciary to verify that each of the above decisions for the Fund was made in response to specific triggering events. As provided by section III(b)(2), if such material is viewed as a trade secret, or privileged or confidential, the manager may refuse to disclose such information if reasons for the refusal are given and the person is also notified that the Department of Labor may request such information.

This record-keeping requirement is intended to assure that independent plan fiduciaries will be able to determine whether Funds and their underlying models or indexes operate consistently in following the input of triggering event information. The Department does not intend to prescribe a detailed list of records that are necessary to enable a determination of compliance with the exemption because the necessary records will depend on the nature of the Index or Model-Driven Funds involved and other factors. This information, however, should be kept in sufficient detail to enable a replication of specific historical events in order to satisfy an inquiry by persons identified in section III(b)(1). Section III(a)(3) requires that, on a Fund by Fund basis, records be maintained of the actual trades executed by the Fund on a particular day and which of those trades resulted from triggering events.

Further, Section III(a) requires that the records must be readily available to assure accessibility and maintained so that an independent fiduciary, or other persons identified in section III(b)(1), may obtain them within a reasonable time. This requirement should permit the records to be retrieved and assembled quickly, regardless of the location in which they are maintained. For those records which are not maintained electronically, the records should be maintained in a central location to facilitate assembly and examination.

All records must be unconditionally available at their customary location for examination during normal business hours by the persons described in section III(b)(1). However, as noted with respect to information which may be disclosed to a Large Account fiduciary or other person, the manager may refuse to disclose to a person, other than a duly authorized employee or representative of the Department or the Internal Revenue Service, any such information which is deemed confidential or privileged if the manager is otherwise permitted by law to withhold such information from such person. In such instances, the manager shall provide, by the close of the thirtieth (30th) day following the request, a written notice to such person advising that person of the reasons for the refusal and that the Department may request such information.

General Information

The attention of interested persons is directed to the following:

(1) The fact that a transaction is the subject of an exemption under section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code does not relieve a fiduciary or other party in interest or disqualified person from certain other provisions of the Act and the Code, including any prohibited transaction provisions to which the exemption does not apply and the general fiduciary responsibility provisions of section 404 of the Act which require, among other things, that a fiduciary discharge his duties with respect to the plan solely in the interests of the participants and beneficiaries of the plan and in a prudent fashion in accordance with section 404(a)(1)(B) of the Act; nor does it affect the requirement of section 401(a) of the Code that the plan must operate for the exclusive benefit of the employees of the employer maintaining the plan and their beneficiaries;

(2) In accordance with section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and based upon the entire record, the Department finds that the exemption is administratively feasible, in the interests of the plans and their participants and beneficiaries and protective of the rights of participants and beneficiaries of such plans;

(3) The exemption is applicable to a particular transaction only if the conditions specified in the class exemption are met; and

(4) The exemption is supplemental to, and not in derogation of, any other provisions of the Code and the Act, including statutory or administrative exemptions and transitional rules. Furthermore, the fact that a transaction is subject to an administrative or statutory exemption is not dispositive of whether the transaction is in fact a prohibited transaction.

Exemption

Accordingly, the following exemption is granted under the authority of section 408(a) of the Act and section 4975(c)(2) of the Code, and in accordance with the procedures set forth in 29 CFR part 2570, subpart B (55 FR 32836, 32847, August 10, 1990.)

Section I—Exemption for Cross-Trading of Securities by Index and/or Model-Driven Funds

Effective April 15, 2002, the restrictions of sections 406(a)(1)(A) and 406(b)(2) of the Act, section 8477(c)(2)(B) of FERSA, and the sanctions resulting from the application of section 4975 of the Code, by reason of section 4975(c)(1)(A) of the Code, shall not apply to the transactions described below if the applicable conditions set forth in Sections II and III below are satisfied.

(a) The purchase and sale of securities between an Index Fund or a Model-Driven Fund (a "Fund"), as defined in Sections IV(a) and (b) below, and another Fund, at least one of which holds "plan assets" subject to the Act or FERSA; or

(b) The purchase and sale of securities between a Fund and a Large Account, as defined in Section IV(e) below, at least one of which holds "plan assets" subject to the Act or FERSA, pursuant to a portfolio restructuring program, as defined in Section IV(f) below, of the Large Account;

Notwithstanding the foregoing, this exemption shall apply to cross-trades between two or more Large Accounts pursuant to a portfolio restructuring program if such cross-trades occur as part of a single cross-trading program involving both Funds and Large Accounts for which securities are cross-traded solely as a result of the objective operation of the program.

Section II. Specific Conditions

(a) The cross-trade is executed at the closing price, as defined in Section IV(h) below.

(b) Any cross-trade of securities by a Fund occurs as a direct result of a "triggering event," as defined in Section IV(d) below, and is executed no later than the close of the third business day following such "triggering event."

(c) If the cross-trade involves a Model-Driven Fund, the cross-trade does not take place within three (3) business days following any change made by the Manager to the model underlying the Fund.

(d) The Manager has allocated the opportunity for all Funds or Large Accounts to engage in the cross-trade on an objective basis which has been previously disclosed to the authorizing fiduciaries of plan investors, and which does not permit the exercise of discretion by the Manager (e.g., a pro rata allocation system).

(e) No more than twenty (20) percent of the assets of the Fund or Large Account at the time of the cross-trade is comprised of assets of employee benefit plans maintained by the Manager for its own employees (Manager Plans) for which the Manager exercises investment discretion.

(f)(1) Cross-trades of equity securities involve only securities that are widely-held, actively-traded, and for which market quotations are readily available from independent sources that are engaged in the ordinary course of business of providing financial news and pricing information to institutional investors and/or the general public, and are widely recognized as accurate and reliable sources for such information. For purposes of this requirement, the terms "widely-held" and "actively-traded" shall be deemed to include any security listed in an Index, as defined in Section IV(c) below; and

(2) Cross-trades of fixed-income securities involve only securities for which market quotations are readily available from independent sources that are engaged in the ordinary course of business of providing financial news and pricing information to institutional investors and/or the general public, and are widely recognized as accurate and reliable sources for such information.

(g) The Manager receives no brokerage fees or commissions as a result of the cross-trade.

(h) As of the date this exemption is granted, a plan's participation in the Manager's cross-trading program as a result of investments made in any Index or Model-Driven Fund that holds plan assets is subject to a written authorization executed in advance of such investment by a fiduciary of the plan which is independent of the Manager engaging in the cross-trade transactions. For purposes of this exemption, the requirement that the authorizing fiduciary be independent of the Manager shall not apply in the case of a Manager Plan.

(i) With respect to existing plan investors in any Index or Model-Driven Fund that holds plan assets as of the date this exemption is granted, the independent fiduciary is furnished with a written notice, not less than forty-five (45) days prior to the implementation of the cross-trading program, that describes the Fund's participation in the Manager's cross-trading program, provided that:

(1) Such notice allows each plan an opportunity to object to the plan's participation in the cross-trading program as a Fund investor by providing the plan with a special termination form;

(2) The notice instructs the independent plan fiduciary that failure to return the termination form to the

Manager by a specified date (which shall be at least 30 days following the plan's receipt of the form) shall be deemed to be an approval by the plan of its participation in the Manager's cross-trading program as a Fund investor; and

(3) If the independent plan fiduciary objects to the plan's participation in the cross-trading program as a Fund investor by returning the termination form to the Manager by the specified date, the plan is given the opportunity to withdraw from each Index or Model-Driven Fund without penalty prior to the implementation of the cross-trading program, within such time as may be reasonably necessary to effectuate the withdrawal in an orderly manner.

(j) Prior to obtaining the authorization described in Section II(h), and in the notice described in Section II(i), the following statement must be provided by the Manager to the independent plan fiduciary:

Investment decisions for the Fund (including decisions regarding which securities to buy or sell, how much of a security to buy or sell, and when to execute a sale or purchase of securities for the Fund) will not be based in whole or in part by the Manager on the availability of cross-trade opportunities and will be made prior to the identification and determination of any cross-trade opportunities. In addition, all cross-trades by a Fund will be based solely upon a "triggering event" set forth in this exemption. Records documenting each cross-trade transaction will be retained by the Manager.

(k) Prior to any authorization set forth in Section II(h), and at the time of any notice described in Section II(i) above, the independent plan fiduciary must be furnished with any reasonably available information necessary for the fiduciary to determine whether the authorization should be given, including (but not limited to) a copy of this exemption, an explanation of how the authorization may be terminated, detailed disclosure of the procedures to be implemented under the Manager's cross-trading practices (including the "triggering events" that will create the cross-trading opportunities, the independent pricing services that will be used by the manager to price the cross-traded securities, and the methods that will be used for determining closing price), and any other reasonably available information regarding the matter that the authorizing fiduciary requests. The independent plan fiduciary must also be provided with a statement that the Manager will have a potentially conflicting division of loyalties and responsibilities to the parties to any cross-trade transaction and must explain how the Manager's cross-trading practices and procedures will mitigate such conflicts.

With respect to Funds that are added to the Manager's cross-trading program or changes to, or additions of, triggering events regarding Funds, following the authorizations described in section II(h) or section II(i), the Manager shall provide a notice to each relevant independent plan fiduciary of each plan invested in the affected Funds prior to, or within ten (10) days following, such addition of Funds or change to, or addition of, triggering events, which contains a description of such Fund(s) or triggering event(s). Such notice will also include a statement that the plan has the right to terminate its participation in the cross-trading program and its investment in any Index Fund or Model-Driven Fund without penalty at any time, as soon as is necessary to effectuate the withdrawal in an orderly manner.

(l) At least annually, the Manager notifies the independent fiduciary for each plan that has previously authorized participation in the Manager's cross-trading program as a Fund investor, that the plan has the right to terminate its participation in the cross-trading program and its investment in any Index Fund or Model-Driven Fund that holds plan assets without penalty at any time, as soon as is necessary to effectuate the withdrawal in an orderly manner. This notice shall also provide each independent plan fiduciary with a special termination form and instruct the fiduciary that failure to return the form to the Manager by a specified date (which shall be at least thirty (30) days following the plan's receipt of the form) shall be deemed an approval of the subject plan's continued participation in the cross-trading program as a Fund investor. In lieu of providing a special termination form, the notice may permit the independent plan fiduciary to utilize another written instrument by the specified date to terminate the plan's participation in the cross-trading program, provided that in such case the notice explicitly discloses that a termination form may be obtained from the Manager upon request. Such annual re-authorization must provide information to the relevant independent plan fiduciary regarding each Fund in which the plan is invested, as well as explicit notification that the plan fiduciary may request and obtain disclosures regarding any new Funds in which the plan is not invested that are added to the cross-trading program, or any new triggering events (as defined in Section IV(d) below) that may have been added to any existing Funds in which the plan is not invested, since the time of the initial authorization described in Section II(h), or the time of the notice described in Section II(i).

(m) With respect to a cross-trade involving a Large Account:

(1) The cross-trade is executed in connection with a portfolio restructuring program, as defined in Section IV(f) below, with respect to all or a portion of the Large Account's investments which an independent fiduciary of the Large Account (other than in the case of any assets of a Manager Plan) has authorized the Manager to carry out or to act as a "trading adviser," as defined in Section IV(g) below, in carrying out a Large Account-initiated liquidation or restructuring of its portfolio;

(2) Prior to the cross-trade, a fiduciary of the Large Account who is independent of the Manager (other than in the case of any assets of a Manager Plan)<sup>11</sup> has been fully informed of the Manager's cross-trading program, has been provided with the information required in Section II(k), and has provided the Manager with advance written authorization to engage in cross-trading in connection with the restructuring, provided that—

(A) Such authorization may be terminated at will by the Large Account upon receipt by the Manager of written notice of termination.

(B) A form expressly providing an election to terminate the authorization, with instructions on the use of the form, is supplied to the authorizing Large Account fiduciary concurrent with the receipt of the written information describing the cross-trading program. The instructions for such form must specify that the authorization may be terminated at will by the Large Account, without penalty to the Large Account, upon receipt by the Manager of written notice from the authorizing Large Account fiduciary;

(3) All cross-trades made in connection with the portfolio restructuring program must be completed by the Manager within sixty (60) days of the initial authorization (or initial receipt of assets associated with the restructuring, if later) to engage in such restructuring by the Large Account's independent fiduciary, unless such fiduciary agrees in writing to extend this period for another thirty (30) days; and,

(4) No later than thirty (30) days following the completion of the Large Account's portfolio restructuring program, the Large Account's independent fiduciary must be fully apprised in writing of all cross-trades executed in connection with the restructuring. Such writing shall include a notice that the Large Account's independent fiduciary may obtain, upon request, the information described in Section III(a), subject to the limitations described in Section III(b). However, if the program takes longer than sixty (60) days to complete, interim reports containing the transaction results must be provided to the Large Account fiduciary no later than fifteen (15) days following the end of the initial sixty (60) day period and the succeeding thirty (30) day period.

Section III—General Conditions

(a) The Manager maintains or causes to be maintained for a period of six (6) years from the date of each cross-trade the records necessary to enable the persons described in paragraph (b) of this Section to determine whether the conditions of the exemption have been met, including records which identify:

(1) On a Fund by Fund basis, the specific triggering events which result in the creation of the model prescribed output or trade list of specific securities to be cross-traded;

(2) On a Fund by Fund basis, the model prescribed output or trade list which describes: (A) Which securities to buy or sell; and (B) how much of each security to buy or sell; in detail sufficient to allow an independent plan fiduciary to verify that each of the above decisions for the Fund was made in response to specific triggering events; and

(3) On a Fund by Fund basis, the actual trades executed by the Fund on a particular day and which of those trades resulted from triggering events.

Such records must be readily available to assure accessibility and maintained so that an independent fiduciary, or other persons identified below in paragraph (b) of this Section, may obtain them within a reasonable period of time. However, a prohibited transaction will not be considered to have occurred if, due to circumstances beyond the control of the Manager, the records are lost or destroyed prior to the end of the six-year period, and no party in interest other than the Manager shall be subject to the civil penalty that may be assessed under section 502(i) of the Act or to the taxes imposed by sections 4975(a) and (b) of the Code if the records are not maintained or are not available for examination as required by paragraph (b) below.

(b)(1) Except as provided in paragraph (b)(2) and notwithstanding any provisions of sections 504(a)(2) and (b) of the Act, the records referred to in paragraph (a) of this Section are unconditionally available at their customary location for examination during normal business hours by—

(A) Any duly authorized employee or representative of the Department of Labor or the Internal Revenue Service,

(B) Any fiduciary of a Plan participating in a cross-trading program who has the authority to acquire or dispose of the assets of the Plan, or any duly authorized employee or representative of such fiduciary,

(C) Any contributing employer with respect to any Plan participating in a cross-trading program or any duly authorized employee or representative of such employer, and

(D) Any participant or beneficiary of any Manager Plan participating in a cross-trading program, or any duly authorized employee or representative of such participant or beneficiary.

(2) If in the course of seeking to inspect records maintained by a Manager pursuant to this exemption, any person described in paragraph (b)(1)(B) through (D) seeks to examine trade secrets, or commercial or financial information of the Manager that is privileged or confidential, and the Manager is otherwise permitted by law to withhold such information from such person, the Manager may refuse to disclose such information provided that, by the close of the thirtieth (30th) day following the request, the Manager gives a written notice to such person advising the person of the reasons for the refusal and that the Department of Labor may request such information.

(3) The information required to be disclosed to persons described in paragraph (b)(1)(B) through (D) shall be limited to information that pertains to cross-trades involving a Fund or Large Account in which they have an interest.
